"We are to meet with these exhibitors in convention assembled to co-operate with them, to insure them good product and by joining with them to keep the door of competition open." Following the opening session, I. E. Chadwick was made permanent chairman and upon the convening of the regular meeting of the Association, continued in the chair as president. Organized in 1923, the association has felt that the socalled menace of the three greatest producing and distributing organizations in the country was becoming more serious as they continued to buy theatres, and it was the consensus of the meeting that the only way to avoid "Trustification" was to take active measures at the present time. It seemed to be the opinion of many that the first run situation was already lost to independents, but that the danger was extending rapidly to the second, third and fourth run houses, although it was hoped that the action the association was prepared to take in conjunction with the theatre owners, would remedy this. A committee composed of Dr. Shallenberger, William Steiner, M. H. Hoffman, Abe Carlos, I. E. Chadwick, Jack Cohn, J. H. Friedman, Ed. A. Goldman and Ben Amsterdam, was appointed to sit with a like committee from the theatre owners, and arrive at plans for the formation of a trade and commerce bureau and the details as far as determined, provide for a paid executive of business ability to head the bureau, a chief counsel and a force of 26 field men who will spread the gospel of the use of independent pictures in every motion picture territory. A provision of suitable arbitration boards and substitution of the new uniform contract which would be simple, explicit and easy understood, were also discussed. It felt that until such time as new arbitration bodies are in existence, it will be unwise for the state right exchanges now taking part in arbitrations, to withdraw from the present board. The admission of exchange men to membership made it necessary to provide new officers, and to double the executive committee, which now will be composed of 14 members, 7 of whom will be exchange men. A recording secretary was elected, Jack Bellman, of Renown Pictures, New York, first vice president, Ben Amsterdam of Philadelphia, also a representative of the exchange men, at one of the closing sessions.

Reports that a publication had been selected as official organ of the association were denounced as totally unfounded, and resolutions passed thanking the trade press for the many kindnesses and uniformly courteous treatment e tended to the organization, as well as its individual members. The members of the I. M. P. P. D. A. who were present or represented at the convention, include Arrow Pictures Inc., Art Class Pictures Inc., Picture Corpn., Lee Bradford Picture Corpn., Chadwick Picture Corpn., Independent Picture Corpn., C. It was explained that while the constitution provided for the election of 25 directors, only 23 would be chosen by the convention, the other two places being held open to be filled by the new board.

Mr. Goldberg of Maryland wanted to know why they could not be filled by the convention, and suggested that they be given to representatives of the Allied state organizations. Mr. Cohen informed him that the procedure was being taken at the suggestion of the Allied leaders.

Mr. Cohen then took the platform to make a statement. He announced that Universal and other independent concerns were ready to cease acquisition of theatres when the alliance with them was perfected. He then made the significant statement that the new board of directors would meet in a week or ten days at some central point and with other independent producers who are not quite ready now to go into the alliance, and that the board would then put the finishing touches to the plan of allianee.

"We have been in conference with large producers other than those who have already agreed to come in with us," he said. "We will deny no producer the opportunity of co-operating with us. We shall soon arrange for the regional meetings throughout the country, and national officers will be present."

The other feature of the morning session was an impressive and fervent speech by Miss Ray Lewis, publisher of the Canadian Moving Picture Digest and the Spotlight, and representing the M. P. T. O. of Canada. Her talk proved to be a severe arraignment of the methods which she declared had been used by N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation in alleged control of product in the Dominion in the acquisition of theatres there and the treatment she asserted her publication had received from him in consequence of her fight on "the combine."

She charged that Mr. Nathanson had first threatened to put her out of business and then had attempted to win her over by promise of large advertising support if her paper, "would play with the big fellows." She refused, with the result that all advertising except F. B. O. and Vitagraph was withdrawn, though some of the companies continued to pay for their ads but did not furnish copy.

Miss Lewis declared that "the combine" was aiming at world monopoly and made an impassioned plea to the delegates to stand firm. At the afternoon session Tom Mix and his wife were introduced to the convention and got a great reception, after which Mr. Seider of New Jersey read the report on the standard exhibition contract and the subject of the report outlined the negotiations that had been conducted with the Hays organization in the last year on proposed changes in the contract, which have not yet been concluded. Pointing out that the M. P. T. O. A. had persistently refused to ratify the contract in its present form, Mr. Seider enumerated various changes that were desired in different clauses. The report recommended the appointment of a committee of five by the board of directors, and that the committee be empowered to negotiate new contracts. If this is accomplished the committee would form with the Hays organization and the I. M. P. P. D. A. an arbitration committee. The report continues: "This arbitration committee shall with a like number of distributors constitute a court of appeals with power to review such disputes that are referred to it by local arbitration boards to prevent any injustice being done to either side in any local or exchange center. We further recommend that if an equitable contract is arranged this organization shall assume the supervision of the exhibitor's side of the arbitration system."

"That this organization establish and maintain an arbitration bureau which shall tabulate records and decisions and shall keep every arbitration board, each local and subdivisional unit and their counsel fully advised of decisions in every matter and in every territory."

Instantly there were calls for recognition from all parts of the hall, and it was evidetnte that the question of the present arbitration system would be the subject of heated debate.

Mr. Samuelson of New Jersey demanded that the convention take action at once on the adoption of the report. The motion was put and unanimously passed.

Mr. Momand of Oklahoma, denouncing the present system in unsparing terms made his way to the rostrum and handed the chairman a copy of a contract which he said would be enacted into the law in his state unless the Oklahoma exhibitors "got relief."

Mr. Philips of Texas backed up Mr. Momand's remarks with the statement that the film boards of trade were the death knell of the independent producer and exhibitor. He characterized them as "a strangulation association."

The excitement was raised to a high pitch when Mr. Rembusch of Indiana, an old war horse in exhibitor battles, charged that the Hays organization had fined him sixty thousand dollars because he refused to arbitrate.

"That's why I went back into the M. P. T. O. A." he shouted. "I called up Cohen and O'Toole and asked them if they were for this uniform contract and arbitration business. They said "no" and I told them I was immediately mailing my dues in to M. P. T. O. A. headquarters."

A fiery speech, made by Sam Bullock of Ohio, was interrupted by Mr. Goldberg, who had attempted to insist several times that the committee of five would hear the opinions of exhibitors and that time was being wasted by the discussion. He was howled down by the delegates.

Mr. Quinn of California poured oil on the troubled waters by moving to refer all exhibitor complaints to the board of directors.

Then Mr. Cohen asked the chairman to call Charles L. O'Reilly of New York to the platform so that the latter might tell the convention about the experience of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce with the uniform contract and arbitration problems.

The applause started at once, and by the time the T. O. C. C. leader had reached the rostrum there was a real demonstration. Mr. O'Reilly explained that the Chamber of Commerce got a fifty per cent break on arbitration because it went after it and kept after it. This effort was consistent, and was backed by real finances, each member paying three dollars per week per theatre. The total amounting to twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars yearly.

He urged the delegates from the various states to get their organizations functioning properly, put up real money to finance them, and secure their rights by consistent effort.

He got a big hand, and took a seat on the platform with the other leaders. It was the first time Mr. O'Reilly has appeared in a national convention since the famous Washington episode, and the dramatic significance of the event was not lost on the delegates.

Mr. Herrington of Pennsylvania made still another fiery speech, after which the motion was put and passed without dissent. The concluding speech of the day made by Captain Delbert Ansmus, representing the war department. He thanked the exhibitors for their work in aiding the publicity for citizens' military training camps. Recess was taken until eleven o'clock Friday morning, after Mr. O'Toole announced that at the Friday session there would be a report of the committee of credentials and resolutions, election of the board of directors, election and installation of officers and a final report on producer affiliations.

Equipment Convention is Biggest to Date

TWO hundred members, active and associate of the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, were on hand for the opening session of this organization's fourth annual convention, which was held in one of the Milwaukee auditorium halls from May 14th to 16th.

The annual report of President Henry J. Smith told of the continuous progress of the association which was formed just four years ago and of the improved business methods which have been the outcome of its activities.

Meetings of the Manufacturers' branch of the association were also held with President Sam Lears in the chair. Interest in the association was healthy as shown by the large attendance at the meeting and further growth is looked forward to with assurance. Election of officers and directors was scheduled for Saturday morning.

One of the features of Milwaukee convention week was the equipment exposition under the auspices of the manufacturers, division of the association. Visiting exhibitors in large numbers took advantage of the opportunity to see the latest thing in theatre equipment and thronged the 71 exhibits every day. The exposition is conceded to be the finest and most successful event of the kind ever staged in connection with a national convention of theatre owners.

Labor Body Wants Place on Censor Board

The Central Labor Union of Worcester, Mass., is said to be seeking a place on the local censoring body, the Board of Motion Picture Review. Application, it is said, will be made for a place on the board by Thomas F. Conroy, secretary of the union.

Balaban & Katz In Big Chicago Deal

Buy Interest in Lubliner & Trinz Circuit of Nineteen Theatres— New Corporation Formed

THE Balaban & Katz Corporation has acquired an interest in the Lubliner & Trinz circuit of theatres in Chicago, it was officially announced this week by the latter company. The statement confirms rumors circulated in the trade for the past several weeks and up to a short time ago flatly denied by Lubliner & Trinz officials.

The statement, issued from the Lubliner & Trinz offices in the Bell Building, Chicago, follows:

"Negotiations have been consummated whereby the Balaban & Katz Corporation has acquired an interest in the Lubliner & Trinz circuit of theatres. A new corporation has been formed to be known as the Lubliner & Trinz Theatrical Enterprises. Nineteen theatres now in operation and seven in the course of construction are involved in this transaction. They are the Ellentee, Vitagraph, Logan Square, Paramount, Madison Square, Biograph, Lakeside, Crawford, Windsor, Dearborn, Orchestra Hall, Covert Garden, Knickerbocker, Michigan, Oak Park, Pantheon, Pershing, Senate, West End, Wilson, Congress, Harding, Belmont, Tower and State."

The above announcement reveals the largest theatre deal in Chicago motion picture history and will have an important bearing on the future of both the distribution of pictures and the exhibition business in Chicago.

It is understood that the arrangement is confined to operating the theatres and that there will be no change in the ownership of the properties.

A general operating policy will be pursued whereby conflict between the two organizations will be eliminated, and it is reported that where both Balaban & Katz and Lubliner & Trinz have theatres in the same vicinity, an effort will be made to provide different types of entertainment.

While no exact figure on the value of Lubliner & Trinz properties can be obtained, it is estimated that from seventeen to twenty million dollars is their valuation.

Emil Stern will continue to be general manager of Lubliner & Trinz and he states that no changes in the organization are contemplated.

Balaban & Katz, it is reported, have secured a fifty per cent interest in the Lubliner & Trinz Theatrical Enterprises. The Balaban & Katz theatres are said not to be involved in the transaction.

The combination of the Lubliner & Trinz and Balaban & Katz interests, gives the two concerns theatrical representation in practically every important neighborhood zone of Chicago, as well as in the loop where Balaban & Katz houses occupy a dominant position.

F. B. O. Announces 1925-26 Program

Twelve Gold Bond Specials and Four Series of Star Features Listed on Schedule of 64

WITH announcement of the releasing schedule to be followed next year Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., enters the field as one of the largest sources of supply for features which will be made available to exhibitors during the 1925-26 season. The organization will offer a total of 64 feature pictures, the bulk of which are to be produced in Hollywood.

According to the schedule outlined in a recent statement from F. B. O. there will be 12 Gold Bond Special productions, a series of Super-Westerns starring Fred Thomson, and four series of features in which Evelyn Brent, Maurice Flynn, Richard Talmadge and Bob Custer will be the stars. In addition to the features there will be a large number of short subjects, including three series of two-reel comedies to be written by H. C. Witwer and Sam Hellman.

The Gold Bond specials will consist of:

"Drusilla with a Million," an Associated Arts Corporation production, based on the novel by Elizabeth Cooper and directed by F. Harmon Weight, starring Mary Carr, with Priscilla Bonner and Kenneth Harlan in support.

"Parisian Nights", a Gothic production and the second special for the 1925-26 season, is a romantic melodrama of the Paris underworld. It will co-star Elaine Hammerstein and Lou Tellegen, with Renee Adoree prominent in support, and was directed by Alfred Allen Santell.

C. Gardner Sullivan's second independent production for F.B.O. distribution, called "If Marriage Fails?" and featuring Jacqueline Logan, Clive Brook and Jean Hersholt, is also scheduled as a special. "If Marriage Fails?" is an original story by the well known author-scenarist-producer, and concerns the love life of a beautiful girl fortune teller.

"The Keeper of the Bees", the well known novel by the late Gene Stratton-Porter, now running serially in McCall's Magazine, is the fourth special. James Leo Meehan, Mrs. Porter's son-in-law, will direct "The Keeper of the Bees."

"When His Love Grew Cold," one of the four Laura Jean Libbey stories which F.B.O. purchased from the estate of the late author, is now in course of production on the F.B.O. lot, and will be followed by "A Poor Girl's Romance" an equally famous Libbey romance. The works of Laura Jean Libbey still have an enormous sale and were perhaps widely disseminated in her heyday as an author.

Emory Johnson and his well known mother, Mrs. Emilie Johnson, are preparing the story and continuity of "The Last Edition," the young director-producer's new effort, which will deal with the profession of journalism. The leading character will be an assistant foreman in the press room of a big metropolitan daily. Ralph Lewis will probably be signed to play the leading role.

Mr. Johnson will take about six or eight weeks to finish his newspaper story, after which he will sail for the Scandinavian countries where he will produce a special for F.B.O. with the co-operation of the Norwegian and Swedish governments, called "Happiness."

"The Isle of Retribution," one of the best sellers of 1923, written by Edison Marshall, will be produced on lavish scale by Film Booking Offices.

The story concerns the adventures of two girls and a man marooned on a desert island, and the metamorphosis, which takes place in the man's character on the island.

"Flaming Waters," an original story by E. Lloyd Sheldon, well known scenarist, will be produced as soon as a cast is assembled. The story is a red-blooded action melodrama, with an unusual climax in the form of a fire in an enormous oil well.

Produced on the same lavish scale that characterize all their railroad dramas for which they have become famous, Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., plan to put into production, on their own lot in Hollywood, a railroad melodrama, tentatively titled "The Midnight Flyer."

F.B.O. also promises an unusually stirring race track story in "The Futurity Winner," production on which will commence on the F.B.O. lot in Hollywood as soon as a cast is assembled.

In addition to the twelve specials, there will be 52 program pictures, embracing the Evelyn Brent series of crook melodramas; the Maurice Flynn series of comedy dramas; the Richard Talmadge series of action comedy melodramas; the Fred Thomson series of Western specials and the Bob Custer series of Western adventure stories.

Two of the country's best known and most popular humorous writers will contribute three new series of F.B.O. short reel subjects, production of which will begin immediately. Sam Hellman has been signed for a series of stories starring Alberta Vaughn and Larry Kent, which will appear serially in the Saturday Evening Post. H. C. Witwer will screen his latest series of Cosmopolitan stories for a new series, and will write another series especially for F.B.O.

The Bray Studios will contribute 26 cartoons to the extensive list of short subjects.

RORK JOINS P. D. C.
Will Make Four Big Productions

THE newest addition to the aggregation of big independent producers affiliated with Producers Distributing Corporation is Sam Rork, veteran stage and screen producer and long associated with First National, who will hereafter release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

In announcing Mr. Rork's new association, John C. Flinn, vice president and general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, states that the 1925-26 program will list at least four Rork productions, one of which will be "Fifth Avenue," in which Lewis Stone will be starred in the role of a modern "Beau Brummel." Lewis Stone is under contract with Rork as is director Alfred E. Green who will continue to direct the Rork productions.

"Mr. Rork is a showman as well as a producer," says John C. Flinn, "and this fact has been an important factor in the conspicuous success he has achieved since turning his attention from the stage to motion picture production. He was one of the first contributors to First National with the first five Katherine MacDonald pictures after which he produced 'The Rosary' and the new version of 'The Spoilers.' Then came 'Ponjola,' 'Inez from Hollywood' and 'The Talker' now at the New York Strand, which have all been exceptional attractions."

Texas Body Re-Elects H. A. Cole

Convention in Dallas Last Week Renames Old Officers; Organization Has Grown

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Texas, in convention at Dallas last week, re-elected all the old officers and directors and added a salary of $3,000 yearly for the office of President. Col. Harry A. Cole, of Marshall, was again chosen to head the organization.

The Texas M. P. T. O. has grown greatly in numbers in two years from a handful of eighteen men to a membership of almost three hundred. The last twelve months were by far the brightest period of all, for in that time fourteen thousand dollars in dues was collected.

Col. Cole was induced to stay in office after he had declined on the ground that his personal business was suffering. At a meeting of the Board of Directors, it was agreed that while Col. Cole's services were easily worth more than ten thousand dollars a year to the organization, the three thousand dollar salary was voted as being the limit that the Treasury would permit at this time.

Other elections follow: J. A. Holton, Port Arthur, first vice president; C. W. Batsell, Sherman, second vice president; A. W. Lilly, Greenville, secretary.

Harold C. McNeese of Dallas is business Manager, this being an appointive office. Of the seven directors reelected, the first three serve for one year and the last four for two. They follow: H. T. Hodge, Abilene; W. R. Fairman, Bryan; H. S. Fore, Wichita Falls; Homer Mulkay, Clarendon; John Paxton, Paris; and W. F. Stuckert, Brenham.

There was a record-breaking attendance at the convention. At the closing banquet held at the Hotel Jefferson, State Senator J. J. Strickland of San Antonio and Jack Connolly, Washington representative of the Hays organization, spoke. It was a constructive session throughout, and was in the nature of a celebration over the fact that the thirty-ninth session of the Texas Legislature had adjourned without a single adverse statute being passed.

Injury to Actor Causes Loss of Speech

Alfred Allen, veteran stage and screen actor, is recevering from the injuries he suffered as a result of a fall while making a scene for "Perils of the Primitive," at Universal City. Allen fell a distance of 25 feet, injuring himself in the chest. For a time he was unable to speak and physicians found that a clot of blood had formed in the region of the vocal cords. He is slowly regaining his voice, and though unable at present to speak above a whisper, he is back in his role as Captain William Robinson in "Perils of the Primitive."

$1,250,000 House Planned for White Plains

White Plains, New York is to have a new $1,250,000 picture house and office building to be built on Main street by Hyman and Sidney Sonn on a plot they recently acquired. A 2,500 seat theatre is planned.

St. Paul House Combines Dancing and Pictures

St. Paul boasts the first combination dancing and motion picture house in the Northwest. It is the Oxford, at Oxford and Grand Avenue. For the one price of admission both pictures and dancing may be enjoyed.

Novel Event to Mark Opening of West Coast House

A novel feature will mark the opening of the Boulevard theatre, a New West Coast house in Los Angeles, on May 27, when the stars after whom loge seats have been titled will occupy the places which bear their names. Each seat in the loge section has been given the name of a celebrated photoplay star, and will henceforth be so designated instead of in the usual fashion of numbers.

The opening event is being planned on an elaborate scale, and a festival in celebration of the launching of the theatre, which is located at Washington Boulevard and Vermont, will continue through the week.

Stanley Company to Have 3 More Atlantic City Houses

Atlantic City will house three more Stanley Company of America theatres, according to definite announcement made this week. One will be opened July 1 at Kentucky avenue and the Boardwalk. Two more will be ready by the summer of 1926.

One of the two will be located in the heart of the city on the avenue and will be in the form of a theatre-office building while the other will be situated at Missouri avenue and the Boardwalk. The policies have been defined as combination vaudeville and pictures.

Large organs will provide musical accompaniment for the pictures.

Queens Village to Have New Theatre

Queens Village, Long Island, is to have a new 2,400-seat house to be built by Mrs. Hanna Sullivan. The building, which is to have forty stores in addition to the theatre, will cost $702,000. The site is at the northeast corner of Irving Street and Springfield Road.

Says Extras Are Greatest Casting Problem

B. P. Fineman, studio manager for F. B. O., is quoted in an Associated Press despatch from Hollywood as declaring that the 50,000 applicants for extra parts constitute one of the most difficult problems which the producers on the west coast have to face in casting pictures.

He further states that a plan has been evolved at his studio under which 50 experienced extras are guaranteed 12 days work each month as a solution to the problem.

Hays Experiments With Pictures in Churches

THE Hays organization is making a novel experiment in churches in the New York territory. From a large number of suitable films a small group has been selected to be shown in twelve churches in twelve different towns on twelve consecutive Sundays.

The experiment is being made to determine the effect on church attendance and whether or not the pictures will be made a part of the regular Sunday service, in Sunday schools or at mid-week prayer meetings. If increased attendance results the plan will be further put into effect.

Fox Announces Season's Release Dates

Impressive Schedule of Productions Will Be Headed by John Golden's "Lightnin'" August 23rd

THE Fox Film Corporation has fixed the release dates for the 1925-26 season, with the John Golden record-breaking stage success, "Lightnin," heading the list on August 23rd. The schedule is jam full of releases right on through June of next year.

"Lightin'" was recently completed under the direction of John Ford, with Jay Hunt in the role made famous by the late Frank Bacon. It was prepared for the screen by Frances Marion from the play by Frank Bacon and Winchell Smith. In the cast with Jay Hunt are Madge Bellamy, Wallace MacDonald, J. Farrell MacDonald, Ethel Clayton, Richard Travers, James Marcus, Otis Harlan, Peter Mazutis, Edythe Chapman, and Brandon Hurst.

"The Everlasting Whisper," a Tom Mix starring vehicle is second on the release program August 30th. It was adapted from a story by the same name by Jackson Gregory, and was directed by J. G. Blystone. Alice Calhoun plays the leading feminine role opposite Mix. Others in the cast are, Robert Cain, George Borrell, Walter James, Virginia Madison and Karl Dane.

Third on the schedule on September 6th is another John Ford production, "Kentucky Pride." Henry Walthall has the leading part in the production and Gertrude Astor the most important feminine role.

"As No Man Has Loved," Rowland V. Lee's adaptation of Edward Everett Hale's story, "The Man Without a Country" will be released to exhibitors September 13th. It has already had a successful run on Broadway.

Another of the John Golden unit pictures, Winchell Smith's "The Wheel," directed by Victor Schertzinger, will be released September 20th. Harrison Ford and Claire Adams have the leading roles. Others in the cast are Mahlon Hamilton, Georgie Harris, Clara Horton, Margaret Livingston, David Torrence, Eria La Bissionere, Russ Powell and Hazel Howell. Others on the September schedule are "The Desert Valley," a Buck Jones starring vehicle, and "Lazybones," adapted from the Owen Davis stage success.

"The Iron Horse" heads the releases for October and is scheduled to go to the exhibitors on the 4th. It is a John Ford production which ran for a year at the Lyric Theatre in New York.

Two are set for release on October 11th. They are "The First Year," another of the Golden Unit, and Tom Mix in "The Lucky Horseshoe." The other releases for the month are "The Winding Stair" on the 18th, and "When the Door Opened" on the 25th.

Seven pictures will be released by Fox in November. The most important of these is "The Fool," which is set for the 15th. The others for November are, "The Fighting Heart," a John Ford production starring George O'Brien on the 1st; Buck Jones in "The Timber Wolf" on the 1st; "Thank You," of the John Golden unit on the 8th; the first Peter B. Kyne story on the 22nd; Tom Mix in "The Best Man" on the 22nd, and "Havoc," a Rowland V. Lee production on the 29th.

For December Fox will release five productions "The Dixie Merchant," with Dec. 6th as its release date, "East Lynne," and Buck Jones in "Man Four Square," on Dec. 13; "Thunder Mountain," an adaption of John Golden's stage success "Howdy Folks," Dec. 20, and The Ancient Mariner," which will be the special Christmas week release.

The first month of the new year will see seven Fox productions released. "Siberia," an adaptation of the old stage success, will be the first of the New Year's releases with Jan. 3rd as the date. This production will be followed on Jan. 10th by "The Silver Treasure," from Joseph Conrad's popular novel, "Nostromo," and Tom Mix in "The Love Fixer." Peter B. Kyne's second story will be released as a picture on Jan. 17th, with H. G. Wells' "Marriage" following it on Jan. 24th. On Jan. 31st the release will be "Dangers of a Great City" and Buck Jones in "The Desert's Price."

February will see five productions, the first of which will be "The Trouble Hunter," on Feb. 7th. "The Johnstown Flood," Feb. 14th; "Part Time Wives," Feb. 21st; "The Road to Glory," and Tom Mix in "My Own Pal," Feb. 28th.

During March the Fox releases will include "Daybreak," March 7th; the third Kyne story, March 14th; "Separate Rooms," and a Buck Jones starring vehicle, March 21st, and Manhood," March 28th.

For April, May and June the following pictures have already been selected; "The Golden Butterfly," Apr. 4th; "Wages for Wives," (Golden Unit) April 11th; "Palace of Pleasure" and a Tom Mix picture, Apr. 18th, the fourth Kyne story and a Jones picture, May 9th, a Tom Mix picture, June 6th, and another Jones on June 27th.

Five Year Contracts Are Offered by Famous

FAMOUS Players is advertising the fact that it is willing to sell pictures to exhibitors on contracts over a period of years, with five years as the maximum. The deal will be made with any exhibitor who has proven by his past dealings with the company that he is willing to play fair.

The statement by S. R. Kent says in part:

"No exhibitor of Paramount pictures in the United States need have any fear whatsoever of competition from Paramount or any other company in the field of exhibition. Paramount stands ready to sign a contract for any term up to five years absolutely guaranteeing Paramount Pictures for the term of the contract with any exhibitor in the United States who has proven by his past affiliations with this company, his sincerity and desire to play fair.

Roxy is Honored Guest at Biltmore Dinner

Major S. L. Rothafel (Roxy) was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Biltmore last Saturday night given by the Sojourners, an organization made up of members of the Masonic fraternity who are past and present commissioned officers of the Army, Navy or Marines. The dinner was tendered Rothafel in recognition of his efforts in raising funds to supply radio sets for wounded veterans of the world war in government hospitals.

Captain N. J. Blackwood, MC. U. S. N., who is president of the New York chapter of the Sojourners acted as toastmaster and the following made addresses; Major General Amos A. Frances Howard Has Secured Release From Famous Frances Howard, who recently became Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn, has secured a release from her Paramount contract through the courtesy of Jesse Lasky, who issued the following statement:

"Miss Howard, or Mrs. Goldwyn, is released not without great regret on the part of our organization, but with the warmest wishes and kindest regards of all connected with Famous Players-Lasky. Her value as an artist is high, but, of course, insignificant compared with her worth in her new position of that of a home-maker for our friend, Samuel Goldwyn. We join all others in wishing herself and her husband unlimited happiness."

Mr. and Mrs. Goldwyn will make their home at 5127 Franklin avenue, Los Angeles.

Sues St. Louis Theatre Company

Goldman Claims He Was "Frozen Out" and Asks $250,000 Damages

ALLEGING that he has been deprived of assets valued at $250,000 by the backers of the St. Louis theatre, St. Louis, now nearing completion, William Goldman, owner-manager of several theatres in that city, filed suit in the St. Louis Circuit Court on May 6 asking that he be awarded damages in the sum mentioned and calling for an accounting of the affairs of the new theatre.

Defendants named in Goldman's petition were Harry and Sam Koplar, Sam Hamburg, Jr., David Sommers, president of the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation, and the corporation.

The suit was filed in advance of a mortgage which the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation is said to contemplate to secure an issue of $800,000 in bonds on the new theatre. Notice of Goldman's suit was also filed with the Recorder of Deeds.

In his petition Goldman alleges that Sam Koplar had agreed to put $50,000 in the theatre fund. The construction company had agreed to accept $75,000 in second mortgage bonds as part payment.

It is alleged Koplar persuaded Goldman to change his plans for the theatre and to increase its size, thus requiring additional capital, and that Sommers at that point was induced to put $300,000 into the venture.

To secure Sommers' $300,000, Goldman charges he was induced to convey title to the property. Although this instrument was absolute as to form, Goldman avers he was given to understand that in the future he would receive $50,000 of the stock of the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation and a job as manager of the new house at $25,000 a year.

Then Sam Koplar, it is claimed, decided not to retain the Selden Breck Construction Company or Bradshaw in building the theatre and Goldman was delegated the task of adjusting their claims on the contracts with him.

At this juncture, the petition charges, Goldman was persuaded to sign away by a release his claim to the $50,000 in stock and to the $25,000 a year job, which might "serve to embarrass the settlement and adjustment of such claims" with Bradshaw and Selden Breck Construction Company, but he claims he was given to understand he would get these assets back later on, and relied upon his friendship with Harry Koplar to see that this agreement was carried out.

In his petition Goldman also points out that in October, 1922, Harry Koplar induced him to refuse an offer from the Skouras brothers for a half interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company, the other half being held by Harry Koplar, and that this advice caused him to lose a profit of $100,000.

The defendants have declined to comment at length on Goldman's suit. Their attorney, Lamber E. Walther, said that every allegation in Goldman's suit could be met and explained satisfactorily to any court.

Founder of Allen Theatres Dies in Toronto

Barney Allen, well known Canadian theatre man and founder of the circuit of Allen Theatres throughout the Dominion died Saturday, May 9th, at his home in Toronto.

Allen originally was a theatre man in the United States but he went to Canada several years ago and became a Canadian citizen. Hearing Testimony in Phil Gleichman Suit Widespread interest is dispayed in the suit of Phil Gleichman of Detroit against the Famous Players-Lasky corporation and John H. Kunsky, which is being heard in the Wayne county Circuit court this week, having started May 11, and which will undoubtedly continue for many weeks because of the mass of evidence to be introduced.

Gleichman, declares that Famous violated a contract with him which gave him the right to show Paramount pictures for a term of five years in the Broadway Strand theater, of which he was then manager.

According to Gleichman, Famous lived up to the contract for three years, and then turned their output over to the Kunsky enterprises at a higher rate. Gleichman's contract called for a flat rental basis of $1,200 per picture, in addition to a percentage. He also contends that the contract created a relationship known in law as "A Joint Adventure," which is practically identical to a partnership. The suit was started several years ago.

M.-G.-M. Announces Season's Product

Schedule Shows Strong Line-Up of Stories, Stars and Directors; Executives Otpimistic

MARCUS LOEW, president of Metro-Goldwyn has issued a statement covering all details of the "Quality 52" pictures the company announced for the coming season. The lineup is impressive with the leading players and directors assigned to the carefully selected stories.

The Loew statement follows:

"The stars and featured players that we have under exclusive contract and who will appear in "The Quality 52" include Lillian Gish, Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Buster Keaton, Marion Davies, Ramon Novarro, Lon Chaney, Mae Murray, Eleanor Boardman, Aileen Pringle, Pauline Starke, Claire Windsor, Conway Tearle, Gertrude Olmstead, William Haines, Conrad Nagel, Mae Busch, Carmel Myers, Lew Cody, Renee Adoree, ZaSu Pitts, Sally O'Neill and many others.

"The directors who will make our next season's product are Rex Ingram, Fred Niblo, Victor Seastrom, Tod Browning, Hobart Henley, King Vidor, Robert Z. Leonard, Rupert Hughes, Monta Bell, Alf Goulding, Edmund Goulding, Jack Conway, Josef von Sternberg, Benjamin Christianson, W. Christy Cabanne, William Wellman, Al Roboch, Marcel de Sano and Elinor Glyn.

"Louis B. Mayer and his associates, Irving G. Thalberg and Harry Rapf, who have achieved a record during the past season the like of which has never been known before will have charge of all production.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production heads, left to right: Harry Rapf, Studio Executive, Louis B. Mayer, Vice-president in charge of production, and Irving Thalberg, Studio Executive.

"'Mare Nostrum,' the Rex Ingram production from the novel by Vincente Blasco Ibanez, will be one of our 1925-26 productions. Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno play the leading roles. Although the picture has great panoramic sweep and tremendous battle scenes it is primarily a human document with the action centered on the conflict and love affairs of the principal characters.

"'The Merry Widow' and what a title that is for the box office, will be another of our productions. Von Stroheim made it from Henry W. Savage's famous stage success and John Gilbert and Mae Murray play the leading parts.

"'Bardelys The Magnificent' by Rafael Sabatini, author of 'Scaramouche' and 'The Sea Hawk,' will be on our schedule. King Vidor will direct and John Gilbert and Claire Windsor are the leading players. The entire production will be done in Technicolor.

"'The Big Parade,' by Laurence Stallings, co-author of Broadway's greatest success 'What Price Glory?', will be directed by King Vidor and have John Gilbert as the star with Renee Adoree and others to be selected in the principal roles. Gilbert, one of the biggest drawing cards on the screen today has a great part in this picture.

"The Flesh and the Devil' is a Victor Seastrom — John Gilbert Special. It is by Herman Suderman. It will be directed by Seastrom, the man who made 'He Who Gets Slapped' and I don't know what better recommendation there is than that.

"There will also be one other John Gilbert production, title and details of which we will announce later.

"'Romola,' Henry King's production of George Eliot's immortal story with Lillian Gish in the stellar role and Dorothy Gish featured, is a most important unit on our schedule. It ran for sixteen weeks as a legitimate attraction on Broadway and had equally successful runs in other large cities.

"There will be two other Lillian Gish productions. The vehicles are now being considered and they will be on a par with all her previous successes, I can assure you. Miss Gish will be even bigger than ever and all of her productions will now be made at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City.

"'The Tower of Lies,' by Selma Lagerlof, will be a Victor Seastrom production with Norma Shearer, Lon Chaney, Claire McDowell, William Haines and Ian Keith in Universal Purchases Clemmer Theatre in Spokane, Wash.

UNIVERSAL has taken over the Clemmer Theatre in Spokane, Washington, which for a number of years has been owned and operated by Dr. Howard S. Clemmer, for whom it was named, and Dr. Hugo S. Lambach. The house has been officially turned over to Roy Bonner, manager for the Universal interests.

Negotiations have been pending for the last three months and were concluded by Drs. Clemmer and Lambach, and L. J. Schlaifer, branch manager for Universal in Seattle, and by Mr. Schlaifer through Carl Laemmle, president and founder of Universal.

Drs. Clemmer and Lambach are retiring from the exhibition business after 10 years. Dr. Clemmer is a pioneer in the motion picture business and his father was in business before him. Out of respect for Dr. Clemmer's pioneer achievement and due to the friendly relations that have always existed between Universal and Dr. Clemmer, and Dr. Lambach, the house is to be known as the Clemmer. Mr. Boomer was manager of the Universal Film exchange when it was located in Spokane and recently managed the firm's Casino theatre in San Francisco.

Court Rules In Johnson Case

Failure to Pay Admission Taxes Punishable Under Revenue But Not Criminal Law

A PERSON failing to make returns to the United States of admission taxes for which he is liable can be prosecuted under the provisions of the revenue law, but cannot also be prosecuted on a charge of embezzlement under the Criminal Code, it is held by the United States Supreme Court in a decision rendered May 11 in the case of James J. Johnston, charged with failure to pay admission taxes due the Government from certain boxing contests in New York City. The decision of the court is of great importance to all exhibitors and others whose activities are covered by special taxes.

On his first trial, Johnson was convicted under the penalty sections of the revenue law and also under Section 47 of the Criminal Code on the charge of having embezzled the amounts collected as taxes on tickets. The judgment was reversed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the case was carried by the Government to the Supreme Court.

"However it may have been under other statutes," the court held in its decision, "it seems to us that under this law the person required to pay over the tax is a debtor and not a bailee. The money paid for the tax is not identified at the outset but is paid with the price of the ticket that belongs to the owner of the show."

The court could see no ground for requiring the ticket office of a theatre to create a separate fund by laying aside the amount of the tax on each ticket and kept it apart, either in a strong box or as a separate deposit in a bank. "Reports are required only once a month," the court commented, "which does not look as if the Government were dealing with these people otherwise than with others answerable for a tax."

The court reversed the decision of the lower court finding Johnson guilty of embezzlement but affirmed it insofar as it found him guilty under the provisions of the revenue law.

Harry Wilson Gets New Coast Position

"U" Sales Executives Convene

Discussion of the Second White List Rouses Enthusiasm at Chicago Sessions

THE annual convention of Universal sales executives was held last week at the Drake Hotel in Chicago with eighty exchange and exploitation men present. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, presided at the sessions which were the most enthusiastic ever held by the organization.

The main topic of discussion was the second White List of fifty-four pictures, thirty jewels and twenty-four westerns which make up the coming season's program. Sales directors Ned Depinet, Jules Levy and Ned Marin addressed the assemblage with instructions and plans for the disposal of the pictures.

Carl Laemmle tossed a bombshell into the gathering when he announced the abolishment of the quota system in selling pictures and the establishment of a cost plus 10 per cent basis. In the course of his address he said:

"The salesmen know there is no chance to meet these quotas unless the picture happens to turn out to have a great drawing power. They know we are deceiving them. The exhibitors know that neither the home office nor the salesmen believe in this inflated quota, so don't believe it either. How can they? If we don't believe the quotas, if the salesmen don't and if the exhibitors don't, for goodness sake what is the use of them anyway?

"No use. I tell you right here I am going to abolish them as far as the Universal is concerned.

"And this is what we will put in place of them. You may think it is a revolutionary thing to tell the sales force just what a picture cost. I am going to do it because I am going to be just as white in my dealings with you as I am asking, nay demanding, that you be with the exhibitors, and as we are with the public. Another thing that I want to know is that the Universal will be satisfied with ten per cent profit on its pictures. That is little enough when you consider what some businesses expect to bring in profit. With conditions as they are today every business man who does not make a ten per cent profit on his turn-over will not be making more than a bare living."

Lionel Barrymore Feature Given New Title

Lionel Barrymore's third special production for Chadwick Pictures Corporation has been titled "A Man of Iron" instead of "A Man of Honor," as originally announced. It is scheduled for release June 1st as the seventh of the Chadwick Nine.

Production highlights from the Paramount picture, "The Shock Punch."

List Recent Story Purchases

First National Has Eleven Books And Plays For Early Production On Screen

Hold District Sales Meetings

First National Men Gather at Series of Conventions—Campaign Outlined

SELLING plans on First National's product for 1925-1926 were presented to the field force at the district sales conventions held last week in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, New Orleans, Los Angeles and Toronto. An outline of the pictures scheduled for release, their producers, directors and players, was presented to the branch managers at these meetings.

The sales plan as outlined by E. A. Eschmann met with the full approval of district and branch managers. Mr. Eschmann and several of his assistants attended the New York convention. A. W. Smith, Jr., was present at the New Orleans meeting; W. J. Morgan at Chicago, and Stanley W. Hatch at Cleveland. The other meetings were conducted by the district managers.

Telegrams received by Mr. Eschmann from the various district managers report themselves and their branch managers and salesmen as thoroughly "sold" on the new sales plan and promise the fullest co-operation in making 1925-1826 the banner year in First National's history.

National Screening Week is Planned by F. B. O.

F. B. O. will inaugurate a National Screening Week on May 25th, when in each of their thirty-four exchanges throughout the United States they will screen for the benefit of as many exhibitors and salesmen as possible the Associated Arts-F. B. O. Gold Bond special, "Drusilla With a Million." The screening of the picture will continue throughout the week.

This National Screening Week is a part of a huge exploitation and advertising campaign which will be launched in connection with "Drusilla With a Million" the day following its world premiere at the Capitol theatre in New York, set for May 24th.

"Under the Rouge" New Moomaw Title

"Under the Rouge" is the title chosen by Associated Exhibitors for the Lewis H. Moomaw production made under the working title of "The Greatest Thing." It is an underworld drama adapted from the original story by Moomaw.

Eileen Percy and Tom Moore are the featured players in the cast, which also includes William V. Mong, Mary Alden, Chester Conklin, James Mason and Claire de Lorez.

Five players have been added to the cast which will support Doris Kenyon, who will be featured, in "The Half-Way Girl," a forthcoming First National release. Hobart Bosworth, Tully Marshall, Teddy Sampson, Sam Hardy and Sally Crute are the recent additions to the cast, which will be headed by Lloyd Hughes in the leading male role.

Clarence Brown to Direct Valentino's First

Clarence Brown, recently signed to a long term contract by Joseph M. Schenck, will direct Rudolph Valentino in his first production for United Artists Corporation. The picture, adapted from the John Frederick novel, "The Bronze Collar," has the working title of "The Slave." The story is being adapted by Benjamin Glazer, with the continuity by Adelaide Heilbron.

Valentino, who has been resting at Palm Springs, returned recently to Hollywood for a day's conference with Mr. Schenck, after which he again sought his desert retreat.

Seitz Filming Zane Grey Story for Paramount

George B. Seitz has started camera work on "Wild Horse Mesa" at Red Lake, Arizona, which is ten miles from Flagstaff, the nearest community to the location. The picture, which is an adaptation of the Zane Grey novel of the same title, will be the first Seitz production under his contract with Paramount.

Jack Holt, Wallace Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., will head the cast of sixty regular players and hundreds of extras.

Goldstone Completes Cast for "The Thoroughbred"

The cast for "The Thoroughbred," which Bill Goldstone is producing for Truart release, has been completed by Oscar Apfel, who is directing the picture. The company will include Gladys Hulette, Theodore von Eltz, Carter De Haven, Virginia Browne Faire, Lillian Langdon, Hallam Cooley, Robert Brower, James Buchanan, Catherine Lewis and James McElhern.

"Don Q" and "Gold Rush" Due June 15

NEW United Artists pictures will be on display on both coasts in the near future. Sid Grauman has booked the latest Charley Chaplin feature, "The Gold Rush" for his Egyptian Theatre to follow the run of "The Iron Horse." It is expected the Chaplin film will go into the house about June 15.

Harry D. Buckley and Mark Larkin of the Fairbanks organization have concluded negotiations for the Globe Theatre in New York City for the showing of "Don Q," which is also scheduled to open about June 15 for a run of eight weeks. The house is not available for a longer period.

Marion Davies Leaves to Film New Play

MARION DAVIES left New York this week for Los Angeles, where she will soon start work in the screen adaptation of "Merry Wives of Gotham," in which she will star for Metro-Goldwyn. Miss Davies was in New York to attend the premiere of "Zander the Great" at the Capitol theatre.

According to latest advices "The Merry Wives of Gotham" will be made under the direction of Monta Bell, who will start production on the feature the latter part of the month at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City.

Raymond Griffith Has Signed Famous Star Contract

Raymond Griffith has affixed his signature to a five-year contract to star in feature comedies to be produced by Famous Players-Lasky, according to an announcement from the Coast. A production unit is being formed for Griffith, who will make not more than four productions each year.

Griffith started with Famous Players-Lasky less than two years ago, then playing a straight dramatic part in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow." In a comedy role in "Changing Husbands" he displayed his gift as a screen farceur and since that time has been given several important parts of the comedy type. The actor has just finished work in "Paths to Paradise," in which he is co-featured with Betty Compson.

Sax to Make "McFadden's Row of Flats"

Sam Sax is arranging to put into immediate production an elaborate screen version of the "McFadden's Row of Flats," as a Gotham Production. It will be a special and will be made on the west coast in addition to the Gotham Twelve, for distribution through Lumas Film Corporation.

Neither director nor cast for the picture has yet been signed. Negotiations are now on for the services of a well known comedian to play the leading role.

Plan Spectacular Scenes For De Mille Feature

Cecil B. De Mille has planned two spectacular sequences for inclusion in "The Coming of Amos," in which Rod La Rocque will be starred. One of the episodes will reproduce scenes from the Cannes Casino, famous Riviera resort, and the other will portray the annual "Festival of Flowers," which is one of the features of the tourist's visit to Southern France.

Sutherland to Direct Ray Griffith Vehicle

Edward Sutherland has been selected to direct Raymond Griffith in "Are You a Mason?" for Paramount. Sutherland has just completed "The Wild, Wild, Girl," in which Bebe Daniels is starred.

The Griffith vehicle will be produced in Hollywood. It will be an adaptation of the well known stage farce of the same title.

Buck Jones Gets Lead in "Lazybones"

Fox Film Corporation has decided upon Buck Jones for the leading role in "Lazybones," the screen version of the Owen Davis stage success of the same name. The adaptation for the screen was made by Frances Marion and the production will be under the direction of Frank Borzage.

Julian Directing Scenes For "Hell's Highroad"

Owing to the elaboration of Leatrice Joy's first starring vehicle "Hell's Highroad" to greater size than originally intended, Cecil B. De Mille has delegated Frank Urson and Paul Iribe as chief aides to Rupert Julian who will continue the direction of the production.

This arrangement will put the details of casting each part in the hands of Urson while Iribe will give his entire attention to developing the settings to a size and beauty comparable to those he created for "The Ten Commandments."

Davis to Open Offices in Hollywood

J. Charles Davis, 2nd, head of Davis Distributing Division, plans to go on to the coast from the convention in Milwaukee to open an office of the company in Hollywood. In announcing that a Hollywood office would be established Mr. Davis stated that the business of the company has grown so rapidly since its entry in the independent distribution field a short time ago that it will be necessary to steadily increase the amount of product taken over for release.

First Royal Production Nears Completion

"Before Midnight," first of the Royal Pictures series of features starring William Russell, is nearing completion under the direction of John Adolphi. Barbara Bedford heads the supporting cast. The series will be distributed independently by Banner Productions, Inc.

"Twenty Years After" for Richard Talmadge

Richard Talmadge's next vehicle for F. B. O. will be "Twenty Years After," based with comedy variations on Dr. Samuel Johnson's story, "The History of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia."

Metro - Goldwyn Again to Sign Jackie

JACKIE COOGAN was expected to sign a contract late this week by which Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation will again handle the Jackie Coogan productions for the coming year.

The young star will make two productions, the first of which will be "Old Clothes," an original story by Willard Mack, a sequel to "The Rag Man." The second has been temporarily titled "Dirty Face." Both productions will present Jackie in the type of role which first brought him fame, that of "The Kid."

Weber and Fields in scenes from "Friendly Enemies," a Producers Distributing Corporation release.

"U" Names New Western Stars

Members of Ranch Riders to Be Featured in Strong Line-Up of Short Dramas

SEVERAL of the expert riders and ropers who have been appearing as Ranch Riders in several Universal pictures, are to be elevated to stardom by that company. Under a plan to be put into effect within a short time, these boys will be given the opportunity to perform their stunts as featured players in two-reel western dramas based on stories published in magazines.

The new schedule of production featuring the Ranch Riders will be as follows:

A series of two-reel western dramas in which Edmund Cobb, already well known to the screen, will alternate with Freddy Humes, famous broncho rider, with William Crinley directing.

Ten two-reel western comedies from published stories by W. C. Tuttle, Vin Moore directing, in which Tuttle's famous characters "Dirty Shirt," and "Magpie" will be enacted by Ben "Smiley" Corbet and "Peewee" Holmes.

A series of western dramas in which Al Smith, well known in recent western productions at Universal City, and Tommy Grimes, world champion roper, are to be featured.

Freddie Humes was born on an Arizona ranch. He first achieved note in rodeo contests as a bulldogger and rider, and thus, by the way of a wild west show, drifted into pictures.

Tommy Grimes was born in Oklahoma, and also won his spurs in rodeos, finally winning the title of world's champion roper. Peewee Holmes hails from Arizona and first won fame with the Buffalo Bill shows, and Ben Corbett was born in Pendleton, Oregon, where as a small boy he practiced Roman riding, and won his world championship. His first work before the camera was with the Bison organization, and thus he came to Universal with the consolidation.

Another rider to be featured shortly is Art Ortego. Born in the Santa Clara Valley, California, Ortego attracted the attention of Frank Montgomery, when the producer saw him riding a wild bull at Tia Juana at a bulifight.

Mrs. Valentino Supervising Own Photoplay

Mrs. Rudolph Valentino is supervising the production of an independently produced photoplay of her own writing. It has the title of "What Price Beauty" and is being produced by Circle Films with Nita Naldi in the featured role. Others in the cast are Pierre Gendron, Dolores Johnson and Paulette Duval.

Circle Films is headed by George S. Ulman, business manager of Rudolph Valentino, but the latter has no connection with the picture. Photographic work is being done at the United Studios and is scheduled to be finished June 1st. No arrangement has yet been made for the release of the picture.

Complete Cast For "Son Of His Father"

Paramount has completed the cast for "A Son of His Father", with the addition of Raymond Hatton, Walter McGrail and James Farley. Warner Baxter and Bessie Love were previously announced. This is the latest Harold Bell Wright novel and will be produced by Victor Fleming.

Chaplin's "Gold Rush" to Be in Ten or More Reels

Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush," which United Artists have announced for release in August, will be ten or more reels in length.

The comedy was put into production on February 7, 1924 and the final scenes taken April 16th, 1925. "The Gold Rush" is said to present a biographic symbolization of the famous comedian's life of enterprise from an unknown to a multi-millionaire screen star. This will be portrayed against a background of hardships as one of the gold seekers in Alaska during the early days of the Klondyke discoveries.

Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Has Big Part in Grey Play

One of the most important acting parts assigned Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who is under contract to Paramount, since his entry into pictures is the role he will portray in "Wild Horse Mesa," which is being filmed under the direction of George B. Seitz. The part calls for some character delineation and several difficult feats of horsemanship.

Neilan's First Will Be "The Sky Rocket"

A story of Hollywood and its picture people is to be Marshall Neilan's first picture produced independently under the banner of Marshall Neilan Productions. It is titled "The Sky Rocket" and is by Adela Rogers St. Johns. The story first attracted attention as a magazine serial and later in book form.

Jack Dempsey and his wife, Estelle Taylor have completed their work in the Associated Exhibitors-Fine Arts production, "Manhattan Madness" and are now touring in Europe. Final scenes for the picture were shot in New York. It is now being cut and titled and will probably be ready for presentation within a month.

"Manhattan Madness" is based on an original script written by Charles T. and Frank Dazey and was filmed under the personal supervision of Oscar Price, with John McDermott directing. In the cast in support, of Dempsey and his wife are, Bull Montana, Frank Campeau, Nelson McDowell, George Seigman, Bill Franey, Theodore Lorch, Tom O'Brien, Ed Kennedy, Glenn Cavender, Jack Deery, Dean Markham and Buddy Mason.

Start Production Of "The Half-Way Girl"

Production of "The Half-Way Girl," was started at the First National studios in New York this week. It is the sixth feature to be made in the east by the Earl Hudson units.

Within the next few weeks Hudson will start the seventh and eighth productions. They will be "The Come-Back" with Milton Sills in the stellar role, and "The Scarlet Saint"—an adaptation of Gerald Beaumont's magazine story. "The Lady who played Fidele."

F. B. O. Planning Another Railroad Drama

F. B. O. is planning to put into production on a lavish scale on their own lot in Hollywood a new railroad melodrama tentatively called "The Midnight Flyer." The cast is now being assembled and production will start as soon as the players are selected.

Sainpolis Added To "My Lady's Lips" Cast

John Sainpolis has been signed by B. P. Schulberg for one of the principal roles in his new society melodrama, "My Lady's Lips." Sainpolis has appeared for Schulberg in the past in "The Hero" and "Shadows."

Alice Calhoun Now Warner Featured Player

ALICE CALHOUN, well known screen player and featured in many Vitagraph productions, has joined the Warner Brothers stock company as a featured player. Miss Calhoun's Vitagraph contract has been taken over by Warners and she will play her first part under the new arrangement as the leading lady opposite Syd Chaplin in "The Man on the Box," succeeding to the role originally assigned to June Marlowe, who has been transferred to the cast of "The Pleasure Buyers."

Miss Calhoun has won her prominence on the screen in Vitagraph pictures. She has been with that company for several years. Among the pictures in which she has been featured recently are "Pampered Youth" and "The Magnificent Ambersons."

Johnny Hines in some of the highlight scenes of his latest feature for C. C. Burr, "The Crackerjack."

"Crackerjack" Has Premiere

Johnny Hines' Latest Production Given Initial Showing Before Large Audience

An audience of approximately twelve hundred people comprising film executives, exhibitors, exchange men and the representatives of the trade paper and fan publications witnessed the premiere showing of Johnny Hines' latest production "The Crackerack" at the Hotel Plaza on Friday evening, May eighth.

The screening of the feature was preceded by a novel reel titled "Wise Cracks of the Day" a take-off, which proved entertaining because the quips were directed at prominent film executives. The feature was then shown and, judging from the chuckles as the reels were run off and the hearty applause at the finish of the picture all present considered the evening well spent.

The surprise of the evening occurred when Johnny was called to the stage by Edmund Breeze and presented with a silver placque as a token of appreciation for his help as master of ceremonies at the re-opening of the Gotham theatre, New York City, recently. Hines delivered a short address at first in humorous vein and then a sincere expression of thanks to the management of the Gotham theatre for the placque and to the audience for their reception of his picture.

After the showing a buffet luncheon was served in the Mirror room of the hotel which was followed by a dance which ran into the early morning hours.

Among those present at the showing were: Charles Moyer, Charles Hines, Arthur James, Samuel Zierler, A. M. Botsford, M. B. Blumenstock, Tim Leahy, Herbert Cruikshank, Arthur Eddy, Mary Boyle, Ed Olmstead, Ed Hurley, Ray Gallagher, Larry Moen, Harold Flavin, L. M. Reid, John W. Krafft, C. C. Burr, Mr. Weshner, Anne Maxwell, Bradley Barker, Walter Eberhardt, Barry Curran, Rollo Lloyd and Tom Waller.

Production on "The Crackerjack" was started in January, the company going to Florida, where three weeks were spent doing the exteriors. The company then returned to New York where the picture was completed at the Jackson Studios in the Bronx. This will be Hines' last production to be marketed on the state rights plan as he has just signed a contract with First National to appear in a series of pictures for that company.

Tornado Film Has a Real Earthquake Tieup

During a showing of Universal's "The Tornado" at Harry Palmer's Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind., an earthquake occurred at the time the storm scene of the picture was at its height. People jumped from their seats and made for the exits, so violent was the rocking of the building. The fact that the quake occurred at shortly after ten P. M., when the theatre was practically cleared, is possibly all that prevented a panic.

the cast. Mr. Mayer tells me that this will be one of the greatest pictures the studio has ever turned out.

" 'The Unholy Three' I have already seen and it is a most remarkable picture with Lon Chaney in a most unusual characterization, even for him. It is a deeply absorbing story of the underworld. Mae Busch and Matt Moore appear in the cast and the direction was handled by Tod Browning.

" 'The Span of Life,' Sutton Vane's great melodrama, will be made into a motion picture and released by us next season. Lon Chaney is the star with Pauline Starke and William Haines in leading parts. Jack Conway is making this picture. Remember the human bridge in the stage play? Well in the picture you'll see one person linked to another across a hundred foot canyon.

"There will be one other Lon Chaney production on our 1925-26 schedule, the title and details to be announced later.

"An untitled Norma Shearer picture directed by Hobart Henley and with Lew Cody, William Haines and Mary Carr in the cast, will also be released. It is a story by Samuel Shipman. It will be Miss Shearer's first big starring vehicle for the new season.

"In addition to the Shipman story Norma Shearer will be starred in three other productions during 1925-26 and remember, Norma Shearer is fast becoming the most popular star on the screen.

" 'The Auction Block,' the famous Rex Beach story, will star Norma Shearer as an added attraction, and that certainly is a winning combination, providing one of the many outstanding features on our schedule.

" 'The Barrier,' another of Rex Beach's wonderful stories will be still another box office attraction from Metro-Goldwyn. It will have a great cast and a great star.

" 'Paris,' an original story by Carey Wilson, directed by Robert Z. Leonard with Pauline Starke and Lew Cody playing the leading roles. This will be the first picture for which Erte, the famous designer, contributed his skill in the designing of women's costumes.

" 'Monte Carlo,' will be a follow up on 'Paris' but with Erte fashion creations in Technicolor and it will have a specially select cast assigned to it shortly.

" 'Sun-Up,' from the stage success by Lula Vollmer is to be directed by Edmund Goulding and the cast will include Conrad Nagel, Pauline Starke and Lucille LaVerne.

"Ramon Novarro will first be seen in a story of The United States Naval Academy and he will have the cooperation of the Government in making the picture. William Christy Cabanne will direct. In addition there will be two other Ramon Novarro pictures on our 1925-26 schedule.

" 'The Circle,' from Somerset Maugham's play, will be directed by Frank Borzage with Eleanor Boardman and Malcolm McGregor in the leading parts.

" 'Pretty Ladies' is a Monta Bell production in which ZaSu Pitts, Tom Moore and Lilyan Tashman will be seen. It is by Adela Rogers St. Johns and I am told it will present more beautiful women than any production heretofore made.

" 'Time, the Comedian,' with Mae Busch, Lew Cody and Gertrude Olmsted, and directed by Robert Z. Leonard, is also on our schedule. It is by Kate Jordan.

" 'Sally, Irene and Mary,' a Hobart Henley production, has Eleanor Boardman, Sally O'Neill, Renee Adoree and William Haines in the cast. It is Eddie Dowling's great Broadway stage success.

"'The Exquisite Sinner,' adapted from 'Escape' by Alden Brooks, will be directed by Josef von Sternberg, and I am sure will prove the surprise of the year. Conrad Nagel and Renee Adoree will head the cast.

"'Never the Twain Shall Meet,' Peter B. Kyne's greatest story, is to be directed by Maurice Tourneur and has Anita Stewart and Bert Lytell heading an all-star cast. It is a Cosmopolitan production. The story is laid in California and the South Seas.

"'Merry Wives of Gotham' is a Marion Davies picture produced by Cosmopolitan and directed by Monta Bell. It is an adaptation of the famous stage play and Miss Davies has a role similar to the one she played in 'Little Old New York.'

"'Buddies' is another Marion Davies feature. This is also from a very popular stage play by George Hobart which ran for a year and a half on Broadway.

"'The Temptress' by Vincente Blasco Ibanez is considered the prize screen vehicle of the year. It will be a Cosmopolitan Production by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and will present a distinguished cast.

"'The Torrent' by Ibanez will have Aileen Pringle in the leading role and this also will be a Cosmopolitan Production made at our studios. It will be big in every way.

"'There will be one Fred Niblo production on our schedule. Details of this picture have not been completed as yet and will be announced later.

"'Brown of Harvard,' Rida Johnson Young's great popular play of college life will have Conrad Nagel and Eleanor Boardman in the leading roles.

"'Dance Madness' by S. J. Kaufman, will feature Aileen Pringle and Lew Cody. It is the story of a romantic love affair.

"'The Reason Why' is an Elinor Glyn production. Jack Conway will direct it and Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle will be seen in the leading roles.

"'Money Talks,' a Rupert Hughes production will be directed by Alf Goulding with Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel featured.

"'How Dare You' will be another Rupert Hughes Production on our next season schedule.

Stromberg to Complete "The Last Frontier"

PRODUCERS Distributing Corporation announced this week that "The Last Frontier," an elaborate screen adaptation of the Courtney Riley Cooper novel which was started by Thomas H. Ince and left uncompleted at his death, will be finished by Hunt Stromberg and offered as one of the special releases of that company next season.

The material already filmed consists of the big spectacles and the scenes in which the last of the buffalo herds are seen in a mighty stampede. None of the dramatic action was recorded by Mr. Ince and therefore in completing the work, Stromberg will not be confronted with any difficulties in the matter of retakes or scene matching. In taking up the work he will be able to continue the production just as though it had not been interrupted at all.

"'An Exchange of Wives' by Cosmo Hamilton and adapted from the stage success will be directed by Hobart Henley with Eleanor Boardman, Lew Cody, William Haines and Renee Adoree.

"'Lovey Mary,' the classic by Alice Hegan Rice, will be directed by King Vidor with Sally O'Neill the featured player.

"'The Mysterious Island' by Jules Verne will have undersea scenes by the famous Williamson process and many sequences will be in Technicolor.

"'A Little Bit of Broadway,' from the novel by Richard Connell, the story of a girl and the white lights, will be on our schedule.

"'Women and Wives,' by Harvey Ferguson and one of the best sellers of current fiction, will have Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel featured.

"There will be two Mae Murray productions on our 1925-26 list. They will be bigger, better and greater than any Miss Murray has done heretofore.

"These will constitute our productions for the new season. It is quite the most pretentious schedule ever mapped out by any producing organization at any time and I am confident that 1925-26 will see Metro-Goldwyn far outdistance the remarkable record we made last season."

Warners Engage Withey to Direct Irene Rich Film

Chet Withey has been signed by the Warner Brothers to direct "The Pleasure Buyers," a screen version of the Arthur Somers Roche novel in which Irene Rich will be starred. Withey has directed several important screen productions, his most recent being "A Cafe in Cairo," in which Priscilla Dean was starred.

The scenario for "The Pleasure Buyers" was made by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton. Clive Brooks, Gayne Whitman, June Marlow and Charles Conklin will be seen in support of Miss Rich in this picture.

Huge Set Built For Scenes In "Seven Days"

A huge set representing a New York dwelling has been built at the Christie studios for the making of scenes for "Seven Days," which Scott Sidney is directing. The structure occupies an entire stage and an idea of its size is indicated by the fact that there are nine rooms on the first floor of the house. The set was designed by C. D. Cadwallader, art director at the Hollywood studios.

Feature for First National Completed by Carewe

Edwin Carewe has completed production of "The Lady Who Lied," a screen adaptation from Robert Hichens' novel "Snake-Bite," which First National will distribute. The film is now being edited.

Lewis Stone, Virginia Valli, Louis Payne, Nita Naldi, Edward Earle and Leo White have the principal roles in the picture.

Noah Beery Engaged for La Rocque Vehicle

Cecil B. De Mille has engaged Noah Beery for the role of Ramon Garcia in "The Coming of Amos," in which Rod La Rocque will be starred on the Producers Distributing Corporation schedule. The picture will be directed by Paul Sloane with Jetta Goudal playing the leading feminine role opposite the star.

New Campaign For Astor Films

Rathner Announces Tie-Up With Macfadden Publication for Thirteen Features

ASTOR Distributing Corporation this week announced that a cooperative publicity campaign has been arranged with the Macfadden publications and newspaper which will afford extensive national exploitation for the twelve Astor "Gold Medal" productions and the Astor "Aristocrat" special which that company will distribute on the independent market during the 1925-26 season.

It is estimated that the combined Macfadden publications, in which the stories of the Astor photoplays will be run serially, along with other publicity, reach a total of 16,340,000 readers monthly.

The announcement, made by Harry Rathner, head of the Astor concern, states that all the product of the company will be distributed on the states right market. Ramon Novarro will be one of the stars of the pictures listed for release next season by Astor, and among the productions will be one titled "Child Wives," a topic of recent discussion in newspaper columns.

In making the announcement Mr. Rathner said: "In organizing the Astor Distributing Corporation it was our aim to get our publicity to the public through magazines which are read by innumerable people. These magazines include 'Movie Weekly,' 'Dream World,' 'Dance Lovers,' 'Physical Culture,' 'True Story,' 'Modern Marriage,' 'True Detective,' 'Sportlife,' 'True Romance,' 'Fiction Lovers,' 'Your Car,' and 'Muscle Builder.'

"Each story from which a picture is produced will be written in installments or as a novellette and be printed in one of the Macfadden magazines.

"Our first Astor 'Aristocrat' will be on the theme child wives. This is a subject which has been getting big newspaper space, in some cases whole pages, throughout the country.

"One of our first 'Gold Medal' productions to be released will be Ramon Novarro in 'A Lover's Oath.' This is a Ferdinand Pinney Earle production. Playing opposite Novarro is Kathleen Key.

"'The Shining Adventure,' from the novel by Dana Burnett, produced by Madeline Brandeis and directed by Hugo Ballin, stars Percy Marmont and Mabel Ballin. Ben Alexander plays an important part in 'The Shining Adventure.'

"The first picture will be in the hands of exchanges by June 15th and thereafter will be available on a regular schedule. Stories are being selected for other productions."

James Young Will Direct Theda Bara

James Young has been signed by I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Picturfes Corporation, to direct Theda Bara in "The Unchastened Woman," the vehicle that will bring the star back to the screen. It is an adaptation by Douglas Doty of Louis K. Anspacher's stage play.

Miss Bara is now occupied in selecting her wardrobe for the production, which will get under way about the middle of May. The supporting cast to Miss Bara has not yet been named

Rayart Will Distribute Gerson Series

W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart Pictures has concluded a deal with Gerson Pictures Corporation of Los Angeles and San Francisco whereby the former company will distribute a series of six melodramas being produced by B. Berger for Gerson Pictures.

The series will be made under the brand name of Superior Melodramas and will be completely separated from the Rayart 32 previously announced. The first picture will be released August 15th and the others will follow at intervals of six weeks. The pictures are titled "The Last Alarm," "The Sunset Limited," "Somebody's Mother," "The Coast Guard Patrol," "The Call of the Klondyke" and "The Pride of the Force.'

Davis to Offer Two Series of Short Comedies

The Davis Distributing Division, Inc., will offer two series of two-reel comedies according to the terms of a contract recently signed with Womack-McKnight Productions, the company which will make the pictures.

One group will be offered under the series name of "Sheiks and Shebas." These will portray young America, concerning characters of the ages from 16 to 20. Rosalie Marlin will be featured in the first of the series entitled "Peggy the Vamp." Mark Galdaine, well known comedy director will film the pictures. The second series will be "Kid" comedies under the brand name of "Hey Fella's." The title of the first release will be "Saturday."

Matt Moore Will Star in "Three Weeks in Paris"

Warner Brothers have announced "Three Weeks in Paris," with Matt Moore in the starred role as their next comedy special. The picture will be an adaptation of the Gregory Rogers story of that title.

Roy Del Ruth has been named to direct the production, which will present Dorothy Devore, Willard Louis, Helen Lynch, Gaynne Whitman, John Patrick and Frank Bond in the supporting cast. The scenario was written by Darryl Francis Zanuck. David Abel will be in charge of the camera work.

Schulberg is Conferring With Bachmann

B. P. SCHULBERG is in New York from the coast to confer with J. G. Bachmann, general manager of distribution on details regarding the eighteen special productions Schulberg Productions will release during the coming season.

Among other things that will be decided by Schulberg and Bachmann will be the order in which the stories will be filmed and tentative release dates decided upon. Upon his arrival the producer stated his company's product next year will continue its established policy of best selling stories to be directed by four of the best known directors.

"The Talker" Rork's Greatest Screen Effort

WITH successful advance engagements in Los Angeles and New York to its credit, "The Talker," Sam E. Rork's impressive screen version of the Marion Fairfax stage play of that title, is ready for release to exhibitors through First National.

The picture has been hailed as the most ambitious effort of the veteran stage and screen producer who brought out "Ponjola" and "Inez From Hollywood," the more recent of several outstanding photoplays, among them the "Rosary" and the new version of "The Spoilers," which he made in association with Jesse Hampton.

The unusual "box office angles" which have been a marked feature of this producer's previous works are again in evidence in this new photoplay, these attributes including the title; the theme of the play, which concerns a discontented wife who "talks" a lot of extremist views and so proves a misleading influence upon her young and impressionable sister-in-law; the cast of exceptionally prominent and popular players; a director whose name has been connected with many recent screen successes; and the fact that the author of the play who is a well known scenarist, made the screen adaptation.

Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson, the leading players, and Alfred E. Green, the director who proved such an ideal combination of talent in "Inez From Hollywood," are again associated in this production of "The Talker." Their work in the new picture has been commented upon as a confirmation of the keen judgment generally accredited to the producer responsible for bringing them together in "Inez From Hollywood."

Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone in one of the delightful scenes from "The Talker," Sam Rork's production for First National release.

Rork's acknowledged appreciation for the box-office appeal of well-exploited screen personalities is further evidenced in the selection he has made of the players to enact the other roles in "The Talker."

Lewis Stone

LEWIS STONE, who plays the role of Harry Lennox, is regarded one of the most finished and resourceful actors in pictures. His is the ability to humanize and make vital all of the characters he portrays before the camera, and his interpretation of the husband in "The Talker" is further evidence of his native talent and skill in the "silent drama."

Stone won his spurs on the speaking stage in "The Misleading Lady," and "The Bird of Paradise." Following these engagements he attracted the attention of Metro and achieved success with his brilliant performances in the memorable "Scaramouche," "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "Trifling Women." Since that time he has performed with increasing brilliance in several outstanding pictures, among them "Cytheria," "Husbands and Lovers," and "Inez From Hollywood."

Anna Q. Nilsson

THE title role in "The Talker" is in the accomplished hands of Anna Q. Nilsson, popular as a screen personality and recognized as one of the most versatile actresses in pictures. Miss Nilsson has been identified with some of the screen's big successes, and has played roles in important productions of all of the leading companies.

Her latest part affords her one of the big opportunities of her screen career and the portrayal she renders recalls many of her past successes, including the impersonations she gave in "Ponjola," "Inez From Hollywood," "The Side Show of Life," "Painted People" and many others equally memorable. Miss Nilsson was born in Sweden and received her early stage training there. She came to this country several years ago and engaged first in stage work, but soon turned her talents to pictures.

The story of "The Talker," Sam Rork's production for First National release, told in pictures; left to right, upper row: Gertrude Short, Tully Marshall and Lydia Yeamans Titis as the Family Next Door, which provides much of the comedy relief; Ned Hollister (Ian Keith), an automobile salesman, makes love to Kate Lennox, (Anna Q. Nilsson), who talks a great deal about emancipation for wives, without really meaning it; Hollister's real dishonorable intentions are toward Ruth (Shirley Mason), the sister of Kate's husband, and as he is about to take her out, they are confronted by Lonnie (Harold Goodwin), who loves her; bottom row, left to right: Kate has purchased an expensive automobile from Hollister, drawing a check without telling her husband, Harry (Lewis Stone), who informs her that he has made the last payment on the house. This means an overdraft and Kate begs Hollister to return the money. He puts her off, and as he is bidding her good-bye, her husband enters. He forbids her to see him again. (Continued in next lay-out.)

Varied Exploitation Angles in "The Talker"

WITH a title like that of "The Talker," with a striking theme of tremendous current interest, and with a cast of the strength found in this picture, the showman has a production which lends itself readily to exploitation of the most productive sort. Showmanship of the highest order has been embodied in the production of "The Talker," with the result that the exhibitor need not seek far to find a plentiful array of advertising angles.

The outstanding points to play up are: 1. The title. 2. The cast. 3. The producer. 4. The powerful theme. 5. The stage play on which it is based Taking these up, one at a time, you have, first of all, a splendid title to work with. It is short, punchy and to the point. Play up this title in every way. Just the line: "The Talker is Coming" in your program, your ads, your lobby and elsewhere will start the ball rolling. Tack-cards or throwaways might be gotten out along the line: "Are You the Talker?" and the like.

A series of blind teaser ads might be run in your newspapers, headed: "The Talker is a Menace," and telling of the harm done by malicious or insincere talk. Sign this "Citizen's Committee on The Talker."

Effective tack-cards of another sort might be printed in bold type, reading: "Women! Good News for You. The Talker is coming to free you from domestic slavery." Address another to the male population: "Men! Take Warning. The Talker will break up your homes."

Follow these up with one reading: "The Talker will be in Blankville on June 5th. Watch for The Talker." Then, in your advertisements, announce the play dates and tie-up this interest with the showing at your theatre.

The title would also lend itself to tie-ups with radio stores on loud speakers, phonograph stores, schools of elocution and languages, and the like.

The advertising value of a cast such as that assembled for "The Talker" is obvious. In advertising Anna Q. Nilsson you can refer to any one or more of a score of successes with which she has been identified. If you have any Scandinavian societies in your city, have a telegram sent from Miss Nilsson to them telling them it is her finest picture. The exchange can doubtless arrange to have this sent from Los Angeles for you.

Lewis Stone, who fought in the Spanish-American and World wars, has just been made a major in the reserves, a fact which you can take advantage of by holding a Military night or American Legion night, with local officials and post attending in a body.

The other players, Shirley Mason, Tully Marshall, Ian Keith, Barbara Bedford, Harold Goodwin, Gertrude Short, Lydia Yeamans Titus and E. H. Calvert, are all well known, and you should play them up at your discretion, depending upon their relative popularity with your audiences.

Sam E. Rork, the producer of the picture, provides another advertising angle. Rork is a veteran showman, and you should mention that he was the producer of "Ponjola" and, more recently, "Inez from Hollywood."

The director, Alfred E. Green, and the cameraman, Arthur Edeson, are both widely known to film fans. Green recently directed "Sally," and Edeson photographed such productions as "The Lost World," "Robin Hood" and "The Thief of Bagdad," facts which may be taken advantage of in a publicity way.

The theme of the picture is that of the harm done by those who preach harmful doctrines which they themselves have no intention of following but which may be taken seriously by others. In this case, it is the doctrine of women's emancipation from all marital duties and fidelity. This theme lends itself to sermons by local ministers, discussion by club women, essay contests, and the like. Special screenings to such bodies of people would be helpful in obtaining co-operation along this line.

Al Green

AL GREEN, director of "The Talker," occupies a most prominent place among the leading directors of the day. In production after production he has evidenced a marked talent for developing a human and realistic note.

Green started in pictures with Selig in 1911, after a brief career on the stage. He began to leap into the limelight when he was chosen to pilot Thomas Meighan for Famous—an association which is being renewed, for Green will soon start directing this star in a new Paramount picture. He directed "Inez From Hollywood" with such skill that Sam Rork re-engaged him to make "The Talker:"

Continuing the story of "The Talker," Sam's Rork's production for First National, in pictures; left to right, upper row: Ruth, having taken Kate's doctrines seriously, elopes with Hollister, but learning that he is married and a defaulter, leaves him at once; this leads to a break between Harry Lennox and his wife, and his secretary (Barbara Bedford), strives to win him; Kate, meanwhile, is broken-hearted over the disapearance of Ruth and the break with her husband; bottom row, left to right: Harry has been ordered to India and his secretary has begged to be taken along; Harry sends a note to his wife, and she comes to the office determined to ask him to take her back, but finds only his secretary, who tells her that Harry wants a divorce. Heart-broken, Kate goes away to give him his divorce and sell the house. Ruth returns and is reunited with her sister. Harry comes to find out the meaning of her note about a divorce, and mutual explanations follow. Ruth is reunited with Lonnie.

Vital Theme and Fine Cast In "The Talker"

THE idea upon which Marion Fairfax built her play "The Talker," the screen version of which is offered by Sam E. Rork, veteran stage and photoplay producer, through First National, is that "It is bad to preach a good doctrine and fail to practice it; but to express theories so extreme and revolutionary that even their advocate is too sensible to practice, is criminal."

Kate Lennox, pretty, spoiled and willful wife of Harry Lennox, is bored by suburban life. As an antidote for her discontent, she preaches a doctrine of woman's "freedom," declaring that woman of today has the courage to take her happiness when and how she pleases; and she writes a signed article to this effect for the small town paper.

Harry's pretty, unsophisticated sister, Ruth, lives with him, and takes all of Kate's views seriously. Lonnie Whinston, who boards at the Fells', next door, loves Ruth in a boyish, idealistic way. The other Fells' boarder is Barbara Farley. Fells, Lonnie and Barbara all work at Grayson's, in the city, where Harry is office manager.

Ned Hollister, a handsome adventurer, pays court to Kate as a blind for his intentions toward Ruth, whom he desires ardently. He sells Kate a very expensive car, for which she gives a "family check" for five hundred as first payment. Harry comes home with the news that he has gotten a raise and paid the last two installments on their home. This makes Kate's check an overdraft, and she has to phone Ned. Her article in the paper, and the general disorder of the household, precipitates a quarrel between Kate and Harry, and he goes back to town to get his dinner. Ned seizes the opportunity and takes Kate and Ruth to town for dinner and a dance. Harry, who has changed his mind and comes back, sees them go.

At the cafe, Ned pleads with Ruth to go away with him, and she agrees, using Kate's theories as the excuse for her action. When they get home, Harry is waiting. Kate retracts her radical statements about marriage, and "squares" herself with her husband. But Ruth has stolen away with Ned.

Harry and Lonnie pursue and overtake the pair at a mountain hotel. But Ruth has learned that Ned is married, and a fugitive from justice, so she gets out at the back of the hotel and runs away. Lonnie almost kills Ned in a fight, which is stopped by the detectives. Under arrest, Ned tells Harry that Ruth theatened to drown herself. The wood is searched and the lake dragged, without result.

Harry goes to live at his club in town, unable to stay at home, with its memories of his little lost sister. Kate, repentant, can do nothing. Grayson's orders Harry to India to take its office there. Lonnie is to go along, and Barbara Farley, now openly in love with Harry, pleads to have him take her.

Kate comes to Harry's office again to ask forgiveness. He is out, and Barbara intimates that he wants a divorce from Kate. Heartbroken, she leaves a note that she will apply for a divorce.

The afternoon before Harry and Lonnie are to leave, Ruth comes home. Weary, weak and ill, she bitterly upbraids Kate, and vows that she will go away again. But Kate's very eagerness to make amends wins over Ruth. Harry comes to ask Kate about the note, and is reunited with his wife and his sister. Lonnie, uncertain at first of his attitude toward his returned love, learns that she can still honorably be his, and takes her to his heart.

Harold Goodwin and Shirley Mason in one of their love scenes from "The Talker," Sam Rork's production for First National release

Marion Fairfax

WHILE the arrangement is undeniably an ideal one, it seldom happens that the author of a stage play is afforded the opportunity to adapt his work to the photoplay. An instance in which the unusual has happened is "The Talker," successfully produced as a stage play some time ago and now offered in pictures by Sam Rork. The author of the play and the scenario are the same—Marion Fairfax. Miss Fairfax, who in private life is Mrs. Tully Marshall, is a scenarist of established reputation and was therefore selected to make the adaptation of her own play.

Shirley Mason

SHIRLEY MASON is the youngest of three sisters who have made deep impressions as screen actresses—the other two are Viola Dana and Edna Flugrath, who won prominence as a film player in England. Miss Mason, who plays the part of the young girl who is victimized by the vapid talk of Lennox in "The Talker," made her first appearance in pictures when she was 12 years old. She was loaned to Sam Rork for the part of Ruth Lennox because she was judged the ideal choice for the role and her performance proves the wisdom of the selection.

Ian Keith

IAN KEITH, who impersonates the caddish Ned Hollister in "The Talker," has made rapid strides as a screen actor. Keith made his first appearance on a New York stage with William Faversham in "The Silver Fox."

Keith was then signed by David Belasco and played for two seasons in "Laugh, Clown Laugh." During the engagement he was given his first screen role, in support of Gloria Swanson in "Manhandled," which he followed with the lead opposite this star in "Her Love Story." He then went to California and played opposite Corinne Griffith in "Love's Wilderness." Then came "Enticement," "My Son," and after that his current work in "The Talker."

Barbara Bedford

BARBARA BEDFORD, one of the most promising of the younger generation of screen actresses who plays a featured role in "The Talker," owes her "discovery" to none other than Bill Hart, who picked her from a crowd of "extras" to play a real acting role.

So delighted was Bill Hart with her response that he touted his new "discovery" to others, so Maurice Tourneur tried her in a role. Since then her progress has been in keeping with her promise.

Gertrude Short

WHILE she is only 22 years of age, Gertrude Short, the busy-body daughter of the Fells in "The Talker," has been called one of the "oldest" actresses on the screen. She started in pictures as a child actress and during her remarkable career before the cameras has played in productions of Famous Players, among them "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and "The Little Princess," both Mary Pickford vehicles, Vitagraph, Warner Brothers, F. B. O., and others.

Cecille Evans

CECILLE EVANS, the clever little actress who plays the part of stenographer in "The Talker," is regarded by the other Hollywood girls as something of an authority on physical culture, exercise and diet. She began building up this reputation while working in comedies, where she became famous as the possessor of the "million dollar pair of legs," an award which was confirmed by a jury of artists and beauty experts.

Harold Goodwin

THE part of Lonnie Whinston in "The Talker" is one of the most sympathetic and moving in the picture. It is played by Harold Goodwin, regarded one of the finest young actors on the screen, of which he is a product. Goodwin became an actor under the direction of D. W. Griffith, for whom he played boy parts in the Old Biograph days. At that famous work-shop he played opposite such celebrated screen artists as Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Mae Marsh, Donald Crisp, Norma and Constance Talmadge.

Tully Marshall

TULLY MARSHALL, the hen-pecked Mr. Fells in "The Talker," is a veteran actor of the stage and the screen as well. He was starred in stage productions, and was a producer and director of stage plays, before he entered pictures. Marshall's name has appeared in the casts of some of the most notable screen plays, Griffith's "Intolerance," "The Covered Wagon," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," for example.

Lydia Yeamans Titus

LYDIA YEAMANS TITUS—the domineering Mrs. Fells in "The Talker"—is famous for her character impersonations in pictures. She is a familiar screen figure, having scored emphatically in roles of the gossipy, commanding and demanding, matron type. Mrs. Yeamans was reared in the theatre, her first appearance was at the age of six months, at which time she was carried on the stage in a scene in "Rollo's Child," a melodrama produced in Australia.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

"Thundering Herd" Aided by Strong Campaign

An ingenious animated miniature lobby display was used by Manager D. Roscoe Faunce of the Strand theatre, Birmingham, on "The Thundering Herd" recently. The miniature set in the center depicted a pioneers' camp with Indians on horseback circling around them in attack. The horses of the Indians were made to gallop by being attached to a ⅛ horse power motor concealed inside display, greatly enhancing the attention value of same.

A special screening held for members of the Better Films Committee and the press resulted in the former's giving the photoplay a letter of endorsement. Five hundred copies of this letter were mailed to prominent ladies of Birmingham.

Manager Faunce arranged several excellent tie-ups, one with the Public Library by which that institution distributed 3,000 special bookmarks on the production. A special one-sheet was also displayed in a conspicuous place in the library.

Birmingham's leading department store had an attractive display on the book with advertising copy on the photoplay.

Courtesy Week in Cleveland for "Excuse Me"

When "Excuse Me" played recently at Loew's State theatre in Cleveland, Ohio, C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, put over a Courtesy Week with the co-operation of the Cleveland Press. A feature of this Courtesy Week was the placing of a young woman on the streets whose function was to observe every act of unusual courtesy shown, and to reward it by presenting the doer with a check for money and passes to "Excuse Me." The courteous deeds which she rewarded in this manner were featured in the press daily, and made excellent copy.

A teaser campaign heralded the showing, and there was a special lobby display.

Marquee display and street ballyhoo for "The Tornado" (Universal) at Proctor's 125th Street theatre, New York City, recently.

Bannered Sedan is Teaser for "K—the Unknown"

Everyone in Sharon, Pa., recently was asking who "K" was and why he did not use his good looking new car. Sam Friedman, manager of the Luna theatre, Sharon, and Jack Hays, Universal exploitation man, were responsible for this curiosity for they arranged a tie-up, with the local Hudson dealer for a two-day bally-hoo.

A card was placed in each door of a Hudson sedan reading, "Reserved for 'K'—the Unknown'" and the machine driven through the streets by a boy from the motor agency.

Street Projector Exploits "Lost World" Showing

The exploitation department of First National used a valuable advertising device during the recent engagement of "The Lost World" at the Astor theatre, New York. It was a motion picture projection machine in a gold case no larger than a Victrola which was screening sections of "The Lost World," and interjecting between scenes the statement, "The Lost World, Astor Theatre, Now."

The machine was obtained by Allan S. Glenn, supervisor of exploitation from First National. The projection machine and an automatic rewinder are in the bottom of the case, a series of mirrors projecting the picture onto the silversheet at the back of the top section. In truth it's a motion picture show in a two foot case.

Not only was the machine valuable to First National but it aided the A. L. Burt & Co.'s edition of "The Lost World" in book form.

Pullman Car Duplicated in Lobby for "Excuse Me"

Manager H. C. Clarke of the Garing, Greenville, S. C., built a lobby on "Excuse Me," which aside from being unique was an excellent visualization of the title.

A complete side of a Pullman car made out of compo board and painted exactly like a steel coach was placed in the lobby. Just above the windows of the car was printed the title of the photoplay. In each window was a cut-out of the different characters in the picture. Under each window was the name of the player. The last window carried the number of the car and "Bound to Reno." At the entrance of the car was the conductor assisting a lady with a little poodle dog.

The display caused much laughter and tended to put the patrons in a receptive mood before entering the theatre.

Manager Frank Steffy's eye-catching lobby display at the Coliseum theatre, Seattle, on "New Toys" (First Nat'l). Electric light bulbs outlined the principal features, and well-placed use of bold stripes resulted in a display of considerable strength.

Tie-up with the Union Pacific on a window display made by the Strand theatre in Pocatello, Idaho, of which Garruthers and Archibald are the managers, the picture being "The Thundering Herd." (Paramount).

Windows Feature Stills on "Smouldering Fires"

Stills were put to good use by Jack Meredith, Universal exploitation man, when Bob Hutchinson's Liberty theatre in Oklahoma City, Okla., played "Smouldering Fires." They secured four good window displays, including a drug store, shoe shop, florist shop and department store, and cards in several sandwich shops.

One of Laura La Plante holding two great bunches of flowers, effected a tie-up with the florist. In addition to a large card containing pictures of Miss La Plante and Malcolm McGregor, nine plants in the window each had a small card bearing a letter attached to them. The letters spell U-N-I-V-E-R-S-A-L.

Other stills of Miss La Plante showing her drinking milk were mounted and placed in sandwich shops. The copy read: "Try a La Plante Special and a bottle of milk before seeing 'Smouldering Fires' at the Liberty."

Wedding in Airplane Aids "So This is Marriage"

A wedding held in an aeroplane over Omaha, Neb., recently gave remarkable exploitation to the showing of "So This is Marriage" at the Sun theatre. Three hundred and twenty-seven inches of newspaper space were achieved, enormous interest in the event being aroused throughout the city. Buddy Hooton, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, conducted this campaign in collaboration with Publicity Director Frudenfeldt of the World Realty company, which owns the Sun theatre.

The Omaha Daily News was induced to sponsor the aerial wedding, and gave prominent space to the event throughout the week preceding the showing and during the run. For several days before the opening the betrothed couple shopped about Omaha wearing aviation costumes, two Wills St. Claire cars being loaned for the occasion. These cars bore banners exploiting the picture. Arrangements were made with the WOAW station to broadcast by remote control, a wedding march from the Sun Theatre. Twenty thousand wedding invitations were donated by a local printer and mailed out to citizens of Omaha.

Title Writing Contest on "Janice Meredith"

A MISSING title contest was recently used with excellent results by Albert Kaufman, Metro-Goldwyn exploiter, in Niagara Falls, N. Y., where "Janice Meredith" played at the Lumberg theatre. Kaufman persuaded the Niagara Falls Gazette to print a historical scene from the picture daily for five days in advance of the showing with a description of the event it portrayed.

Such scenes as Washington crossing the Delaware, The Spirit of '76, a tableau on the lawn of Mount Vernon and others similar were published and aroused interest in the picture. Ten dollars was offered as first prize, five dollars as second, and two dollars as third, with free tickets for the next best twenty as consolation prizes.

A special advance showing was held by Kaufman which was attended by some 250 teachers, school executives, members of the Board of Education, clergymen and representatives of the press.

Prescription Blank Herald on "New Lives for Old"

An ingenious method of exploitation was used by Manager D. Roscoe Faunce of the Strand, Birmingham, for his showing of "New Lives For Old." Ten thousand prescription blanks were distributed throughout the business section of Birmingham.

A physician's prescription blank with Betty Compson as M. D. was the basic idea, with copy to the effect that thrills, mystery, suspense, surprises and romance, taken in large doses by all folks, everywhere, will give them "New Lives For Old."

The remainder of the campaign was along standard lines, with a hand painted lobby display.

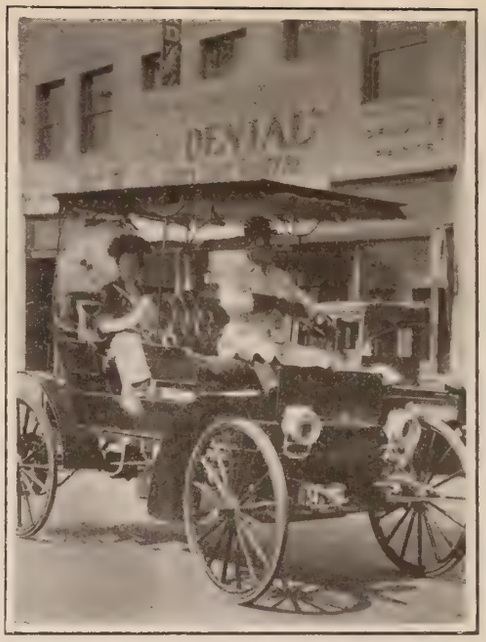
Window Cards Well Placed on "Learning to Love"

The Gilger theatre, Norwalk, O., having as its attraction "Learning to Love," splurged in several of the ways well known to exhibitors. To begin with, the Gilger increased slightly the size of the display space it uses in the Norwalk newspapers, thereby gaining more elaborate free notices.

But the larger ads were not all. Neat cards were placed in show windows throughout Norwalk's business section; cards bearing a picture of the star, the name of her vehicle, the announcement of the dates and, lastly, the name of the theatre at which the attraction was to be offered.



The placing of the cards had been carefully studied and, as a result, there were few that did not attract attenion. One was in the show window of Norwalk's leading confectionery store where it got the eye of all who entered. Observation disclosed that it had particular appeal to young women and their escorts. Another card that had been placed in the center of a window filled with men's and boys' wearing apparel hit the passer right in the eye.

Banners carried on the fenders of Norwalk street cars bore in black on white, about the same information concerning "Learning to Love" that the cards imparted and were every bit as effective.

"Daddy's Gone a-Hunting" Contest Put Across

A "Studio Models Week" was recently staged in Los Angeles in connection with the showing of "Daddy's Gone a-Hunting" at Loew's State theatre, and attracted great attention. Eddie Eckels and H. D. McBride, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteers, staged thi scontest in collaboration with Ray Coffin, publicity director for the down town West Coast theatres in Los Angeles.

The object of the contest was to find the most perfectly formed girl in Southern California. Uews of the contest spread rapidly by newspaper, radio and screen.

This old fashioned automobile was used as a street ballyhoo during the showing of "The Denial" (Metro-Goldwyn) at Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles.

Prizes in the contest were: first prize, a contract to appear in a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production; second prize, $100 cash; third prize, $50 cash; fourth prize, $25 cash; fifth prize, $15 and sixth prize $10. The stage setting in Loew's State theatre, where the contest was held, represented the interior of an artist's studio, with sloping roof and skylight. The act featured a party given in this studio, the contestants appearing as applicants to the artists. Thirty of the girls who applied appeared in this prologue. Ten trailers on the contest were used in various West Coast houses, while 15,000 heralds were distributed. A special lobby display was prepared, featuring immense paint brushes and large palettes. Photographs of the models were prominently displayed.

Rowley Gives 'Classmates' Intensive Campaign

Some of the mose effective work was given "Classmates" by Manager Jack Rowley of the Royal theatre at Laredo, Texas. When he was apprised of the fact that "Classmates" had been booked for showing four days later, he at once had slides prepared and shown on the screens of the Royal and Strand theatres.

Enlisting the aid of Dr. J. M. Skinner of the Holding Institute of Laredo, Manager Rowley and J. W. Falvella obtained a company of twenty-two Holding Institute Cadets to parade the streets of Laredo headed by their drum and bugle corps for the day preceding the opening. The artist who does the showcard and sign painting work for the Royal, Strand and Rialto theatres painted two banners, size 3 x 6 feet, then tacked these together and mounted them on two six-foot poles to be carried by the cadets during their parade

On Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock all was ready for the parade of the Holding Institute Cadets, and they started out headed by a mortorcycle traffic cop as standard-bearer with a large American flag at the head of his car and followed by the drum and bugle corps and the Holding Institute Cadets. Following the Cadets, on each side of the street, were boys handing out 9 x 12 handbills telling all about the "Classmates" engagement. The large red, white and blue banner carried by the cadets, reading, "Don't Fail to See Richard Barthelmess in 'Classmates'" at the Royal theatre Tuesday-Wednesday-Thursday. With the word "Classmates" in a bright blue and the remainder of the lettering in red, touched off here and there with light splashes of black, and the sounding of the drums and bugles as the cadets marched along, attracted the attention of thousands of people to the procession.

Through the assistance of Captain Adams of Fort McIntosh, a bugler and two men of the Fourth United States Field Artillery offered their services to Manager Rowley to put on the prologue.

When "Sally" (First Nat'l) was shown at Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles, the local Owl Drug stores gave their windows over to unusually complete displays in connection with the picture. That shown here included a doll dressed as Sally, enlarged bromide and a coniderable number of portraits and some stills from the photoplay.

Here, selected from a great many more, are ten well-representative ads on "Madame Sans Gene" (Paramount). They show, as well as possible in one display, the various styles of lay-out, illustration and type used throughout the country on this picture. The houses included are: Poli's Palace, Waterbury; Criterion, Oklahoma City; Adams, Detroit; Capitol, St. Paul; Stillman, Cleveland; Loew's Columbia, Washington, D. C.; Bijou, New Haven; Loew's Palace, Memphis; Capitol, Cincinnati; James' Grand, Columbus. Size, one to four columns.

With a solid red background and white lettering, this display by Manager R. M. Kennedy at the Royal theatre, Birmingham, Ala., on "Straight Through" (Universal), made a splendid "flash" from the street.

Imperial Lobby Indian Set for "Thundering Herd"

The lobby of the Imperial, Asheville, was converted into a veritable Indian camp during the run of "The Thundering Herd," with trees, tents, buffalo hides, statuary horse and a real man dressed as an American Indian. Two amber floods playing on this display at night produced a very striking effect.

A feature of the lobby decorations were the special banners used under the marquee. These were made of scrim with the figures of buffalos painted on them with the words —"The Thundering Herd" underneath. When the light reflected through these banners it was quite a flash.

A special still board was used in the foyer of the theatre ten days in advance of opening with an announcement of the attraction.

Two excellent window displays were secured a week in advance on the book. Three days prior to showing 2,000 doorknob hangers printed with the title, cast, theatre, play dates, etc., were distributed throughout the residential section.

Clowns on Street Ballyhoo "Great Circus Mystery"

A couple of clowns, suitably attired and equipped with toy horns, drums and whistles stirred up interest for the starting of "The Great Circus Mystery" at the American theatre, Orlando, Fla.

Started well in advance with slides on the screen telling of the coming of the serial. Followed up with circus heralds given away to patrons well in advance and gradually worked up towards play date by sustained interest. Had large banner out in front for week in advance telling of coming of serial also.

Four days in advance two clowns started working and they covered the section of town well from whence business is drawn to this house. They had small drug store envelopes to give away; containing peanuts. Envelopes were printed up:—Circus Food—Have some and then go to the American theatre and see "The Circus Mystery" etc. The clowns also gave out heralds along the streets. They were clever boys and did a lot of things in a funny fashion which kept people watching them. They had signs on their backs of course.

On opening day they worked directly in front of the theatre and ballyhooed people.

Hula Hula Prologue With "As Man Desires"

MANAGER LOUIS SANTIKOS of the Palace theatre, San Antonio, Texas, cooperated witah the Chamber of Commerce in its entertainment program for merchant guests of the city's Trade Week in the presentation of a combination Style show and "As Man Desires."

The Style Show was given by local wholesalers and jobbers, through the cooperation of the Palace management. A promenade was built out from the stage and on it models revealed the future of milady's styles. Music was furnished by the Palace orchestra.

Coupled with this feature was a prologue offering of five Hula Hula girls costumed in accorda..ce with the picturization in "As Man Desires," which also proved a popular number of the week's program.

Interest was stimulated by the unique prologue which Don Felice, musical director of the Palace, put on. The stage setting depicted a full moon, thatched huts, murmuring water and other typical environments of the South Sea Islands. The dancing and singing of the Hula Hula girls was accompanied by two male voices hidden in the wings, and soft and low accompaniment by the orchestra.

Lavish Fashion Show With "5th Avenue Models"

The Kings Theatre, St. Louis, recently showed "Fifth Avenue Models," in connection with which was held an elaborate Spring style show.

The fashion show was arranged by Maurice Davis of Universal's exploitation staff, and was held in co-operation with local dealers in women's garments, who supplied the gowns and the models.

Twenty-five people were used in the fashion show, including a number of singers and dancers.

YOUR IDEA

IN THE MAIL

ELLSWORTH HAMER, manager of the Orpheum theatre at Bay City, Mich., a Butterfield circuit house, sends in photos of some excellent window displays which adjoin the theatre entrance in such a way that they also serve as lobby display. They are on "The Lady," "Seven Chances" and "Sally," and show first class arrangement of the display material and clean cut lettering—an important feature if the display is to look well. Some of these photos will be reproduced in the Service Bureau at an early date.

L. J. CARKEY, manager in Carthage, N. Y., for the Schine circuit, which has the Strand and Hippodrome in that city, sends an interesting batch of material on a Theatre-Going Week which he put across there. Unfortunately, the newspaper which he forwarded failed to be received, and our information is incomplete as a result. However, from the data we have, it looks as though Carkey has put across a corking campaign and one that should show immediate results at the box-office in return for the energy expended.

In this connection, we should like to call the attention of all our readers to the fact that all editorial matter, including exploitation, should be sent to MOTION PICTURE NEWS at 729 7th avenue, NEW YORK CITY, and not to ALBANY. The News is printed at Albany, but all the editorial offices are in New York City and anything sent to Albany is simply forwarded on to us here—and sometimes in forwarding it never arrives. Since your NEWS comes to you from Albany, it is a perfectly natural mistake to make, but time will be saved all around if you send everything direct to New York.

A. C. KADLOWEC, who directs the publicity for the Botzum Theatres Company in Akron, Ohio, made a timely tie-up in that city for "Broken Laws" at the Orpheum theatre. The city had just installed the three-light, red, yellow and green traffic regulation signal system, and everybody in town was trying to figure out just how it worked and what the colors meant. Kadlowec got busy and issued a small folder, printed in the three colors and black, illustrating just how the "Go," "Get Ready" and "Stop" signals looked in action. On the front was the line: "You Are Breaking the Law when you do not," which was continued over the page by the line "Observe traffic signals." On the back was a stock cut on "Broken Laws" and the billing for the theatre. Of course, a stunt of this sort can't be used in many cities, but Kadlowec deserves credit for seeing the opportunity and making use of it. He obtained the endorsement of the Safety Director of Akron through the folder.

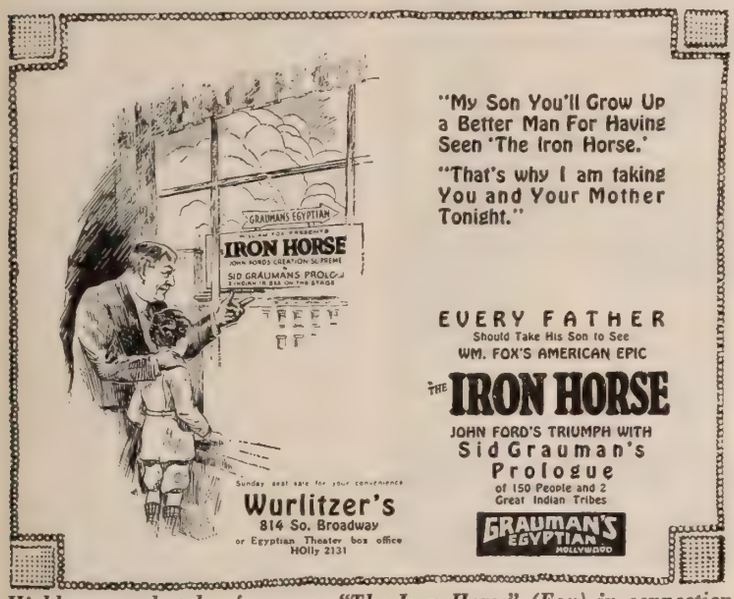
The Jackson theatre, at Jackson Heights, L. I., of which WILLIAM FAIT, JR., is managing director, sends in several copies of the Jackson Theatre News, which is published weekly for the patrons of that house. It is a snappy looking job, printed on a good grade of paper in a convenient size, five and one-half by eight and one-half inches. The policies and personalities of the theatre are played up attractively, and the publication radiates a general atmosphere of progressiveness and enthusiasm, which is as it should be.

JACK A. MARSHALL, manager of the Grand theatre at Huntsville, Ala., writes interestingly concerning the newspaper situation in that city, and the manner in which he coped with it. The newspaper insisted on running the ads of the two theatres in the town on separate pages, would not group them together and would not make up a Sunday amusement page. So, to make the readers look for his ads, Marshall has employed the stunt of picking names at random from the city directory and putting them in his ads. All these persons have to do is come to the theatre and receive their free ticket. So far, he says, not a one has gone unclaimed. He also remarks that he has made up some most effective three-sheets from the covers of the large-size press-books, with the aid of scissors and pastepot.

T. F. McCOY, manager of the Florence theatre, Pasadena, Calif., a West Coast-Langley house, writes us an interesting letter concerning the many pre-views held at that theatre by Los Angeles producers. This will be reproduced elsewhere in this department, as it should be of interest to other exhibitors.

G. R. NORMAN, of the Empress theatre, Hastings, Nebr., submits a photo of a window display on "The Spaniard" as an illustration of the sort of co-operation he receives there, or, as he puts it, "just to let you know how the merchants co-operate with the theatres out in the Woolly West." The photo shows an entire dealer's window devoted to the picture alone, and a mighty attractive window, too. Manager Norman has charge of three houses, the Empress, Strand and Palm, and reports that he has no difficulty in obtaining such co-operation—which proves that he knows how to go about getting it.

Stock material used sparingly, with plenty of white space, featured this ad on "His Supreme Moment" (First Nat'l), at the Empress, Oklahoma City.



LAURENCE F. STUART, better known as Buddy Stuart, managing director of the Fenway theatre, Boston, mails us two issues of the Fenway Close-Up, which show how he handled Music Week and Mothers' Week at that house. Special covers were designed in each case, both highly attractive, which played up strongly the fact that this house was co-operating in these national movements. Buddy runs a list of all the other attractions in Boston each week, including picture, vaudeville and the "legit," which is not only good sportsmanship but a convenience to patrons.

DON'T CROWD!

ANOTHER excellent example of what may be done in advertising with stock material plus white space—and no crowding—is contained in the accompanying ad on "His Supreme Moment" at the Empress theatre, Oklahoma City. It is reproduced here practically actual size, and needs little comment. It isn't easy to resist the temptation to cram as much as possible into expensive space, but it has been done here, and the result speaks for itself.

Except that all rules are dangerous in advertising, we should be tempted to lay down this axiom. Always use a stock cut one size smaller than the ad you are drawing up. That is, for a two-column ad, such as this, use one-column cut material. For a three-column ad, use two-column cuts, et cetera. This will depend on the nature of the cuts, of course, but they are usually so crowded that this simple procedure will improve the looks of your advertising tremendously, if applied with discretion.

HERE'S A PRE-VIEW IDEA

PUTTING a picture up to the verdict of 1000 people on the night before its official opening has been used successfully of late by the Liberty theatre, Kansas City, Mo., and the Rialto theatre, Des Moines, Ia. The picture "tried" was "Oh, Doctor!"

The ads in the newspaper ran like this: Wanted! One Thousand People To Sit on This Film Jury. You know enough about a motion picture to be able to tell whether it is the most amazing creation that has ever been brought to the screen. If you do, we want you to sit on the biggest jury that has been empanelled in Kansas City. We want you to sit in judgment on Carl Laemmle's presentation of Reginald Denny in "Oh, Doctor!"—a Universal Jewel production which will be shown immediately after the last performance tomorrow night.

At the close of the showing the audience was given slips of paper on which to write their verdict together with their names and addresses. This not only brought a big crowd to the last show, gave the theatres some great lines for the coming week's ads on "Oh, Doctor!" but also provided them with mailing lists of red hot fans.

In Des Moines, in addition to the jury stunt, Jack Edwards of the Universal exploitation staff, put a clown on the principal streets bearing the cards front and back: I May Be a Clown But I know enough to see "Oh, Doctor!" at the Rialto theatre this week.

NEAT USHERETTE COSTUMES

MANAGER NAT HOLT of the California theatre, San Francisco, has attracted a great deal of attention with the new uniforms he had made for his usherettes. Not only are the people commenting on them, but managers of surrounding theatres have come to the theatre to examine them. They are light and attractive.

These uniforms are orange in color trimmed with green, the theatre's "House Colors." They are a dress and a cape made of flannel, especially dyed for the California theatre in a special shade of orange. They are trimmed with green silk and the name "California" is embroidered in green below the right hand pockets. The head usher has the word "Hostess" embroidered on hers and the assistant has the words "Assistant Hostess" embroidered on her garment. The capes may be taken off when it becomes too warm and the dresses themselves are very neat, also in orange.

HELPING CHURCHES

CHURCH co-operation has frequently been stressed here as a sure means of winning good will, especially in the smaller cities where the church element is a strong factor in the town. A good illustration of the soundness of this, and a practical way in which it may be carrried out, is furnished by Arthur Lucas, head of the General Enterprises, Inc., which operates the new Egyptian theatre in Greenville, S. C. This was done just prior to Easter, although its application would not necessarily be limited to that time.

In the Piedmont, Greenville daily, there appeared on Saturday, April 11, a whole page devoted to activities of the churches for Easter, the services, programs, and various other matters of interest to church members. About one-third of the page was taken up with an advertisement, which in big letters began—"If No One Went To Church There Would Be No Church—And Then—" The ad continues to show why people should go to church. There is not one thing said about theatres until the very end. In small letters, after the Go-to-Church idea has been strongly advocated, there appears this line—"This advertisement is published and paid for in the interest of the work of the churches of Greenville, by the Egyptian theatre."

Every church in town felt very grateful to the theatre for such co-operation, and it is by no means unreasonable to suppose that Greenville churches will be prompt in giving the theatre like co-operation.

HUMAN INTEREST ADS

THERE are many things to advertise about a picture outside of the usual cast, title, author, director, and the like—though one would hardly realize this from a perusal of the general run of ad copy throughout the country. It takes both courage and ingenuity—and time—to branch out into new lines of advertising. None-the-less, somebody does it now and then. In selling motion pictures you are selling, first of all, entertainment, and there are many ways of putting over that intangible commodity. We are not deprecating the advertising of stars, nor underestimating its value—but perhaps if we advertised entertainment value and human interest appeal a little more, this business would be less a slave to the star system.

Be that as it may, we are reproducing in this department this week an advertisement on "The Iron Horse" at Grauman's Egyptian theatre which is distinctly unusual. In the original it was five columns in width. Here we have had to reduce it somewhat, but the copy can be read without difficulty. Note particularly that there is here nothing freakish—nothing bizarre—nothing eccentric. Just a normal, wholesome appeal to the love of parents for their children, and their desire to have them see things which will mould their ideals and character as they should be moulded.

While it might be objected that only big city houses can do this, and that this particular ad demanded special artwork, it is equally true that ingenuity will work wonders in atoning for lack of equipment.

Exhibitors Box-Office Reports

FIRST NATIONAL

The Heart of a Siren—

A fairly entertaining picture but Barbara La Marr's name drew them in. (West.)

Business just fair for the week with this one. (Middle West.)

Sally—

Colleen Moore latest and best vehicle witnessed by capacity audiences throughout week (Middle West.)

Collen Moore continues the good work. This is one of her best. (Middle West.)

The Lost World—

Did an S. R. O. business. Apart from the entertainment afforded people considered it educational. (West.)

Quo Vadis—

This is a feature which, frankly, could be improved upon both in cast and direction though in some instances it is fine. But it does draw big and did a week a lot above the average. (Middle West.)

A stupendous spectacle. One of the best ever produced. Pleased generally and did splendid business. (Middle West).

My Son—

Went over big in Mother's week. (East).

The Supreme Moment—

Here's one with 100 per cent entertainment value. Big business. (Middle West.)

Her Night of Romance—

Constance Talmadge at her best in an entertaining comedy drama. A fine cast and well mounted. Business good. (East).

WARNER BROS.

Broadway Butterfly—

Not much of an entertainment. Fair. (Middle West.)

The Man Without a Conscience—

Not up to the Warner Brothers standard. (East.)

Two column cut in three-column ad on "The Last Laugh" (Universal) at the New theatre, Baltimore.

Cincinnati newspapers carried this ad for the closing week of "Charley's Aunt" (Prod. Dist. Corp.) at the Lyric theatre.

Recompense—

A good story with an excellent cast. Patrons liked it. (West.)

Only a fair production. This opinion backed by fair attendance. (Middle West.)

FOX

The Rainbow Trail—

A fairly good western but they are getting tired of them in this town. (West.)

Riders of the Purple Sage—

Well attended by followers of Tom Mix, but there was some regret that serial ending was retained on this new edition of the Zane Grey story. (Middle West.)

Flames of Desire—

Rather too lugubrious to be entertaining. Business; fair. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

The Silent Pal—

Here is a dog that does real stuff. Went across in great style. Should pull wherever there are lovers of animal acts. (Middle West.)

The Batting Fool—

Went over in great style. Busines was good. (West.)

Speed

This production did well at the box office. It is well acted and directed. (West.)

The Price She Paid—

A rapid-fire picture that pleased the crowd. (East.)

After Business Hours—

A fair production. (Middle West.)

The Re-Creation of Brian Kent—

Sincere story, well told and well acted. Splendid screen food. Business: Good. (Middle West.)

Good entertainment. (Middle West.)

Woman and Gold—

Personal appearance of Frank Mayo and not the picture was the reason why the satisfactory draw on this production which is just a program picture. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

The Price of Pleasure—

This picture was well liked by management and fans. It did a fair week in spite of bad weather. (Middle West.)

Drew large crowds. (Middle West.)

Made money on a week's run. Well liked. (Middle West.)

The Last Laugh—

Reputation secured in East brought large business to this Emil Jannings film, though it was not thought advisable to hold for second week. (Middle West.)

Dangerous Innocence—

Patrons liked it. Well produced and each principal held up his or her end in good shape. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

Baree, Son of Kazan—

A little below the usual weekly attendance. (Middle West.)

PROD. DIST. CORP.

Charley's Aunt—

Played for two weeks to capacity attendance. (Middle West.)

Broke all existing records at this house despite fine outdoor weather. Patrons flocked from all parts of the city. Business phenomenal. (East.)

CHADWICK

Wizard of Oz—

This one drew well. It is excellent comedy. (West.)

METRO-GOLDWYN

Proud Flesh—

A lively picture well liked. (East.)

Confessions of a Queen—

Failed to get over in this town. Some considered it the bunk. (West.)

The Denial—

Fine picture. Good business. (Middle West.)

The Monster—

Lon Chaney hasn't much to do in this film which did a fair business. (West.)

Zander the Great—

Universally declared to be Marion Davies best work to date. Attended by huge audiences, mostly attracted by publicity campaign of local Hearst paper. (Middle West.)

PARAMOUNT

The Crowded Hour—

This locked out on some evening performances but was greatly aided by a jazz orchestra that made a hit. The feature is pretty fair and would draw a pretty good average on its own merits. Matinees not so good. (Middle West.)

An entertaining little picture that was well received. Box office receipts good. (West.)

The Air Mail—

This proved a good drawing card it is light but holds the interest. (West.)

The Charmer—

Attendance about up to the usual standard. (Middle West).

Didn't do as well as we expected. Thought Pola had more friends. (West.)

One of the best Pola has handed in since she started making them in this country. She has a lot of followers in this town and they all came out to see it. (Middle West.)

Adventure—

Lots of pep and excellent characterizations in this action packed tale of the South Seas from the pen of Jack London. Attracted good houses. (East.)

A stirring tale of adventure well acted and produced. It did a fair business. (West.)

Scenically, a fine picture. Business fair. (Middle West.)

Madam Sans Gene—

Gloria's friends came to see her in this one. But it wasn't quiet up to some of her previous work. Nice business. (Middle West.)

A Kiss in the Dark—

Entertaining but somewhat light. Business held up during run. (Middle West.)

The Night Club—

A real comedy. Entertaining every minute. Good business. (Middle West.)

The Devil's Cargo—

Business was a little better than the average. Film was well received by the press. (Middle West.)

Wages of Virtue—

Popularity of Gloria Swanson drew them in. Picture just fair. Business good. (East.)

Code of the West—

This feature is not as big as some of the westerns preceding. The audiences seem to be a little tired of westerns anyway. Not up to average. (Middle West.)

Three-column ad on "The Great Divide" (Metro-Goldwyn), at the Apollo theatre, Indianapolis.

Short Subjects and Serials

Pathe Serial Unit Back From Florida Location

The producing unit making the Pathe serial "Play Ball," based on a story by John J. McGraw, is back in New York after making the first three episodes in Florida. The company is under the direction of Spencer Bennett. Allene Ray and Walter Miller are the stars of the picture and have in their support "Wally" Oetel, Mary Milnor, Harry Semels, and J. Barney Sherry. The serial will be presented in ten chapters of two reels each.

Christie Studios Undergo Big Improvements

The Christie Film Company is spending approximately $50,000 in improvements on the company studios. A new property building is in course of construction. It is 125 feet long by 30 feet wide and two stories in height. A new stage is also being constructed which when completed will house five companies. There is being built in addition a new film vault which will accommodate 1,500,000 feet of film.

Hiers Completes Series for Educational

Walter Hiers has finished the last of his first series of six two-reel comedies to be released through Educational Films Exchanges, Inc., during the 1924-25 season and is in the central and middle-west states on a personal appearance tour.

Century Releases "Love Sick" This Week

Century Comedies will release through Universal this week the two-reel Century comedy, "Love Sick," featuring Beth Darlington and Arthur Lake. The picture was directed by Charles Lamont.

Roach Forces Busy on Films for New Season

THE Hal Roach comedy forces are engaged on productions which Pathe will offer on the release schedule for next ye ar. Four of the Roach units are now doing camrey work for the new program.

The Cylde Cook Company is being directed by Jess Robbins in a two-reeler in which the star will be supported by Martha Sleeper, Noah Young and Fay Holderness. Charles Chase is being directed by Leo McCarey in a comedy entitled "Isn't Life Terrible," in which Katherine Grant will appear as leading lady. Robert McGowan is making an "Our Gang" comedy with the famous juvenile troupers appearing in a back yard "Coney Island" of their own design; and Jay Howe is directing a Hal Roach all-star two-reeler with Martha Sleeper, Al St. John, Lucien Littlefield, Jimmy Finlayson, Lige Conley, Dot Farrley, Marjorie Whities and other well known comedians.

Scenes from "Sunken Silver," the new Pathe serial based on the Albert Payson Terhune novel "Black Caesar's Clan." George B. Seitz directed the production with Walter Miller and Allene Ray in the leading roles.

Pathe Lists May 24th Releases

Roach Contributes Two New Comedies Serial Episode and Novelties on Bill

TWO productions from the Hal Roach Studios will supply the comedy element which features the Pathe program for the week of May 24th, which is marked by a wide variety of short subjects, including an episode of "Sunken Silver," the Pathe Review and an "Aesop's Film Fables" reel in addition to the customary news pictures.

Both of the Roach comedies were directed by Fred L. Guill. Glenn Tryon is the star of the two-reeler, a story dealing with the fascination which a uniform has for the fair sex and shows Tryon in the role of a policeman. Blanche Mehaffey heads the supporting cast, in which James Finlayson, Olive Borden, and Jack Gavin are prominent. "Sure-Mike!" is the one-reel Hal Roach presentation of the week and depicts the romance of a department store salesgirl. Martha Sleeper leads in the funmaking and aiding her are James Finlayson, Marjorie Whiteis, William Gillespie and Jules Mendel.

Chapter No. 3 of "Sunken Silver" is entitled "The Hidden Ray" and continues the fast action, mystery, and suspense of the opening episodes of this Patheserial adapted by Frank Leon Smith from Albert Payson Terhune's story "Black Caesar's Clan." Allene Ray is adding to her fame as a serial star in this George B. Seitz production and Walter Miller appears to advantage in the leading male role.

Pathe Review No. 21 offers a trio of interesting subjects: "The Last of the Hawaiians," showing some survivors of the race of the Sandwich Islanders; "Jacksonville, the Gateway City," one of the "Visiting Our Own America" series in Pathecolor; and "The Highland Bride," the first of an informative series of "Quaint Marriage Customs of All Nations."

"Echoes from the Alps" is the current Aesop's Film Fables cartoon comic. Paul Terry pictures Farmer Alfalfa and the animals in astounding experiences amidst lofty mountain peaks and precipices. The moral of this fable is: "Many a man who falls has taken a drop too much."

Completing the release list for the week of May 24th are the humor-reel, "Topics of the Day" and Pathe News Nos. 44 and 45.

Rum Blockade is Shown in Pathe News

Pathe News cameraman, Harry Harde, succeeded last week in getting some exceptional views of the "Bottling up of the Rum Fleet" by the Coast Guard blockade, which are shown in Pathe News Number 39.

Flying in the face of a gale over Rum Row and vicinity, Harde photographed the Coast Guard ship Seneca leading out the dry enforcement fleet and also discovered a complete line of Government picket boats extending from Montauk Point to Barnegat, cutting off the Rum Fleet from the shore. In addition ten Government cutters are shown cruising around the lane of liquor-bearing ships.

Ten Educational Subjects in Photoplay Guide

Photoplay Guide, issued by the National Board of Review, includes ten short subjects from the Educational program among the approved pictures for the month of April. The list includes the special, Balto's Race to Nome," and the third of the series of Fables in Color, "Only a Country Lass."

Other Educational subjects on the list are the Larry Semon comedy, "The Dome Doctor," the Walter Hiers comedy, "Tender Feet;" the Mermaid comedy, "Fares Please" with Al St. John; the Tuxedo comedy, "The Iron Mule" with Al St. John; the Hodge-Podge, "The Village School," and three releases of the Judge's Crossword Puzzles series.

Sennett Completes Two New Comedies for Pathe

"Toot Sweet" and "The Gosh Darn Mortgage," two new Mack Sennett comedies for Pathe release, were completed recently and prints are now on their way to New York. With their completion two more pictures were put into production at the Sennett plant.

"Toot Sweet" is a satire on army life, directed by Art Rosson with Billy Bevan, Madeline Hurlock and Sunshine Hart in prominent parts. Eddie Cline made "The Gosh Darn Mortgage" with Douglas Gerrard, Thelma Parr, Charlie Farrell, Peggy O'Neal and William McCall in the cast.

The new pictures started are being directed by Del Lord and Lloyd Bacon.

Buster Keaton in his latest for Metro-Goldwyn, "Seven Chances."

Gunnar Kasson and Balto, heroes of the race against death to Nome, in scenes from the Educational-Principal Pictures three-reel special "Balto's Race to Nome."

No Let Down For Educational

Will Continue Extensive Program of Short Subjects for Summer Months

EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES INC. will not let down any in their production activities during the Summer months, according to a statement issued by E. W. Hammons, president of the company. Many of the best pictures will be released during the months of May, June, July and August, according to Hammons, whose statement in part follows:

"Educational will continue its policy of Quality Short Subjects during the hot weather months." Our line-up of releases for the next four months is composed of subjects of the same high quality as those of the cooler and more profitable months of the year.

"Educational realizes that the exhibitor depends more and more on his Short Subjects as the hot weather approaches and with that fact in mind we are releasing many of the best pictures of the year's schedule during May, June, July and August.

"Our May releases include eight two reel comedies with such proven stars as Lloyd Hamilton, Walter Hiers, Lige Conley, Al St. John and Jimmie Adams in the leading roles, as well as the Educational Pictures Special, Balto's Race to Nome.' These box-office attractions will be available for the subsequent runs during the summer months. Larry Semon, Bobby Vernon, Mickey Bennett, Eddie Nelson and Neal Burns will be seen in comedies in the June releases, just at the start of the warmer months.

"During July and August Lloyd Hamilton will appear in the final comedy of his present series and Lige Conley will be seen in at least two Mermaid Comedies one of which was made especially for hot weather consumption—a snow picture taken on Bear Mountain which we are holding for the heated season."

Hawkinson Returns From "Sportlights" Tour

J. L. Hawkinson has returned to New York after a tour which during the past few months has taken him to all parts of the United States for the purpose of getting material for Grantland Rice "Sportlights," released by Pathe.

After securing all of the available winter sports scenes Hawkinson went south around Florida to secure golf, tennis, swimming, diving and polo scenes. In Arizona he got considerable footage on the ranches which will be revealed in forthcoming "Sportlights."

In Hollywood the picture stars showed how they keep physically fit. Hawkinson then went to San Francisco and Seattle for sports scenes. South Bend was the next stop and the Notre Dame football team was shot at Winter practice. All of these scenes will be utilized in the coming series

Balto's Race To Nome

SUCH a remarkable feat as the race with the diphtheria anti-toxin to Nome by the Alaskan mushers and dogs—a feat which was appreciated by the press as one of the greatest human interest stories ever recorded—was destined to reach the screen. It is a credit to Sol Lesser's showmanship and sentiment in his ambition to make screen history of the momentous event. It was startling news—news chockfull of man's courage—of dog's trust. It was a story rich in suspense. It meant the saving of human lives. Would Gunnar Kasson and Balto and the other dogs get through the blizzard and the frozen wastes in time?

The producer has not forgotten a single event which went into the making of this exceptionally human drama. There is the background of vast reaches of snow and against it are Kasson and his dogs. He stands waiting for his relay—and once the precious serum is placed on the sled and the lead dog, Balto, gets in motion, one knows that Nome will be reached in time.

The picture carries considerable descriptive matter pertaining to the size of Alaska and the mileage to be traveled by the mushers and their huskies. But these captions are necessary to punctuate the race and to help lend an atmosphere of reality.

So Gunnar Kasson and Balto do their stuff. It is a long race—a race of one continual blizzard. Kasson loses the sled once and nearly gives up the trip. Then he spies the dauntless Balto and vows to keep going. The dogs are encouraged. Their lungs are nearly burned out with the frigid atmosphere and the constant pace, but kind words and gentle pats encourage them to do their best. Finally Nome is reached and the settlers leap with joy. The serum brings quick recoveries to the patients.

The pictorial side of the picture is rich in long shots and close-ups. The leaden sky is fleeced with ominous-looking clouds. The snow stretches in a vast expanse—the unbroken white being colored by nothing but the driver and the dogs. It is a magnificent little picture, carrying great historical value as well as drama—the drama of human courage—of dog courage. It deserves space on every exhibitor's program because of its glorification of real heroism.—LAURENCE REID.

"Only a Country Lass"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is another of the Fables in Rhyme series done in color, a romance of the bees that has for its moral: "Though Paris Lights seem fair and gay, they all look good when far away."

Aurelia is lured from the cozy home of Uncle Anatole to that gay Paree and returning is met by stony-hearted uncle who casts her adrift. She seeks refuge with her former lover, but too late to continue her old romance. This is a fairly entertaining subject, though hardly as good as some that have gone before. —CHESTER J. SMITH

"Love Sick"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

THIS is another of the Beth Darlington-Arthur Lake series in which kid love predominates. It is unfortunate that this pair cannot get vehicles a little better adapted to their talents as the idea of the series is exceptionally good and both Miss Darlington and Lake are talented, though Lake in the last two of the series has been inclined to a little too much facial expression.

This story again gives Arthur a chance to outsmart all of his rivals for the affections of Beth, but he has some little difficulty in doing so. Thinking one of them has won the fair maiden from him he attempts to end it all by falling in front of innumerable vehicles, all of which terminate their run just before the deed would be accomplished. Eventually and unintentionally he is hit by an auto as he spies Beth. He is rushed to a hospital uninjured, but feigning injury he prevails upon the doctor to have Beth nurse him back to complete recovery and the ruse works effectively.—CHESTER J. SMITH

Tell It To A Policeman

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THE glamorous appeal and fascination which the uniform has for the fair sex is exploited as a comedy idea in this two-reeler from the Hal Roach studios. Glenn Tryon is starred in the role of a love-struck youth who is put to the extremity of joining the police force in order to compete with a cop for the favor of the girl of his heart. The plot from that on is of the usual sort, though several gags used to fill in the spaces have some originality about them. The rookie cop is made to appear quite amateurish in the beginning, but he stumbles into a situation from which he emerges a hero, promoted to the rank of sergeant and secure in the love of his girl.

The action of the picture is fairly brisk and there are a few diverting gags, though the most effective, revolving about the difficulty which the young cop has in getting rid of some paper, smeared with tar, which sticks to his shoe, is very much over-played. It ranks as fair entertainment. Blanche Mehaffey is the leading lady, and the other important roles are played by James Finlayson, Olive Borden and Jack Gavin. Fred Guiol directed.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Sure-Mike!

(Pathe—One Reel)

MARTHA SLEEPER romps away with the starring honors in this spirited and amusing single-reeler. It is concerned with a "plain-jane" shop girl who is late in getting on the job and harbors a deep, soul-stirring affection for the very dressed-up floor walker. She discovers that he is married and the father of several children and then she turns to the fat boy who drives a motor-cycle delivery cart. The climax of the play, a speedy, thrilling and mighty diverting sequence, shows the girl seated on the motor-cycle as it cuts a dizzy course up and down the crowded boulevards of Los Angeles.

The picture should score everywhere. Martha Sleeper, who is excellent in her part, has the capable support of James Finlayson, Marjorie Whities, William Gillespie and Jules Mendel. The direction is by Fred Guilol, who has developed many very effective gags and comedy incidents.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Pathe Review No. 21

(One Reel)

A NEW series entitled "Quaint Marriage Customs of All Nations," is introduced in this number of the Review. It promises an interesting feature for presentation in the reels of this screen magazine. The customs observed by Scotch Highlanders are the topic of the first installment, which was compiled with the assistance of the Caledonian Society of New York. Scenes of the Sandwich Islanders show these people engaged in making the mats and beautiful feathered robes used in Hawaii, and color views of Jacksonville, Florida, complete the reel.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Curses"

(Educational—Two Reels)

HERE is a very cleverly arranged travesty on the serial, done in two reels with all the thrill of the serial and with an abundance of real comedy in which Al St. John is the central figure. He is a bold bad bandit with two left feet.

Episode One shows the slaying by Al and his gang of little Nell's father and the tying of Nell to the buzz saw. The teeth of the saw are about to bisect her as the episode ends. And immediately is revealed the miraculous rescue of Nell by her handsome lover, for whom the saw temporarily halts that he might make the thrilling rescue.

The Clutching Claws and the Rock of Doom offer the concluding episodes with all the thrill and reality of the serial and with some of the richest travesty that has been seen in a long time. This looks like a sure fire two reeler that will be thoroughly appreciated by any type of audience not above laughing at situations that when analyzed are altogether ridiculous.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Tender Feet"

(Educational—Two Reels)

WALTER HIERS has a vehicle that fairly reeks with slapstick and hokum. In this comedy the fat comedian spends nearly a whole reel pushing a tin Lizzie up hill in a rain storm. The machine is out of gas and has as its occupant Duane Thompson. The incident is funny for a few feet but gets rather monotonous before the top of the incline is reached.

Finally Hiers and Miss Thompson find refuge in an apparently deserted hut, but it transpires that a bandit gang is holding a baby there for ransom. Walter and Duane pose as the conveyors of the ransom money, but are exposed and a wild fight ensues in which everyone in the shack is kicked about and manhandled in a manner calculated to be humorous. The story, if it can be dignified by being called such, has little in the way of humor. It is not nearly up to the standard set by the fat comedian in the past.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"Wild Waves"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is a typical Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance vehicle of gag stuff and hokum, good for a few laughs. Cliff and his pal, shy room rent and breakfast money endeavor to get their breakfast from trays laid at adjoining doorways, but are foiled. They make their escape from the irate landlord and arrange a picnic in a flivver with the girl as the invited guest. The trick flivver provides most of the balance of the comedy. The picture is up to the usual standard of this series.

—CHESTER J. SMITH

Echoes from the Alps

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE moral of this "Aesop's Film Fable" is "many a man who falls has taken a drop too much," and the action which Cartoonist Paul Terry has devised to develop that idea is up to the usually high standard maintained in these pictures. The high-lights of the Alps resorts, where skiing, mountain climbing, skating and toboggan riding are treated in a series of scenes which reveal again the keen sense for satire and exaggeration. It is a laugh-getting reel.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Tearing Through

(F. B. O.-Five Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

THERE are a great number of smaller houses in these United States the patrons of which delight in watching the athletic antics of Richard Talmadge and this latest starring vehicle of the stunt actor gives him opportunity to display his prowess every few feet. There is no gainsaying the fact that Dick is "there" with both feet—yes, and both hands. He sure does "tear through" this one and his admirers are going to enjoy themselves immensely watching him climb all over the sets, leap through space ever and anon, jump from one speeding auto to another, eluding a dozen or so ruffians with no effort whatever, slide down stair railings head first, rip an electric wire from the top of a building, and, hanging onto the end, leap with it to a motor truck several stories below. So on and so forth ad infinitum.

There is, as we said, always a demand for this type of picture and we've no doubt these stunts as performed by Mr. Talmadge will afford the finest kind of entertainment for the youth of the land. The plot is rather hackneyed, in fact in all these Talmadge vehicles the story is not to be taken seriously. It is usually a minor consideration. The star and his tricks are the thing.

The plot keeps moving along apace up to the last reel when the usual climax arrives in which Dick is cornered by the gang in the den, but by climbing up the walls or anything else handy, swinging about on chandeliers, etc., he gets away and comes off the victor. The settings are quite artificial. The cast, however, is rather better than in preceding Talmadge vehicles. Kathryn McGuire is an attractive heroine. She doesn't have to do much more than look pretty. She wears some stunning gowns during the action. Charles Clary is good as the wealthy Mr. Madison.

THEME. A modern melodrama in which the young hero cleans up a gang of dope ring operators and saves the son of his sweetheart's father from the "snow" habit as well as the girl herself from the hands of the archvillain.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The athletic stunts of the star. The scenes in the dope den. The thrilling climax. The good supporting cast. Dick's jump from the roof of a speeding taxi to a passing motor truck. His leap from the top of a tenement to a truck below.

DIRECTION. Has succeeded in putting pep into the plot which is the real aim of this feature. Has also tacked on a good climax that will please those who like this kind of story. Has given the production a fair mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Dick Talmadge's name. That's your best bet here. Decorate lobby in Chinese style. Ballyhoo it. Dress the ushers in Chink costumes.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller houses downtown, the community theatres and the towns.

SUMMARY. One of the best of the series of stunt pictures featuring Richard Talmadge and many exhibitors declare this type of film has a real box office draw in the smaller houses in many communities. There is action all the way through in this latest offering with the star from first to last scene.

THE CAST

Richard Jones	Richard Talmadge
Constance Madison	Kathryn McGuire
Mr. Madison	Charles Clary
Mr. Greer	Frank Elliott
District Attorney	Herbert Prior
Bob Madison	Arthur Rankin
Polly	Marcella Daley

By Frederick Stowers. Directed by Art Rosson.

SYNOPSIS. Has to do with the successful efforts of Richard Talmadge, assistant to a crooked district attorney in cleaning up the town of a dope ring which threatened the home of Mr. Madison, wealthy resident. The son becomes the slave to the drug and the operator of a den kidnaps the daughter. Then Richard goes to the rescue and in the end aids the police in cleaning up and arresting the ring leaders. Then he wins the daughter.

The Meddler

(Universal—4890 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE is nothing much to get excited over in this western—it being the oft-told story of the young Wall Street magnate who because of his lack of adventure is rejected by his fiancee until he goes out and collects some thrills. Consequently he turns highwayman on the western steppes for the sake of sending souvenirs of his exploits back East.

The Wall Street man hasn't even the saving graces of appearing indifferent. After an office episode and a scene in which the girl returns his ring the hero bobs up with a white horse. He dresses a la Mexican and talks in a poetic manner. Having registered as a colorless boob at the start who is apparently ignorant of how to get a kick out of life it seems amazing to see him handle a gun and a horse as if he had been brought up on a ranch. There are no flashbacks of pathos—wondering if he is making a hit with his erstwhile sweetheart. She is to all appearances completely forgotten while he rides around the country holding up stupid sheriffs, stage drivers and an Eastern boarding school girl.

It is so much hokum which lacks snappy incident and pace to boot. There is a lot of gun-toting, but none of the ranchers know how to shoot straight. And because it is repetitious of action it never gets anywhere. Indeed, it becomes tiresome. Even the so-called punch scenes lack melodrama—which element would have looked better than trying to make light of it with comedy. It finishes with the hero rescuing the western girl and her brother from some regulation bandits and finding a new romance. A few fights are interspersed here and there, but the redeeming highlights are the exteriors.

William Desmond plays the highwayman, but he needs to watch his calories. A plump bandit is out of focus in trying to register adventure and romance.

THEME. Western comedy-melodrama revolving around Eastern capitalist who, in being rejected by his financee because of his lack of adventure and romance, becomes a bandit. Has a new romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The adequate acting. The climax when hero frustrates plot of real bandits. The exteriors.

DIRECTION. Has a very scant plot which lacks variety of incident and is dependent upon repetitious hokum. Fails to make it sustaining.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Might feature idea of the modern girl's search of adventure and of how she desires a mate who is a romantic lover. Feature as western of hard ridin'. Use ballyhoo of man attired a la Mexican, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For the small average houses catering to westerns. Needs support from strong comedy.

SUMMARY. Not so good because of its lack of plot and incident. Should have made it a straight out-and-out melodrama or a burlesque. A middle course is followed and the result is an obvious cut-and-dried affair. Star needs to take off weight. Feature some fair horsemanship and a few fights. Exteriors O. K.

THE CAST

Richard Gilmore	William Desmond
Gloria Canfield	Dolores Rousay
Dorothy Parkhurst	Claire Anderson
Bud Meyers	Albert J. Smith
Jesse Canfield	Jack Daugherty
Sheriff	C. L. Sherwood
Mrs. Gilmore	Kate Lester
Secretary	Georgie Grandee
Captain Forsythe	Donald Hatswell

By Miles Overholt. Scenario by Isadore Bernstein. Directed by Arthur Rosson.

SYNOPSIS. Wall Street financier has romance with Eastern girl terminated because he lacks adventure and prefers routine of business. He takes her advice and goes in search of thrills by becoming a western highwayman. Makes good at his new profession, but avoids arrest by capturing real bandits who are frustrated in holding up wealthy rancher and his sister. Hero has new romance with latter.

The Necessary Evil

(First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

AND the sins of the father shall be visited upon the son or words to the effect. Such is the theme of this plot which has been adapted from Stephen Vincent Benet's magazine tale, "Uriah's Son." The story has been developed into a colorful screen play which has moments of vivid drama, but which is quite draggy at times and as a whole is too long for the plot material at hand. The locale is New York and Central America, with some peppy parties being staged in some of the Gotham sequences and some realistic as well as passionate moments being offered in the cabaret scenes in the equatorial trading post.

David Devanant, a man of wealth, formerly in love with Dick Jerome's wife, in sympathy with the latter because of the wild life he is leading, sends Dick to Cholopan in the tropics, hoping to cure him. But Dick continues his dissolute life and dies there. Dick's wife dies but not until she has married Devanant who promises to try and save the son from the ways of the father. His efforts to do this bring about some interesting situations.

The scene in which Devanant is robbed by the brother of the wife whom Frank, the son, has married, and the millionaire allows Frank to believe that he suspects him and holds him responsible for the return of the stolen bonds, is an exceptionally well staged and acted sequence. So are the scenes in which the son, hearing that his father had been sent to Cholopan to get him out of the way and that he is there for the same reason, rushes back to New York intending to kill his benefactor but falters when he learns that Devanant had only been trying to reform him.

The cast is very satisfactory. Ben Lyon does satisfactory work as the son. Viola Dana is acceptable in the leading feminine role. Thomas Holding is a fine type for Devanant. Frank Mayo, Mary Thurman and Gladys Brockwell are good in important roles.

THEME. A modern society drama that leaps back and forth between New York and the tropics and shows the regeneration of a son upon whom has fallen the evil ways of his father.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The exotic scenes in the tropical cabaret. The sequence in which Devanant is robbed and in which the son is accused. The jazz party, raid by the police and hasty wedding to avoid arrest. The climax. The splendid settings.

DIRECTION. George Archainbaud has turned out an entertaining picture whose chief fault is too much footage. The acting is a credit to the director who has mounted the film in eye-pleasing manner.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put on a Spanish dance patterned after that in the picture as a prologue. Start newspaper discussion upholding or disputing the existence of heredity. Photos of feminine stars used as basis for style shop window displays. The title is a good one from a box office angle. Plaster it all over town.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for downtown first runs, larger community houses and the towns.

SUMMARY. This is a well acted production which has been elaborately staged and which discusses a problem that will interest most folks, although it is rather more suitable for the sophisticates than for family consumption. However, it is a big improvement on most pictures now being released.

THE CAST

Frank Jerome	Ben Lyon
Shirley Holmes	Viola Dana
Dick Jerome	Frank Mayo
David Devanant	Thomas Holding
Frances Jerome	Gladys Brockwell
Hattie	Mary Thurman
Belle	Betty Jewel
Esther	Martha Madison
Pug	Arthur Housman
Reggie	Beach Cooke

Adapted from "Uriah's Son," by Stephen Benet. Scenario by Eve Unsell. Directed by George Archainbaud. Photographed by George Folsey.

SYNOPSIS. Dick Jerome and David Devanant had been rivals for the same woman. Devanant, employer, sends Jerome to South America in effort to cure him of dissolute habits. He is killed. His wife asks Devanant to marry her before she dies so that her son Frank will have a father. Devanant also adopts Shirley Holmes. Frank is a wild youth. Devanant pretends to believe Frank stole from him and sends him to South America. Devanant dies. Frank marries Shirley.

The Girl of Gold

(John Ince-Prod. Dist. Corp.—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

FOLLOWING her fine characterizations in "Barbara Frietchie," and "The Mirage," Florence Vidor now comes to the shadow stage with a blond wig and another clever bit of acting as the daughter of a wealthy mine owner who is sought by a long list of suitors for her money alone while she is known in society as "The Girl of Gold." To offset this impression she decides to assume another name, while her father, seeking to make her happy, plots with a young man to marry his daughter for a large sum. This the youth agrees to do at the behest of a financially ruined sister with an invalid son. The youth and the daughter of wealth meet at a party. Neither knows the other. They fall in love, however, and then things start.

It is a rather entertaining tale with the action being rich in incident and the suspense well sustained. However, it is Miss Vidor's work that puts the picture over. The plot moves against a background of lavish society settings, interiors of New York mansions and house parties at Newport, with the climax offering a novel ball on the sixteenth level of the gold mine. At the height of the festivities there is an explosion entombing the lovers who are rescued only after herculean efforts. There are also some tense sequences in a cabaret where the jealous husband of a woman in love with the hero threatens to shoot the latter but is persuaded not to do so when the heroine makes him believe it is her engagement party.

Miss Vidor is supported by a very able cast, including Malcolm McGregor, Alan Roscoe, Bessie Eyton, Charles French and others. The picture opens with a well staged auto crash in which the hero wrecks his car to save the life of a country urchin. Miss Vidor is an attractive person throughout the picture appearing in some stunning costumes. But we like her better with her natural hair.

THEME. Society drama in which a daughter of wealth finds her father has been trying to "buy" a husband for her. However she eventually accepts him for she is unable to fight her own love for the man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The characterization offered by Miss Vidor. The excellent supporting cast. The house party at Newport. The sequence at the Inn as the jealous husband is about to kill the hero when turned from his intention by the girl. The ball in the mine and explosion.

DIRECTION. John Ince has made a very good production here which has many points of appeal. He has inspired his players to give of their best and has injected many dramatic punches in the action. The climax is a novel one and well staged.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost the name of Florence Vidor. She has a big following. Put on a fashion show. Stage a blond beauty contest, offering prizes for the most attractive blondes. Get a bunch of bank bags, fill them with paper and pile them pyramid form in lobby in front of poster on the picture.

DRAWING POWER. A good picture for second class downtown first runs, the better community houses and the towns. Popularity of Miss Vidor should draw them.

SUMMARY. Anything in which Florence Vidor appears is usually worth while and "The Girl of Gold," is no exception to this rule. Here's a good story that holds the interest, a very satisfactory supporting cast, an attractive as well as lavish mounting, and a climax that is off the beaten path.

THE CAST

Helen Merrimore	Florence Vidor
Schuyler Livingstone	Malcolm McGregor
Ned Loring	Alan Roscoe
Ada Tremaine	Bessie Eyton
Edith Loring	Claire DuBrey
Lucius Merrimore	Charles French

Based on the novel by Cleveland Moffatt and Anna Chapin. Adapted by Kate Corbaley and Eve Unsell. Directed by John Ince.

SYNOPSIS. Tired of being courted for her wealth, Helen Merrimore, daughter of Lucius Merrimore, owner of the "Gold Girl" mine, attends a house party under an assumed name. There she meets Schuyler Livingstone who has agreed to marry Merrimore's daughter for a consideration to help his sister and her invalid son. He does not know that Helen is Schuyler's daughter. He falls in love with her. She eventually learns of her dad's plan to "buy" Schuyler, but all is ironed out in the end with the two in each other's arms.

The Shock Punch

(Paramount—Six Reels)

THE shocks and punches are in this picture, but they are slow in getting started. It is as if the director had held them back purposely while sparring for an opening. For two reels there is considerable wait while the characterization and main situations are being planted — and the interest naturally sags. However, Richard Dix plays in such easy fashion and the human note is so good that compensation is offered.

The idea centers around a rich man's son who is keen on making a reputation as a fighter. The father is proud of him but has a "show me" attitude about the punch in the young man's arm. So he bets with a couple of trainers that the youth won't deliver the goods at a tough racket. In leading up to this scene one sees little incident beyond the hero getting the air from the heroine who believes him a pugilist. The dance hall episode is colorful enough even though Paul Sloane forgot to sprinkle the hall with w. k. bouncers. A particularly hard-boiled thug takes the count from the hero—which shocks the girl in a balcony box.

The plot comes out in the open here. The girl's father must have the steelwork finished at a specified time or be smashed by his competitors. So he gets on the job—and the daughter accompanies him. The hero gets a job so as to be near the girl. What follows shows the youth experiencing all sorts of adventurous thrills as an iron worker. These thrills are caught by the spectator—who also catches some wonderfully fine vistas of the harbor, the Leviathan steaming out to sea—and the Statue of Liberty.

It may be rather repetitious of action in that all the scenes are built around the hero's narrow escapes in climbing or walking or creeping over the girders. But there's no denying the suspense.

There is no hokum about the skyscraper incident. While a little doubling is done—and one or two double exposures most of it can pass as authentic. There is a good vein of humor which gives balance to the suspense. The heroine, played by Frances Howard, would appear more convincing if she had not dressed during the skyscraper scenes as if she was strolling the Avenue. However, it is an entertaining film.

THEME. Romantic melodrama of youth who makes good as fighter. Is determined to prove himself a man and flirts with death as iron worker.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The dance-hall episode. The pointed titles. The skyscraper episodes. The climax when hero takes the air on a girder. The fight on the skeleton floors of the building. The humor and thrills of the incident.

DIRECTION. Builds rather slowly, but keeps attention alert through incident and humor. Is best with skyscraper episodes. Romantic relief is dull. Provides realism and thrills.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the skyscraper angle, telling that this is the first story featuring the construction of a lofty New York skyscraper. Play up Dix and Walter Long. Feature the thrills—and don't neglect your paper and stills.

DRAWING POWER. The title, the star's name—and the thrills should attract them. Suitable for all types of houses.

SUMMARY. Gives Dix a chance to exploit a heroic role in easy fashion. Is natural in its acting—carries thrills and suspense—and considerable humor. But it drags at the start and much of its action is repetitious. The skyscraper shots are fine. So are the titles.

THE CAST

Randall Lee Savage ..... Richard Dix
Dorothy Clark ..... Frances Howard
Dan Savage ..... Theodore Babcock
Jim Clark ..... Percy Moore
Stanley Pierce ..... Charles Beyer
Terrence O'Rourke ..... Gunboat Smith
Mike ..... Jack Scannell
Bull Mularkey ..... Walter Long
Giuseppi ..... Paul Panzer

By John Monk Saunders. Scenario by Luther Reed. Directed by Paul Sloane.

SYNOPSIS. Son of wealthy father carries an awful wallop in his arm and his dad is proud of him when he knocks a thug out at a tought dance. Becomes interested in daughter of wealthy man and follows her to her dad's building which is under construction. He gets a job as an iron worker and experiences several hazardous thrills before he saves her father from financial ruin.

The Crackerjack

(C. C. Burr—7000 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

ORIGINAL gags, fast action, a good cast, humorous titles and the human dynamo, Johnny Hines, all these box office elements are incorporated in this latest production of this star. If your patrons don't put on weight through laughing at this picture then we are no judge of what constitutes mirth-provoking comedy. There isn't a dull moment from start to finish and, due to John Krafft's humor, when they're not laughing at a scene they'll be convulsed with merriment over the subtitles.

From the opening shot, showing Hines dexterously manipulating flap-jacks in a "one-arm" restaurant, and on through the various sequences, we are treated to some of the most ingenious bits of comedy business ever introduced in a feature length comedy. As a go-getter who undertakes to build up a pickle business through live-wire advertising Johnny is in his element. His methods of making his product known—a wagon with a body shaped as a pickle on which he travels through the country, the stickers, balloons and posters which he uses in a novel manner, his methods of working up mouth-to-mouth advertising—all the sure-fire elements of appeal are here in abundance.

The outstanding highlights of the picture occur during the last reels when Hines gets mixed up in one of those "Red Hot Romance" types of revolution. His masquerade as a "greaser" general, the dance number he does with the vampire, the pole vaulting stunt with the rebel army chasing him, his rescue of the heroine, "and others too numerous to mention" round out a picture that is well balanced as regards humor, pathos, romance and melodrama. And all of it is put over in a new way. The work of the supporting cast is excellent with Bradley Barker doing an exceptionally good bit of acting as the heavy and Sigrid Holmquist registers well as the heroine.

This looks like the best bet Johnny has made to date. There are exploitation possibilities galore, but regardless of that it simply oozes entertainment throughout. Exhibitors need have no conscientious scruples about announcing this as one of the best comedies released in some time.

THEME. Feature comedy dealing with efforts of young man of the go-getter type to rebuild pickle business and later, his attempts to break up revolution, in both of which he is successful. There is a light romance thrown in for good measure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The ingenious gags throughout the reels. The titles, all of which are in a very humorous vein. The fast action. The incident in the restaurant. Johnny's method of publicizing pickles. His masquerade as the general. The dance number with the vampire.

DIRECTION. Has kept the action moving at a fast pace. Holds interest in slight story due to gags of which there is one every minute. On the whole has done a creditable job.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. There are excellent possibilities for tie-ups with restaurants and pickle manufacturers. The producers have already inaugurated a tie-up with the manufacturers of Crackerjack confections. Send man around in vehicle with body shaped to represent a pickle. Various teaser campaigns on the title.

DRAWING POWER. Should appeal to audiences of all houses whether on Broadway or Main Street.

SUMMARY. A great comedy with a sure-fire audience appeal. It is well mounted and the direction is good.

THE CAST

Crackerjack Perkins ..... Johnny Hines
Rose Bannon ..... Sigrid Holmquist
Col. Perkins ..... J. Barney Sherry
Lopez, a Revolutionist ..... Bradley Barker
General Bannon ..... Henry West

Story by Dick Friel. Scenario by Victor Grandin and Argyll Campbell. Titles by John Krafft. Directed by Charles Hines.

SYNOPSIS. Crackerjack Perkins meets and falls in love with Rose Bannon, daughter of General Bannon who is in New York with Lopez, a revolutionist making preparations to overthrow the government of Esquasado. Perkins is called to the South by his uncle to take over a dying pickle manufacturing plant. He applies go-getter methods to the business, and while at his work again meets Rose. He becomes aware of the plans of the revolutionists and is instrumental in frustrating them to the extent of winning the fight for the government; so all ends well and he marries Rose.

Red Love

(Lowell-Davis Distributing Div.—Six Reels)

AMONG the western entries it is seldom that screen audiences are given the chance to be entertained with an Indian story. Time was when the silversheet catered to the redman entirely. Then he faded from sight only to reappear at rare intervals. In "Red Love" we are offered an interesting melodrama of a persecuted Indian—a melodrama which carries sufficient action and suspense, a first rate vein of heart interest, romance, pathos (a very necessary element in Indian characterization), and good atmosphere and backgrounds.

The plot really makes more of the note of pathos—which is as it should be. The central character—an educated Indian—who does not affect the customary manners of his race has aroused the enmity of a vicious drunken white man. In refusing to take an insult he punishes his enemy—and thinking he killed him, becomes a wanderer of the plains. He is about one jump ahead of his pursuers until the climax is reached. So we have the heart interest of his solitude. Becoming a fugitive from justice calls for fine repression from John Lowell who, enacting the part of the hero, succeeds in giving a sincere and real performance. Time and again there are appealing long shots of this Indian against the distant horizon. He steals horses and trades them to earn a livelihood. When he rescues an Indian maid of the reservation the romance blooms, though there is suspense here when one wonders how he will win her away from his younger brother.

The picture never becomes false to its theme. There is only a faint gesture toward eliminating the racial barrier—mostly noticeable in the college sequence when a white youth makes advances toward the girl. The action is always progressive and never gets away from the persecution of the hero. The climax features a courtroom scene as the Indian gives himself up. There may not be much judicial deportment in this episode, but at least it carries conviction in the way it is performed. The bad white man proves to be very much alive—the persecution being nothing else but a frame-up. Most players are in character and enact their parts convincingly—particularly Mr. Lowell and Evangeline Russell who, as the Indian maid, lends authority and charm to the role.

THEME. Western melodrama revolving around the persecution of an Indian who, believing himself a murderer, becomes a fugitive from justice. Has his honor restored.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The exteriors. The even action. The work of John Lowell and Evangeline Russell. The romantic development. The courtroom scene. The pathos and heart interest.

DIRECTION. Gets everything out of story. Builds up human interest and defines characterization clearly enough. Presents good incident and authentic atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Present prologue showing Indian vocalists or dancers—attired in native costumes. Use Indian music for score.

DRAWING POWER. Will surely interest its clientele. Suitable for all houses which cater to westerns. Title is alluring and if well exploited should attract those who don't follow westerns generally.

SUMMARY. There is no racial barrier theme, nor any heavy hokum concerning the Indian. He doesn't dob on his war paint and go scalping. This story features the pathos of the red man—of his persecution, etc. Carries action, heart appeal and suspense. Also first rate exteriors. Is acted in first rate style.

THE CAST

Thunder Cloud	John Lowell
Starlight	Evangeline Russell
James Logan, Little Antelope	F. Serrano Keating
Sheriff La Verne	William Calhoun
Mrs. La Verne	Anne Brody
Dr. George Lester	William Cavanaugh
Bill Mosher	Wallace Jones
Sam Gibbons	Charles W. Kinney
Two Crows	Frank Montgomery
Scar-Face	Dexter McReynnolds
Tom Livingston	"Chick" Chandler

By L. Case Russell. Directed by Edgar Lewis.

SYNOPSIS. Educated Sioux Indian provokes enmity of vicious white man. He refuses to take an insult and is goaded into beating his opponent. Believing he killed him, he becomes fugitive of justice. Has romance with Indian maid, but finally surrenders and in subsequent court trial has his honor vindicated.

(Neilan-Metro-Goldwyn—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

YOU can't call this a remarkable story. On the contrary if you strip it of it veneer or its polish and get down beneath the surface you will discover that it is nothing but a hackneyed triangle romance which has been lifted into something quite worth while through an extremely effective adaptation furnished by Tom Geraghty and skillful direction by Marshall Neilan. The former knows how to write progressive action that projects from well dovetailed scenes; the latter when he is in the mood knows how to get meaning into his situations, or at least a quality of interest that serves for the time as well as meaning. Neilan is so full of ideas that he often stumbles in his own path. But he has imagination and he has feeling—and these qualities are present to humanize this story.

Had the disillusioned lovers gotten together for a brief moment and argued it over the picture would have been over in two reels. There was nothing to keep them apart for so long other than a feeling of pride which served to overwhelm their inner feelings. So the gay heiress toured around the open places of Europe striving hard to forget—and the unhappy commoner dwelled in the past. The other man, an impoverished nobleman, kept the girl amused for a while, but once she had made up her mind to cast him aside she overcame her pride and the commoner saved her from a suicide's grave and married her at the altar.

Geraghty and Neilan never allow themselves to become heavy-handed in their treatment. There is sly humor back of every touch of pathos—which accounts for the human interest. Of course the director could have made the picture in Hollywood because aside from a few Scottish, English and French exteriors it comprises a series of sets. The Continental flavor, however, adds tone to its atmosphere—and makes the characters appear genuine.

Blanche Sweet in the title role not only wears frocks and feathers, laces and graces as if born to the manner and manor, but shows she still retains her rich emmotional gifts. Her pouty expression is effective. Ronald Colman, and Lew Cody as the commoner and nobleman, respectively, act with good authority.

THEME. Romantic drama of triangle situation based upon misunderstanding between girl of high estate and commoner. After much unhappiness comes reconciliation.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The emotional acting by Blanche Sweet. Her wardrobe. The British backgrounds. The restraint in the acting by Ronald Colman and Lew Cody. The two weddings. The love spats. The subtitles. The sets.

DIRECTION. Injects a lot of feeling into simple story and lifts it into enjoyable entertainment. Makes characters genuine and divorces himself from calling on the timeworn blah heroics. Balances it with humor.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. This title should attract them. Also mentioning the cast and Miss Sweet's wardrobe. Tie-ups with fashion shops, etc. Play up director. Bill it as human story of couple who misunderstood each other.

DRAWING POWER. For the better houses. Suitable for first and second runs. Will be appreciated for its human appeal and its humor.

SUMMARY. No heroics, no hokum, no blah melodrama intrude here. It is a simple yarn made effective through fine treatment by adaptor and director. Incident does not repeat itself. Holds the interest through even, progressive plot and fine acting. Editing a trifle faulty.

THE CAST

Lady Gwendolyn	Blanche Sweet
Donald McAllen	Ronald Colman
Prince Carlos	Lew Cody
Countess Van Alystyne	Josephine Crowell
Donald's Father	George Fawcett
Sir Alfred Grayle	Edward Martindel
Housekeeper	Kate Price
Carloh, Valet	Hank Mann
Detective	Arthur Hoyt

By Gerald Beaumont. Scenario by Tom Geraghty. Directed by Marshall Neilan.

SYNOPSIS. Scotch heiress loves young commoner—the match being disapproved of by the girl's father. A misunderstanding develops and the girl has romance with Continental nobleman who masquerades as wealthy. In an attempt to forget her unhappiness she seeks diversion in famous watering places and other climes. Eventually she learns the true character of the nobleman and a reconciliation is effected with the commoner.

(Sam E. Rork—First National—7861 Feet)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

NEVER was a stage play transferred to the screen with less trace of the "stage stagey" and with a greater amount of naturalness than this adaptation of Marion Fairfax's "The Talker," a story based on the theme "it is bad to preach a good doctrine and not practice it; but to advocate a dangerous doctrine which one has too much good sense to practice, is criminal."

One of the most impressive casts ever assembled for a picture of its type has been formed to enact the characters of "The Talker." Lewis Stone, an ideal choice physically and temperamentally for the role of the husband, and Anna Q. Nilsson in the character of the wife who likes to toy with, but is too sensible to practice very modernistic views concerning marriage, bring a tremendous force to vitalize the leading figures in the play. Shirley Mason must be credited with one of the finest performances in her career as the young sister who experiments with ideas advanced by Kate Lennox. Ian Keith, Tully Marshall—who contributes one of his most entertaining interpretations as a somewhat devilish hen-peck—Lydia Yeamans Titus, Gertrude Short, Barbara Bedford and Harold Goodwin, are outstanding members of a uniformly excellent company.

Alfred Green displays his gift for deft and light handling of dramatic incidents. The humor of the scenes in which the hen-pecked Mr. Fells yearns and actually reaches out for adventure to enliven his hum-drum existence, the atmosphere of the small town and the color and vivacity of the scenes, materially enhance the tense drama which is inherent in the situations in which the young sister elopes with the bounder, the poignant appeal of the meeting between Kate and Lennox's stenographer, who is in love with him, and the moving climax in which the young girl returns to her brother's home and is greeted by the contrite Kate Lennox.

THEME: Modern drama concerning a young wife who "talks" advanced ideas; theories which make a great impression on young sister-in-law, who attempts to test them. The girl's elopement with a bounder causes a break between husband and wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The vitality of the dramatic situations, the atmosphere and the expert touches of humor. The acting, photography and staging.

DIRECTION. Establishes convincing atmosphere of small town and home life of middle-class families.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The cast of well known and popular players should be heavily billed. Feature as adaptation of play with trenchant moral developed in highly entertaining fashion, and as real and amusing as the life which goes on daily about every man, woman and child in this country.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for big houses. Is certain to be hailed as capital entertainment generally.

SUMMARY. The picture appears to have everything—humor, naturalness, dramatic suspense, appealing characters and atmosphere—that goes to make up a great popular success. Its treatment is flawless and the acting extraordinarily fine.

THE CAST

Kate Lennox	Anna Q. Nilsson
Harry Lennox	Lewis S. Stone
Ruth Lennox	Shirley Mason
Ned Hollister	Ian Keith
Henry Fells	Tully Marshall
Barbara Farley	Barbara Bedford
Lonnie Whinston	Harold Goodwin
Maud Fells	Gertrude Short
Mrs. Fells	Lydia Yeamans Titus
The Stenographer	Cecille Evans
The Detective	Charles West
Mr. Grayson	E. H. Calvert

From the play by Marion Fairfax. Directed by Alfred E. Green.

SYNOPSIS. Kate Lennox, wife of a man in moderate circumstances, preaches the doctrine of liberty, independence and self-expression for wives. Her preachings are taken seriously by young sister of her husband, who elopes with a married man. This drives husband and wife apart. But later the young girl returns, having escaped from the bounder before harm could come to her and in the end there is a reunion.

If Marriage Fails?

(C. Gardner Sullivan-F. B. O.—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is one of the new "specials," which F. B. O. will offer exhibitors in its new season product. Oh, yes, we know this company freely admits making "program pictures" but in its 64 releases for 1925-26 there will be twelve honest-to-goodness big pictures and this is one of them. This opening gun in the barrage of new product is a C. Gardner Sullivan production. It is an original tale, and, in addition to have a good box office title, has "class" from beginning to end.

To begin with it discusses a problem of modern society that will interest both men and women, that of the "society marriage," in which one of the two parties to the marital agreement weds for wealth and position only. In this case it is the wife, who, having attained money and place among the "400," forgets her husband and steps out.

Scenically, the production is a thing of real beauty. The producers have opened wide the money bags in order that backgrounds of startling splendor might be provided. We'll wager the scenes showing the interior of "Venezia," a cabaret de luxe in which patrons are taken for gondola rides thru canals the sides of which are lined with art models and choruses is going to make everyone sit up and take notice.

The cast is A. No. 1. Jacqueline Logan does some of the most appealing work in the role of Nadia, the fortune teller. Miss Logan's gowns, the work of Andre-Ani, are going to draw forth a chorus of "ahs" from the fair sex. Belle Bennett is admirably cast in the role of the society "nit-wit" wife. Clive Brook makes a clean-cut appearance in a convincing interpretation of the "deserted" husband who finds a new love in Nadia. Jean Hersholt, Donald McDonald, Cissy Fitzgerald and rotund Nathilde Comont, who appeared as the Persian prince in "The Thief of Bagdad," are all good.

THEME. A modern society drama that discusses the evils of wedded life in the "400." Deserted by his butterfly wife, Joe Woodbury finds a new interest in Nadia, a fortune teller, while the wife comes to grief following a roadhouse raid.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine cast and the acting of each member. The gowns worn by Jacqueline Logan. The beautiful settings, especially the home of Nadia and the shots of the cabaret. The scene in which the wife, pretending approaching motherhood, gets Nadia to refuse to see her husband. The raid on the roadhouse.

DIRECTION. John Ince has turned out a fine box office feature. He has, in fact, always kept the B. O. in view. He has brought out some splendid characterizations and mounted the feature in fine style.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title. The cast. Play up the names of the all-star personnel. Put over style shop window tieups using stills of Miss Logan in her gown creations.

DRAWING POWER. In the larger houses catering to sophisticated folks this one, if properly exploited, should be a real business-getter.

SUMMARY. F. B. O. may well be proud of this opening gun in their new season campaign. It is a distinctly high class offering, possessing a good story, an excellent cast and a mounting that compares with some of our more pretentious pictures.

THE CAST

Nadia	Jacqueline Logan
Joe Woodbury	Clive Brook
Eleanor Woodbury	Belle Bennett
Dr. Mallini	Jean Hersholt
Mrs. Lucy Loring	Cissy Fitzgerald
Lisa	Nathilde Comont
Gene Deering	Donald McDonald

By C. Gardner Sullivan. Directed by John Ince. Photographed by James Diamond.

SYNOPSIS. The wedded life of Joe and Eleanor Woodbury has not been a happy one. Eleanor prefers the company of Gene Deering, a "parlor polecat," to that of her husband. Joe accompanies his wife one day on a visit to Nadia, a fortune teller. Joe meets Nadia. It is love at first sight. Declaring she is about to become a mother, Eleanor succeeds in getting Nadia's promise never to see Joe again. Eleanor and Deering are picked up following a roadhouse raid by Nadia and Dr. Mallini, who attends Eleanor, the latter being slightly injured. The doctor tells Nadia, Eleanor has lied about her approaching motherhood. Joe learns of the roadhouse affair, divorces his wife and wins Nadia.

Ridin' Thunder

HERE we have the regulation plot of the cattlemen and the rustlers which is so obvious of action that the interest must be found in its backgrounds and the individual work of the players. There is not a single novel incident which might furnish surprise and suspense. In fact it follows a very familiar groove from the minute that the rancher vows vengeance against the cattle thieves. When this character is indicted, convicted and sentenced to be hung—all in the space of a subtitle—one knows for a certainty that he'll be saved in the nick of time by his heroic son and the dead man's daughter—a girl who has been reared in ignorance of her father's rustling nature.

Where the logic goes to pieces is in the effort of the cowpunchers to make the convicted man pay for his crime. This is contrary to the unwritten code of the West. But romance must be served—also suspense, though this latter element is never developed because so much of the vital incident takes place off screen. Most of it is indicated through the subtitles. So we have the accused man's son getting the goods on the real culprit, thus averting a necktie party for the innocent father.

The characters indulge in a lot of conversation and standing about instead of getting down to action. The only flash of incident is found in the climax when some hard riding is put over to rescue the rancher. Jack Hoxie's horsemanship is skillful enough, but not being a versatile actor he must needs be given the orthodox westerns. And these lack ingenuity and invention.

The director naturally falls back on the exteriors—and as these depict the painted desert of Arizona he has fulfilled his obligations from that angle. The picture is not balanced with any comedy relief—and the romance is mostly negligible. However it is not burdened with too much footage—and should please the fans in the average houses who enjoy westerns. Those who have grown accustomed to the better grade of cowboy stories will call it just another picture.

THEME. Western melodrama involving the murder of a cattle rustler with innocent rancher being convicted of crime on circumstantial evidence. He is freed upon real culprit's last-minute confession.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The character sketch by Francis Ford. The exteriors, showing a typical cattle country. The pursuit of the rustlers. The horsemanship of Jack Hoxie.

DIRECTION. Hasn't much to work with—the plot being timeworn and lacking variety of scene. But makes the best of it by emphasizing the exteriors.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Better go easy on detailing synopsis as this story is an old one. Best angle is to exploit title in teaser campaign and play up Hoxie's horsemanship.

DRAWING POWER. For the houses catering to westerns. Suitable for small downtown houses, community theatres and small towns.

SUMMARY. Not up to the average of most westerns. Has a moth-eaten plot which has performed yeoman service on screen. Much of the action is told via the subtitles. Obvious all the way. Very little suspense. Best with backgrounds.

THE CAST

Jack Douglas	Jack Hoxie
Jean Croft	Katherine Grant
Cal Watson	Jack Pratt
Frank Douglas	Francis Ford
Bill Croft	George Connors
Art Osgood	Bert Demarc
Sheriff	William McCall
Governor	Broderick O'Farrell

By B. M. Bower. Scenario by Isadore Bernstein. Directed by Clifford Smith. Photographed by Harry Newman.

SYNOPSIS. Cowpuncher's father vows vengeance upon cattle rustlers. The youth falls in love with girl who is the daughter of the ringleader of the rustlers. When the cattle thief is killed suspicion points to the hero's father who is convicted of crime. Through trapping the real culprit the condemned man is saved. Love triumphs.

Go Straight

(Schulberg—6107 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IF coincidence hadn't intruded so often here—if convenient situations hadn't been crowded so closely together—and if the director hadn't jumped at conclusions so quickly this picture would stand a better chance of hitting the bulls-eye. It revolves around the determination of a girl crook to go straight—but after she pulls a job and reforms little attention is paid to making her appear convincing.

All of this is told with a fair amount of suspense. It is when the story shifts to Hollywood that the action becomes jumpy and inconsistent. It is all right for the girl to want to get as far away from her crooked pals as possible. But it is far-fetched to have her get a job in a bank without having her references closely examined. The plot sort of falls to pieces because conclusions are jumped at so quickly. The crooks also arrive in Hollywood and get the necessary "dope" on the bank. But in robbing it the episode defies all the rules of logic.

Meanwhile shots are shown of the heroine's woman companion trying to get a job in the movies. So we are offered some studio atmosphere which has nothing in common with the story. As it appears it serves in only being so much extra footage. The heroine gets the bank job as secretary to the young president and when he proposes marriage she thinks of her past and refuses. When he is tipped off by a detective from the East his suspicions are aroused.

So the picture gets down to its climax—with the girl substituting blank paper for the package of bills. The crooks break in soon after in a scene which is more ridiculous than it is real. One of them has masqueraded as an old woman who, stumbling in front of the windows, causes the guard inside to open the door and rescue "her." The others overpower him, steal the package, and, after overpowering the president, (who has visited the bank to see that everything is O. K.) carry him away to their shack. Much of this is told off screen. The conclusion brings about the capture of the crooks and triumph of the romance. The characterization is not clearly defined—and the suspense is dissipated most of the time. The result is a disappointing picture.

THEME. Melodrama of a girl crook's redemption. Tries to elude her crooked pals, gets bank job and has romance, but she is pursued by her criminal friends. Ultimately brings about their capture.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The early crook atmosphere. The work of Gladys Hulette and the few moments given to George Fawcett. The bank robbery. The climax.

DIRECTION. Never brings out a clear characterization and allows plot to develop hap-hazardly so that it never appears convincing. The incident in the crook sequences is far-fetched.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can teaser the title in programs and newspapers. Feature as romantic melodrama of a girl who found redemption. Play up the cast.

DRAWING POWER. For the average trade in cities and towns. Title and cast well exploited should stimulate patronage.

SUMMARY. Not so effective as a crook-redemption story as the plot is far-fetched and the characters are manipulated like so many puppets. Jumps at conclusions and the incident is overdone. Good atmosphere and the acting is fairly good. Obvious all the way—and lacking suspense.

THE CAST

John Rhodes	Owen Moore
Gilda Hart	Gladys Hulette
Mrs. Rhodes	Mary Carr
"The Hawk"	Robert Edeson
Madison	George Fawcett
"The Dove"	Francis McDonald
A Detective	DeWitt Jennings
Mamie La Fon	Ethel Wales
"Aunty" Bobbin	Lillian Leighton

By Ewart Adamson. Adapted by Agnes Leahy. Directed by Frank O'Connor.

SYNOPSIS. Girl crook is determined to go straight and her pals accuse her of cowardice. Pulls a job to prove that she isn't "yellow," but returns the loot and flees to Hollywood. There she gets a position as secretary to bank president. Her erstwhile pals follow and attempt to rob the bank, but the girl foils them. Wins confidence of bank official after he has been led to suspect her.

Chicago

THE Drake Hotel was the national headquarters for F. B.O. this week when forty home office executives, divisional and exchange managers from all parts of the United States, gathered there for a two day convention. It was declared to be one of the greatest "pep" meetings ever held in this city. From Chicago a number of those attending the convention, including Harry Berman, Abe Schnitzer, Lee Marcus, Charles Rosenzweig, Cleve Adams, Eddie Smith, Art Smith, Max Weissfeldt and others, went to Milwaukee where they expected to remain during the sessions of the Exhibitors' National Convention.

Another big conference which was held at the Drake this week was that of Universal. President Carl Laemmle presided and the meeting was attended by executives from all parts of the country, as well as a number of officers of the company from New York City. Milwaukee was the objective of a number of Universal chiefs following their Chicago gathering.

Andrew Karzas, with Milton S. Plotke, real estate man, has organized a syndicate to build what it is expected, to be the largest and most beautiful dance hall in Chicago. It will be located on Lawrence and Winthrop Avenues. At the same time Mr. Karzas made the statement that he would start work next fall on his proposed magnificent new theatre which is to replace the present Woodlawn Theatre at 63rd and Maryland Avenue, on the south side. Other new enterprises which he is interested in include the large motion picture theatre being erected at Lincoln, Bell Plaine and Robey, and one which it is said will cost over a million dollars and a half, at Hammond, Indiana.

The Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners and the Exhibitors Association of Chicago were represented this week at Milwaukee by President Nathan, Secretary Frank and Directors George Hopkinson, Sidney Selig, and R. C. Williams of the State Organization and Business Manager Jack Miller and Secretary Ludwig Siegel of the city. Office Manager Bill Sweeney also was in attendance. The committees mentioned above were appointed by their respective organizations and took part in the deliberations of the Allied which met at the same time as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and also in general looked after the intertests of their organizations at Milwaukee.

Elmer Tilton, branch manager for First National, was elected vice-president while Mary Benjamin was again selected as recording secretary for the organization. The election of the executive secretary to succeed to the office held last year by Mr. Ballentyne, manager of the Pathe office, was held over until the next meeting. The retiring officers of the Film Board of Trade are Frank Crawford, manager of Famous Players, and Mr. Young, executive of the F. B. O. Exchange. The Des Moines Film Board of Trade recently moved into new offices at 519 Iowa Building.

C. L. Niles, owner of the Grand Opera House at Anamosa, suffered big loss from fire when the whole inside of his theatre was gutted with flame starting from some unknown source. The fire occurred when the building was empty and did not spread to any other buildings. The inside of the theatre was completely ruined and it will be some time before repairs can be made so that performances can continue at the Anamosa theatre.

Les Phillips, head salesman of the Exhibitors Supply Company in Iowa, suffered considerably injury in an automobile accident five miles south of Winterset last week. The car in which he was driving with Mr. Benson of Creston turned over three times as Benson was trying to make a corner on high speed. Mr. Phillips was badly bruised and cut with glass, one piece going clear through his right hand. The car was also badly wrecked and Benson escaped with a few bruises. The car was approaching a speed of fifty miles when it came to the corner. Mr. Philips and Mr. Benson were returning from inspecting a theatre building which Mr. Benson plans to rent for the opening up of another theatre. Mr. Phillips was in the hospital the early part of the week and is not yet able to get back to work.

Chapman, booker for First National, has accepted the challenge issued by the baseball team made up of exchange staffs outside the Film Exchange Building, for the exchanges inside the building and leaves it up to Park Agnew, chief booster of the challenging team to set the place and time for the first battle. Mr. Agnew says Chapman's team can have sixteen men, just to make things even, while Chapman says all he needs is six men on his side to beat any other combination possible. So it looks like it will be a big battle with both teams confident of overwhelming victory, Baker, booker for Universal, has been suggested as pitcher for the team made up of exchanges in the Film Exchange Building while Johnson of F. B. O. will heave for the other team.

And Rube Wagle is wed. He sure is. Was married on Saturday to Miss Opal Hiatt, who made a lovely blushing bride. Rube Wagle is the cashier of the Des Moines F. B. O. office. On Monday he passed around the cigars and candy.

Atlanta

AFTER serving for several months as temporary manager of Metro-Goldwyn's Atlanta branch office, James W. Hanlon, known to everybody in the film fraternity as Jimmy, has been appointed permanent manager. After the sudden death of Jim Burke last December, Mr. Hanlon, then an up-and-coming booker for the Metro exchange, was advanced to the managerial desk; but his appointment was only tentative, subject to confirmation by New York executives. This confirmation came last week during the sales conference held in the company's executive offices at 1540 Broadway.

The summer program for Producers Distributing Corporation salesmen was outlined this week at a lively and enthusiastic gathering of salesmen, called by Mrs. A. H. Sessions, district manager for Producers. Pictures were screened and advance information supplied for the salesmen present, priming the Producer representatives for the coming campaign. Present at this meeting were L. J. Duncan, salesman for Alabama; L. C. Lowe, North Carolina; J. W. Wilbanks, South Carolina; Herman Cohen, Georgia.

The many friends of Rufus Davis, star salesman for Southern States, will be glad to learn that he is resting easily at a local sanatorium, after undergoing, on Tuesday, an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Davis is one of the most popular salesmen on Film Row as well as being one of the most capable in his territory. His wife, a Charlotte girl who only recently became Mrs. Davis, is in Atlanta at his bedside.

Milton Jones, assistant manager of the Southern States office, is to be married on June 6th, to Miss Laura Brown, daughter of Mr. Lorraine Brown of this city, The couple will leave immediately after the ceremony for New York, to be gone for two weeks. They will make their home in Atlanta. Mr. Jones is a valued member of the Southern States force, having been with the office for six years.

Alpha Fowler, manager of the Palace theatre in Inman Park, is sick with a terrible cold this week, and while he is still on the job at the theatre, is by no means in the pink of condition.

Adolph Samuels, sojourning in Germany, writes that the weather is wonderful on the continent, that his trip over was most pleasant and that he is greatly enjoying his visit with friends and relatives in the Old Country. Mr. Samuels will return in June.

R. B. Wilby, part owner of the Cameo theatre which will have its opening Monday, came in to Atlanta from Birmingham Thursday and left again Friday.

C. R. Beacham, branch manager for First National, returned Wednesday from New Orleans, where he has been attending a two day conference called by C. C. Callaway, district manager.

Thomas A. Curran, western sales representative for Rayart Pictures came in to Atlanta this week and visited all the independent exchanges. It is understood that he will remain over the week-end.

J. R. Edenfield, of the Dreamland theatre, Augusta, Ga., spent the week-end in town, calling upon the various exchanges.

L. V. Seicshnaydre, newly appointed manager for the New Orleans branch of Progress Pictures, was in Atlanta this week, conferring with Arthur C. Bromberg, president.

Ray Beall, exploitation man for Southern States Film Company returned Thursday from Savannah.

W. E. Truog, of the New York office of Universal Pictures, was in the local exchange this week and held a sales conference. All four of the salesmen working out of Atlanta were present. B. Fulton, C. T. Jordan, R. S. Campbell, and H. M. Williams. Mr. Truog is making a round of all the exchanges throughout this territory for the purpose of holding sales meetings.

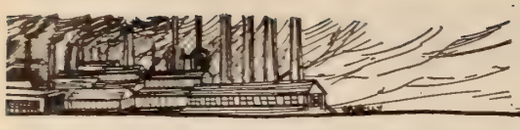
Charlie Crute, of the Lyric theatre, Huntsville, Ala., spent Thursday in Atlanta.

R. A. Herring, of the Rylander theatre, Americus, Ga., spent a short while in Atlanta this week in the interest of his theatre.

Walter F. McDonald, former football star at G. M. A., and son-in-law of Mrs. Anna H. Sessions, district manager for Producers Distributing corporation, came in to Atlanta Monday to spend a few days visiting friends. He will return to Monroe the latter part of the week.

C. W. Maxey, who operates the Royal theatre in Summerville, Ga., was in town for a few days last week.

J. J. Durfield, Florida representative for Metro-Goldwyn, was in town Monday. He left Tuesday for his territory.



Lewis Ingrahm, Georgia representative for Metro-Goldwyn, came in Monday for a brief stay. Mr. Ingrahm left immediately for his territory.

Central Penn

MRS. BERTHA B. EMMETT, for four years house manager of the Colonial motion picture theatre, Harrisburg, a leading Wilmer & Vincent theatre of that city, has resigned her post and has been temporarily succeeded by Samuel A. Keubler, manager of the Orpheum, a "legitimate" theatre, which is about to be demolished to make way for a million-dollar theatre with 2,500 seating capacity. The new theatre when completed about the first of next year will be a vaudeville and picture house.

When the Orpheum is rebuilt Mr. Keubler will become manager of the Majestic, at present a vaudeville and picture theatre which will become the Wilmer & Vincent legitimate theatre in Harrisburg. Mr. Gibble, manager of the Majestic, will at that time be transferred to manage the new Orpheum.

The employes of the Colonial, on the occasion of Mrs. Emmett's retirement as manager, about May 1, presented her with a string of pearl beads and a vanity case. Before she came to Harrisburg in 1921, Mrs. Emmett was associated with the management of a theatre in Allentown.

By odd coincidence, Peter Magaro, veteran Harrisburg motion picture exhibitor, who has just sold his Regent theatre to Marcus Loew's Inc., and will retire from the theatre field, was virtually a business associate of Mr. Loew when both were struggling along at the start of their careers many years ago. Mr. Magaro met Mr. Loew when both were having their troubles at a time when pictures were a "baby" industry. They used to exchange films, Loew using them in his New York theatres and Mr. Magaro bringing them to Harrisburg for a later showing in the small theatre he then operated. Those were the days of "store" shows when the home of an unsuccessful business venture was quickly transformed into a "picture theatre," where twenty shows a day were given for five cents. Mr. Magaro is planning a vacation trip to his old home in Italy, to be accompanied by his daughter. He will return to Harrisburg to reside, having big real estate and other business interests there.

Never in the history of Harrisburg and vicinity has there been such an epidemic of Spring circuses to detract from the business of the picture theatres. The Sheesley shows filled a week's engagement in Harrisburg late in April and from there went to Steelton, which immediately adjoins Harrisburg, for a stay of another week. The Hagenback-Wallace circus gave two performances in Harrisburg on May 4, and Ringling Brothers were booked to appear there on May 21.

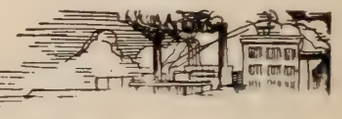
The Theatorium, the first theatre operated in Mt. Carmel by L. J. Chamberlain, of Shamokin, now head of the big Chamberlain chain of theatres, has passed out of existence as a picture house. It was acquired for a theatre by Mr. Chamberlain in 1907. The building had just been transferred by the Guarantee Trust & Safe Deposit Company, of Mt. Carmel, to J. Grant Kehler, of that city, who will replace it with a store and apartment house.

Two concerts by a juvenile chorus, ranging from 3 to 6 years old, trained by Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, head of the Community Service Bureau maintained in Harrisburg by the Wilmer & Vincent theatre interests, were a feature of the Music Week celebration in that city, May 3 to 10. Many of the theatres of Central Pennsylvania had special musical programs during Music Week. Organ recital music was broadcast on several evenings from the Victoria and Regent theatres, Harrisburg.

With the presentation of the operetta "Blossom Time," on the night of May 11, the present Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, witnessed its last performance. This Wilmer & Vincent legitimate theatre is to be torn down at once to make way for a vaudeville house that will seat 2,500.

The new Victoria motion picture theatre that has just been opened in Mahanoy City, by the Chamberlain Amusement Company, is being managed by W. D. Ascough.

A $10,000 organ is to be installed in the theatre conducted by Gene McAtee, located in the Elks Building, in Mahanoy City.



Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, head of the Wilmer & Vincent Community Service Bureau, of Harrisburg, conducted community singing for the inmates of the Dauphin County Almshouse, Harrisburg, on the evening of May 6.

Through the courtesy of Wilmer & Vincent, the management of the Majestic vaudeville and picture theatre, Harrisburg, gave a special performance on Saturday afternoon, May 9, as a forerunner to Mothers' Day, the Sunday following. All mothers over 60 years or older were admitted as guests of the house, and a special program in their honor was arranged. A souvenir was presented to each mother, and an address was made by Daniel L. Casey, secretary of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce.

Announcement has been made that Loew's Regent theatre, just acquired in Harrisburg by the Marcus Loew interests of New York, will introduce at once a policy of two changes of bill weekly—one Mondays and Thursdays. Heretofore the Regent, under the old management, has usually given bills of a continuous week's run.

Detroit

J. S. CARRIER has been appointed to succeed Manager Ansley of the Broadway-Strand theatre, controlled by Universal Productions. He assumes his new duties this week. Mr. Carrier is well known in the show business having been manager for a long period of a string of theaters in West Virginia, and recently having headquarters in Huntington, W. Va. Before that he was manager of a group of twenty-four St. Louis houses for two years. Mr. Carrier plans no radical changes in the policy of the house and has already announced a series of important bookings for the immediate future.

Jack Young, local manager for Vitagraph, whose connections with that company are unaffected by the merger with Warner Brothers is now in California, attending the sales conference of Vitagraph managers and officials.

The Kunsky theaters were visited last week by the deputation of theater owners from the British Isles, who are in this country upon a tour of inspection of American theaters. The party made a thorough tour of the Capitol theater as well as other local houses. Elaborate plans were made for the entertainment of the visitors by the Motion Picture Theater Owners of Michigan. Under the guidance of H. M. Richey, they visited the Ford plant, various points of interest in the city and, before leaving for the Milwaukee convention, were guests at a large banquet, attended by the most prominent exhibitors of the state. Among the visitors were William Gavazzi King, General secretary of the Cinematograph Exhibitors association of Great Britain and Ireland, Major A. J. Gale, member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire and member of the General counsel of that organization; G. F. McDonald, ex-president of the association; Captain J. W. Barber, commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire; A. Cunningham, ex-councillor of Leeds and F. H. Cooper, member of the General Counsel of the association. Detroit is the second stopping place for the Britishers, they having entered the country at Buffalo, coming direct from the steamship docks at Montreal.

The new State theater, now under construction, has progressed to the eighth floor in steel construction. Steel work is also almost complete for the auditorium structure itself. The new theater will follow a decorative scheme along Oriental lines. It will open its door to the public this coming October.

Tom Mix, now returning from his European tour, will be in Detroit on Saturday, (May 16) and the following day, to visit the various industrial plants and to give the city in general his respects. With him will be his wife, daughter and chief understudy, "Tony." The western star will be widely feted during his local stay. A banquet is already planned for the Book-Cadillac Hotel, where he will stay, and which will be attended by newspapermen and exhibitors. This will be Tom Mix's first visit in this district in several years.

Barney Balaban, senior member of the firm of Balaban and Katz, was in Detroit last week in consultation with George W. Trendle, general manager of the Kunsky interests, regarding the new Kunsky-Balaban and Katz Michigan theater. Mr. Balaban was accompanied by his advertising manager, William K. Hollander. The extremely large excavation for this newest and largest of Detroit theaters is now almost in a completed stage. Barricades about the excavation announcing the new theater and its policy are already up. The new Michigan will be the first unit of a wide-spread and ambitious building plan totalling away into the millions and promoted by the Stormfeltz-Lovely Real Estate interests, for Bagley avenue, upon which thoroughfare the new Michigan will face. The building will be thirteen stories in height, a new story having been added to the plans during the past week. The promotion corporation intends the construction of two legitimate theaters. There will also be constructed several other units consisting of large office buildings, while the street will be boulevarded and lighted in the most brilliant manner. Bagley avenue is already the widest street in Detroit, measuring some two hundred feet and with plenty of opportunity for parking facilities. The new Michigan will embrace an entire city lot. It will be under the direct management of John H. Kunsky and operated in conjunction with his other local houses. It is expected that the Michigan will open its doors to the public in about 16 months time.

Edgar O. Brooks, serial sales manager for Pathe, who was in Detroit last week conferring with Oscar Hanson, local manager, declared that Michigan is one of the best serial states in the country for Pathe.

Publication has been resumed of the "Photoplay News", the Kunsky magazine. This rather bright little publication has gained great favor with the screen followers in this district.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Butterfield, have returned to Detroit from their extensive European trip.

Salt Lake City

HARRY LUSTIG, Western Division Manager for Metro-Goldwyn arrived in this city Saturday, on his way back to his Los Angeles headquarters after attending the national convention at New York City last week. He conducted a sales conference at the local exchange Saturday afternoon and Sunday, at which subjects and policies relative to the distribution plan for the new product were thoroughly gone into and the boys of the local office returned to their territories imbued with intense enthusiasm over the lineup of productions that they have to sell. The men who attended the conference were George L. Cloward, manager of the exchange, Joseph F. Samuels, E. E. Harris, George Lustig, salesmen; and Charles Dillerd, exchange office manager. Harry Lustig left immediately following the meeting for Los Angeles.

Manager Cloward leaves this week to make a swing over the twenty key centers of this territory, in the interest of the productions on the 1925–26 schedule of releases. He is determined to close in every point.

Edward C. Mix, newly appointed manager of the Associated Exhibitors exchange here, after a week spent in studying the new product from the selling angle, is all pepped up over the productions, and will leave this week for his initial trip into the territory. He says that it seems like old times to be toting a brief case, having held the managerial duties of the Select exchange in this city until the closing of that office. Since that time he has been manager of the Kinema Theatre here.

L. Lanning has been appointed manager of the Kinema to succeed Mix. He arrived in this city to take over his new duties this week, coming in from Kansas City, where he was manager of a theatre. He is a new recruit to the staff of Universal theatre managers, this being his first house under the tutelage of big U.

The policy adopted some months ago at the Kinema Theatre, of running for the first part of the week a big first run feature production, with a good Western and serial during the latter part at lower prices than are charged for the feature, is proving to be a splendid move by way of drawing the crowds to this house during the entire week. The east side of the city is, exploited for the first period while the advertising for the last three days is confined largely to the west side.

W. R. Walsh, traveling auditor for Associated First National, is here doing his stuff over the books and records of the local exchange.

Harry T. Nolan, Mountain Division Manager for Associated First National, is at present in New York City, sitting as a member of the rotating committee. At the conclusion of the business before this body, he is expected to return to his headquarters in Denver.

Clayton D. Parker, who has been selling out of the Associated First National exchange here for the past several months, left today for Denver to report to the company office, having been transferred to the territory out of that city.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Pictures and Super Feature Independent exchange, is making good his promise at last. He leaves to-night for his long expected trip into the Idaho section selling the entire block of new productions which he controls in this part of the country. His perigrinations will consume about thirty days, with every theatre town in the Gem state serving as his host.

L. A. Davis, manager in this city for F. B. O., left yesterday for Chicago, where he will sit in at the general convention which convenes Saturday May 9 at the Drake Hotel. He will pay a vacation visit to his folks at Philadelphia before returning to his headquarters in this city. During his absence the local office is in charge of E. M. Gibson, manager.

The Universal bunch pulled out today, enroute to Chicago, to attend the national convention May 9. The boys from Seattle, Portland, and Butte offices stopped here to pick up Samuel Henley, local exchange manager. They included Jack Schlaifer, manager at Seattle, S. E. Jackson, Portland chief, publicity manager Babcock, Portland; and Ray C. Hudson, Butte office manager. At Ogden, Utah, Don Mitchell, manager at Los Angeles, and C. A. Nathan, San Francisco, manager, will join the party. Other managers and representatives along the line will entrain with the above. C. W. Peck, Jr., is in charge of the office.

Two high powered salesmen have been transferred to the local Universal exchange to work this territory on the "White List." They are Lew Herns, who hails from Portland, and G. A. Margetts, who made a long jump from Ontario, Canada. They will start work immediately, in conjunction with Milt Cohn who is hitting the trail into Idaho this week, and Joe McElhinney, who is working southern Utah.

Mrs. Velma Timpson, inspector at the Universal exchange in this city was operated upon for appendicitis yesterday. She is making good progress.

L. E. Metzger, special sales representative for Carl Laemmle, was here this week conferring with Manager Henley of the Universal branch. He left for Denver after the completion of his business here.

Art Schayer, Fox resident manager, returned this afternoon from New York City where he attended the national convention. He reports that the convention was a huge success, and declares himself to be highly enthused over the productions listed on the new season program of releases.

A. J. Shubert, exhibitor at Gooding, Idaho, has taken over the Shubert Theatre again, after leasing it out for some time, and will run it for himself. He was in this city this week visiting local exchanges checking up on the bookings for the theatre.

Carl Stern, United Artists exchange manager here, is making a short trip up Heber City way.

Vete Stewart, selling out of the local United Artists exchange, was in day before yesterday after a mighty successful trip into the Idaho territory, having booked the United productions heavily. He left yesterday for the coal camp district of southern and central Utah.

Jack Connors, Montana salesman for United Artists, is in Butte at his headquarters this week, preparatory to another swing around that state.

Alan Burke, manager of the DuLux Features exchange returned from his first trip into the territory this week, and is devoting his attention at the present time to details around the city.

C. F. Parr, resident manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, is greasing up the wheels of the newly acquired Buick chariot preparatory to a lightning swing around the territory for contracts to finish up in the divisional contest which will close in a week or so.

Out of town exhibitors who were visiting local exchanges this week included, Utah: L. B. Ashton, Princess and Columbia Theatres, Provo; George Lindsay, Star Theatre, Eureka; T. S. Chessler, Princess Theatre, Bingham Canyon; J. J. Gillette, Strand Theatre, Tooele; Ed. Ryan, Liberty and Alberta Theatres, Brigham City; Gordon Thornberg, Bluebird Theatre, Garfield; Idaho: J. H. Christensen, Orpheum Theatre, Driggs, and W. H. Burt, owner of the Rialto Theatre at Twin Falls.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made in Columbus that James O. Mills, restaurateur, has purchased the old La Salle theatre property at 108 West Madison St., Chicago, from S. W. Strauss and Company. The property was purchased on a valuation of $1,500,000, according to report.

The Brown Theatrical Company of Zanesville, has been incorporated in Columbus for $350,000. This company has been formed to erect a new building on the present site of the Zanesville Publishing Company's building on South Fifth St. It will also operate the Liberty and Weller theatres, both in Zanesville. Officers of the company are president: W. M. Bateman, president of the First National Bank of Zanesville; 1st vice-president: Frank M. Ransbottom, prominent pottery manufacturer; 2nd vice-president: W. O. Littick, president of the Zanesville Publishing Company; secretary-treasurer: George Brown, cashier of the First Trust and Savings Bank. Caldwell H. Brown, who has been manager of the Liberty and Weller theatres, has been elected general manager of the theatres to be operated by the Brown Theatrical Company. These officers, together with P. R. Gobel, constitute the board of directors of the new company. It has been announced that the present policies in operation at the Liberty and Weller theatres, will be continued.

The Pantheon theatre, Lorain, closed for a week during which time new cushioned seats were installed, and a new ventilating system put in, opened last Sunday. A special ten-piece orchestra was the added attraction for the grand opening.

Meyer Fisher of the Fisher Film Exchange, and Ohio distributor of the Felix Cat Cartoons, in co-operation with The Cleveland Plain Dealer is now in the second week of a six-week drawing contest, which is proving so successful that distributors of the cartoon comedies are writing to Fisher for details of the tie-up so as to duplicate it in other territories.

Caroll Slavin Hamberg, who is in line for a service medal, having been connected with picture distribution in Cleveland for more than six years, and who is in charge of the bookings department of the Progress Pictures Company, is spending a few weeks in Chicago, where she can at least get the smoke from the Convention.

Percy Essick of the firm of Scoville, Essick and Reiff, represented the company in Milwaukee.

John Kessler of the Alhambra theatre, Canton, made a special trip to Cleveland the other day. Mr. Kessler has started a new summer policy of split weeks.

L. B. Cool, in the city one day last week, said that this is the last week of vaudeville at the Colonial theatre, Akron. Mr. Cool is putting in stock for the summer.

Lemotto Smith, who owns and operates motion picture theatres in Alliance and Warren, stopped off between vacation trips, to call on the local exchanges in person. Smith, just back from a winter in Florida, is sailing from Montreal on May 23rd, for four months on the other side of the pond. And Mrs. Smith, of course.

C. P. Stalder, former proprietor of the Nixon theatre, Akron, has recently taken over the Standard theatre, Cuyahoga Falls. The house previously belonged to J. Jones.

A fire in the asbestos lined booth of the Grand Opera House, Cincinnati, one day last week, destroyed practically half of a film. The origin of the fire was undetermined. No one was hurt.

Bob Shaw, manager of the New Orpheum theatre, Lima, is closing his house over the summer months, during which time he will completely renovate and redecorate the house. A new $10,000 pipe organ is to be installed, as well as a new ventilating system. New projection machines, new stage scenery, new interior decorations and a completely remodelled lobby are a few of things that will greet the fans when the house opens again.

J. E. Beck, local Vitagraph exchange manager, is speeding his way to California, where a Vitagraph convention is in the act of being.

J. J. Mooney has resigned as manager of the Cleveland office of Producers Distributing Corporation. Robert Cotton, central division manager will have charge of the office temporarily. Jim Mooney continues in the booking department. Both J. J. and Jim are brothers of Paul Mooney, late general manager of P.D.C.

Ward Scott, local Fox exchange manager, is busy these days, arranging a social schedule for Tom Mix, who will spend the day of Monday May 18th in Cleveland. Arriving in Cleveland Monday morning from Detroit, he will be met by a delegation representing the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions Clubs and the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association. Under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club, he will be the guest of honor at a luncheon at the Winton Hotel. Following which he will attend the ball game, where he will share the limelight with Nick Altrock and the other players on the Washington-Cleveland teams. He will leave that same evening for Buffalo, and will make no personal appearances at any theatre while in Cleveland. A special entertainment program is being marked out for Mrs. Mix who is accompanying her famous husband on his trip through the east.

Cincinnati

R. J. BURNS, office manager for Standard, has been laid up for over a week, and his work carried on by Johnny Eifert, the popular booker of the exchange who always doubles in brass whenever anyone is absent. Besides his own work and that of Burns' Johnny is at present teaching the film business to Harold Kelso, a very apt pupil who was formerly with Pathe.

George Law, of the Eastland theatre, Portsmouth, O., made the rounds of the exchanges last week.

E. L. Katzenbach, of the Pastime theatre, Nelsonville, O., was in the city making arrangements to operate his theatre daily. In the past the theatre operated only on alternate weeks, with the Majestic theatre taking up every other week. With the increase in business the two owners have decided that both theatres could exist running continuously.

The Harris Film Co. have opened offices on the third floor of the Broadway Film Building.

Dal. Howland of the Delmar theatre, Portsmouth, O., spent several days in the city, setting in all the dates for the summer, preparatory to his trip to Alaska. He will be gone for several months.

Ned Beetz, owner of the Liberty theatre, Dayton, Ky., has purchased the Dolly Varden theatre on Central Ave., Cincinnati, from Henry Simkins.

Elmer Shard and Lou Snitzer, have purchased the Washington theatre, on Colerain Ave., Cincinnati, from J. Lackman.

Ralph Kinsler, office manager and city salesman for F. B. O. has won three sales prizes in succession, namely the February, March and April prizes. He should have received double the amount offered for he almost sold L. B. Wilson, the energetic but shrewd manager of the Liberty theatre, Covington, Ky.

Mrs. W. F. Warnerford, owner of the Gem theatre, Lawrenceburg, Ind., was in the F. B. O. offices for some time last week arranging her summer bookings for the theatre with Ralph Kinsler.

Chas. Weigel, manager of the Madison theatre, Madisonville and Park theatre, Hyde Park, both suburbs of Cincinnati, is making arrangements to attend the National Exhibitors Convention at Milwaukee. Incidentally it might be said that Mr. Weigel is one of the most popular exhibitors in the city.

Ned Hastings, manager of Keith's theatre, announces that his theatre will be turned over to the running of pictures during the summer months.

B. Meade of the Arcade theatre, Painstville, Ky., spent several days along film row last week.

Ed. Booth, manager for F. B. O. is in Chicago attending the convention. Before leaving Ed. gave a party to his most intimate friends in celebration of his daughter Betty Jane's first birthday. The party was put on in first class style with a caterer and everything.

The Sigma theatre, Dayton, O., has changed hands from Bob to August Hirsch.

Manny Nagle, booker for Paramount, is again to be seen on the golf courses of the city. But one thing Manny will not do and that is wear knickers.

L. D. Moore, of the Strand, Marysville, O., and J. Dubbs of the Opera House, Richwood, O., were visitors at the various film buildings the past week.

Max Greenwald, manager for Paramount, made a trip to Lima, Ohio, last week and closed the Quilna theatre practically solid for Paramount.

Lou Foster, city salesman for Paramount, is back on the job after a brief illness following the convention in New York several weeks ago.

Seattle

AFTER four unsuccessful weeks under a new combined motion picture and vaudeville policy, the Heilig Theatre in this city last week reverted to its original strictly motion picture policy with admission prices at 25c at all times. The Heilig was opened a number of seasons ago under the direction of Charles W. McKee at the 25c admission, and built up a very strong following. A number of months ago admission prices were raised to the 25c and 35c level with the same success, but when the Western Vaudeville Managers' five-act vaudeville program was put on late in March in addition to the pictures at 20c and 40c, attendance gradually fell off, in comparison to the added cost of the shows. First run film programs, with specialties, now constitute the new 25c programs.

Jack Sullivan, manager of the Fox Film Exchange, was expected back in this city within the next week, after having been away for the last several weeks on a trip to the Fox convention in New York City.

Information received in this city last week indicated that the Paramount Theatre, one of Tacoma's leading suburban houses, had just reduced its admission prices to 10c at all times. Manager McKennall's move was expected to be followed soon by similar reductions in other suburban houses.

L. W. Weir, Western division manager of the Producers Distributing Corporation, arrived in Seattle last week on his first trip of the spring season to this territory. Mr. Weir spent a number of days with Manager Charles E. Feldman, and then made a short trip around the key points of the local territory. From here he planned to return to Southern California.

Ray E. Grombacher, owner and manager of the Liberty Theatre in Spokane, spent a short time in this city recently, en route to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America convention in Miiwaukee. Mr. Grombacher, a trustee of the M. P. T. O. W., went as official delegate of the state organization, elected at a recent meeting in this city. During his visit here he spent a large part of the time in conference with J. M. Hone, executive secretary of the Washington state group, and John Hamrick, president of the local organization.

Alice Calhoun, whose contract with Vitagraph has been taken over by Warner Brothers.

Fred G. Sliter, manager of the First National exchange, left the city last week to attend the First National branch managers convention in Los Angeles. He expected to be gone for about two weeks, during which time he would also visit the First National offices in San Francisco and Portland.

George B. Purvis, manager of the new Columbia Theatre in Longview, owned by the Columbia Amusement Company, spent a short time on Film Row here recently. Mr. Purvis announced excellent business at his house for the first few opening weeks, and spent part of his time booking pictures that he expected would keep that business up to its high level.

Jimmy Moran, well-known film salesman and theatre man of the Pacific Northwest, spent a few days in this city last week, prior to announcement of his plans for the future. Mr. Moran was formerly associated with the Lannon-Sheffield Greater Features company in the Portland office, having left that position within the last several weeks.

Al Rosenberg, manager of the DeLuxe Feature Film Exchange, returned to his office last week after a "flying" trip to San Francisco. During his stay there he arranged for the Northwest distribution of a number of new State Right features. The DeLuxe Exchange at the present time is in the process of moving from its present office at 2014 Third Avenue to the more spacious quarters across the street at 2015½, the quarters formerly occupied by the Selznick Distributing Corporation. Moving operations are being conducted under the able direction of "Brother Jack."

Manager Albert Finkelstein of the Strand Theatre has recently completed the installation of an emergency screen at the very front of the house's stage, by which he is able to present Salvatore Santaella and the brilliant Strand Orchestra on the stage during the regular concert number of each performance. Following the screening of the feature picture, the traveler curtain is closed and the emergency screen dropped for the screening of the short subject. Following this the concert is presented, the orchestra having had time to take their positions on the stage behind the screen. The same procedure is followed after the concert, allowing the orchestra to return to the pit for the showing of the feature picture on the regular screen at the rear of the stage.

Excitement along Film Row, at least among the golfing element, has been tense for the last several days, as a result of the ending of the first half of the Seattle vs. Portland Board of Trade tournament. At the end of this spasm, the score favored the Portland film men by two points, a lead which they openly declared, would not be taken from them. Charles W. Hardin, manager of the United Artists exchange and leading golfer along Seattle's Row, was being greatly relied upon to put Seattle in the lead. A handsome trophy was donated for the tournament by Ben F. Shearer, head of the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of this city.

Vic Gauntlett, advertising and publicity director for the Blue Mouse circuit of theatres, returned to work last week after a number of days, severe illness which confined him to his home. Mr. Gauntlett suffered from an attack of flu, but insisted upon returning to his office before he was completely recovered.

Ed Dolan, owner and managing director of a string of motion picture houses in Aberdeen and Hoquiam, including the recently-finished D. & R. Theatre in Aberdeen, left recently for an extended vacation trip to Southern California. During his absence affairs at his houses are under the direction of O. T. Taylor, who was recently appointed house manager for the Aberdeen theatres owned by Mr. Dolan.

Hal Vaughn, formerly associated with the Pathe office in this city, and now connected with the same organization in Montana, recently announced that he plans to return to the Washington territory within the near future, preferring the local district to any inland country.

Rodney Pantages, eldest son of Alexander Pantages, theatre magnate, recently took over the management of the Pantages Theatres in the Pacific Northwest during the temporary absence of E. C. Bostick, Mr. Pantages' representative in this territory. The latter left for a tour of the Middle West and East, planning to install the combined motion picture-vaudeville policy in a majority of the Pantages Theatres, following its unqualified success in Seattle, Tacoma, Vancouver, B. C., and Spokane.

John Danz's Capitol Theatre in this city has now entered upon a program of first run features with changes twice each week, at the regular admission prices of 10c for matinees and 15c at night and on Sundays.

Gypping the Exhibitor

with Inferior Prints is not necessary with Exchanges who faithfully use

Liquefied Film Waxing Process

Corrects Brittle and Foul Film Stock

Exhibitors should not be held responsible for Film Damages, if new prints are just merely waxed at the sprocket holes. Emulsion Deposits will scratch any print and Lack of Moisture, caused by High Amperage, Hot Operating Booths, Hot Climates, will rob a print of the strength necessary to withstand the strain of the Projector. The results are Ripped and Torn Sprocket Holes.

Put the blame upon unprotected prints for Film Damages and not upon the Operator, the Projector, or Poor Film Stock.
Exhibitors—Insist upon your film being processed with Liquefied Film Wax.

Albany

TWO important changes occurred during the past week along Film Row, when H. C. Bissell, who has been a salesman in the Universal exchange, was named as manager, succeeding Sigbert Wittman, who has returned to Philadelphia. Mr. Bissell is well known throughout the entire territory. At the local Pathe exchange, Leon Medem, who came here from Minneapolis several months ago, as a salesman, was promoted to manager, succeeding Charles Stombaugh, who has been handling the exchange for the past year, and who has been transferred to the home office. Mr. Stombaugh leaves hosts of friends in Albany, who will regret his departure.

There were many visitors, and incidentally buyers along Film Row during the past week. These included A. W. Goodman, of the Orpheum, in Utica; F. C. Chase, of Pine Plains, and Fred Shelley, of Amsterdam, as well as Mrs. L. L. Connors, of the Victory, in Cambridge. John Augello, of the Family, in Utica, was also in town. John Mattice, who runs the Novelty, in Middleburg, also dropped in and was accompanied by his brother, who has been in a local hospital for some little time.

Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy theatre, in Troy, declares that the most honest person in all Troy, was found last week in a woman who had picked up a lady's ring at the theatre and forgetting to turn it in as she left, wrote in later saying that the owner could have the ring upon proving the property. Mrs. Roberts, who had been in New York City for some time past, visiting her parents, is once more back in Troy, and presiding over the box office.

The dance contest, which Jake Golden has been featuring at Harmanus Bleecker Hall, in Albany, proved so successful that Joe Saperstein is now putting them on two nights a week at the Griswold, in Troy, along with pictures.

Jay Means, new chairman of the Missouri unit of the M. P. T. O. Kansas and Missouri.

J. H. MacIntyre, manager for Famous Players here, was the guest of honor, at a dinner at the Hotel Hampton, the other night, given by the Albany Film Board of Trade, of which Mr. MacIntyre has been president for several months past. During the evening, Mr. MacIntyre was presented with a handsome traveling set, with Herman Stearn, local manager for F. B. O., making the remarks.

Patrick Quinlan, who runs the Ideal theatre in Chateaugay, has named his granddaughter after Colleen Moore, and upon writing the well-known star to that effect, has received a letter from Miss Moore, as well as a fine photograph.

Mrs. Carpenter will open her theatre in Lake George village on May 16, and later will be joined by her son-in-law, who is in vaudeville, and who will assist her during the remainder of the summer.

The Board of Trade of Schoharie has decided to run open air pictures one night a week during the coming summer, as a means of attracting attention to the village and incidentally bolstering up business with the merchants.

The Rialto, in Frankfort, which was taken over some time ago by Tom Dooley, has closed according to a report current along Film Row.

Mrs. Benjamin Stern, wife of the assistant manager of the Troy theatre, and son, will leave shortly for Atlantic City, where she will spend the summer with her parents.

There is a prospect that there will be a joint meeting of the Albany and Buffalo zone committees the latter part of this month at some point convenient to both. At this meeting a set of by-laws will be adopted that will permit the two committees to work in unison and to the best possible advantage of exhibitors.

Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, head of the Schine circuit and likewise president of the Albany Zone Committee, is the only exhibitor from this part of the state, attending the Milwaukee convention.

According to Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, who has five theatres, three of which are located in towns having daylight saving, there came a 25 per cent slump in receipts at these three theatres the moment daylight saving became effective. Mr. Fisher's house in Ticonderoga, however, is doing exceptionally well. In fact so much so that Mr. Fisher expressed himself as surprised the other day but said that it was most pleasant. He is using serials one night a week in all of his theatres.

Ben Young, of the firm of Whitney and Young, erecting a new house in Ilion, intends that his patrons shall have all sorts of amusement. There will be pictures, while in another section of the block in course of erection, and which will be open in the fall, there will be a dance hall, billiard rooms and bowling alleys.

S. N. Burns, Jack Krause, and Robert Mochrie, together with the president, will constitute the Board of Directors of the Albany Film Board of Trade.

Julius J. Byck, who has been running the Rudolph theatre, in Tannersville for the past ten years, has arranged an elaborate anniversary program, celebrating the fifteenth year of the theatre, the program running from May 2 until June 6. Mr. Byck has put out an attractive booklet of many pages, giving the pictures that will be presented each day during the month. Mr. Byck is deaf and dumb, but despite the fact is one of the ablest theatre managers in this part of New York state.

Ben Apple, of the King, in Troy, is doing no bowling whatever this spring, and will probably not be seen upon the alleys much before next fall or until such time as he recovers fully from injuries to his leg, sustained last fall.

Mrs. Tony Veiller, wife of the manager of the Lincoln theatre in Troy, is recovering from the effects of a recent operation and will probably be able to leave the Samaritan hospital in Troy within another week.

On account of daylight saving, split weeks are now prevailing at both the Troy and Lincoln theatres, although with cool weather during the past week, there was some pick up in business.

Leland F. Benger is the new organist at the Empire in Glens Falls. According to Oscar Perrin, manager of the house, the organ is scoring a great hit and many people have told him that they prefer it to the orchestra.

W. W. Mase, of Prattsville, who operates a theatre there is planning to open shortly the Hippodrome in Gilboa, and run that theatre until such time as the village is wiped out of existence through the construction of a huge reservoir there.

Langdon Burks, exploitation manager for Universal, accompanied H. C. Bissell, local manager, to Chicago this past week, where they are quartered at the Hotel Blackstone and attending the convention there. Herman Stearn, local manager for F.B.O., is also in Chicago, attending the convention.

There were a large number of employees of local exchanges at the Arbor Hill theatre in Albany, the other night, when a representative of the Eastman Kodak company gave a most instructive talk on the care that should be exercised in the shipment of film and likewise that can come through careless operation in the projection room.

Alex Sayles, manager of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany,, is making a name for himself these days in the clever way he is handling the preparation of newspaper copy for all three theatres operated by C. H. Buckley. Mr. Sayles was formerly connected with one of the Albany newspapers.

The Mark Strand, in Albany, where broadcasting is done two nights a week, from seven until seven-thirty through WGY, has installed an illuminated sign used in front of the orchestra while the broadcasting is going on and announcing the fact to the patrons.

Minnesota

CROCKETT BROWN, owner of the Grand theatre at Nashwauk, Minnesota, loaned his theatre Easter Sunday to the Methodist church for the Easter services. The Methodist church ordinarily has a moderate crowd in attendance upon its services, but on Easter Sunday, when the services were conducted in the Grand, the house was packed.

The Gem theatre at Hill City, Minnesota, was re-opened recently, having been closed for several weeks, since the death of A. L. Abrahamson, owner of the property. R. L. Abrahamson, brother of A. L., is in charge of the property for Mrs. Abrahamson and has leased the building and fixtures to George Keenan, Jr., son of the Hill City superintendent of schools. Young Keenan is a hustling business man, just home from the university where he has been taking dental work, and should prove a good manager for the Gem. Keenan has taken the place on a monthly rental basis with the privilege to buy at any time he feels disposed to do so.

Buffalo

FROM office boy to vice-president. That is the romantic career of Vincent R. McFaul, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, who after a quarter century of faithful service has just been elected vice-president of the Shea Amusement company of the Queen City of the Lakes, succeeding the late Henry Carr. Mr. McFaul started in 25 years ago as office boy for Mr. Shea in his old Garden vaudeville theatre. Later he became treasurer of the house. Then when Mr. Shea took over the big Park theatre in Court street and named it Shea's Court Street theatre, Mr. McFaul was appointed treasurer there. He remain at this post many years. His next step upward was his appointment to the management of the Criterion theatre which Mr. Shea and Paramount operated for a few years before it was razed to make way for a business structure soon to be built. When Harold B. Franklin was called from the management of Shea's Hippodrome to assume the directorship of the Famous Players-Lasky theatre department, Mr. McFaul was named managing director of the big Buffalo picture palace and he has made a wonderful success of the institution since taking over the reins. As a reward for his long and faithful service the company has now named him a vice president and it is understood that when Mr. Shea's mammoth new Buffalo theatre opens early in 1926, Mr. McFaul will be seen in the manager's office. A square-shooter, quiet in manner, unostentatious and above all, a hard worker, Mr. McFaul is one of the most popular exhibitors in the state. He is treasurer of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y., Inc.

Gerald K. Rudulph, former manager of the Buffalo Fox exchange, has arrived in the city to lay a barrage of publicity for the coming of Tom Mix on Tuesday, May 19, accompanied by Tony, the wonder horse. Tom will also visit Niagara Falls. Plans are being made by Branch Manager Bill Rowell for a dinner in his honor, probably at the new Hotel Statler. Mrs. Mix and daughter Thomasina will also be in the party.

As ordered by Justice Hinkley, a permit has been issued to Simon Wertheimer to build a motion picture theatre at 1386 Hertel avenue at a cost of $100,000. Mr. Wertheimer plans to begin work on the structure at once.

At a meeting of Kenmore folks the other night, plans for the new theatre being built in the town were O. Ked and the selling of stock for the community picture house was declared to be a worthwhile proposition.

The Palace theatre in Olean has been re-opened by the Bordonaro brothers. This house was damaged by fire several months ago. It has been remodeled and redecorated. Pictures and vaudeville is the new policy. The Palace is a link in the Affiliated Theatres corporation chain.

A film to aid the Rochester Charity Chest campaign is being shown in 27 motion picture theatres in Kodak Town this week. The showing is made possible through the co-operation of the Rochester exhibitors. Jules Greenstone, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has arranged the following schedule: Eastman week, beginning May 10; Regent, Piccadilly, Fay's, Victoria, Strand, Grand, Empire, Temple, May 10, 11, 12 and 13; Astor, Clinton, Empress, Hudson, Jefferson, Lynhurst, Lyric, Lincoln, May 14, 15, 16; Murray, Palace, Park, Plaza, Family, Plymouth, Princess, Pullman, Rose Garden, May 17, 18, 19. The Howell Trucking company delivered the film to the various houses without charge.

Mike Dillon, operator at Shea's Court street theatre for 20 years or so, dropped dead the other night on his way home from the theatre. Mr. Dillon was a charter member of Buffalo Operators' Union, 233.

Sydney Samson, manager of the Bond Photoplays exchange and former president of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo is sporting a beautiful Gruen platinum wrist watch presented to him on the occasion of his retiring from the executive office of the board after serving three years.

Eugene A. Pfeil, manager of the Circle theatre, has taken to emulating the Prince of Wales. Gene goes over to the Delaware Park meadows all dressed up by Hoot Gibson and rides a mean broncho around the field. To date Gene has put over some great stunts, most of them consisting of sliding off the horse to the greensward far below. Gene is considering seriously of sticking to his flivver which is a trifle less strenuous.

William A. Calihan, general manager of the Regorson corporation is the new president of the Rochester Theatrical Managers' association. Other new officers are: Floyd J. Meneiley, vice-president, Howard Shannon, secretary and Herbert C. Kelley, treasurer.

Colonel Howard F. Brink, manager of the Buffalo Educational office, is now driving a new Willys-Knight Six sedan. He looks like J. P. Morgan when he gets behind the wheel. The colonel has equipped the car with everything but the kitchen sink and he is thinking of putting in an ice box. The colonel must be gathering in the business in trunk loads.

Manager Bill Rowell of Fox journeyed to the Milwaukee convention. The story is out that both Bill and J. Emerson Dickman, the latter the Fox salesman de luxe, were both pinched in New York recently while attending the Fox pow wow. The charge was parking cars in prohibited spaces. Through the influence of Bill Mahoney it is said that both got off easy, but the laugh comes here. Bill was soaked only one dollar while the judge drew eight iron men from Emmy's wad.

H. E. Hughes of the F. B. O. sales staff won the grand prize in the recent F. B. O. three months sales drive. Harry Dixon, branch manager, journeyed to Chicago last week-end for the company's convention.

Manager F. J. A. McCarthy is feeling pretty good these days. The Buffalo First National exchange is in third place in the nation-wide campaign for play dates—which is going some.

Harold Lloyd Beecroft has resigned from the F. N. sales staff to accept a position as Syracuse representative for Metro-Goldwyn.

Herman Lorence, manager of the Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, is jamming 'em these days with his picture-vaudeville policy. The house is crowded every night, with much of the business coming from across the border. The Canadians appreciate the liberal policy at the Bellevue.

Canada

CHARLES J. STRAW, manager of the Starland theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, for years, became manager of the Strand theatre at Brandon, Manitoba, on May 4, the Strand being one of the largest house in Manitoba. Mr. Straw took with him from Winnipeg Walter Dolman, for the past two years the organist of the Winnipeg Starland. Incidentally, Mr. Dolman has been famous for years in Winnipeg as an organist. Going to Winnipeg from Detroit about 10 years ago, Mr. Dolman first played at the Province Theatre. Three years ago he went to the College Theatre when that house was opened and for the past two years he has presided at the console of the Starland.

Manager Tom Logan had a mob around the lobby of the Capitol Theatre, London, Ontario, all during the week of May 4 because of a special lobby exhibit consisting of one of the first Ford models ever to be built. This was a Model A machine of two-cylinder type and it was built in 1902, 23 years ago. This Ford was driven to the theatre under its own power for the display and Manager Logan secured plenty newspaper space because of the stunt.

The Moulin Rouge, one of the oldest of moving picture theatres in Canada, situated at St. Catherine and Amherst Streets, Montreal, is to be replaced by a large new office building, according to an announcement at Montreal on May 7. The Moulin Rouge had been operated by Independent Amusements, Limited, Montreal, along with various modern cinemas and L. E. Quimet was identified with the theatre in early days, Mr. Quimet becoming a film distributor later, holding the Pathe franchise for Canada. The Moulin Rouge was one of the landmarks of moving picture activities in the Dominion but demolition has already started and the new office structure will be finished by next January.

The Wychwood Theatre, 1354 Bathurst Street, Toronto, a neighborhood house of prominence in Toronto for years, was sold under the auctioneer's hammer on May 6 to a Mr. Magee for $11,800. It is the intention of Mr. Magee to make various improvements in the building which occupies a frontage of 28 feet six inches with a depth of 130 feet. The sale was made by Henry J. Jack Flannery, formerly attached to the local Universal office was one of the delegates to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer convention held at the Coronado Hotel, St. Louis, Monday and Tuesday, May 4 and 5. He is with M.-G. M. at Kansas City.

Ed Fellis of the Orpheum, Hillsboro, Ill., was recently elected an assistant supervisor for his township, being one of three Republicans who stopped the Democratic landslide in a normally Democratic balliwick. Ed came in to tell the boys along the Row all about his victory.

Contracts have been let for a motion picture theatre and store building at 5,500-08 Landsdowne avenue, St. Louis. The house will cost $50,000. The building will be two stories, 125 by 149 feet. The owners are K. Davis and A. Dezinio, 5444 Botanical avenue. The architect is J. B. Catanzaro and F. Davis, contractor.

The Paramount and Fox "baseball" teams are scheduled to cross bats in a 9-inning travesty entitled "The National Game; How it Should Not be Played" at Forest Park Saturday, May 16. The Paramount bunch, back from their jaunt to the Coast are all pepped up, but the Fox aggregation promise to take some of that stuff out of them.

Louis Lang is again in charge of the Family Theatre on Shaw avenue, St. Louis.

Jack Storey, general manager for Pathe was a visitor to the local exchange on Thursday and Friday of the past week. From here he dropped down to Joplin for a visit with the old folks. Joplin was formerly his stamping ground.

Floyd Lewis, district manager for Associated Exhibitors has gone to the Milwaukee convention.

William De Frenne, manager of the Louisville, Ky., Paramount office, who has been in St. Louis recuperating from illness is about ready to get back into harness. Prior to being promoted to the Louisville managership he was attached to the local Paramount office.

Visitors of the week were: Pete Sikes, Highland, Ill.; Tom Reed, Duquoin, Ill.; Jimmy Clayton, wife and baby, West Frankfort, Ill.; C. Bradley, Red Bud, Ill.; and Jim Reilly, Alton, Ill.

Kansas City

WHEN the task of exploiting something is left to Gus Eyssell, treasurer of the Newman theatre, Kansas City, he usually does a good job of it. Last week the Kansas City American Association baseball club opened the season on the home lot. Mr. Eyssell lost no time in sending out his cameraman for pictures and issuing invitations to both the Kansas City and Toledo teams to be his guests at the theatre that night. It was worth fair space in all newspapers, drawing many baseball fans.

"Just tell the world that I'm going to do some loafing, that I was not born in France, but Pittsburgh," said Adolphe Menjou, movie villain, in Kansas City last week.

Accompanying Mr. Menjou, who was on his way to Washington and New York, were Mrs. Menjou and Alice Joyce.

The deal, whereby Universal takes over the Hostettler chain of theatres in the Kansas City territory, has been definitely closed, according to W. E. Truog, Universal district manager. It has not been definitely determined when the transfer will be made, it was said.

An office in Kansas City has been opened by the International Booking Office at 315 Shubert theatre building. W. T. Price, formerly with Selznick, has been made business manager of the organization, which will specialize in prologues for motion picture theatres. C. F. Foye is general manager.

A deed recorded in Kansas City Friday revealed the purchaser of the fee title to the Pantages theatre lobby to be the Gary Realty Company of Kansas City. The theatre tower and parts of the theatre on the narrow strip comprising the lobby were estimated to represent a building cost of $200,000.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; F. G. Weary, Farris theatre, Richmond, Mo.; Charles Sears, Sears Circuit, Nevada, Mo.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.; L. M. Miller, Miller theatres, Wichita, Kas.; C. C. Christian, Beyer theatre, Excelsior Springs, Mo.

A drive to reinstate every member who is behind in dues will be begun by the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, according to C. E. Cook, business manager, who is contemplating another trip through the territory.

"We will give each exhibitor a fair chance to come in, in accordance to the resolution adopted at the recent convention, before we drop him," said Mr. Cook. "But exhibitors are to be asked only once to come into the organization—and that means once."

Kansas City exchanges were doing a brisk business, as usual, last week. Louis Reichert, P. D. C. branch manager, returned from the territory with an optimistic outlook on life in general, as did C. E. Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn branch manager, only the latter returned from a convention of his company in New York. A large Kansas City delegation is planning to attend the Universal convention in Chicago. C. E. Mayberry, P. D. C. district manager, was a business visitor in Kansas City, as was Paul Kohner, representative for Carl Laemmle. H. J. Chapman has been promoted from Universal city salesman in Kansas City to branch manager of the Sioux Falls, S. D., office.

During the past two weeks the Majestic Theatre, Inc., of Madill, Okla., has been thoroughly renovated and remodeled. Messrs. Lawrence have made their house one of the most beautiful in Southern Oklahoma. French doors, mirrors, and other additions have been made and the floors recarpeted. The Majestic is advertised as the coolest place in town during the summer months.

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Limitations of Costs of Theatre Building

Analysis Necessary to Determine Investment Justified for Given Project

By H. Robins Burroughs, Theatre Engineer

BUILDING a theatre is a problem which may be thoroughly analyzed from every point of view before operations are begun but, in the majority of cases, this fact is not recognized nor advantage of it taken. The usual prospective builder formulates an idea that he would like to construct and perhaps operate a theatre in a certain general locality, and, with this as a starting point, begins to unravel the various ramifications through which he is likely to be led by the usual line of thought. The first thing, of course, to be considered is the feasibility of the proposition, whether or not there is evidence of a demand for a theatre in any given location. Very frequently even this may not be considered. It may be in the mind of the prospective builder that, should a certain theatre be constructed, the people will come to it from somewhere and somehow; he does not give sufficient thought as to whether or not there are sufficient people in the surrounding community to support the theatre. He may also fail to take into account the amount of expenditure that any given community will justify. As a result, the entire operation is conceived, executed and built without any particular attention being given to an analysis of the subject from any particular point of view.

Proper Procedure for Developing Project

There are many different ways in which an idea to build any given operation may be originated, depending on the type or experience of the owner or promoter. In any event, there is only one proper way to proceed in the development of any sort of construction which may be prompted in the mind of the owner or builder. In the first place, seek a location which has a potential demand for an operation of this character rather than to construct a theatre in the hope of creating a demand. Too frequently the latter method is adopted and the results are usually not satisfactory. The demand will usually be self-supporting and whether or not a theatre is built has little influence on the actual requirements as they may exist. The difficulty usually is that the demand has usually been satisfied by other theatres having been previously built in or near the same community, and this fact should be taken carefully into consideration, for one serious source of error is to overbuild any given locality. This is particularly bad, not only for the prospective builder but it also has a far-reaching effect on all activities along the same line. It has been said that, where a new theatre is introduced in a community which is already being well-supplied, the new theatre will draw the business away from the other theatres and take the leading place in that location. This may or may not be true; it will be true if the new place is built on a more elaborate and extensive scale than the preceding ones. This element has a tendency to create an attraction which out-balances the others to the extent that it remains a positive drawing card. On the other hand, such a proposition is likely not to reach its fullest success for the reason that there will always be a certain amount of loyalty and prestige retained by the original installations.

Investor Can Only Afford to Spend Given Sum

After all, so far as this phase of the proposition is concerned, the investor can only afford to spend a certain amount, and if he overruns that amount he is making a serious mistake. It, therefore, behooves the prospective builder to study carefully any move he makes in this direction and to rely more particularly on his own resources than on others which have already been established. This is one of the features of competition which the theatre owner should actually guard against. Too frequently this error has been made in the past but fortunately the tendency appears now to be to endeavor to keep clear of any such interferences. Consequently, after a preliminary analysis has been given, a decision should be reached which will lead the prospective builder along the line of least resistance and into space where he will have a more or less free line of action.

Ways and Means of Financing Theatre Projects

The theatre investor is usually constantly looking around for something along the line in which he is interested, which usually means new locations for theatres. When this has been found and preliminary analysis been made, which shows that it will pass the usual requirements, the question of finance then arises and very frequently it it found that the necessary amount is not forthcoming from the prospective builder. It is, therefore, necessary to enlist other interests for the purpose of finance and the greatest difficulty usually encountered is this problem of finance. The writer constantly receives numerous inquiries from prospective builders throughout the country regarding ways and means of financing these different operations. A majority lose sight of the fact that outside interests are not likely to become fascinated with the building or owning of a small theatre in a small community, even though the proposition may show up well from an investment point of view; particularly where the investor becomes the owner. This is not sufficient to justify outside money being placed in isolated places. The success of a theatre depends very largely on the ability of the management with a few exceptions and consequently financial interests are not inclined to risk their money even with a possibility of large returns where the returns are dependent largely upon a personal equation.

Financial Risk Dependent on Successful Operation

It can readily be conceived that, should a loan be made by any financial institution, either in the shape of a first mortgage or in a bond issue, the element of risk there is entirely dependent upon the success of the theatre for the reason that the building is so constructed that it can not be used to advantage for any other purpose. This is a very important point that should be carefully considered by the prospective builder or owner. He should thoroughly realize that, whereas the proposition may be perfectly sound from an investment point of view, yet there is absolutely no good reason why money, other than that contributed by the owners, should be invested in isolated communities. This, of course, does not apply to the large operations in large cities but it does apply to numerous operations which are constantly going on throughout the country. It should be noted that where a prospective owner has not sufficient equity to finance the entire operation, the best plan for him to adopt is to endeavor to interest one or more other individuals in the same community to whom he could portray the same picture which he sees in his own mind as to the outcome of such an operation. It is too much to expect for any one person to build, own and control an operation involving a substantial amount of money with only a small investment on his part. It is only fair and proper that, if others are brought into the proposition and thereby assist him to put over the proposition, which he otherwise would be unable to do, they participate on an equitable basis. The usual tendency of the originator is along the desire to control and this may even be done with certain arrangements with the other participating parties and to the effect that he may be given an option to buy out their shares with a payment of a proper return for the use of their money. This arrangement of course depends upon the abilities of the proposition to make sufficient returns to permit of an amortization of this character.

Payments on Mortgages Should Be Heavy at First

The usual proposition will stand a reasonable reduction each year on outstanding mortgages and it is frequently advisable to make the payments comparatively heavy for the first few years until the indebtedness is reduced to a safe percentage of investment.

The writer has had occasion to analyze propositions of this sort for various localities and has attempted to finance these propositions from various angles. Large operations can usually be handled from a financial point of view to a good advantage, particularly when they are located in the center of activity or theatrical districts of large cities. In this case, it is possible to obtain substantial mortgage money, especially where the theatre is combined with a fair percentage of commercial property. On the other hand, where the theatre is in a small town, the problem, as stated above, becomes practically one of community finance.

Particular Attention for Expenditures of Production Costs

After the proposition has been financed, particular attention should be given to the amount of expenditure of cost of production on any given operation. This is vitally important and should be thoroughly analyzed and carefully considered in the beginning. The usual mistake made in this connection is that the average project is overbuilt and this applies to the large ones as well as the smaller ones. The only safeguard against this is a thorough and competent analysis, based on reliable data and set up on paper, comprising all items of income and expenditure, down to and including the probable net income. This statement should show accurately the actual amount of money that can safely be spent on the operation; in other words, it should show what the traffic will bear.

When this has been properly done and the amount of expenditure determined, it should form a basis for operation and in the execution these figures should be closely followed and not exceeded unless for some good reason, which has been previously studied and decided upon. If this is done, there will be no chance for the proposition to become overbuilt or, in other words, to spend more than should be spent.

There are several avenues of action which contribute to this all-important point of consideration. It should here be noted that, in a great majority of cases, the estimated cost is overrun in the actual completion in percentages varying from twenty-five to one hundred per cent. There may be several reasons for this. It may be due to lack of knowledge on the part of the architect or engineer or even the owner, who prepares the preliminary estimate. Assuming that the required amount is determined by actual bids from contractors and that the cost of the amount of equipment required is obtainable within close limits, it would seem that the final expenditures were definitely determined. Such is by no means the case. It may be found during the construction that the plans and specifications are incomplete, or the contractor may have sufficient persuasive powers to induce the owners to make innumerable changes, which always involve additional expenditures and cost. This is a common source of error which usually leads to a profitable termination on the part of the contractor. On the other hand, it leads to a very uncomfortable position on the part of the owner, due to the fact that this additional amount has not been provided for and probably is not readily available. In order to eliminate all possibility of complications of this character, it is necessary that full and accurate consideration be given to the entire problem at the beginning; that is before the contracts are let. The statement of investment which has previously been made should accurately show all the factors contained in the operation and no appreciable divergences should be necessary or be allowed. The statements should show the amount which has been set aside for construction and which should

M. Shea Building $2,000,000 Theatre Seating 4,000, at Buffalo

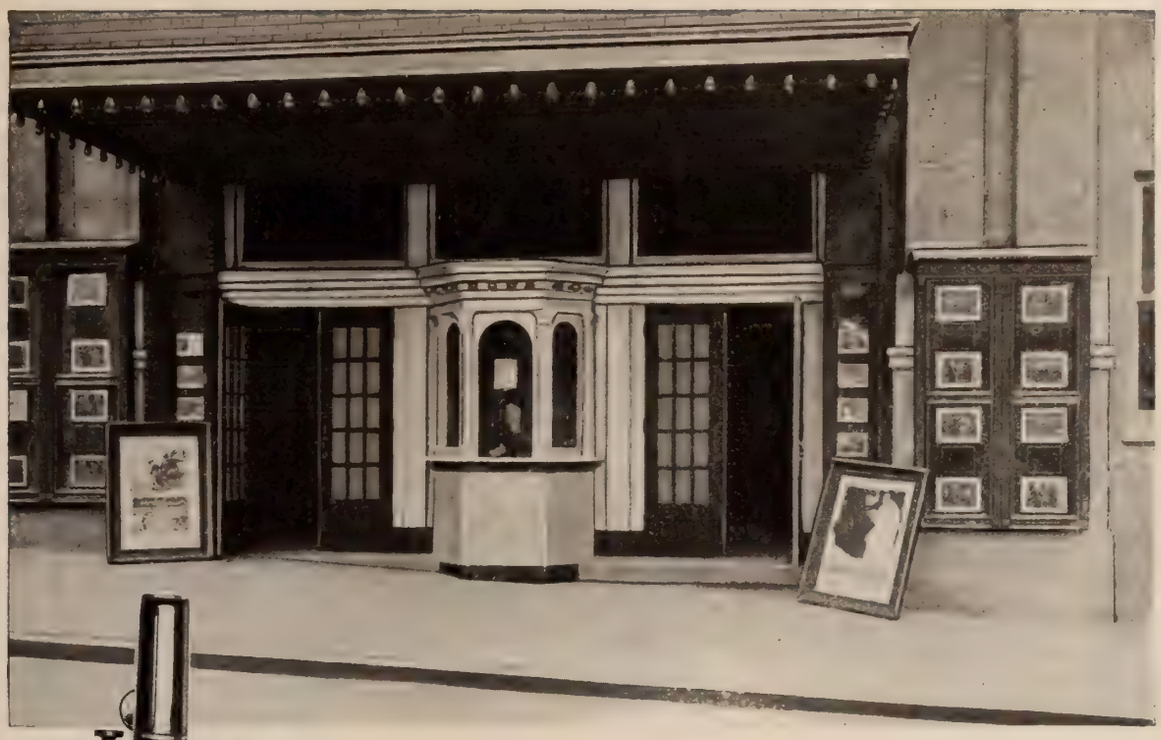
MICHAEL SHEA'S Christmas present to the city of Buffalo is going to be a $2,000,000 motion picture theatre with a seating capacity of 4,000, a magnificent temple of amusement comparing with the finest theatres in the world and in which will be incorporated innovations, novelties, comforts and conveniences that will set a new standard in the entertainment world.

The theatre will be known as Shea's Buffalo theatre. It will be Mr. Shea's contribution to Greater Buffalo and it is this veteran showman's desire to build a house that will never be outgrown by the Queen City of the Lakes. Mr. Shea's name has been synonymous with high class entertainment for over half a century and it has been his life dream to build a theatre of magnificent proportions, representing the last word in modern convenience and luxury—and artistic triumph in which the motion picture will be presented in the acme of perfection. This dream is about to come true, three shifts of workmen are endeavoring to carry out the promise of the contractors to deliver the house to Mr. Shea ready for the reception of the public December 25, 1925.

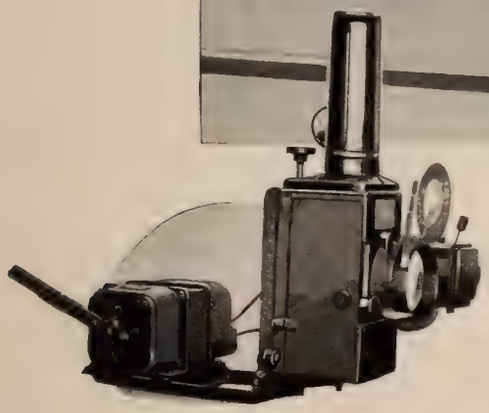
C. W. and George L. Rapp of Chicago, nationally known, are the architects, John Gills & Sons of Cleveland are the general contractors.

The entrances will be on both Main and Pearl streets, a grand foyer running from the entrance to the auditorium across the rear of the house to Pearl street. The front of the theatre will be elaborate in design, rising almost 100 feet. There will be a large marquise on the sides of which will be the interchangeable attraction signs. A large electric sign with the name "Shea's Buffalo" will be placed at the side of the front elevation, rising 66 feet and having a width of eight feet. Directly above the marquise will open a mammoth plate glass and ornamental iron window, surmounted by a 40 foot parapet in Gothic design and constructed of terra cotta. There will be elaborate designs on the entire front which will be of white terra cotta.

Entering a vestibule, 22′ x 30′, from Main street through five double bronze doors one will come to a ticket office placed in the center of the vestibule, which will be of marble, six feet by five feet by seven feet high. Large frames will be placed in the marble walls of the vestibule. Five more bronze and leaded glass doors will lead from the vestibule into the lobby which will be 80 feet long and about 30 feet wide. Large arches will extend up each side of the lobby and the walls will be large mirrowed windows. The grand marble staircase will lead to the first balcony floor from the rear of the lobby to the right, going in from Main street. Under this staircase will be the manager's office.



From the lobby one will enter the foyer which will extend along the entire length of the auditorium to Pearl street where there will be another elaborate entrance, marquise, ticket offices, etc. This foyer will be 22 feet wide by 90 feet long. The foyer will be separated from the auditorium proper by large glass and bronze doors. An arcade will run down each side of the auditorium and one will entrance the seats from this arcade through mammoth arches of great architectural beauty. At each end of this arcade will be two beautiful boxes, two stories high containing sixteen seats each and being unusually original in design and pleasing to the eye.



The stage will be 32 feet deep with a 66 foot opening and a proscenium height of 50 feet. There will be a lift for an orchestra of fifty. By means of this lift the musicians will be able to enter and take their places without noise or disturbing the audience, being raised into concert position the same as the organ console will raise the organist when he plays on the organ which will be one of the features of the house.

The lighting throughout will be indirect with some 10,000 incandescent bulbs being used in the troughs. There will be 2,000 lights in the sign in front of the house alone, 1,000 on each side. The marquise on Main street and the one on Pearl street will be flooded with lights.

There will be a main dome 62 feet long and 48 feet wide and a smaller dome near the proscenium arch 14 feet wide and 47 feet long.

The projection department will be one of the finest as well as the most up-to-date in the country. It will be located at the top of the rear of the balcony. It will be 34 feet long and 12 feet wide and will be equipped with the latest type projection machines, spotlights, stereopticons, etc. There will be a rheostat room, store room, fan room and laboratory off the projection room, which has been laid out with great care. The length of throw will be 134 feet.

Save Money with Incandescent Projection

Many small and medium-sized motion picture theatres are using a costly arc for projection when they could achieve as good results with the lower priced incandescent projector.

In the majority of theatres, G-E Incandescent Lamp Projectors will give good light on the screen at half the current cost and with added ease of operation. G-E engineers can give unprejudiced advice to exhibitors since the General Electric Company builds both arc and incandescent equipment and has had broad experience in applying both. Address the nearest G-E Office.

The development of the MAZDA lamp for motion picture projection has not only saved money for exhibitors but has greatly improved working conditions for the projectionist and enabled him to secure better screen results. There are no fumes, dust or excessive heat from a MAZDA lamp and operation is simplified, no adjustments being necessary after the machine is started.

Inquiries and Comments

Current Flicker, of A. C. Arcs

NO DOUBT many a projectionist of to-day, on a summer's evening during his boyhood days, when playing with "the gang" on a street corner illuminated by an arc lamp, must have noticed the curious "cartwheel" effect produced by rapidly whirling a stick around in a circle.

He may have observed, without knowing its cause, a similar effect when, going to the "nickelodeon" of former days, he waved his arm to a pal on the opposite side of the house, whom he recognized when the back glare from the "silver sheet" momentarily lighted up the theatre after the "End of Reel I" had flashed its message from the screen.

This later day projectionist would have been considerably interested at that time in knowing that the curious effects then observed are closely related to the projection of motion pictures and where alternating current arcs are used as the light source, this phenomenon is the cause of much annoyance in that it often produces a noticeable "waning Illumination" on the screen.

This waxing and waning of illumination, so to speak, is seldom the same in any two theatres, and this fact tends to make the reason for it still more obscure.

It is not at all surprising that this is so, when it is learned that the type and condition of screen surface, the intensity of illumination on the screen, the size of carbons and amperage used, the projector and speed, type of shutter, all help to determine the degree of this flickering on the screen.

It was shown in the preceding articles, on flicker, how the screen surface and intensity of illumination on the screen govern the shutter frequency at which flicker on the screen vanishes. It was also shown that where the flicker range is less than 100 per cent, the vanishing-flicker frequency is lower than for 100 per cent flicker range.

In an A. C. arc, in spite of the fact that the current in the electrode is zero 120 times each second, the craters are never entirely dark, since the craters never have the time to cool off. This represents quite an advantage in the way of flicker reduction, since if the craters cooled off entirely each time when the current passed through the zero point, the resultant flicker on the screen would be considerably more noticeable.

Double Frequency Flicker

In analyzing the flicker from an A. C. when used for motion picture projection, it is necessary to bear in mind the fact that there are in reality two, and sometimes even three, separate and distinct flickers present on the screen at the same time.

Different conditions of "focusing" the arc result in different flicker conditions.

Two Flickers on Screen

At least two flickers are present at all times with an A. C. arc, and sometimes three (due to faulty work on the part of the projectionist, ordinarily). One of these results from the periodic interruptions of the projector beam, caused by the shutter, and the other is the result of the flickering illumination provided by all A. C. arcs.

The shutter flicker, taken by itself, may or may not be noticeable on the screen. This depends primarily upon the screen surface and the intensity of illumination.

The current flicker, taken by itself, would not be noticeable on the screen (where 60 cycle A. C. is used) under ordinary conditions.

These two combined, however, may result and, in fact, frequently do result, in a screen flicker which is not only noticeable but is often annoying and injurious to the eye.

Combining Flicker Frequencies

These two flickers are combined in much the same manner that radio waves are combined in the heterodyne system of receiving radio waves.

Suppose we take an example; a transmitting set is sending out radio signals at the rate of 50,000 waves per second. These waves are undamped. That is, the height (a measure of their intensity) remains the same and does not diminish in accordance with some predetermined law A crude illustration of a series of undamped waves is the alternating current wave form given off by an A. C. generator.

These radio waves are, in due time, picked up by a receiving set, but they are of such a high frequency (50,000) that they are not audible and so can not be used for signals.

The receiving set then generates a separate series of waves having a frequency either a trifle greater or a trifle less than the incoming waves. Suppose the receiving set generates waves having a frequency of 51,000 cycles per second.

These two sets of waves are then combined by the set with the result that certain parts of these two wave series act opposite to each other and hence wipe each other out, while other parts of the two wave series act together and build each other up.

The net result is that the final wave formed by these two sets of high frequency waves is of low frequency and is stronger than either of the individual waves. The resultant wave in this case would have a frequency of per second.

Now a wave of 1,000 cycles per second is audible to the ear and thus the telephone receivers would be acted on and reproduce the message.

Two A. C. Arc Flickers

Before considering the final result obtained by combining the shutter flicker with the arc current flicker, it is necessary to understand that in all the common forms of A. C. arcs there are two distinct flickers. One is formed by the flame passing between the electrodes and has a frequency of 120 cycles per second, and the other is formed by the incandescent electrodes (the craters) and has a frequency of 60 cycles per second.

The fact whether the flanel or top crater is focussed on the aperture makes a considerable difference in the way of flicker on the screen, as will be shown in succeeding articles.

No matter which is focussed the procedure is the same. The shutter frequency is combined with arc frequency (whether flame or crater) and the result is a new flicker wave having a lower frequency. Thus, if the shutter frequency is 54 (a three blade shutter making 18 revolutions per second) and the flame is focussed (60 cycle current) the resultant flicker wave would be 120—54=66 cycles per second.

Now a flicker wave of 66 cycles per second would not, under ordinary conditions, be visible on the screen, but the unfortunate part of it is the fact that the actual frequency of the flicker wave is not 66 but 12 cycles per second, and this easily visible.

Why this is so will be explained in the following article.

be sufficient to do the work in the manner specified and to obtain a satisfactory result. The preparation of the statement of investment contemplates that the personnel compiling it has the necessary experience and knowledge to definitely determine within a small radius what the actual requirements will be and the cost thereof. This is not as simple a matter as it may seem and the usual difficulty is that an attempt is made by inexperienced architects, engineers and owners to analyze a subject, which is beyond their reach. This always leads to the inevitable result that the propbsition costs more than was anticipated and as a result the actual expenditures greatly exceed the estimated. Again it should be noted that experience and knowledge of the subject is the only safeguard against unsatisfactory results. The necessary and proper experience cannot be gained by observation, hearsay or imagination; it comes only from actual experience, study and the ability to analyze a proposition from every point of view. The writer would therefore offer a word of caution to owners along this line; do not assume or take too much for granted, obtain the services of one who knows and consult with him on the subject before making a final decision. This line of thought cannot be overemphasized and is one that should be given the fullest consideration. It is a rather difficult problem for the reason that theatre construction involves a great number of different items, many of which are comparatively small but in the aggregate amount to considerable. It is, therefore, an easy matter to overlook certain features which should be included. If an attempt is made to compensate for omissions by making a certain allowance, the analysis becomes only approximate and unscientific.

The prospective owner or builder has only one real line of procedure. Unless he has had sufficient training and experience to qualify as an expert, he should obtain the services of one or more who have had the necessary training and experience. It will be found much cheaper in the end to do this, not only in the actual saving of cost but in the actual saving of time. The first thing then to do is to find and analyze the location, then prepare the statement of investment based on reliable data from which establish a budget, draw the plans and specifications so as to keep within this budget, and supervise the construction on the basis of the plans and specifications so as to allow no appreciable amount of extras. If this is done, the proposition should materialize as originally planned on paper and the net income should even closely parallel that determined by the original analysis.

The prima facia object in the majority of cases is the net return on investment and unless this is sufficient to justify the expenditure, the entire problem becomes a failure from an investment point of view. Too much stress can not be placed on this point; it is the ever-increasing error made in theatre construction and will continue to obtain where inexperience is the dominating factor.

Building a theatre is nothing more or less than a business proposition and can readily be analyzed as such if undertaken and handled along the proper lines by proper authority. The writer desires in conclusion to sound a warning in this respect and particularly recommends that this so-called budget system be adopted in any case where an appreciable amount of money is to be expended.

S. W. Taylor, Edenton, N. C. Will Open House in July

S. W. Taylor, of Edenton, N. C., who operates the Gem theatre, is planning to open his new house in July. The new theatre, which will cost approximately $55,000 is to be completely equipped in the most modern fashion from projection room to orchestra pit. It will be, when completed, one of the prettiest theatres in eastern North Carolina.

Theatre Construction

We are in a position to thoroughly analyse any theatre proposition from every point of view. We will prepare you a statement showing the probable net returns on investment, cost of construction and equipment and methods of finance. We also prepare plans and specifications and supervise the construction from inception to completion, turning the theatre over to you complete in every detail, ready to operate. Send us your proposition for analysis.

E. W. Werner Spending $150,000 to Remodel Warwick Theatre, St. Louis

ONE of Kansas City's largest suburban theatres, the Warwick, will undergo complete reconstruction. Day and night forces will be employed to complete the task in five months. More than $150,000 will be spent in making the theatre one of the best surburban houses in the Middle West, containing a seating capacity of 2,200, according to E. W. Werner, manager. This announcement comes on the heels of Mr. Werner's previously announced plans to construct the largest surburban house in the city, a $1,000,000 combination theatre and office building, at Broadway and Valentine road. The Warwick is located at 3927 Main st., six blocks from the site of the proposed new theatre, which will be known as the Werner.

Plans for rebuilding the Warwick followed the signing of a 95-year lease Saturday by Mr. Werner. Reconstruction of the theatre will begin not later than June 15, the theatre to be "dark" for five months. Only the side walls of the present structure, which is elaborate compared to many theatres, will be retained. The new building will be supported by a steel and concrete frame and will be 72 feet deeper than the present structure which is 235 feet in depth. The lease acquired by Mr. Werner includes a 60-foot strip of ground extending from Main to Walnut streets.

The main floor of the new building will contain 1,500 seats, an orchestra pit large enough for forty musicians and a stage ample for large prologues. A balcony will provides loge seats for 300 persons and 400 chairs, such as will be on the main floor, increasing the seating capacity to a total of 2,200. The seats will be of the usual width, being more than 20 inches broad.

A large entrance foyer will be finished in travertine stone and marble and there will be a separate exit lobby. An innovation here will be the "cry room" just off the main lobby and inside the theatre, where its occupants may witness the picture through the double plate glass partitions which will comprise the walls. The "cry room," of course, will be for fretful children and their parents.

The principal lobby, 25 feet deep and the width of the building, which will be distinguished from the entrance foyer, will be heavily carpeted and finished in dark walnut. From this room stairways will lead to a promenade, which will be an intermediate level between the main floor and the balcony.

The annual rental to be paid by Mr. Werner will be $8,000 net for the next ten years and $8,500 net for the remainder of the lease. Besides all carrying costs on the property, Mr. Werner also must pay income tax on the rent, according to the terms of the lease.

Standard Slide Orgologues Popular With Organists

Organists thruout the country who are using the new organ novelties entitled orgologues, report, it is claimed, that they go very big with the movie patrons, both young and old.

Orgologues comprise a set of from fifteen to thirty slides of a serious and comic nature, on different subjects, and tell a complete story. The following six releases are now ready: War is Hell, International Table D'Hote, Songs of the Species, A Little Tune and the Adverbs, Tunes for the Trades, Girls of Yesterday and Today.

The organists are very enthusiastic in their praise of these Orgologue novleties put out by the Standard Slide Corp., and many of the theatres are making them a real feature, about twice monthly at their individual theatres.

Orgologues give the organist an opportunity of displaying his trick stuff, and the better the organist, the bigger the Orgologues go over with the audience.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Friendly Enemies"—Prod. Dist. Corp. Colony, New York

Times: "Fashions may change and people may age and pass on, but Joe Weber and Lew Fields are still holding their own. Their names in electric lights are once again adding to the brightness of the Great White Way. Mr. Fields as the old native German delivers a memorable performance in this picture. It is pleasant to see Weber and Fields transferring their famous antics from stage to screen. The picture deserves credit for being a sympathetic presentation of an emotional crisis."

Mirror: "'Friendly Enemies' impersonated by those rare artists Weber and Fields merges from hilarious comedy to tearful comedy with an ease that starts you laughing while you wipe away a tear. It is corking entertainment."

Journal: "Weber and Fields are just as poignantly appealing on the screen as they have been for many years on the stage. All day long they swayed crowded houses through the whole gamut of emotions from profound pathos to hilarious comedy."

Telegraph: "Weber and Fields on the screen are a success. It is the kind of entertainment that makes you feel that you have seen something important. The supporting cast is exceptionally good."

Telegram-Mail: "The performance of this pair will come with all the force of a revelation to the younger set. Weber and Fields couldn't help being funny if they were dressed as angels."

American: "'Friendly Enemies' is a credit to the producers who made it and a reason why the Colony should make money this week."

Daily News: "Here is a picture we can embrace enthusiastically. Weber and Fields are wonderful movie actors."

Graphic: "Seldom have we such good advice to give as visit the Colony and see 'Friendly Enemies.' It will make you feel so good that you'll be apt to make friends of your enemies."

"Zander The Great"—Metro-Goldwyn. Capitol, New York

Daily News: "If Marion Davies doesn't elaborate on her gift of comedy, then she doesn't know her stuff, that's all. She is too clever for words. She has the comedienne field all to herself right now. Miss Davies is a sheer delight. The picture itself is strongly flavored with sentiment, romance, intrigue and comedy."

Evening World: "She (Marion Davies) gives a portrayal which is one of the best seen hereabouts in weeks. And this portrayal is all the more commendable in that it calls for comedy, pathos and melodrama, each of which she does remarkably well."

Graphic: "As a comedienne the lovely Miss Davies has few equals. In the present instance her talents have full opportunity.

John W. Krafft, who wrote the titles for "The Crackerjack, and is now collaborating on story and gags for the next Johny Hines production for First National.

The story runs from light comedy to tensely dramatic situations. . . . We can't give any higher praise than to say that in 'Zander the Great' Marion Davies repeats the triumph she achieved in 'Little Old New York.'"

Herald-Tribune: "Marion Davies is an inimitable comedienne. She is a female Charlie Chaplin. We believe that the picture will please most people, because it is filled with comedy, action, intrigue and love."

The World: "Miss Davies does some excellent acting. Master John Huff seemed an exceptionally appealing and accomplished child in the important role of Zander."

Times: "'Zander the Great' begins with touches of pathos and sunshine in a small place in New Jersey and winds up with an exciting hail of bullets in a Mexican hacienda.

Morning Telegraph: "Establishes Marion Davies as a comedienne of decided ability. The orphanage sequences of this picturization of the stage play are by far the best thing she has ever done and constitute the most interesting moments in the new picture."

Post: "Miss Davies succeeds in being very amusing, especially during the first part of the picture. The story has many Western scenes to help along in interest, and there is an element of suspense certain to keep a large number of any audience on pins and needles. Splendid light entertainment."

"The Crackerjack"—East Coast Films, Chicago

Tribune: "Good morning. There's a rollicking, hilarious, irresponsible, mirth provoking piece kicking up its heels at the neighborhood theatres. It is called 'The Crackerjack,' and Johnny Hines is Chief High Lively Minister of its ceremonies. The picture starts funny, continues funny, and ends funny. Even the announcement trailer—if an announcement preceding the film can be called a trailer—gets a laugh The entire production reminds you of some people you have known whose mere entrance can transform a dead party into a riot.

"When I tell you the plot concerns one of those Mexican revolutions comedy makers are so keen about, you'll probably look wise and think you know all about 'The Crackerjack.' Well, you're wrong, old dears—there's new stuff in this one."

"The Last Laugh"—Universal, Orpheum, Chicago

Tribune: "You must see the picture. It has no subtitles and is produced with such artistry that it needs none. There has never been greater acting in any picture, and I will almost say there has never been any as great. 'The Last Laugh' is one of the finest pictures I have ever seen. I wouldn't be surprised if I never again saw so perfect a production from every angle."

Evening American: "Perfect Picture—it is a proud boast. But possibly, why not? Surely, 'The Last Laugh' is a screen jewel, entitled to the most enthusiastic praise. It is brilliantly conceived and executed. If you wish to see movies at just about their best, you will hasten to the Orpheum Theatre."

Journal: "Have I intimated what I think 'The Last Laugh' is? Well, beyond a doubt, it is the greatest motion picture ever made. The Orpheum presents this miracle."

Post: "I believe it is the nearest to perfection of all the photoplays it represents."

Daily News: "'The Last Laugh' has arrived and is showing. No picture of the last year seemed to have so many people so interested that they wrote letters asking us, 'Is "The Last Laugh" coming or has it been and gone?' This is a hummer; the audiences enjoy it with chuckles."

"The Lady"—First National, Stanley, Philadelphia

Inquirer: "In 'The Lady' we have Norma Talmadge at her very finest. She puts her whole heart and soul in her work. She is humorous as a chorus girl, tragic as the sacrificing mother, and appealing as the cafe lady. 'The Lady' has been produced skilfully and intelligently."

Record: "A photo-drama of extraordinary interest. Norma Talmadge was in a role that made severe exactions upon the emotions, but she was more than equal to all the demands. She made of Polly Pearl a woman of extraordinary character. Graphic portrayal and dramatic power mark this production."

Public Ledger: "Norma Talmadge's new picture, 'The Lady' surpasses without a doubt, anything that she has done since the days of 'Smilin' Through.' 'The Lady,' is as tender, artistic and beautiful a characterization as has ever come to the screen."

North American: "'The Lady' is a picture of particular appeal to women. Norma Talmadge in the title role, wins new laurels as an emotional actress. It is indeed, the most moving piece of acting yet done by her. What gives it power and appeal is the unmistakable stamp of sincerity. Her performance goes far beyond conscious acting; it has the spark of spontaneous feeling."

Evening Ledger: "Hats off to 'The Lady.' It has been made into a first class picture. No small part of the credit for the success of the production is due to the acting of Norma Talmadge, in her best role since 'Secrets,' but one cannot overlook the good taste and common sense displayed by the director and scenarist. All the power and feeling of the play has been retained and even heightened on the screen. Miss Talmadge gives one the most convincing screen portrayals we have seen."

Evening Bulletin: "Audience wept at the Stanley Theatre yesterday, at the pathetic efforts of Norma Talmadge as Polly Pearl to be 'The Lady.' As in 'Secrets' the star portrays a role in which she passes from sprightly girlhood to gray-haired motherhood, but does a much finer piece of emotional acting. Must be seen to be appreciated."

"Sally"—First National, Aldine, Philadelphia

Inquirer: "A movie full of joy and gladness is 'Sally.' Colleen Moore is a delightful Sally. She does some excellent comedy work. Her antics with her dog, Custard, are extremely funny."

North American: "As made into a motion picture, 'Sally' is even more opulent than in the Ziegfeld musical comedy production. Colleen Moore has all the grace that Miss Miller possessed, with a great deal more humor and vivacity. There is an irresistible sympathetic appeal in this story. The star gives plenty of variety to her characterization. The scenes are given with ample color and realism. Leon Errol is hilariously amusing."

Record: "'Sally proved a surprise even to those who had expected a performance better than the usual. There was a new demonstration of Colleen Moore's rare ability as an actress, a new showing of a gracious personality that lent itself to both emotional and humorous tasks in a most engaging way. She made Sally a bit of humanity that was irresistible in everything she did. Scenically 'Sally' provides another surprise."

Public Ledger: "'Sally' has returned. After laying triumphant siege and winning a host of admirers a few years ago, she has set forth upon a new crusade—that of capturing the heart of the movie fan. A perfect incarnation of Sally. Leon Errol not only shares honors with Miss Moore, but gains some distinct personal ones."

Evening Ledger: "This 'Sally' is a good picture because it strikes an irresponsible comedy key and keeps it. Half of the picture is Leon Erroll and the other half is Colleen Moore, juggling the story between them with a burlesque comedy accent on his part and a human comedy gesture on hers."

Simplex

Point for Point -

You cannot buy a better Projector

There are thousands of Simplex projectors in use today — veterans of years of faithful service — that perform as smoothly as they did after their first year of operation.

It is that in-built quality — that characteristic of sturdiness — along with up-to-the-minute mechanical design that inevitably wins preference for the Simplex when maximum value is demanded.

Simplex quality is evidenced in many ways. You see it in the figures of operating costs — long life, unfaltering performance, minimum repair costs — and in the perfect manner in which pictures are projected.

Simplex projectors are smooth running, quiet and steady. They are simple to operate; adjustments can be made in a jiffy and replacement parts quickly and easily installed. It is rarely necessary to send a Simplex to a repair shop.

Many operators say the Simplex will outlive and outwork any other machine. Point for point, we know you cannot buy a better projector.

For catalogue and prices write The Precision Machine Company, Inc., 317 East 34th St., New York.

The name SIMPLEX on a Projector is your safe-guard and our pledge of efficient, enduring performance

What the New York critics think of "FRIENDLY

"Weber and Fields, that age-old team, are just as poignantly appealing on the screen as on the stage. In their first feature length photoplay they swayed crowded houses through the whole gamut of emotions, from profound pathos to hilarious comedy. In their every scene they warm the cockles of your heart." —EVENING WORLD

"The picture deserves credit for being a sympathetic presentation of an emotional crisis. It is pleasant to see Weber and Fields transferring their famous antics from stage to screen." —HERALD-TRIBUNE

"Weber and Fields in all their glory have transferred their famous arguments to the screen in a picturization of 'Friendly Enemies.'" —MORNING TELEGRAPH

"Weber and Fields are intent on running a pipe line into your heart. They couldn't help being funny if they were dressed as angels." —TELEGRAM-MAIL

"Audiences roar throughout 'Friendly Enemies.' It is an hilarious film. Both the famous comedians are excellent." —EVENING JOURNAL

"They (Weber and Fields) do it in their own inimitable style, merging from hilarious comedy to tearful drama with an ease that leaves you laughing even while you wipe away a tear. 'Friendly Enemies' is corking good entertainment." —THE MIRROR

"Weber and Fields are delightful. 'Friendly Enemies' is one of the pictures you will want to include in your shopping list of desirable entertainment." —N. Y. AMERICAN with

Weber and Fields

A GEORGE MELFORD PRODUCTION

"It is an enjoyable movie. The continuity writers have exercised great skill in transferring it to the screen and Weber and Fields are excellent."
—THE SUN

"Here is a picture we can embrace enthusiastically. Weber and Fields are wonderful movie actors. The show fairly reeks with good old-fashioned hokum, but it's the sort of hokum you and I adore."
—DAILY NEWS

" 'Friendly Enemies' was a stage hit, and it should be a screen hit. So much may be said of Weber and Fields in any connection that it seems only a matter of proper publicity to put this picture over for the limit, with the picture itself backing up all claims made."
—VARIETY

"A cinematic treat. There is plenty of good comedy, a little intrigue and a gentle love theme. Seldom have we such good advice to give as, 'Visit the Colony Theatre and see "Friendly Enemies." It will make you feel so good that you'll be apt to make friends of your enemies.' "
—THE GRAPHIC

"There is a wealth of appealing incident, human interest moments that reach for your heart strings, and many situations which are sure to make the most jaded fan laugh. The team is fortunate in having an excellent supporting cast. The picture is clean, wholesome entertainment and should find a welcome reception in most theatres in the land."
—MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"From a showmanship angle alone, it should be an easy task for the exhibitor to fill his theatre. 'Weber and Fields' and 'Friendly Enemies' will get them in; this combination should prove a box-office bonanza."

Classics of the Screen

FIRST—Gossip Out of Hollywood

"Lubitsch has turned the trick again over on the Warner lot. Watch this 'Kiss Me Again.' How that cast does act! And Kraely's story is a gem."

THEN—The Trade Starts to Talk

"That new Lubitsch picture, 'Kiss me Again,' looks like a clean-up. Pep and laughs all the way through. Audience stuff—all of it."

THEN—The Critics Join the Chorus

Calling this the perfect comedy. "A sensation," writes Florence Lawrence in the Los Angeles Examiner. "Lubitsch is the hero of Hollywood. He has hit the high spot of screen comedy."

THEN—The Public Makes It Unanimous

By shouting their delight at this joyous and gay Lubitsch entertainment and making it ANOTHER SURE THING AT THE BOX OFFICE FROM WARNER BROS.

A mighty good contract for you!

Assures you of a year's supply of highest quality lamps

Entitles you to expert lighting service free

Saves you over 15% on your lamp costs.

IF THERE were nothing more to this contract than the guarantee that every lamp you buy on it will be of the highest quality, it would be a profitable one for you to have. For the cost of lighting depends not only on the cost of current, but on the amount of light you get from the current you buy. And the amount of light a lamp gives during its life depends on its quality.

Edison MAZDA Lamps are designed to give maximum light over a long period of service. They do not fall off in efficiency after they have burned a few hours, as many lamps do. They embody the most advanced engineering practice. Every lamp is tested before it leaves the factory. Edison MAZDA Lamps give maximum light at minimum cost.

Free Lighting Service

The first step toward good lighting is to have good lamps. The next is to know how to use them. This contract covers expert lighting service.

Specialists from our Lighting Service Department will advise you what type and style of lamps to use in each department of your theatre. They will show you how to use lighting to attract, to beautify your theatre, and to add to the comfort of your patrons. And their service to you is free.

A Saving of 15%

You save money by using Edison MAZDA Lamps. Our lighting experts tell you how to make lighting pay you a return on your investment. And on top of that this contract entitles you to a discount of over 15% on all the lamps you buy.

Don't you agree with us that this is a mighty good contract for you to have?

Then send for details right now. Just tear off and mail the attached coupon.

Important

We have free booklets on theatre lighting that are the most up to date, and most complete treatise on the subject ever published. We'll gladly send you these on request. Use the coupon.

FOX NEWS SCORES REMARKABLE BEAT

Although the Kentucky Derby was run Saturday afternoon at Louisville, it miraculously appeared in the Fox News Sunday night at all the Broadway houses, or within twenty-four hours of the actual finish of the great classic.

This "beat" was recorded even earlier in Chicago, where the pictures were seen at the Sunday matinee performances.

So far as can be ascertained, none of the other news reels has yet included this event despite its great appeal.

As a matter of fact, even regular photographs had not, at the time we went to press, been received by the newspapers. It has been necessary for sporting departments of the dailies to obtain cut outs of the Fox News and thus have photographs made of the horses.

VOL. XXXI NEW YORK, MAY 30, 1925 NO. 22

Back at the Job

WELL, it's over. "The tumult and the shouting dies; the Captains and the Kings depart." The Convention is in retrospect. And we are asking each other: what has come out of it?

It seems to us that the outstanding accomplishment was the getting together of the exhibitor organizations.

Without that basis of strength other accomplishments of the Convention could not materialize. The mobilization of play dates, the arbitration plan, the revision of the uniform contract—all the remedial measures offered for relief would have lacked the solid backing of several thousand exhibitor members of a now united national organization.

That's the supreme thing—a national and powerful and harmonious organization whose demands may be listened to and will be listened to, and acted upon.

It could not well have been otherwise. The broad issue of thousands of theatres and millions in investment is far greater than any individual or sectional interest involved; just the same it is far from easy to close organization breaches, and we sincerely congratulate Sydney Cohen, Al Steffes, J. C. Ritter, Charles O'Reilly, M. E. Comerford, Joseph Seider—all those leaders whose wisdom finally carried the day.

We also congratulate the Convention for its substantial, sane, business-like and dignified conduct throughout. There was oratory, but not too much. There were no sensational attacks for sensationalism only. There was serious business done.

And now the average man is back at his bread and butter job. Convention spirit is one thing; running a competitive business is another. We are back in the economic machine—each man his own cog, each a master, fundamentally, of his own success.

The immediate issue is the producer owned or affiliated circuits and their effect upon the independent producer and distributor and the independent exhibitor.

These circuits are going to grow. No question about that. Curiously enough, the Convention opened up with the coalition of Balaban and Katz and the Lubliner & Trinz circuit, and closed with the purchase by Famous of the Gordon circuit. These two are among the greatest circuits in the country. Also, it is to be noted that the stock of each absorbing company immediately went up several points.

The independent exhibitor wants to know if he is going to be squeezed dry of product. The independent producer and distributor want to know if they will be squeezed dry of outlets.

The Convention offered two principal plans of relief: (1) a Bureau, to be composed of independent exhibitors, producers and distributors, which will secure data upon play dates and appraise and classify the independent product; and (2) an arbitration plan which will function in the film centres and investigate and act upon charges of unfair competition in the booking of pictures.

Both plans are as yet too indefinite for comment; but at the Convention and since then the arbitration plan strikes us as a feasible step. It goes straight to the issue and to the help of the exhibitor who is menaced, if such menace does exist, by booking combines. If this species of arbitration is to be added to the rental arbitration duties of the Film Boards of Trade, then the latter will have to be made more equitable in operation as to the uniform contract and also as to their scheme of operation. In fact, this improvement must come about anyway. That is all too evident.

So we have these proposed measures of general relief. But in their consideration we must not lose sight of two broad facts.

First, the fact that whatever we do in a trade way must be based upon serving the public, to the public's satisfaction. Second, that the survival of the fittest will and must work in this business as in all others. Commercial measures cannot be made to take care of the man who isn't on his job. The best pictures and the best theatres will continue to win out.

The Pathe Announcement

WE present this week another in the important series of product announcements—vital market information for the exhibitor.

The announcement in this issue is from Pathe—and it deserves and should have the careful study of the reader. An analysis of the insert shows that the Pathe schedule for the new season offers great variety in the short subjects field, particularly in comedies of which 104 are offered, and two important features.

The highlights as we view them are the Harold Lloyd comedy to be released in the Fall, of which we have heard extremely favorable reports; and Hal Roach's "Black Cyclone," already a success at the box-office on the basis of pre-release showings, and the "Our Gang" Comedies, an established series of successes.

Then there's the Harry Langdon comedies—much will be heard from this star in the very near future; the Alice Day Comedies; those starring Ralph Graves; the serials; and the pictures with Charley Chase, Glenn Tryon, Clyde Cook, Ben Turpin and others from the various studios—Mack Sennett and Hal Roach. To these are added the Sportlights, Film Fables, Topics of the Day, Pathe Review, Stereoscopiks, and, of course, the world-famous Pathe News.

This is an exceedingly interesting array of product. The insert itself is attractive and attention-arresting and reflects credit on the organization. Our congratulations to Elmer Pearson and his associates, and to the workmanlike efforts of P. A. Parsons.

The Foreign Market

A BIG increase in the export of American pictures to foreign countries, Europe particularly, is shown in a report just issued by the Department of Commerce. There was a jump of 24,000,000 feet in shipments to the Continent alone, out of a total export increase of 32,000,000 feet.

The outstanding feature of the Government analysis is the increase in export of American positives to Europe—from 29,000,000 feet in 1923 to 53,000,000 feet in 1924. This is a clear barometer of the growing importance of the foreign market—a subject upon which we have touched several times within recent weeks.

There can be no question that the foreign situation is one of the most vital of all factors in its effect on our situation here at home. The astonishing expansion in export trade shows that; and recent acquisitions both of theatres and distribution outlets abroad by American concerns prove the point no less.

Carl Laemmle told the Milwaukee Convention that last year his company sold more films abroad than it had sold in any other previous year—a highly significant statement, and another indication that Europe is the coming great market of the industry.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Louise Fazenda, once the queen of slapstick comediennes, is a fascinating figure as "Marianne" in "Grounds for Divorce" (Paramount).

SIXTY FOR TOM

DURING the nine years in which Tom Mix has appeared in pictures flying the Fox banner he has appeared in sixty photoplays — the majority of which were of the red-blooded western style. Which is some record, as it is doubtful whether any other male star in the industry working under one banner can equal it.

The cowboy actor has topped Vitagraph's record as a maker of stars. If you don't believe it take notice of the grand array of talented pulchritude that has appeared opposite him. The list includes twenty-nine of the leading women of picturedom.

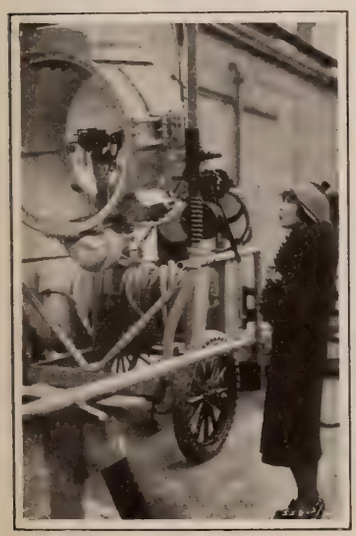
Colleen Moore, Wanda Hawley, Pauline Starke, Patsy Ruth Miller, Lillian Rich, Barbara Bedford, Billie Dove, Doris May, Mabel Ballin are some of them and they are only a starter!

Jane Novak, Eva Novak, Alma Bennett, Ora Carew, Alice Calhoun, Anne Cornwall and Lucy Fox constitute another group of his past co-players.

Victoria Forde (now Mrs. Mix), Enid Markey, Kathleen O'Connor, Teddy Sampson, Gloria Hope and Pauline Curley are among other first-raters who have played heroines in the Mix pictures.

The others, none of whom are anything like also-rans, are: Claire Anderson, Rhea Mitchell, Claire Adams, Betty Jewel, Gertrude Olmstead, Marion Nixon and Kathleen Key.

Director Rex Ingram inspects a captured German U-boat, one of several furnished for scenes in "Mare Nostrum" (Metro-Goldwyn), now being filmed abroad.



Gene Stratton, 11-year-old granddaughter of Gene Stratton-Porter, who will play an important role in that author's "Keeper of the Bees" (F. B. O.).

INGRAM'S JESTER

REX INGRAM has added a court jester to his personnel in the personality of "Shorty" Ben Mairech, who formerly clowned for the pleasure (or possibly the censure) of the Bay of Tunis. He is described as an extraordinary pantomimist who was discovered by the director while producing "The Arab" in Tunis. "Shorty"— who is as well known along the Riviera as Tammany Young and Kelsey Allen are along Broadway — cannot speak French or English, but he makes himself understood through pantomime. Being a past master of this art, and being less than four feet in height, certainly qualifies him to play the buffoon before any bey, omir sheik, king, kaiser, czar, emperor and motion picture director.

Leatrice Joy, starring in "Hell's Highroad" (Producers Dist. Corp.) at the DeMille studios, examines the rushes of the first few scenes.

Robert Lieber and Richard A. Rowland, First National executives, bid bon voyage to Colleen Moore and John McCormick, leaving for Europe.

Lige Conley, appearing in Educational-Mermaid comedies, shows, in a current release, just what a Sheik of the Pampas should look like.

STILL WEARING 'EM

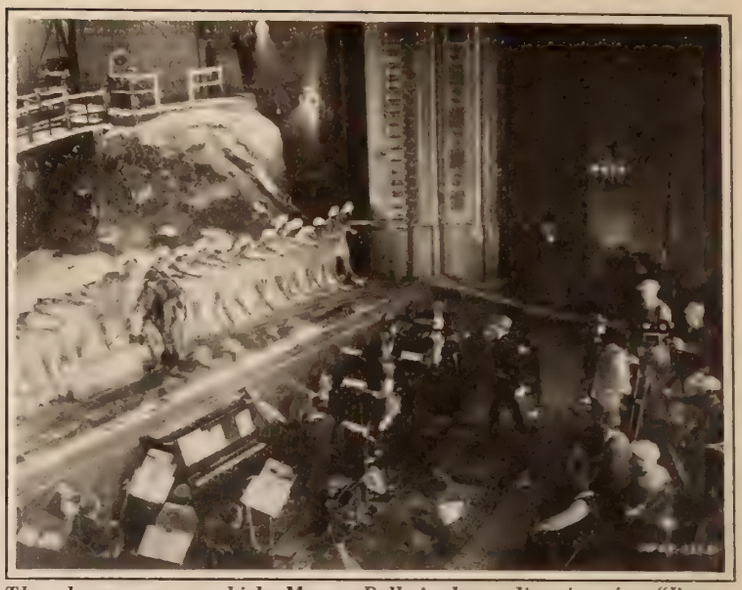
IT will be something of a departure for Julian Eltinge, the female impersonator, to get away from straight "feminine" parts and disguise himself in the exaggerated styles of Sydney Chaplin in "Charley's Aunt." Eltinge, to our knowledge, has never stepped out of modern fashions, but the Christies have faith in him that he can put over the comedy. As a result they have instructed their gag writer to get busy writing a story and part for him. As things look now two plays are being considered by Al Christie for the vehicle in which Eltinge will be starred — and the decision on one of these will be made within a few days.

Director Frank Tuttle, Richard Dix and Esther Ralston, on location at Lakewood, N. J., for the filming of "California—or Bust" (Paramount), indulge in a little game of mumbledy-peg during a wait between scenes.

PLASTER THIS UP

THE Hollywood studios have gone in for plaster. Henceforth it may be a cry for "Mort,' more mort'.". Or it may mean that the players have lame backs, sore chests and corns on their toes. As plaster has always been known to stick—whether it goes under the name of porous, red pepper or just plain corn, the new plaster department will become a permanent fixture at the Hollywood studios.

Any day the extras are not needed to register atmosphere, William Sistrom, the general manager, will put them to work mixing mortar and piecing the ornamental designs together. This will entitle them to become members of the Plasterers' Union. In Union there is strength. And the Hollywood studios are Strong for all the technical details which make perfect productions.



STRUTTING FOR WALES

THE dusky belles and bozos of West Africa have been strutting their stuff for the Prince of Wales. He has learned during his African jaunt that modern jazz is not an American institution, but has come down from the jungle haunts of the original mammy and pappy.

It's quite possible that he asked the International Newsreal cameraman—"Am I back in Harlem?"—when he looked at this Black and Tan show, They did the 'Chicago'—and they did the 'Charleston' with Congo variations. As there was no cover charge the duskies refrained from singing a Mammy song.

A PILGRIMAGE

THE "Ben Hur" players are busy making preparations for a pilgrimage to Santa Fe, the home of General Lew Wallace, the author of the biblical novel. Just as soon as the final shots are completed the principal players, Ramon Novarro, May McAvoy, Carmel Myers, Frank Currier, Francis X. Bushman, Kathleen Key, Claire McDowell, Nigel de Brulier, Mitchell Lewis, Leo White, Jack Richardson, Winter Hall, Orma Whitehead, Charles Newton, Bernard Seigal and Fred Niblo, will catch the Santa Fe for Santa Fe.

The theatre scene which Monta Bell is here directing for "Pretty Ladies" (Metro-Goldwyn) is an exact reproduction of the New Amsterdam theatre, New York City, and the Ziegfeld Follies, as every garment buyer will readily recognize.

A PERSONAL CALL

RATHER than disappoint Mrs. George Douglas Ramsay of Harrisburg, Pa., who is close to 90 years old, and who made a special trip to Loew's Regent theatre in that city on May 11, to see Jackie Coogan, but missed him there, the boy wonder the next day, took time from a sight-seeing tour of the Pennsylania Capital to make a personal call on the old lady. She had sat several hours in the theatre, watching the performance staged by several film and stage stars in honor of Loew's acquisition of the theatre, but as Jackie did not appear until quite late Mrs. Ramsay became fatigued and went home.

Arthur L. Bernstein, Jackie's manager, heard of Mrs. Ramsay's disappointment and arranged for the youthful star to visit her at her residence the following day. The old lady, who is the widow of a Civil War hero — and a member of one of Harrisburg's most aristocratic families — was delighted with Jackie.

"I have seen all your pictures," she told him.

"I'm glad you have and I hope you will see more of them," he replied.

This is not only a magnificent tribute by the young star, but it also shows the hold he has on his public. Mrs. Ramsay's age cannot keep her away from the theatre when the youngster's pictures appear on the screen.

For the first time in twenty-five years, the three Shauer brothers were reunited during the Paramount convention in Los Angeles; left to right, they are: Emil E. Shauer, asst. treasurer and director of the foreign department of Famous players; Louis Shauer, a resident of Los Angeles; and G. G. Shauer, proprietor of the Premier theatre and the Opera House at Valparaiso, Ind.

When Director Edwin Carewe found he was two days behind on the script for "The Lady Who Lied" (First National), he enlisted the services of Birdie Reeve, world champion speed typist. Lewis Stone and Virginia Valli are interested spectators.

EARLY VACATIONS

AS an indication that summer is upon us, the vacation slips are being handed out. The other day Tom Meighan and Tom Geraghty, the star's scenario writer, slipped away and caught a train for White Sulphur Springs — the former to take a rest after supervising the Lambs' Gambol, the latter to take the baths as a sort of spring tonic and to tone up the Booth Tarkington story, "Whispering Men."

Wanda Wiley slipped away from Los Angeles to spend a month's vacation in her home town, San Antonio — it being the first trip she has made to her native heath since she found her name in electric lights. The star was a dental student before she turned from molars to makeup — which probably accounts for her pretty dental smile.

William K. Howard, who has been busy the past few years directing one picture after another, including "The Thundering Herd," has also heard the call of Home Sweet Home. He has struck out for St. Mary's, Ohio, his first visit to the old homestead in a long, long time.

As for the New York publicity and advertising men, they are slipping away from the office on the off days in order to brush up their niblick explosion shots out of the sand. Some of the boys working for them get away, too, by telling of their engagements with the dentist.

With the trees coming out in leafy attire — with the flowers budding in the deep-tangled wildwood — with the call of the partridge and the pheasant — you can't blame anyone for wanting to enjoy a brief bit of open air in the open country. It's every man to his calling. Some like stepping down the fairway, some like trout and deep-sea fishing, some like the races and the ball games, some like trap-shooting and crap-shooting. And some like buggy riding or a hike through the woods.

Claire Windsor, Metro-Goldwyn player, and Mrs. R. B. Grunauer, break ground for South Side Theatre company's first house, the Manchester in Los Angeles. Mike Gore, Sol Lesser and Mr. Grunauer, secretary, treasurer and general manager of the firm may also be seen.

Norman J. McLeod, Christie gag man and artist, who draws the funny little skeleton cartoon figures on the subtitles of Educational-Christie comedies, has his right arm insured against injury which would interrupt his work.

A REAL HORSE OPERA

HAL ROACH'S film novelty — a sort of eternal triangle of the equine world — may be classified as a genuine horse opera. The filmgoer hasn't forgotten his previous picture which introduced Rex. Indeed, "The King of the Wild Horses," ushered in a happy departure from the usual run of westerns. We have had a plentiful supply of dog pictures — and occasionally Tom Mix comes forward with an opus written around his famous steed, Tony. But Mr. Roach in cataloguing his star as a wild stepper stimulates the imagination. One anticipates a healthy line of thrills in wondering over the skillful and patient direction in training Rex and his four-legged companions to execute their stunts. They are remarkably well trained — and yet they carry out the impression of being perfectly wild. Certainly no small feat to accomplish.

Fred Jackman, who directed the feature, is not only a director who knows how to construct sequences and piece them together, who knows how to collect marvelous vistas — and place his action against them so that the plot and scenery seem to blend, but he also qualifies as an expert animal trainer. He has guided Rex, the Lady and the Killer — the latter two being the heroine and villain respectively, in this equine melodrama — so that they express the necessary emotions with as much fervor — and as much naturalness, too — when the occasion calls for it — as the best of the human actors. It might profit some of the humans to imitate their naturalness.

And so "Black Cyclone" comes to the screen. It is a picture carrying intense action, thrills and romance. For the sake of adding human interest Rex rescues a young fugitive from a mountain lion — and to show his gratitude, the fugitive in turn rescues Rex from quicksands. This naturally cements a strong friendship as man and horse co-operate together in overpowering their enemies. Rex, with the youth on his back, speeds after the human villain. When he is out of the way, the horse turns his attention to the Killer who can be as devilish in a horsey way as Wally Beery can be when cast as a villain.

It's a picture which we recommend heartily to all picturegoers. Anyone with a fondness for thrills, anyone with a friendly feeling for horses, will respond to it and call it a wonderful treat.

Patsy Ruth Miller, popular Warner Bros. player, keeps in form between pictures by playing on the sands at Santa Monica—very good form, we should say.

26 VOTES FOR LOIS

THE famous Alabama slogan — "Twenty-six votes for Underwood"— which set the whole nation rocking with mirth as well as admiring the "stick-to-it-iveness" of its Governor in keeping alive the candidacy of the Senator for one hundred ballots during the Democratic Convention at Madison Square Garden — may now be changed to read — "Twenty-six votes for Lois Wilson."

She has just been awarded the title of Alabama's greatest living actress on stage or screen during a contest in which she received an overwhelming vote. As a result of this award the star — who is in New York on a vacation — will be a guest of honor at the Alabama Day Banquet at the Hotel Astor next Tuesday night.

It will be in charge of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Birmingham and is being given in connection with the Southeastern Exposition now at the Grand Central Palace. The Governor of Alabama, Senator Underwood and many other famous people of that state will attend the banquet. There will be no "Mammy" songs.

LIKE A BANK PRESIDENT

LIKE a bank president who has his fingers in several pies just for the sake of keeping the wolf very, very far from the door, Cecil B. De Mille registers Big Business. He can qualify to wear the usual "get up" which is affected by the Big Moguls who talk in terms of "Home, James!" or "Take a Note" to their chauffeurs and secretaries. Which means the frock coat, the white spats, the two-pint topper et al.

Mr. De Mille, who is president of one bank, director in several others, and who has interests in a clothing factory, a hotel, gold mines in Alaska, a bottle factory and a cannery (is it possible that the last enterprise is a storehouse for the canned drama?), denies as a gross exaggeration that he is president of a Mexican oil company.

CLEVER THESE CHINESE

JUST to show you how doggone clever these Chinese are, Sidney Olcott has a cameraman of that race — one James Howe (the one is used here to add a racial tint)— who is doing the "shooting" on "Not So Long Ago." The Chinaman is an old-timer at the game, having photographed any number of features, including "Peter Pan," "The Spanish Dancer," and "The Charmer."

HOLDING BACK

THE National Board of Review has been holding back its asterisks the past two weeks, having donated but two stars. They go to Paramount's "The Little French Girl" and F. B. O.'s "Drusilla with a Million," among a group of fifteen features which have been recommended as deserving of high praise.

M. P. T. O. A. To Seek Changes in Arbitration System

Burkan Plan and Seider's Report Adopted at Milwaukee

NO subject brought up at the recent Milwaukee Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America attracted more interest than arbitration and revision of the uniform contract.

When Joseph M. Seider, President of the Jersey organization and member of the National Board of Directors, presented the report on these two problems, a heated discussion followed, which showed the vital interest of exhibitors.

The Convention instructed the Board to appoint a committee of five to negotiate a new contract with the Hays organization and a separate contract with the I. M. P. P. D. A. If the contracts are successfully negotiated, the M. P. T. O. A. proposes that its Arbitration Committee, with a committee of distributors, shall constitute a national board of appeals to hear disputes referred to it by local arbitration boards.

Negotiations between the Hays organization and the exhibitors have been in progress for some time, and have not yet been concluded.

An additional phase of arbitration, and one which the M. P. T. O. A. leaders believe would be the solution of many difficulties, was brought forward on the final day of the convention by the adoption of a resolution. This is known as the Burkan Plan, the author being Nathan Burkan, counsel for the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce.

It proposes arbitration when an exhibitor feels he is being threatened by the entry of a producer-controlled or affiliated circuit or an individual exhibitor into his town; and, if put into effect, would insure the allocation of product between the two. It is understood that Mr. Burkan, previous to the convention, obtained the consent of several big distributors to this plan. It will be taken up officially with the Hays organization by the M. P. T. O. A. Committee of Five.

The report presented to the convention by Mr. Seider of New Jersey outlines in detail changes in many clauses of the present contract as sought by the M. P. T. O. A. For that reason, among others, it is an important document, and MOTION PICTURE NEWS prints it herewith practically in full:

"The title of the proposed contract to be approved standard exhibition contract.

"It has been agreed that Clause First shall be changed to provide for the year commencing with the playing of the first picture under the contract instead of a specific date as heretofore. A sentence has been added to specify the season by year.

"On the balance of this Clause there has been no agreement.

"The contract now provides that in the event any pictures are released by the Distributor during the next succeeding season, the Distributor shall be obliged to deliver and the Exhibitor shall accept, pay for and exhibit them at such later period.

"This is obviously unfair. The Exhibitor purchases a picture or pictures expecting them to be released within a specified period. He relies upon having them available. If the film is not released, he is put to hardship and perhaps expense. We contend that in the event the photoplay is released during the succeeding season the Exhibitor shall have the option of accepting the picture at such later period. And we contend that the Distributor shall be bound to deliver such picture or pictures during the next succeeding period and not leave the option with the Distributor as now provided. How simple it is for a Distributor, upon finding a production above the average to withhold release and then re-sell this production, perhaps under a different title for any multiple of the original price.

"Clause Third will be changed to provide that in the event of loss or destruction of film, the Exhibitor shall pay at the rate of 4 cents per foot for the first reel and the actual laboratory cost for the balance, instead of 6 cents per foot as now provided. The Distributor wants to add that the Laboratory Bill shall be accepted as the cost. This is purely a question of fact and should be decided by the Arbitration Board.

"In Clause Fifth the failure of the Producer to make or deliver to the Distributor (in most cases himself) should not relieve the Distributor from delivering the contracted picture to the Exhibitor.

"It is our contention, but the Distributors do not coincide, that the word "intentional" shall be eliminated in both places in Clause Seventh where it appears. Where the Distributor is entitled to relief he has the right to it forthwith, but the provision is made in this Clause that the Exhibitor must first

"NEWS" Scores "Beat" on Final Results at Milwaukee Motion Picture Theatre Owners Convention

MOTION PICTURE NEWS was the first of the national weekly trade papers to carry the complete results of the M. P. T. O. A. Convention to the industry.

Through special arrangements with the Postal Telegraph Company at Milwaukee, the news of the final sessions of the convention on Friday was rushed through to Albany, N. Y., where MOTION PICTURE NEWS is printed and presses were being held for this story. On Saturday morning copies of the publication were on their way to exhibitors throughout the country.

This issue of The News contained the name of the new President of the M. P. T. O. A., the new Chairman and personnel of the Board of Directors and an accurate report of the proceedings on the final day, when the Allied and the M. P. T. O. A. joined forces. Friday was by far the most important of all the convention sessions, but no other weekly trade paper printed the news the same week in which it happened.

When the special train bearing the New York delegation en route home from Milwaukee reached Albany Saturday afternoon, copies of The News containing the complete convention story were distributed to the returning delegates. It was the first paper to reach them with the full story.

It was a clean "beat" for MOTION PICTURE NEWS over its weekly competitors.

prove intent upon the Distributor's part before he can receive relief. We also requested the Exhibitor be relieved of giving immediate notice in writing of his exercising his option to terminate the contract during the continuation of the Distributor's defaults specified as provided in this Clause. The Distributor has no such obligation.

"Clause Eighth is the all important one of the contract. It provides for selection and designation of play dates.

"The proposed changes that have not been disputed in this Clause are: Notice of Availability has been changed from three weeks to two weeks. The giving of a new notice of availability in cases where the picture is not available on the dates asked for by the Exhibitor, has been eliminated and in its place substituted the provision that the picture must be open to the Exhibitor at the first available dates, not earlier than two weeks or later than six weeks after the exhibition dates first selected by the Exhibitor.

"Here is the rub. Experience has shown that the majority of claims for the Arbitration Boards to decide, arise from the Exhibitor's failure to book the pictures he purchases. This is not the Exhibitor's fault. The fault can truly be charged to this Clause Eighth of the contract.

"A second or subsequent run theatre invariably must buy his pictures in groups. When he calls for play dates they are not available because of the failure of the first run theatre to book his dates or because the first run has not been sold or the Distributor withholding release in the particular territory. The Exhibitor is forced to scramble for pictures immediately available and he has to buy more blocks. He has been forced into an overbought condition. Before he could play off the pictures he had been compelled to add, the first groups become available and the Distributor clamors for play dates which the Exhibtor has not to give. The result is heartaches, overbuying and arbitration cases.

"We forcefully urged that in such cases, where the theatre is forced in order to remain open to buy these additonal pictures because the product he had first contracted for is not available, that he be relieved at his option from the first contract.

"Upon our request it has been agreed to add a clause, providing that the photoplays shall not contain any advertisng that the Producer thereof is compensated for directly or indirectly.

"We object to Clause Twelfth which provides that we must advertise each photoplay as a Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn or whoever the Producer may be and that we must adhere to the form of announcement contained in the Producer's advertising.

"Also Clause Thirteenth, which provides for our paying a government tax which may sometime be imposed. And Clause Fifteenth, which tells us the minimum we are permitted to charge even though we do not play percentage. Also the Sixteenth Clause, which says we must lease all advertising matter from them.

"It has been agreed that the Percentage Clause Fourteenth be written so that it provided that payment shall be made the day following the close of the engagement and that in the event it is for more than seven days, payment shall be made at the end of each week or fraction thereof.

"Clause Seventeenth is the Deposit Clause. Of course, we want it out. As a compromise we offered that a receipt be given upon the payment of a deposit, that 6 per cent interest be paid thereon and that such payment be subject to the laws in the respective States wherein the deposits or advance payments are paid, which provide for the segregating and trusteeing for safety. The payment should apply to the last picture played. The Distributor consents to issuing the receipt but not the other conditions.

"Clause Eighteenth—The procedure, under this Clause at present, is that an application for a contract becomes a contract only after it has been accepted by the home office of the Distributor within a specified period. We suggested that this be reversed; that a contract be a contract subject to disaffirmance by the home office of the Distributor within the specified period. This the Distributors' attorneys at first consented to, but later qualified their acceptance by providing that the contract be considered a contract if signed by the branch manager and in addition be subject to disaffirmance by the home office within the specified period. We are better off, in preference to this addition, with the present procedure. We now have the right to recall or withdraw our application any time before its acceptance.

"The proposed schedule of Distributors is as follows: Albany, 10 days; Atlanta, 15 days; Boston, 10 days; Buffalo, 10 days; Charleston, 15 days; Charlotte, 15 days; Chicago, 15 days; Cincinnati, 15 days; Cleveland, 15 days; Dallas, 20 days; Denver, 20 days; Des Moines, 15 days; Detroit, 15 days; El Paso, 25 days; Indianapolis, 15 days; Kansas City, 15 days; Louisville, 15 days; Los Angeles, 25 days; Milwaukee, 15 days; New Jersey, 7 days; Minneapolis, 20 days; Butte, 30 days; New Haven, 10 days; New Orleans, 15 days; New York City, 7 days; Oklahoma City, 20 days; Omaha, 15 days; Peoria, 15 days; Philadelphia, 10 days; Pittsburg, 10 days; Portland, 30 days; St. Louis, 15 days; Salt Lake City, 20 days; San Francisco, 20 days; Seattle, 20 days; Washington, 10 days; Little Rock, 20 days; Jacksonville, 15 days; Memphis, 15 days.

"We urge that the number of days in the schedule just read be reduced.

"Clause Nineteenth, the Arbitration Clause, has virtually not been touched. The only changes are that both parties may mutually agree to have their dispute heard in another city, and the very important change; that of eliminating the minimum amount the Board can assess against an exhibitor in the event of his failure to submit to arbitration or comply with the decision of the Board of Arbitration. This means the Board of Arbitration and not the Film Club or Board of Trade must fix the maximum amount that the Distributor may request as a deposit and it gives the Board of Arbitration the power to waive any additional deposit if the case, in their judgment, warrants such exemption.

"In addition, there are a number of ethical provisions which will be printed on the contract which your committee has approved and which it urges you to respect.

"The rules, referred to in the Arbitration Clause of the Contract, provide for the appointment of the arbitrators and the rules and procedure of the Arbitration Boards.

"These rules make of arbitration a purely collection medium for the Distributors and the Arbitration Board a collection agency.

"The arbitrators should not assume the functions of a Court of Law. They are neither qualified nor empowered to so function.

"The purpose of arbitration is to avoid litigation and the theatre owner involved in a dispute should have the right of definitely and in fact choosing fifty per cent of the members of the Arbitration Board who will arbitrate his particular case.

"Evidence should not be limited by rules. All matters, pertaining to the dispute involved, should be allowed to be brought out; as for instance, a pamphlet or press book in which the Producer makes representation as to the quality of his pictures, which in our opinion is very important evidence, should be considered by Arbitration Boards.

"Provision should be made for the refunding of expenses incurred to the theatre owner who receives a verdict in his favor in a matter of arbitration. Very often the theatre owner is compelled to travel long distances and incur much expense in order to defend himself in a matter that has no merit. The present contract is unfair, one-sided, and the method of carrying out the Board's verdict is confiscatory. I know that $10,000 was paid to a reputed firm of attorneys to draw the arbitration clause, but it appears it was paid so that the illegal procedure should have the semblance of legality. No firm of lawyers can make an arbitration Board both the judge and the sheriff. It is vicious to have the power to close a person's theatre for failure to comply with the award of a Board of Arbitration, any part of which he may not have had the right to appoint and the arbitration proceedings having been based on a contract which he had had to sign against his better judgment and wishes through not having the choice of any other course.

"The independent producers should compete with the present system by setting up in addition, their own arbitration system and tribunal, founded on service and a square deal.

"If a contract is agreed upon and approved by this organization, it should be retroactive so that our members in purchasing their new year's product shall have the assurance that it will be under the terms and conditions that are finally agreed upon.

"Your committee recommends that a Committee of five members be appointed by the Board of Directors to serve for the ensuing year. This Committee be empowered to consummate a mutual and equitable approved standard exhibition contract.

"If this is accomplished, this committee shall form with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors and the Independent Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, an Arbitration Committee.

"This Arbitration Committee shall with a like number of Distributors constitute a Court of Appeals with power to review such disputes that are referred to it by local Arbitration Boards to prevent any injustice being done to either side in any local or exchange centre.

"We further recommend with the provision that if an equitable contract is arranged that this organization assumes the supervision of the Exhibitor's side of the Arbitration System.

"That this organization establish and maintain an Arbitration Bureau which shall tabulate records and decisions and shall keep every Arbitration Board, each local and subdivisional unit and their counsel fully advised of decisions in every matter and in every territory."

M.P.T.O.A. Board Meets Soon To Perfect Plans

Cohen Reviews Results Achieved at Convention

THE new Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will meet shortly to put into effect the program laid down at the Milwaukee Convention. It is expected the sessions will be held in New York at National Headquarters, and the call has gone out to the Board members from Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman.

When the Board assembles it will, of course, include the ten directors elected from the Allied States Organizations, now part of the M. P. T. O. A.

The program to be made effective by the Board covers several very important items. These will include:

1. Development of the Trade and Commerce and Playdate Bureaus, toward the support of which the I. M. P. P. D. A. has contributed $50,000 cash and pledged $150,000 more and Universal gave $50,000.

2. Appointment of 26 or more field men to represent the Trade and Commerce and Playdate Bureaus throughout the country to continue the work of playdate mobilization for independent pictures begun at the convention by the distribution of playdate pledge cards. These will be paid business managers, and they will have other important duties as contact men.

3. Negotiation of new standard exhibition contracts with the Hays organization and the I. M. P. P. D. A. The M. P. T. O. A. will urge the establishment of a Court of Appeals in arbitration cases to consist of five members—two exhibitors, two exchange representatives and one neutral.

4. Extension of arbitration to include cases where the independent exhibitor is threatened by the encroachments of producer-circuits or combines not affiliated with producers or distributors.

5. Further meetings with the I. M. P. P. D. A. and national independents to put into effect the coalition formed at Milwaukee. Companies other than those which have contributed will probably announce contributions.

On behalf of the M. P. T. O. A., Sydney Cohen this week issued a statement, headed "The Significance of Milwaukee," and reviewing the results achieved at the convention. It follows:

"The most significant result achieved at the convention of accomplishment just ended at Milwaukee was unity. Unity of theatre owners to a degree never before dreamed of. Unity of purpose of an e tent that augurs well for the future of the entire industry.

"This convention was a convention of principles rather than of personalities as so many previous gatherings have been. Business principles of the soundest sort brought this truly representative body of theatre owners together, and they checked personalities at the door, so that no discordant note could mar the harmony of the proceedings.

"The M. P. T. O. A. has always been a united body at heart and in purpose—Milwaukee was the scene of the final cementing of the 'ties which bind.' Now, as never before, we present a united and impregnable front, and stand equipped and ready to bear our full share of responsibility in the burdens of the industry.

"Theatre owners were given the realization that it was in nowise necessary to either give away their theatres for fear that they would be ruined otherwise, or to sell an interest in businesses built by their time and effort.

"Milwaukee put a stop to the usual stampede of theatre owners 'to get in out of the wet' by rushing sheeplike, to buy film in vast quantities before it is made—from the very companies who are using their (the theatre owners') money for their destruction. Our slogan was 'Save Your Play Dates' and we have done just that. The unbusinesslike and pernicious practice of selling early in May product not available until late August at the earliest and at least half of the number not available until January, February and March of the following year—product concerning which the seller knows nothing, in most instances, save tentative titles—has been halted for the immediate present at least, and this year there will be no repetition of the practice of securing written options on the bulk of a theatre owner's play dates on the part of one or two companies to such an extent that many meritorious independent pictures are kept from his screen by reason of the fact that he is tied up for months to come with no alternative save to play off those pictures which he has bought blindly, thus denying producers and distributors of qual-

"NEWS" Convention Story Made Official Report by Illinois M.P.T.O.

THE Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Convention, which was scheduled for May 18th at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, adjourned subject to the call of President Nathan without transacting any business.

The adjournment came on a resolution presented by Ludwig Siegel, who explained that important matters growing out of the National Convention at Milwaukee last week, were pending, and that it would serve the interests of the Illinois exhibitors much better to wait until further report on these matters could be made. In this he was supported by President Nathan and others and the vote was unanimous to postpone the convention.

A unique feature of the brief session was a report on the Milwaukee Convention by Secretary Louis H. Frank, who stated it was unnecessary to go through his notes as the account published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS of May 23rd covered the transactions correctly, and that he would read the MOTION PICTURE NEWS' account of the convention as his report on the work done there.

As far as it is known this is the first time that a trade paper's account of a convention has been utilized in this way and is regarded as a striking mark of the confidence the exhibitors have in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

ity pictures an opportunity to secure an adequate financial response to enable them to carry on.

"The theatre owner now realizes that he may expect an ample supply of quality pictures from independents—and by independents he means those producers who do not use his money to operate theatres in opposition to him, their customer and rent their product to him only after they themselves have skimmed all the cream therefrom. There is no monopoly possible where brains or inventive genius is concerned, and the theatre owner no longer looks for quality pictures solely from some two or three sources. At least half a dozen producing concerns who do not operate theatres will make, and have made, pictures for this coming season which will far transcend in merit most of the recent output of the so-called aristocrats of producers.

"In line with their decision to place all of their workings upon a sound business basis a Bureau of Trade and Commerce has been established with which independent producing and distributing companies—one national company—have become affiliated, and negotiations are now being concluded with several others. The theatre owners have also arranged to have the Board of Directors develop in each regional zone facilities for better service to theatre owner and exchange alike, by appointing paid business managers who will be not only points of contact but who will render services of a nature hitherto only hoped for.

"A recommendation was also made for the establishment of a Court of Appeals in re arbitration cases, said court to consist of five members, two theatre owners, two exchange representatives, and one unbiassed party, preferably from another industry. This is being done to prevent any injustice being done to any theatre owner or distributor by arbitration boards in any exchange centre.

"Every move made at Milwaukee was made with the avowed purpose of advancement, and we feel that the purpose has been achieved. We sought unity—and unity is an accomplished fact. We endeavored to instill our own abiding confidence in independence into our fellow theatre owners, and we have succeeded beyond our wildest dreams. We tried to put on a firm business basis our entire proceedings, and our sterling associates justified our faith in them by using the brains God gave them—those same brains which they have successfully used in developing their personal business enterprises—and giving us the benefit of their counsel and support.

"So, united, confident and businesslike, we approach the problems confronting us with the firm hope that Milwaukee will prove to have been the turning point of the industry, from which, hand in hand, the theatre owner and producer will go forward, with a better understanding—with more assurance of dividends for them both—to heights of success which neither could scale without the other. And being thus united to be freed forever from the fear and dread of domination or destruction at the hands of any one or two all powerful producing, distributing and exhibiting companies."

Fort Dodge Fire Under Investigation

The finding of oil soaked rags in the premises has led to an investigation into the fire in the Lyric Theatre at Fort Dodge, Ia.

Telegram From Gov. Smith Read at Convention

At the convention banquet in Milwaukee Sydney S. Cohen read a telegram from Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, which brought a great response from the crowd. The message was addressed to Mr. Cohen and read as follows:

"Best wishes for successful outcome of convention. Congratulations and greetings to picture exhibitors. You know how I value their co-operation and that I have their best interests at heart.

(Signed) Alfred E. Smith,
Governor of New York."

North Carolina M. P. T. O. to Convene June 22nd

The regular annual convention of the North Carolina M. P. T. O. will be held at Wrightsville Beach, N. C., June 22nd and 23rd, according to action of the Board of Directors at a recent meeting held in Charlotte.

More than usual significance attaches to this annual convention owing to the death of Colonel Henry B. Varner, who since the inception of the State exhibitor organization eleven years ago has been its prime leader. General despondency over the possibility of finding another leader of such power and weight as Colonel Varner, to lead the exhibitors through their many battles is expressed on every hand.

F. Alton Abbott, of Charlotte, who was appointed temporary secretary succeeding Jas. A. Estridge, resigned, has been handling the affairs of Colonel Varner's office since his death.

Gov. Pinchot Vetoes Two Amusement Bills

Two bills affecting amusements in the state of Pennsylvania and passed by the 1925 session of the State Legislature have been vetoed by Governor Pinchot.

The measure which would exempt first class cities—Pittsburgh and Philadelphia—from the existing theatre construction laws, which provide that no license to operate any form of show in buildings not specifically constructed or maintained as places of amusement will be issued, was vetoed on the ground that it would amend two sections of the Act of May 20, 1913. The bill was introduced by Representative Millar of Philadelphia.

The other bill vetoed by the Governor would have appropriated $125,000 of state funds for distribution among the county fair associations of the state. This latter action was hailed as somewhat of a victory by theatre men, who have always opposed the carnivals and midway shows.

Davis Will Open Office in Hollywood

J. Charles Davis, 2nd, president of Davis Distributing Division, left for the coast Wednesday of this week to open an office for his organization in Hollywood. This move was necessitated because of the rapid growth of the new company. The office will have charge of details in connection with the production activities of companies contributing to the Davis Distributing Division schedule for the season.

Quebec Censors Report on Work for Year

The Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors, Montreal, conducted a big year's work, according to the annual report of the activities of the Board for the 12 months' period ending April 30 last.

The official statement showed that the Quebec censors had viewed 2,171 film subjects all told during the fiscal year, this total comprising 6,639 reels of the approximate standard length of 1,000 feet. The report shows that the Quebec board examined and approved 1,414 film subjects, consisting of 2,685 reels, without any modification. Thus the Provincial board for Quebec passed almost exactly two thirds of the distinct subjects without a change of any kind.

Announcement is made that the Quebec board rejected 234 film subjects on the first showing but it is pointed out that the Quebec censors ultimately passed 218 subjects on second examination after they had been reconstructed by exchanges or owners as suggested by the board. The exact number of pictures that were finally condemned is not definitely stated in the published report but, from these figures, it is apparent that 16 releases were banned altogether. Incidentally, the censors required more or less extensive changes in 523 releases all told during the year, modifications being required in 24 per cent of the total subjects examined.

New Companies Chartered in New York State

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York state during the past week showed the following directors and capitalization according to charters granted by the secretary of state:

Shilling Motion Picture Productions, Inc., $150,000, C. B. James, H. Shopson, William Shilling, New York city; John C. Terry, Inc., capitalization not stated, H. Cohn, Edward M. Rothchild Takes Over Strand in San Francisco

Promise of another first-run high class motion picture theatre on Market street was realized the second week in May when the Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment, Inc., made known the acquisition of the real estate and property at 965 Market street, the present location of the Strand Theatre, which is under the management of Morris Markowitz. The house will be improved and approximately $150,000 will be spent on it by the owners of the California, Imperial and Granada theatres. The same policy of highclass entertainment will be carried out in it as in these. It is thought the new owners will take over the Strand July 1st.

F. P.-L. Acquires Gordon Holdings

38 Houses Involved and Fifty Per cent Interest in Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, Inc.—First National Franchise Not Included

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY this week officially confirmed the report that it had acquired the holdings of Nathan H. Gordon and Max Shoolman in Olympia Theatres, Inc., which operates 38 theatres in the New England States. Although no figure was mentioned in the Paramount announcement, it is understood the deal involved about $12,000,000. Famous also acquires a fifty per cent interest in Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, Inc., which control about 40 houses.

"Under the provision of the contract, Famous Players has agreed to purchase the interest of Messrs. Gordon and Shoolman's associates upon the same terms and conditions as those under which they acquired the minority stock," the Paramount statement said.

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation through its subsidiary, New England Theatres, Inc., have been associated in the operation of some of the theatres involved in the Olympia Theatres, Inc." The theatres and properties involved in the transaction are:

Scollay Square, Washington Street, Central Square, Allston, Fields Corner, Codman Square, Province Building, and Uphams Corner Strand of Boston; Lynn Olympia; Gloucester Olympia; Chelsea Olympia; New Haven Olympia; New Bedford Olympia; Harvard, North Cambridge; fifty per cent of the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Company; Empire, New Bedford; Olympia, Brockton; Capitol, Allston; City Theatre Building, Brockton; Colonial, Haverhill; and the following properties in Salem: Maynes property, Pingree property, Federal Theatre, Salem Theatre, Empire Theatre, Newton Theatre and Union Square Theatre.

The Province Building, referred to above, is a twenty-story structure in Boston, which does not contain any theatre.

It is understood that the First National franchise for New England, held by Mr. Gordon and his associates, will revert to the parent company and will ultimately be absorbed by the First National original franchise holders. It was not included in the Gordon-Paramount deal.

While no announcement has been made, it appears probable that William P. Gray will be in charge of the newly-acquired circuit for Paramount when operation is begun July 15.

Famous Players, it is reported, will build a large theatre in Fort Worth, Texas, in addition to the houses it already operates there—the Palace and Hippodrome. Announcement has already been made that the company would build a $1,000,000 theatre in San Antonio and that it would lease a house of similar size in Houston to be built by Jesse H. Jones.

Paramount officials this week denied that there was any deal under way by which the Saenger Amusement Company, New Orleans, would take over the Southern Enterprises holdings in Texas.

The 1493 Broadway Corporation, a 100% owned subsidiary of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has awarded the contract for the erection of the new 30-story office building on the site of the present Putnam Building on the west side of Times Square, New York City, running from 43rd to 44th Street, to contain a 4000-seat theatre which will be known as the Paramount Theatre, to the Thompson-Starrett Company of 250 Park Avenue. Contracts were signed on Thursday by Louis Horowitz, the president of the Thompson-Starrett Company and Adolph Zukor, the president of the 1493 Broadway Corporation.

Work of demolition on Westover Court, the structures in the rear of the Putnam Building, begins June 1st, while the office building in front will be demolished October 1st. The theatre is to be completed by August 1st, 1926, and the office building in the Fall of that year.

Activity in Theatre Field Continues

Circuits and Individuals Extending Their Holdings—Thirteen New Houses for Milwaukee

EXTENSIONS of theatre holdings by circuits and indviduals were reported in considerable numbers this week.

The Loew Circuit has completed negotiations for the purchase of a large plot of ground in Norfolk, Va., on which it is planned to build a 3,000-seat house at a cost of approximately $800,000.

A. H. Blank, associated with Balaban & Katz, has added another to his string of houses in Iowa in the acquisition of the Rialto at Sioux City. The other house already owned by the Blank-Balaban & Katz interests there is the Princess. The Rialto is being redecorated and will be reopened on July 1.

Ascher Brothers have completed plans for the addition of another big theatre in Chicago. The site for the new million dollar theater and store building is on the west side of Sheridan Road, just north of Irving Boulevard. The house will seat 2,880. The site was recently purchased for $128,000 from the Frank J. Kelly Estate.

Ground has been broken for the new Capitol Theatre, which is to be erected in Hazleton, Pa., by the Comerford Amusement Company and A. J. Feeley. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $500,000.

Finkelstein & Ruben have purchased the Strand Theatre at Eveleth, Minn., and are reported to be negotiating for the Regent in that town.

A deal is reported pending by which W. W. Farley, head of the Farash Theatres, Inc., of Schenectady, N. Y., may take over the Community Theatre, in Catskill; the Gateway in Little Falls, and the Liberty in Herkimer. Mr. Farley recently bought the Warburton Theatre, Yonkers, N. Y., where he already had six threatres.

The Schine Circuit, in which Universal has an interest, will lease a 1,000-seat house in Mechanicville, N. Y., which will be built by a group of fourteen business men of the town at a cost of $150,000. The lease will run for 15 years.

Another theatre deal in Mechanicville was announced this week, Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, prominent in exhibitor organization circles in the State, sold the Star Theatre there to W. D. Tweedy. Mr. Buettner has theatres in Cohoes and Hudson Falls.

Harry E. Huffman, President of the M.P.T.O. of Colorado and the Intermountain States, will build a new 1,700-seat theatre in Denver at a cost of about $300,000. The house will be named the Aladdin, and will be primarily first-run.

The latest acquisition of the Clinton-Meyers, Duluth, chain of theatres is an auditorium at Hibbing, Minn., with a seating capacity of 1800. Finkelstein & Ruben operate the Homer and State Theatres in the town.

Deeds have been recorded at New Haven, Conn., for the conveyance to the 70 College Street Corporation, of which Arthur S. Friend is President, of the large plot on College Street, a portion of which was formerly occupied by the Rialto theatre. Mr. Friend plans the erection of a five-story store and office building, and the building of a 3,000 seat theatre for motion pictures.

The bond issue of $660,000 was underwritten by New Haven bankers, and is said to be the largest issue ever underwritten in Connecticute.

Thirteen new theatres are planned or being built in Milwaukee. They are reported to represent over 20,000 seats and $3,500,000 in investment. Four of the new houses will cost $500,000 apiece. Among those concerned in the projects are the Saxe Circuit, which plans a $500,000 house to seat 3,000, with ballroom and several stores and offices, and the J. H. Silliman interests, which plans a 1,200-seat house. Almost without exception the new theatres will be located in the neighborhoods, and so far as can be learned all are being built by independent theatre interests.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., is extending its operations to the South Side District, a fast growing section of Los Angeles. Ground was broken recently for The Manchester, at Moneta and Manchester avenues, to seat 1,700 and embody six stores with fifteen apartments above. The total investment will be in excess of $375,000.

West Coast has also bought a large plot at 87th and Vermont avenue and will start the erection of a second theatre in the South Side chain in about three weeks. The Vermont Avenue theatre, will seat 1,500 and will include 450 loges. Four stores will flank the Vermont avenue frontage. The investment will be over $300,000.

H. M. Warner Denies Company is Tied Up With Any Other Concern

REPORTS circulated in Milwaukee during the M. P. T. O. A. convention last week that Warner Brothers were about to become affiliated with Metro-Goldwyn were denied by Harry M. Warner in a telegram to the New York office of his company and sent last Sunday before Mr. Warner left Los Angeles for the east.

In the telegram Mr. Warner said:

"I cannot understand why unreliable rumors about Warner Bros. product and activities in which we are from time to time reported tied up with some other concern, are given the slightest credence. Surely we have given to the public enough information about our future plans to assure the fact that we intend to travel along as we always have done—alone. Furthermore our recent purchase of the Vitagraph Co., which gives us a distribution outlet—the only thing we lacked—ought to be sufficient evidence that we need no affiliation with any other company.

"Let me say once more—Warner Bros. are tied up with no other concern either directly or indirectly and neither do we intend to be as long as we are in business."

Endorse Greater Movie Season

Secretary of Labor and Governors Give Their Approval to Celebration in August

"COUNT on me to encourage the success of Greater Movie Season! I hope the celebration will be all that you anticipate for it."

Secretary of the Department of Labor, James J. Davis, has gone on record as an enthusiastic supporter of Greater Movie Season which Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., is inaugurating; and capping the offers of assistance the project has evoked from national associations, the Governors of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Maine have forwarded hearty official endorsements.

"Ten years ago we thought that the moving pictures of that day were just about as near perfection as it was possible to make them," stated Secretary Davis. "But I happened to be in the theatre the other night when a news reel was shown, a part of which was an Easter parade in Washington a number of years ago. Sandwiched in with the pictures produced in the last month or so the effect was almost startling."

"The Greater Movie Season ought to be an inspiration," he continued. "The pictures are unquestionably getting finer every season, not only in the physical and mechanical details but in the quality of entertainment they provide. The theatres which are best patronized are those which are showing only the very highest type of plays educationally, inspirationally and morally as well as mechanically."

Governor Alvan F. Fuller, of Massachusetts, wrote from the Executive Chamber in Boston:

"The Greater Movie Season, with its promise of finer and better pictures should interest the millions of motion picture patrons throughout our country. Every advance in this wonderful field of entertainment with its wide scope for public influence and good, should be endorsed and encouraged so that we may have pictures that appeal to the best in the hearts and minds of those who do the world's work and to those who are soon to step into the ranks and continue the work. The best movies are those furnishing a pleasant memory which can be recalled in moments of leisure."

Governor A. J. Pothier, of Rhode Island, wrote:

"I am glad to say that I can heartily endorse the campaign for a Greater Movie Season, to be inaugurated next August. Motion pictures if properly produced and exhibited have a great educational feature, especially to the young of our country. This campaign to produce better pictures, I am sure, will be a great success."

Governor Ralph O. Brewster of Maine:

"Every good citizen viewing the increasing unsettlement that is abroad in our land must be deeply concerned with any movement that will make for cleaner and better motion pictures, because of the profound influence the moving picture theatre is today exerting upon the development of our youth. To the extent that your organization and your efforts contribute to this improvement you are entitled to the commendation of every official and every citizen concerned with the things that are of good report."

Under those auspices, Greater Movie Season should command immense public interest throughout New England, and when the national field campaign gets under way gubernatorial endorsements in every state co-operating with the Hays organization are confidently expected.

The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in convention at Houston, Texas, heard Greater Movie Season cited as a stimulant to all businesses appealing to popular taste, in the course of an address by J. Homer Platten, treasurer of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.

An active membership of several millions is represented by the organizations that already stand pledged to support and participate in Greater Movie Season.

Pathe News Shows Subway Mishap Scenes

Patrons of Broadway, New York, picture houses saw scenes of the Eastside subway accident of last Tuesday four hours after it happened, according to the Pathe office. Pathe News was on the job with the first flash of the mishap and Editor Emanuel Cohen detailed three cameramen to the Lexington Avenue subway. They were grinding cameras eight minutes following the disaster, in which one hundred persons were injured.

Labor Federation Plans Picture Campaign

Moving pictures are to be extensively used by the American Federation of Labor in an elaborate campaign which is to be undertaken for the unionization of all workers in all industries. The films will demonstrate the value of trade unionism and at the same time encourage the purchase of union labeled goods.

Plans for the campaign were laid at a meeting of high officials of the Federation in Washington on May 6, when it was decided that the time was ripe for an attempt to swell the ranks of union labor, which have steadily been dwindling since the end of the war. The undertaking of this campaign is considered to mean that labor officiels see an era of continued prosperity for the United States, since it is an axiom that men can be organized only when fully employed, the idle worker thinking more of his family than of unionizing.

A three-year campaign through moving pictures has been recently concluded with excellent success, officials were told by Collis Lovely, president of the Boot and Shoe Workers' International Union, in bringing before the Federation the benefits to be derived from this form of proselyting.

First National to Have Havana Exchange

B. Lichtig has departed for Havana, Cuba, where he is to open a new First National exchange. The assignment was given him by E. B. Johnson, manager of the foreign department of First National, who plans to open twenty-one similar foreign exchanges.

Lichtig has been identified with the industry for the past nine years. Most of that time he has been a representative for Universal in Spanish speaking countries. Since 1922 he has held forth in Barcelona, Spain, where he established the Universal exchange and ten distributing offices in the key centers.

Resolution on Probe of Film Boards of Trade

FOLLOWING is the text of the resolution adopted unanimously by the M. P. T. O. A. Convention at Milwaukee regarding the reported investigation of the Film Boards of Trade by the Department of Justice:

"INASMUCH as rumors have come to our attention that the Department of Justice is investigating the various Film Boards of Trade and inasmuch as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America have never approved or subscribed to the forms of this socalled 'Uniform Contract' for the purchase of pictures.

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED, that if there is any foundation to these rumors, that this Convention assembled in Milwaukee, May 15th, 1925, hereby goes on record to render all assistance and cooperation within our power to the Department of Justice in its endeavors.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a certified copy of this Resolution be forwarded to the Attorney General of the United States."

Australasian Films, Ltd., in Merger, is Report

AN Associated Press despatch from Melbourne, Australia, dated May 19th, reports the merger of big motion picture interests in Australasia and New Zealand. The report states that the organization is capitalized at $15,500,000 and will control 130 theatres and will produce as well as import pictures.

W. A. Robbins of the Australasian Films, Ltd. offices in New York stated that he had received a cable from Sydney this week which declared that the operations of the Company would be extended into New Zealand. The films which Australasian controlls in the Antipodes were formerly sold for another company for distribution in New Zealand.

Mr. Robbins added that the Company recently acquired a large property and was equipping it to enlarge its production activities to make pictures for export. Previously Australasian's productions had been designed for home consumption. The Company owns about 100 theatres in Australia. There are about 200 houses in New Zealand, 130 of which, if the report be correct, have been acquired by Australiasian.

Allison Heads Atlanta Sale of Coins

George R. Allison, of Fox Film Corporation, has been appointed captain of the Film Industry Division in Atlanta for the sale of the Confederate Memorial Coins, the net proceeds from the sale of these coins to go to the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental Association for the development of the gigantic project of carving the Confederate memorial on the side of the mountain.

The coins which have been placed at the disposal of the Stone Mountain Association are the half-dollars minted by the Federal government as a tribute to the valor of the heroes of the South. They will sell for one dollar. Allison, who is one of the pioneers in the film fraternity of Atlanta, has a host of friends in business and social circles of the city and is an excellent choice for this important commission.

Court Stops Gleichman Move

Effort to Drop Kunsky as Co-Defendant Denied by Judge in Suit Against F. P.-L.

EFFORTS to discontinue the John H. Kunsky theatrical interests as co-defendants in the suit brought by Phil Gleichman, former manager of the Broadway-Strand theatre, against Famous Players for breach of contract, met with difficulty before Judge Fred S. Lamb of Cadillac, Michigan, now sitting in the Wayne county circuit court.

Efforts were made by the Gleichman counsel to have Kunsky dropped from the suit, and the case adjourned to the United States district court. However the retention of the Kunsky interests may only be for the time being according to an intimation by Judge Lamb, thus keeping the case within the jurisdiction of the circuit court.

Testimony during the first sessions of the trial indicated that the gross earnings of the Strand, which had a five year contract for Paramount products, were $994,338 in the three years that the contract was carried out. From this amount the Famous Players-Lasky corp., received $279,227 and Gleichman, $118,533, net, according to counsel for Gleichman. The first year the corporation received $105,508, net, and Gleichman, $64,654. At the end of the third year there was a marked decrease in profits, the corporation receiving $75,165 and Gleichman, $16,385.

When it came time to enter into a contract for the fourth year Gleichman told the corporation that he would demand all first-run films and would not pay a rental for one picture of more than $1,500.

After Mr. Gleichman's demands were refused, the Paramount product was given to the Kunsky interests. When called to the stand, Gleichman testified that he entered into the contract only after the most earnest solicitation by representatives of the distributor.

"Mr. Al Lichtman, who was then distribution manager for the corporation, advised me to purchase the entire theatre," Gleichman said, "promising the corporation would back me financially. When I learned that the initial cash payment for purchase would be $12,500, I wired the Lasky people in New York the amount demanded. I received a check from them for that amount the following day by special delivery. Then I made a contract with the corporation to use its feature films."

The defendant is demanding a generous share of the earnings of Famous Players-Lasky in the two years that the contract was alleged to be violated. Lichtman has been present during the first sessions as a witness for Gleichman. Sidney R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players, is also in Detroit, ready to testify in behalf of Famous.

Resolution on Extension of Arbitration

FOLLOWING is the text of the resolution unanimously adopted by the M. P. T. O. A. Convention at Milwaukee, on the extension of Arbitration to cover cases of independent exhibitors vs. producer-chains and other chains not owned or controlled by producers or distributors.

"RESOLVED, That this Convention approve, endorse and support most vigorously a plan to extend the principles of Arbitration to grievances of exhibitors against producers and distributors arising out of their inability to secure service of film because of the unfair competitive methods of circuits and chains of theatres owned by these producers and distributors, and also because of the inability of theatre owners to secure film for the operation of their theatres, because of the unfair competitive methods of circuits and chains of theatre operators, and to that end the Board of Directors meet in conference in New York City with the representatives of the producers and distributors for the purpose of drafting an agreement embodying such plan."

Million Dollar Building Program in California

A $1,000,000 theatre building program was begun in Northern California May 8th according to an official announcement by Robert A. McNeil, president of the Golden State Theatre and Realty Corporation, with the commencement of construction of six theatres, five of which are in San Francisco and Oakland.

The Excelsior Amusement Company, a subsidiary of the Golden State Corporation, signed a lease for a new theatre to be built by George Lagomarsino on Mission street at Olive, near the county line. It will seat 1,200 persons and cos t$150,000. Locations of theatres in the million dollar program are the $250,000 Sunset Theatre, Irving street between 14th and 15th avenues; three Oakland houses, San Pablo avenue and Standford, Park Boulevard and East 18th street, East 14th street and 32nd avenue; one at Pacific Grove and the Mission and Olive street theatre, which will serve the Crocker-Amazon and Ocean View tracts of the outer Mission district. W. H. Moore, manager of the Excelsior Theatre will also have charge of the new house.

Intermountain Film Board Names New Chief

William F. Gordon, manager of the Associated First National exchange in Salt Lake City was elected president of the Intermountain Film Board of Trade, at a recent meeting to fill the place of C. E. "Doc" Holah, resigned. Gordon was formerly vice-president. C. F. Parr, Producers Distributing Corporation local manager, was elected vice-president. "Doc" Holah was here as representative of the Fox Film corporation, and resigned to take charge of the Universal Mobile cross country unit which left Hollywood this week.

Syracuse Council Adopts Daylight Saving

The common council in Syracuse last week voted to adopt daylight saving in that city from June 15 to September 15. The decision came as a rather hard blow to the theatres of that city, the owners of which were in hopes that Syracuse might stay on old time this year.

Business Men Finance Daly City, Cal., Theatre

A company to finance the erection of a theatre costing $100,000 is being organized by business men of Daly City, near San Francisco. The structure will be erected at El Camino Real and Flournoy streets. It will be of reinforced concrete construction, mission type of architecture and will seat about 1,000.

Barbian Again Head of Akron Enterprise

Charles Barbian, former prominent motion picture exhibitor of Akron, returns to the limelight again after an absence of several years as president of the Akron Enterprise Company. This company has taken a 99-year lease on the site of the new B. F. Keith Theatre Bldg., S. Hight Street. Keith Vaudeville Exchange will book the attractions. The house has a seating capacity of 2,000. Barbian owned and operated the Waldorf theatre in Akron prior to its sale to Messrs Friedman and Byerly.

Prod. Dist. Corp. Lists Twenty-Six

Sam Rork and Marshall Neilan Productions Are Included in Preliminary Announcement of Coming Season

JOHN C. FLINN, general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, has announced twenty-six of the forty-odd productions that will be released by the company during the 1925-1926 program. Included in the list of producers who will contribute to this extensive program are such influential names as Marshall Neilan, Sam Rork, Cecil B. De Mille, Al Christie, Charles Christie, Hunt Stromberg, Frances Marion, Renaud Hoffman and A. H. Sebastian.

While this preliminary announcement lists only twenty-six pictures, among them are included the titles of six exceptionally successful stage plays, including "Eve's Leaves," "Seven Days," "Three Faces East," "The Road to Yesterday," "Silence" and "Strongheart," which will be produced under the title of "Brave Heart."

In addition to these plays fifteen popular works of fiction are listed for screen adaptation including "The Last Frontier," by Courtney Riley Cooper; "Simon the Jester," by William J. Locke; "The New Magdalen," by Wilkie Collins; "Hell's Highroad," by Ernest Pascal; "The People vs. Nancy Preston," by John Morosco; "The Wedding Song," by Ethel Watts Mumford; "The Open Switch," by Frank H. Spearman; "Her Two Men," by Richard Washburn Child; "The Volga Boatman," by Konrad Bercovici; "The Million Dollar Handicap," adapted from "Thoroughbreds," by W. A. Frazer; "Red Dice," adapted from "The Iron Chalice," by Octavius Roy Cohen; "Made for Love," adapted from "The Valiant Gentleman," by M. J. Stuart; "Steel Preferred," by Herschell Hall; "The Valley of Fear," by W. G. Tuttle, and "The Man From Red Gulch," by Bret Harte.

This imposing collection of material from the pens of great dramatists and writers, is rounded out with three especially written original stories. These include "The Flame of the Yukon," "The Unknown Soldier," and "Fifth Avenue." The first title will be a Hunt Stromberg production; Renaud Hoffman will produce "The Unknown Soldier," and "Fifth Avenue" will be a Sam Rork feature.

Two personally directed Cecil B. De Mille super productions are announced in "The Road to Yesterday" and "The Volga Boatman." The first of these will be an adaptation by Jeanie Macpherson and Beulah Marie Dix from the famous stage play "The Road to Yesterday," by E. J. Sutherland and Miss Dix. Joseph Schildkraut, stage star, will be featured with Vera Reynolds and Jetta Goudal. De Mille's second personally directed production, "The Volga Boatman," will be adapted from Konrad Bercovici's story.

In addition to the two personally directed specials, nine productions are listed to be supervised by De Mille. These include "Silence," Max Marcin's current dramatic success that will go on tour next season with four road companies in addition to opening for a run in Chicago with the original cast. The screen adaptation of this play will be directed by Rupert Julian.

"Eve's Leaves," another dramatic hit on Broadway by Harry Chapman Ford, will be interpreted on the screen with Leatrice Joy as the star under the direction of Paul Sloane. "Three Faces East," adapted from the stage play by Anthony Paul Kelly, will be directed by Frank Urson and Paul Iribe with a cast headed by Agnes Ayres and Robert Ames. "Hell's Highroad," adapted by Eve Unsell from Ernest Pascal's novel, will star Leatrice Joy, supported by Edmund Burns, Robert Edeson and Julia Faye under the direction of Rupert Julian.

"The Coming of Amos," starring Rod La Rocque, with Jetta Goudal, Trixie Friganza and Noah Beery in featured roles, adapted from William J. Locke's novel, will be directed by Paul Sloane. Sloane will also direct "The Wedding Song," adapted from the novel by Ethel Watts Mumford, and "Made for Love," adapted from M. J. Stuart's novel "The Valiant Gentleman." Leatrice Joy will be starred in both these productions, supported by Edmund Burns.

Rupert Julian will direct Rod La Rocque in "Red Dice," adapted from the Octavius Roy Cohen story "The Iron Chalice," and "Brave Heart," adapted from the dramatic success "Strongheart," by William C. De Mille.

The stage farce "Seven Days," by Avery Hopwood and Mary Roberts Rinehart and founded on Mrs. Rinehart's book "When a Man Marries," will be produced as an Al. Christie special feature comedy under the direction of Scott Sidney, director of "Charley's Aunt." This production will have a cast featuring Lillian Rich, Creighton Hale, Lilyan Tashman, Mabel Julienne Scott, Hallam Cooley, William Austin, Tom Wilson, Rosa Gore, Eddie Gribbon and Charles Clary.

Six Hunt Stromberg productions are listed. Two of these will be Priscilla Dean pictures, two Harry Carey pictures and two personally directed Stromberg Specials. The western story, "The Last Frontier," by Courtney Riley Cooper, originally started by the late Thos. H. Ince, will be completed by Stromberg as his first special during the coming year. This will be followed by "The Open Switch," adapted from Frank Spearman's railroad story "Whispering Smith."

Priscilla Dean will be starred under Tom Forman's direction, in "The People vs. Nancy Preston," adapted from the successful novel by John Morosco, and in "The Flame of the Yukon," an original story of the Alaskan gold rush especially written for Priscilla Dean.

Harry Carey will be starred under Tom Forman's direction in "The Valley of Fear" from the Liberty Magazine story by W. G. Tuttle, and in "The Man from Red Gulch," from Bret Harte's western story "The Idyll of Red Gulch."

The newly organized Metropolitan Productions will release four George Melford Productions, including "Without Mercy," adapted from John Goodwin's novel, featuring Vera Reynolds, Dorothy Phillips, Robert Ames, Rockliffe Fellowes, Patricia Palmer, Lionel Belmore, Fred Malatesta, Sidney D'Albrook and Gene Pallette; "Steel Preferred," adapted from Herschall Hall's series of Saturday Evening Post stories; "Her Two Men," by Richard Washburn Child, another popular Saturday Evening Post story, and "The Million Dollar Handicap," adapted from the famous novel of the race track by W. A. Frazer.

Frances Marion is scheduled to contribute her first two pictures as an independent producer in "The New Magdalen," adapted from Wilkie Collins's novel, and "Simon the Jester," adapted from William J. Locke's story of the same title. Both of these adaptations will be made personally by Miss Marion and the picture produced under her personal supervision.

Sam Rork is listed for four productions including "Fifth Avenue," a story of a thousand emotions, in which Lewis Stone will be starred under the direction of Alfred E. Green.

Renaud Hoffman will contribute "The Unknown Soldier" from the story by Dorothy Farnum.

Additional attractions bringing the total for the year to between forty and fifty will be announced later when the details of their production with casts and directors have been set.

Enjoined From Using Bill Mix Name in Pictures

THE United States District Court for the Southern District of California has issued a permanent injunction restraining the William (Bill) Mix Productions of Los Angeles, from issuing any advertising material that might tend to confuse their pictures with those starring Tom Mix, Fox Film Corporation star.

The action of the court "forever enjoins" the parties named in the injunction from using the names of Mix, or William Mix, or Bill Mix, or William (Bill) Mix in any way in connection with the sale, advertisement, exploitation, leasing, releasing and or exhibition of pictures.

The injunction was granted against "William (Bill) Mix Productions," a corporation, Frank M. Sanford, doing business under the firm name of "Sanford Productions," Dick Carter, William R. Mix, F. M. Sanford, Genevieve Sanford, John Doe, and Richard Doe.

Four Theatres Destroyed in Quebec Fire

No less than three moving picture theatres of St. Joseph d'Alma, Quebec, a small centre 125 miles North of Quebec City, were destroyed by fire in a conflagration which swept the town on Friday evening, May 8. Thirty places of business and residences were wiped out and the fire was stopped only with the use of dynamite, the loss being placed at $1,000,000.

The fire started in the Victoria Theatre just before the start of the evening performances and no one was injured there. In the spread of flames, the two other local theatres, the National and the Alma, were devoured by the fire with considerable loss. St. Joseph d'Alma is the centre of a large agricultural district in a remote section of the Province of Quebec and the theatres drew patronage from miles around.

U. S. Film Exports Are Doubled

Shipments to European Countries for 1924 Show Nearly 100 Percent Increase

SHIPMENTS of American motion picture films to Europe in 1924 were nearly double those of the preceding year, it is shown in an analysis of our foreign trade in films just made by the Department of Commerce. The increase in exports to Europe, it is shown, accounted for most of the 32,000,000-foot increase in total shipments in 1924 as compared with the preceding year.

According to figures just issued by the Department of Commerce 170,347,342 linear feet of positives and 8,100,264 linear feet of negatives at a declared value of $6,081,917 and $1,319,859, respectively, were sent abroad in 1924 as against 1923 figures of 138,656,880 linear feet of positives at a declared value of $5,417,745 and 8,268,590 linear feet of negatives at a declared value of $996,336.

Each grand division of the world showed a gain in its imports of positives from the United States. The outstanding feature here is that American exports of positives to Europe rose from about 29,000,000 feet in 1923 to over 53,000,000 feet in 1924—a rise of nearly 100 per cent.

Eleven out of 26 European countries—among these England, France, Germany, Austria, Belgium and Sweden—more than doubled their imports of positives from the United States. The United Kingdom alone as our largest market for these took over 22,500,000 feet in 1924 as against 11,066,000 feet the year before, this 1924 figure representing over 80 per cent of the amount which was imported by the whole of Europe in 1923. France as our second largest European market took a little over 8,000,000 feet of positives as against about 4,000,000 feet in 1923, and Sweden crowded out Germany for third place with 4,100,000 feet in 1924 as against a little over 2,000,000 feet in 1923. Germany incidentally just about doubled her imports of positives with 3,693,000 feet in 1924 as against a 1923 total of 1,354,000 feet.

Exports of positives to Latin America climbed from about 45,000,000 linear feet in 1923 to somewhat over 47,000,000 linear feet in 1924. The gains here were fairly well distributed. Argentina continued as our largest Latin American market for these—her total of nearly 14,000,000 feet for 1924 as compared with 1923 figures of just over 11,000,000 feet giving her fourth position among the markets of the world. Of other Latin American countries Brazil came second with 8,380,000 feet—a slight decline from 1923, while Mexico and Cuba stood third and fourth. These with about 5,500,000 feet and 4,500,000 feet showed consistent gains over last year.

Considerable gains were recorded in exports of positives to the Far East, the 1924 figures showing slightly over 45,000,000 linear feet as against 40,734,000 linear feet in 1923. Over 60 per cent of this rise is due to greatly increased imports of these by Japan—about 9,500,000 feet for 1924 in comparison with 6,300,000 feet for the previous year. This incidentally gives Japan the position of fifth in the export markets for positives from the United States. Australia, of course, remains as our largest Far Eastern market and third of all our export markets for these with over 18,500,000 feet in 1924, this figure, however, being a decline of about 200,000 feet from 1923. Other Far Eastern markets which showed up well were New Zealand, China and British India in the order named. These all had totals of over 3,000,000 feet—slight gains over 1923.

Of the other markets of the world Canada remains second—next to the United Kingdom—with 19,620,000 linear feet of positives as against 19,071,914 linear feet in 1923. British South Africa for the first time passed the 4,000,000 footage mark in 1924, a gain of nearly a million feet over 1923.

Out of slightly over 8,000,000 feet of negatives exported in 1924, Europe took nearly 7,000,000 feet. About 5,000,000 feet of these were divided between the United Kingdom and France—about 3,500,000 to the former and nearly 1,500,000 to the latter, as against about the same figure for 1923 in the case of the United Kingdom and a gain of about 500,000 feet for France. Germany came third, Italy fourth and Sweden fifth with totals of 783,000 feet, 657,000 feet and 385,000 feet—these being gains of about 75 per cent, 110 per cent, and 600 per cent respectively over 1923.

For Latin America a decline from over 2,000,000 feet to 540,000 feet in imports of negatives from the United States took place, due almost entirely to a large decline in imports of these into Mexico and Argentina, this decline being 1,400,000 feet to 25,000 feet for the former and 628,000 feet to 150,000 feet for the latter. In the Far East a gain of from 338,000 feet to 558,000 feet was shown. Here Japan boosted her imports of negatives from the United States from 62,000 feet to 336,000 feet—this being sufficient to account for the entire gain.

Irwin Plan Will Be Given Try-Out

A MEETING was held Wednesday afternoon, May 19, at the offices of the Hays association between the principals of a number of prominent distributing companies and those of the Railway Express Film Transport Company, the subsidiary of the American Railway Express Company.

As a result of a thorough discussion, the Railway Express Film Transport Company was asked to submit terms for a try-out, in an exchange territory of the Irwin Plan of Consolidated Physical Distribution, the winning plan in the Motion Picture News Contest.

In event of the try-out being made, all distributing concerns will be invited to join in the operation under a uniform contract.

Sparks Enterprises Buy Sites in Haines City

The E. J. Sparks Enterprises of Jacksonville have increased their holdings in Haines City, Florida, by two pieces of business property valued at $120,000. One site includes 100 feet on Ingraham avenue, across the street from the Van Buren hotel, while the other covers an entire block, fronting on Ingraham avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets. An 80-foot boulevard is now being cut through on the rear side of the property.

Famous Players Stock at New High Mark

COMMON and preferred stock of Famous Players-Lasky reached a new high point on the New York market during the week, when common touched 106½ and preferred 111. Over 18,000 shares of common changed hands at 2¾ points over the previous peak. Preferred at 111 was one point higher than the previous high mark for 1925.

New York financial editors commenting on the rise attributed it to advance information on the report for the first quarter of the year, but the film industry is more inclined to attribute it to the purchase by Famous of the Gordon chain in New England.

The common stock reached 106¼, with a low of 102⅛ and closing of 105. Preferred reached 111, low 109 and closed at 111.

Atlanta's New Cameo Has Auspicious Opening

The Cameo, newest addition to Atlanta's motion picture houses, had a particularly auspicious opening Monday of this week. The lobby was filled with beautiful baskets of flowers, sent by various members of the local film fraternity, and Manager Thomas G. Coleman, who is also part owner of the theatre, expressed himself as well pleased with the attendance on the opening day.

The theatre began its career with a very generous civic act. Every penny of Monday's proceeds was turned over to the Firemen's Relief Fund, which is being raised to care for those left desolate and unprovided for by the death of seven firemen in a recent disaster. A generous sum was contributed by the Cameo, and Matt Whitham, manager of the Alamo No. 2 put in the first dollar taken in at the box office as admission and contribution to the worthy cause.

The Cameo, which is owned jointly by R. B. Wilby, Mr. Coleman, H. F. Kincey, and Messers Hill and Baum, is a very pretty addition to local theatres. It seats over 400, and all day Monday the house was practically full, in spite of inclement weather. Its policy is to bring back the big pictures.

Paramount Makes Changes in House Managers

A number of new appointments have been made to the management of Paramount theatres. Edward A. Zorn has been made city manager of the Bardavon, Stratford, and Liberty at Poughkeepsie and Charles H. Hammerslogh has been made manager of the Academy of Music and Broadway in Newburgh, New York.

In the south, the Stanley Kettler and Rialto of West Palm Beach are operated in conjunction with the Beaux Arts of Palm Beach under the management of Stanley C. Warrick.

Metro - Goldwyn Southern Division Convenes

The Southern division of the Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Corporation met in a two-day convention at New Orleans last week and discussed the various phases of the distributing end of the game. Representatives were present from Atlanta, Oklahoma City, Dallas and New Orleans.

Charles E. Kessnich, district manager, presided at the sessions and the following were among the speakers: C. J. Briant, manager of the New Orleans exchange; Manager Hanlon of the Atlanta branch; Mark Holstein, manager of the Oklahoma City branch; George Jones, Atlanta booker; J. F. Willingham, Dallas booker; Leroy Bickel, manager of the Dallas exchange; Jack Elwell, Atlanta salesman; Lewis Ingrahm, Atlanta salesman; C. D. Haug, exploitation man, and E. V. Richards, general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company.

Others in attendance were: Clarence Deihl, P. W. Durfield, G. W. Briant, Joe Farbacher, J. H. Grainger, W. R. Paara, Ed Oldsmith, Claude Fulgham, J. C. Shannon, G. P. Albright and J. B. Pennington.

Large Trust Deeds Recorded for St. Louis Houses

Two of the largest deeds of trusts involving theatre property ever recorded in St. Louis, Mo., were filed with Recorder of Deeds William Tamme on Tuesday, May 12. One deed is for $4,500,000 and is given as security for an issue of serial bonds on the proposed Ambassador Theatre and office building which Skouras Brothers Enterprises will build at Seventh and Locust streets.

The other deed for $800,000, protects the bonds of the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation on the new St. Louis Theatre, Grand boulevard and Morgan street, which is scheduled to open in September.

Skouras Brothers have awarded the general contract for their theatre and office building to the Boaz-Kiel Construction Company and the work of clearing the site is now under way.

Court Acts on Commission Order to Eastman Co.

THE Circuit Court of Appeals has affirmed the Federal Trade Commission order directing the Eastman Kodak Company to cease acting on the agreement under which the Allied Laboratories Association and its members were required to buy only American raw stock and the Eastman Company was restrained from entering the motion picture field.

The court reversed the part of the Commission order directing the Eastman Company to dispose of the Burlatour laboratories and to refrain from making pictures while foreign stock was not purchased by the defendants.

Metro - Goldwyn Declares Quarterly Dividend

The Board of Directors of Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corp., has declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾% on the Preferred Stock of the company, payable June 15th, 1925, to stock-holders of record at the close of business May 29th, 1925.

Washington Better Films is Enlarging

The Washington State Better Films Association is enlarging its organization. An Eastern Washington branch was organized recently under the direction of Mrs. A. Smith of the Federated Women's Clubs, and Mrs. C. Smith of the Parent Teachers' Association.

Schine Company Adds to New York Holdings

The Schine Theatrical Company, of Gloversville, N. Y., continues to extend its chain of houses in New York state. The Regent Theatre in Corning has now been purchased by the Schine interests which also control the Princess and State in the same city.

The house was owned by John Maloney and the purchase price is said to have been around $40,000. The Regent formerly was leased by G. H. Tobias, owner of the Princess. The Regent has been dark for the last two years.

George Perkins Freed on Charges in Canada

George F. Perkins, president of Perkins Electric Company, 1481 Bleury Street, Montreal, a distributor in Canada for Simplex and Powers projectors and many other theatre lines, was freed of all charges on May 11 when Judge Cusson of the Montreal Court of Sessions acquitted him of abetting, inciting and procuring other people to set fire to the Perkins Company warehouse at 150 St. Urbain Street, Montreal, in August last.

There were originally seven charges in all against Perkins but His Lordship reduced them to two counts to save time in the court. The accused was acquitted on the first charge of causing a fire in his store premises when it was heard in court during the previous week and the second acquittal on May 11 puts an end to the whole case.

Rio Vista, Cal., Theatre Has Elaborate Opening

The new Vista Theatre, of Rio Vista, which Paul Weiss has just completed, opened on April 23rd with a pretentious program, and a large attendance of local patrons, and many well-wishing friends from San Francisco. The new theatre, seating approximately five hundred, is built with main floor and balcony, with a loge section. Seating throughout was furnished by the Heywood-Wakefield concern. An elaborate entertainment was planned by Mr. Weiss, which opened with an organ solo by Mel Hertz on the new Robert Morton Pit Pipe Organ, installed by Sherman Clay & Co. Further music was furnished by a Jazz orchestra. The Mayor's dedication address was followed by vaudeville acts, and the personal appearance of movie stars, after which the film presentation was made. Immediately following the opening performance, a sumptous banquet was enjoyed by the many guests.

Thall Wins Promotion in West Coast Theatres

Charles M. Thall has been appointed to the important post of assistant general manager of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., by A. M. Bowles, general manager. Thall in the past has held the position of booking manager. He will continue his new duties at the headquarters of the company in San Francisco and will have supervision of all bookings together with the management of the nineteen theatres on the northern division. He will also be in direct charge of the general offices in San Francisco.

Contract Awarded for New West Coast House

West Coast Theatres has awarded the contract for the building of the $350,000 Manchester Theatre building to be erected in Los Angeles and work on the building will be started immediately. It is expected it will be finished within six months. The theatre will be class A with a stage to handle acts and will have a seating capacity of 2,000.

Buffalo and Albany Zones to Hold Joint Meeting

SPECIAL joint meeting of the Buffalo and Albany Zone committees will be held at the Hotel Onondaga in Syracuse on Tuesday, June 2, starting at 11:30 o'clock daylight saving time. Arrangements for the coming meeting were completed late Tuesday afternoon. The executive committees of both Zones will hold a meeting at the Hotel Onondaga on Monday night, June 1, at which officials and boards of directors of both Zones will be expected to be present.

The joint meeting is the first of its kind to be held and as a direct result it is expected that there will be adopted a set of by-laws that will bring about greater co-operation between the two Zones and which will work to the advantage of exhibitors generally.

Laemmle's New Service Plan

Universal Adopts Revolutionary Sales Policy to Help the Small Exhibitors

A REVOLUTIONARY sales plan, inaugurated by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, as a means primarily of helping the small, one, two and three-night a week exhibitor is announced by Universal. It is a complete Service Plan, by which complete Universal service will be supplied to any exhibitor at a rate commensurate with what he can afford. The weekly service is offered as low as $1 a reel, actually less than the accepted figures for distribution costs $1.05 a reel. The plan has been gradually put into effect in various exchange territories during the past eight weeks and according to Universal almost 1,000 exhibitors have applied for the service, to date.

The Universal statement concerning the new plan is as follows:

"Carl Laemmle has taken another far-reaching step in the interests of the small exhibitor. It is the inauguration of a Complete Service Plan, by which any exhibitor may get complete film service at a heretofor unprecedented service fee. In the case of the small, one, two and three-nights-a-week houses, the service may run as low as $1 a reel if necessary. This cost actually is less than the accepted distribution cost of $1.05 a reel.

"The Complete Service Plan is Laemmle's latest step in the continuation of his 'live and let live' policy. It is proof positive that he is on the level with the exhibitor and that he means to take every possible step necessary to keep the small theatre open and the small exhibitor independent.

"The Universal Chief recently proved his assertion that Universal's theatre purchases were for outlet only, by offering to sell Universal product over the head of any Universal house, and even to sell any Universal theatre itself, providing he were assured an outlet for Universal pictures in the community involved. Another recent development of the Laemmle 'white treatment' policy was the inauguration of a Cost Plus Ten Percent basis for selling Universal pictures. The new Complete Service Plan marks a new phase of Laemmle's willingness to make extraordinary concessions for the welfare of the exhibitors whose good will and success have been close to his heart during his entire picture career.

"The Universal service under the new plan includes the Universal Jewels of 'The Signal Tower' group and the first White List, now being released. It includes the Western features in the 1924-1925 productions made with Hoot Gibson. Jack Hoxie and William Desmond. It includes the six serials released during the past season, down to 'The Fighting Ranger' now being released. There also are 52 Century Comedies, among them Wanda Wiley comedies, Edna Marian comedies and two-reelers with other stars. The one-reel comedies in the service number 52 in all, including the 'Hysterical History' comedies. There also are 52 two-reel Western featurettes, the five Baby Peggy Specials, six 'Fast Stepper' two-reelers and the last two series, including twelve pictures, of 'The Leather Pushers.'

"The first public announcement of the plan, which has been under way eight weeks, was made by Mr. Laemmle in his talk before the M. P. T. O. A. members in convention at Milwaukee last week. His speech dealt with Independence and he alluded to the Complete Service Plan as another evidence of his own independence, of his desire to keep exhibitors independent and as an assurance that the theatres he had been forced to buy would never be used as a weapon against his own customers."

Gladys Hulette Has Big Role in "Mystic"

Director Tod Browning has cast Gladys Hulette for an important role in "The Mystic," his own story, which he is making for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle in the leading roles.

Miss Hulette made her debut in motion pictures as a child in arms, and as a little girl was starred in the first trick photography film ever made, a J. Stewart Blackton production for Vitagraph.

"The Mystic" is said to expose the methods of crook spiritualists and fake mediums. Mitchell Lewis, Robert Ober and Stanton Heck are in the supporting cast.

Ingram Signs Boy Actor for "Mare Nostrum"

Rex Ingram has engaged Michael Brantford, leading boy actor of England, to enact the role of young Esteban in the screen version of "Mare Nostrum," which he is producing in Europe for Metro-Goldwyn. "Mickey," as the youth is known, is thirteen years old and made his debut before the camera at the age of five. Among recent pictures he appeared in are "This Freedom," "Not for Sale" and "Woman to Woman" with Betty Compson.

Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno have the leading roles in "Mare Nostrum," which was adapted by Willis Goldbeck from the story by Blasco Ibanez.

Ann Pennington Signs to Play in Christie Feature

Ann Pennington, musical comedy favorite and one of the stars of a recent Ziegfeld "Follies" show, has signed with Al. Christie, to appear with Julian Eltinge in a feature comedy to be made following the completion of "Seven Days," now being filmed in Hollywood. The picture in which Miss Pennington and Mr. Eltinge are to appear is scheduled for release by Producers Distributing Corporation next season.

Name Winner of 'Phantom' Slogan Contest

JOHN W. STOCK of San Francisco has been declared the winner of the nationally conducted contest to find the most fitting line to advertise "The Phantom of the Opera," Universal's new film spectacle.

"Get the spirit, see 'The Phantom of the Opera" is the slogan which Universal has selected as the best of the 6,351 submitted since the contest opened.

The first prize is an award of $250. Second prize of $100 went to S. M. Levy of Henderson, Ky., for the suggestion "A million thrills to thrill millions," while the third prize of $50 was won by Claude M. Smith of Modesta, Calif., for the line "Millions agree it's the play you should see."

The next ten best slogans, for which there was an award of $10.00 each, were submitted by the following: Harold J. Dangler. Rochester, N. Y.; Kenneth D. Stern, Cincinnati, Ohio; A. P. Sitton, Tularosa, N. Mex.; J. H. Talbot, Norwich, Kas.; Robert G. Griffin, New York City; H. E. Babcock, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Neva B. Vivian, Tallahassee, Fla.; C. I. Winograd, Los Angeles, Calif.; S. Maltz, New York City; Mrs. Joe Gilbert, Austin, Texas.

Neil Hamilton Signs Long Paramount Contract

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of Production of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has signed Neil Hamilton to a long term contract to be featured in Paramount pictures. Hamilton, heretofor under contract to D. W. Griffith has apeared recently in Paramount pictures by arrangement with the director.

His first picture under the new contract will be "The Golden Princess," in which Betty Bronson will have the feature role. It is an original story by Eleanor Gates, author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl." Hamilton will leave shortly for the coast, where the production is to be made.

Loew-Metro-Goldwyn Club Elects Officers

The Loew-Metro-Goldwyn Club, composed of executives and employees of Loews, Inc., held the annual election of officers at the last meeting of the organization. Charles J. Sonin, purchasing agent of the company, was named to the office of president, while the other elected officers were Frank J. Roehrenbeck, vice-president; Harry C. Kleindeinst, treasurer; Alice Goodman, recording secretary, and William Cameron, financial secretary. The Board of Governors for the ensuing year will be Fred Mitchell, Harry O. Worden, Max Wolff, Charles Quick, Joe Vogel, Frank Roehrenbeck and Florence Roehrer.

Bruce Off to Film Scenes in South Seas

Robert C. Bruce, producer of motion picture scenics and short length novelty reels, left Los Angeles this week for the Hawaiian Islands, where he plans to spend several months in making novelty pictures. Mr. Bruce, who was accompanied by his wife, sailed on the Calawii.

The pictures he will make are to be added to the Overture Scenics, Screen Paintings and other film innovations introduced by Mr. Bruce. He has established an office at the Christie Studios, Hollywood.

Prophecy of Rowland Comes True

A PROPHECY made some time ago by Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National has come true. He predicted that eventually authors would prepare their stories for the screen before their publication in book form.

Now comes the announcement from Rowland of the purchase of four stories from well known authors for production first in pictures. The authors are Clarence Buddington Kelland, Margaretta Tuttle, Ernest Pascal and Lenore J. Coffee.

The Pascal work is "The Savage," while that of Margaretta Tuttle is "The Unguarded Hour." The latter has appeared as a magazine serial since the purchase of the film rights.

"Nazareth" is the contribution from Clarence Buddington Kelland. Its filming will be supervised by June Mathis. "Bed and Board" is the title of the Lenore Coffee script, which later will appear in a short story magazine.

Rockett Answers Trust Charges

First National Executive Declares Quality of the Product is a Determining Factor

IN a reply to the assertions that a film "trust" has slowly but successfully merged to the extent of monopoly in the motion picture industry, and that a campaign is in progress to battle the alleged "trust" by the independent film producers, Al Rockett, executive of First National Pictures, now on the West Coast, issued a statement on the situation insofar as the First National Productions Corporation is concerned.

"We are naturally opposed to any and all 'so-called' monopoly," begins Rockett. "That there should exist a monopoly in which First National is involved, is indeed news to me.

"The independent producer need never fear of getting his product into the big theatres providing the pictures are worthy of being shown in the high class houses throughout the country.

"First National is not discouraging the independents. As a matter of fact, First National is encouraging independent producers."

"The producer, the distributor, and everyone else concerned," continues Rockett, "mean nothing if the product is unworthy. In the final consensus, it is the picture that tells the story. Poverty row in Hollywood might produce a film that would take the land by storm. Who cares about the producer or director or distributor or the exchange system that handles this film if it will be a success and a box office attaction?

"Naturally when pictures do not measure up to the standards necessary for the big theatres, they are not booked or shown in the big theatres."

"In a recent discussion between film executives in New York," continues Rockett, "It was conceded that the greatest pictures covering the entire life of the film industry, had been produced by independent people who had an idea and carried it out.

"First National stands entirely on the merits of its pictures and in the class of its productions.

"Simmered down to the final point of discussion, the film industry can be likened to the steel, the cotton, the building—any other business! It is the survival of the fittest. It is the quality of production first, last and always, that will determine the manner of which a picture is distributed and the theatres in which it will be exhibited."

Universal Announces Two Title Changes

Two changes in titles are announced by Universal. The Nina Wilcox Putnam story, "Doubling for Cupid," which Edward Sloman is directing with Laura La Plante as the star, has been changed to "The Beautiful Cheat."

Hoot Gibson's latest starring production, "Daughter of the Dons," will be released as "A Hero on Horseback." It was adapted from the novel by William McLeod Raine.

George Walsh in Leading Role With Theda Bara

As soon as George Walsh has completed work in "Blue Blood," his current production, he will start work with Theda Bara in "The Unchastened Woman" for Chadwick Pictures Corporation. Walsh was selected for the leading male role by Director James Young who is producing the Louis K. Anspacher play for Chadwick.

Derby Films Rushed to Screens

Pictures of Turf Classic in New York Sunday Night—On Pacific Coast Monday

WITH an amazing display of organization team-work and efficiency in rushing pictures of big news events to the screens of photoplay theatres, Fox News last week set new time records, when complete pictures of the running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs were delivered to theatres in Chicago Sunday morning, New York City, Sunday evening, and San Francisco on Monday evening, just two days after the running of the great American turf classic.

Intermediate points between the three big metropolises received the pictures at times varying with their distance from Chicago, which Fox News used as the basis of its operations in handling the Derby pictures.

While Fox News has to its credit many remarkable feats of "newspaper enterprise," officials of the organization made the Derby an event with which to display again the high efficiency and ingenuity of the force in showing pictures of news events while they are still "news."

The feat was the result of long planning and careful arrangement of the most minute details which enter into the making and shipping of pictures covering important happenings. The operating base was shifted from New York to Chicago, where the negative was developed, printed, edited and titled.

Immediately Flying Ebony, winner of the Derby, had posed with Earl Sande up before the judges' stand at the conclusion of the race, films were taken by automobile to the aeroplane which the Fox News had waiting at a nearby field. The plane took the air instantly it received the films and winged its way to Chicago. A heavy storm, which forced other planes down before they could reach their destination at Chicago, was successfully navigated by the Fox plane, and the films were turned over to laboratory workers there in record time.

When the prints were ready they were rushed to U. S. Air Mail bases and were soon on their way to exchange centres in the east and the west. The first pictures to reach the screens of the Broadway theatres in New York were delivered at the Rialto at 8:03 o'clock, Daylight Saving Time, Sunday evening, and within a very short time thereafter, the Fox News automobile which carried the prints from the landing field at New Brunswick, N. J., handed prints to projectionists at all of the principal houses in the New York district. Chicago theatres had the prints Sunday morning, 17 hours after the race. St. Louis, Indianapolis and Milwaukee theatres also had the Fox News prints of the Derby on Sunday evening, and by Monday evening they were delivered on the Pacific Coast.

Faultless to Film Drury Lane Melodrama

Screen rights to "Good Luck," the Drury Lane melodrama, have been purchased by E. M, Asher of Faultless Pictures Corporation and Sol Lesser. The play will be filmed by the Faultless company in association with Lesser.

Al Santell will probably be named to direct the production. Asher is in New York to arrange for distribution of the picture.

Feld Named Paramount Production Manager

Milton Feld, managing director of the Newman and Royal theatres, Kansas City, will go to Los Angeles with Frank L. Newman, owner of the theatres, to become manager of productions for Paramount, Harold B. Franklin, managing director of Paramount theatres, said in Kansas City recently.

Franklin again confirmed the report that the Newman and Royal theatres were to be purchased by Paramount and that Mr. Newman would manage three Paramount houses in Los Angeles.

Associated Changes Title of Terris Feature

"His Buddy's Wife" has been definitely decided upon as the title of the Tom Terris feature production for Associated Exhibitors, which was made under the working title of "My Buddy's Wife." This is a picturization of the story by T. Howard Kelly, which was published in the Smart Set Magazine.

Glenn Hunter and Edna Murphy are the featured players in the production while the cast also includes Douglas Gilmore, Flora Finch and Marcia Harris.

Artclass Announces 24 Features for 1925-26

Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation announced twenty-four features for release next season.

The program will include two series of eight each starring Buddy Roosevelt; two series of eight each starring Buffalo Bill, Jr., and a series of eight starring Wally Wallace. All will be Western melodramas, produced by Action Pictures Corporation in Los Angeles.

Elinor Glyn's "Only Thing" in Production

The cast has practically been completed and work is now under way on Elinor Glyn's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "The Only Thing." Mrs. Glyn, who continuitized her own story, is also supervising the production, which is under the direction of Jack Conway.

Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel have the leading roles in the picture, while in the cast so far selected are Edward Connelly, Louis Payne, Arthur Edmund Carewe, Vera Lewis, Carrie Clark, Mrs. C. E. Wylie, Dale Fuller, Ned Sparks, Mario Carillo, David Mir and Michael Pleschkoff.

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer to Make Swedish Story

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are to present on the screen Selma Lagerlof's Swedish novel, "The Emperor of Portugallia." Agnes Christine Johnston has just completed the continuity for the production, which will be directed by Victor Seastrom under the title of "The Tower of Lies." Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer will have the featured roles.

The novel created a sensation when it was published in Sweden. It has recently been translated into English and has since been popular here.

"Keeper of Bees" Cast Being Selected

James Leo Meehan has started casting for the Gene Stratton Porter novel, "The Keeper of the Bees," which has been chosen for production ahead of "Her Father's Daughter" by F. B. O. Actual work on the picture will be started within a few days. The story is now running serially in McCall's Magazine and will be published in book form by Doubleday-Page in which Bebe Daniels stars for Paramount.

F.B.O. At Work on New Program

Two Gold Bond Specials and Other Features for New Season Started

PRODUCTION work on the F. B. O. 1925-1926 schedule, which will comprise 64 features and 16 short subjects, has been started at the studios of the company in Hollywood. Among the first pictures to be put into production are "The Keeper of the Bees," an adaptation of Gene Stratton-Porter's story, and "The Last Edition," an Emory Johnson feature, both of which are to be offered in the group of F. B. O.'s "Gold Bond Specials."

James Leo Meehan, who directed "The Girl of the Limberlost," is filming "The Keeper of the Bees." Those selected for the principal roles cast up to the present include Robert Frazer, well known leading man who has appeared opposite Pola Negri, Gloria Swanson and other celebrated screen actresses; Gene Stratton, granddaughter of the novelist; Josef Swickard, and Martha Maddox. Mr. Frazer will play the role of hero, a world war veteran, and Miss Stratton will be seen as the Little Scout, a carefree, tom-boy sort of girl.

Emory Johnson and his mother, Mrs. Emilie Johnson, are whipping the continuity of "The Last Edition" into shape. The producer plans to complete his picture, which will have as its leading character an assistant foreman in the press of a metropolitan daily, in about six weeks. Upon completing the film he will sail for the Scandinavian countries where he will make another "Gold Bond Special" for F. B. O.

Fred Thomson has completed "The Bandit's Baby," the first of the new series of super-western productions in which he will be presented by F. B. O. next season. Thomson is supported by his famous horse, Silver King.

Among the productions which are in work at the Hollywood studios of this company are "Smooth As Satin," an Evelyn Brent starring vehicle based on Bayard Veiller's stage play, "The Chatterbox." Ralph Ince is directing the picture. The star will follow this with an original story written by Clifford Howard and Burke Jenkins and temporarily titled "Tizonia—The Firebrand."

Harry Garson is preparing to start filming "High and Handsome" with Lefty Flynn in the starred role. The story is by Gerald Beaumont and was published in a magazine. Kathlyn Myers has been cast to play the role opposite the star, and others in the cast are Lydia Knott, Tom Kennedy, Gene Perry and Marjorie Bonner. George Marion, Jr., has written several comedy sequences to be included in "High and Handsome."

Richard Talmadge is filming "Twenty After," in which he is being directed by Jack Nelson. Carmelita Geraghty and Duane Thompson, both well known as screen beauties, appear prominently in the cast.

Bob Custer has completely recovered from an attack of Kleig eyes, and has started work on "The Bloodhound," by H. H. Van Loan. The players include Mary Beth Milford, Ralph McCullough, Emily Barry and David Dunbar. William James Craft will direct.

Wesley Ruggles, who is directing the new H. C. Witwer two-reel series, "The Pacemakers," is at work on Chapter Ten, called "What Price Gloria?"

Paramount Renews Contract With Ernest Torrence

Famous Players-Lasky have renewed their contract with Ernest Torrence, who won fame as a screen character in "The Covered Wagon." The new agreement is for a number of years. Torrence's latest role is that of "Tola" in "The Wanderer."

Independent Exchanges Buying

Chadwick Product Taken by Two Former Warner Franchise Holders—Brandt Reports Optimism

RECENT important trade developments have stimulated buying in the independent markets and are reflected in the note of optimism which features the present temper of leading distributors of state rights productions. Sales reported during the week are reported by several companies, many of whose officials are now on tours of the exchange centres.

The removal of the Warner Brothers' pictures to a national distribution agency has made room for much of the increased product which the state rights distributors are offering for next season. Among the earliest sales made to former Warner franchise holders are those which Chadwick Pictures Corporation has concluded with Specialty Film Company of Texas, and Independent Film Corporation of Philadelphia. Specialty, which distributes throughout Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, has taken the entire Chadwick line-up for next season. Independent, which covers the Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Southern New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia, has also contracted for all of Chadwick's pictures for next season.

Joe Brandt, completing a two-months' trip around the country, reports sales of the Columbia Pictures product to Greater Features, Inc., of Seattle, and All Star Features of San Francisco. Greater Features distribute throughout Alaska, Washington, Oregon and Idaho, while All Star Features cover the California territory. There are now twenty-four exchanges handling Columbia's 1925-1926 schedule of 18 features.

In a communication to the home office, Mr. Brandt states that he has found exchange men more optimistic this season than they were a year ago. "With the tendency of the independent exhibitor to assert himself and watch his play dates," he says, "they look forward to more business than ever before."

Lumas Film Corporation this week reported the sale of the twelve Gotham productions for next season to 20th Century Film Co., of Philadelphia.

B. Berger, general manager for Gerson Pictures, now touring the exchange cities, has closed deals with the following:

Celebrated Film Exchange, Minneapolis, for the North and South Dakota territories on the series of ten Richard Holt productions; Mid-West Film Exchange, Milwaukee, for the state of Wisconsin and the peninsular of Michigan, on the Richard Holt series; H. Lieber & Co., Indianapolis, for the state of Indiana, on the Holt series, and Renown Pictures, Chicago, for the Northern Illinois territory, on the Holt series.

Davis Distributing Division, Inc., concluded a sale with Standard Film Exchange, Pittsburgh, Pa., covering the two Ben Wilson serials, "The Mystery Box" and "The Power of God," and the 8 J. J. Fleming productions featuring Al Ferguson, for the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia territories.

Contracts for the entire output of Ginsberg, which consists of six Banners and six Royals have been closed with the following:

A. Luchese of Philadelphia has the exclusive rights for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, Edward Goldman, general manager of the Golden Distributing Corporation, has the output for all of the New England States; Joseph L. Friedman of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation has Illinois and Indiana; Lee Goldberg of the Big Feature Rights Corporation has Kentucky and Tennessee with headquarters at Louisville while Jack Grauman of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Milwaukee, has the rights for the state of Wisconsin.

With the exception of the southern territory covered by Lee Goldberg, the entire South has been contracted for by the Creole Enterprises Corporation with branches at New Orleans, Dallas and Atlanta.

M. H. Hoffman, vice president of Tiffany Productions, Inc., and Truart Film Corporation, announces that he has sold franchises for his Tiffany Big Twelve and Truart Blue Ribbon, Novelty and Cinemelodrama series for 1925-1926 to L. Berman of the Independ Film Exchange of Philadelphia and L. Hyman of All Star Features of California.

Lumas Film Corporation Signs Lon Young

Lon Young, widely known as a publicity, advertising and exploitation expert has been engaged to supervise those activities for Lumas Film Corporation. Young has been connected with the industry for the past fifteen years, and for the past five years was in charge of Warner Brothers publicity and advertising departments.

In addition to supervising advertising and publicity, Young will also act in a supervisory capacity on the production end. He will prepare treatments of all stories purchased, edit scenarios and take an active part in the actual production work of the new series of twelve Gotham productions. His first activities in his new connection started this week at the Tec-Art studios where he is engaged in work on a new production titled "The Fire Patrol."

Laemmle Signs Younger to Write Super-Jewels

Carl Laemmle has signed A. P. Younger to write and supervise all super-Jewel productions for Universal during the coming year. Younger started his career in the industry about ten years ago with Universal and eventuallv rose among the leading script writers. For Universal he did the script for "The Flirt" and "The Abysmal Brute," and for John Stahl he did "Why Men Leave Home" and "Husbands and Lovers!" For Lasky he wrote "The Devil's Cargo" and "Adventure."

Tom Terriss Made Head of Paramount School

Tom Terriss has been appointed head of the Paramount Picture School, Inc., which will train young men and women to act in pictures. The headquarters of the school are at the Paramount Long Island studio.

The selection of Terriss was made because of his success with others who have started under his guidance. Among those whom he picked out of the ranks and gave early instruction are Agnes Ayres, Ben Lyon, Percy Marmont, William Collier, Jr., Conrad Nagel and Alice Calhoun.

Two Added to Cast for "Rugged Water"

Irvin Willat has added Phyllis Haver and Dot Farley to the cast of "Rugged Water," the Joseph C. Lincoln story of the life saving service on Cape Cod, which he is directing for Paramount. Others featured in the production are Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter and Wallace Beery.

Fox Screen Version of "Havoc" Completed

Rowland V. Lee has completed the camera work on the Fox screen version of "Havoc," the English play dealing with events immediately following the World War and produced on the English and American stages.

A series of spectacular night battle scenes are among the leading features of the production, in which George O'Brien, Madge Bellamy, Walter McGrail, Eulalie Jensen, Margaret Livingston, Leslie Fenton, David Butler, Harvey Clark, Wade Boteler and Captain Calvert will appear in principal roles.

Vitagraph Fills Cast for "Happy Warrior"

Vitagraph has completed the cast for "The Happy Warrior", second of its A. S. M. Hutchinson stories, and J. Stuart Blackton has started work on the production. The complete cast includes, Malcolm MacGregor, Alice Calhoun, Mary Alden, Eulalie Jensen, Wilfrid North, Otto Matiesen, Anders Randolf, Gardener James, Phillippe de Lacy, Jack Herrick, Olive Borden, Andre Tournier and Bobby Gordon.

Wyndham Standing Cast for Chadwick Picture

I. E. Chadwick has engaged Wyndham Standing for an important role in "The Unchastened Woman," the Louis K. Anspacher play in which Theda Bara will return to the screen. The picture was started this week under the direction of James Young.

Richard Dix in scenes from "The Shock Punch," his new starring vehicle for Paramount.

Metro, Gaumont Amalgamate

Negotiations Completed by Which Two Companies Join Forces Abroad

IN LINE with their expressed policy of cooperating abroad with native distributors and exhibitors wherever possible, Metro-Goldwyn has completed negotiations for the amalgamation of Metro-Goldwyn and Gaumont in France, Belgium, Switzerland, North Africa, Egypt, Syria and Palestine. The deal was arranged by Arthur Loew, manager of the foreign department, and Edgar Costil, managing director of the French Gaumont Company.

Leon Gaumont was a pioneer producer in the motion picture field. His company was the first to produce motion pictures on a commercial basis. The Gaumont Company is among the leaders in the producing, distributing and exhibiting field in France and other countries.

With regard to the amalgamation Managing Director Costil of the Gaumont Company said:

"Up to the present time we have distributed the Metro-Goldwyn pictures under contract. In the course of these contracts we recognized the high quality of the Metro-Goldwyn pictures and the directors of the two companies grew to understand and appreciate their respective methods and from the close cooperation between us arose the idea of associating our interests for a longer period.

"During Mr. Arthur Loew's recent trip to France and mine to America, this idea took definite form in the shape of the contract which has just been entered into, thereby bringing together Marcus Loew and Leon Gaumont, two of the industry's biggest figures.

"I believe that this contract has united the largest motion picture interests in France and America and I am confident that it will prove a benefit to the industry generally. International combinations such as this must create a better understanding between nations themselves."

C. B. De Mille Buys Screen Rights to "Silence"

Cecil B. De Mille has acquired the screen rights to "Silence," written by Max Marcin and produced at the National Theatre, New York, with H. B. Warner in the leading role, this season.

The play will be filmed under the direction of Rupert Julian and will be released next season by Producers Distributing Corporation.

The story concerns a notorious criminal who betrays a girl and later in life, while attempting a big blackmail, finds himself involved in a plot directed against his own daughter, who kills the pal of the criminal. The latter takes the blame for the killing. The play is scheduled for production on the stage in Chicago next season and will also be presented by four road companies.

Lesser Asks Bankers' Support

Warns Coast Financiers That Production is Likely to Center in New York

IF Los Angeles is to continue to be the production center of the world for motion pictures, Los Angeles bankers will have to give more attention to the financing of the producers, according to Sol Lesser, who just returned to the coast from New York.

In a statement made upon his return to the coast Lesser said: "I have been asked many times recently as to the possibility of many of the larger producing companies centering the major part of their producing activities in and around New York city, and I am anxious to sound a warning to Southern Californians at this time that such moves are being seriously considered largely because the big companies want to produce near the financial centers.

"I see an urgent need for Southern California bankers to enter into the financing of motion picture production on a greater scale, thus making Los Angeles a great financial, as well as producing center, which will automatically keep these units and their producing activities here."

While in the East Lesser, who is the secretary of West Coast Theatres, Inc., attended the semi-annual meeting of First National Pictures, Inc., and was re-elected vice-president and director and named a member of the executive committee of that organization.

Thriller For John Barrymore

Warners Pick "Captain Alverez for Star; "College Widow" for Syd Chaplin

JOHN BARRYMORE in an outdoor thrill picture is the latest announcement from Warner Brothers. The star expressed a desire to do this type picture and Warners promptly selected for him "Captain Alverez," a well known stage play presented by Sanger and Jordan in 1914. It concerns the hero of a South American revolution and will be recalled as being replete with action.

"Captain Alverez" was the work of Harry S. Sheldon, who has since added to it "The Havoc" and other stage successes. It is likely that Harry Beaumont will direct the production, work on which will be started June 1st, when Barrymore is due to arrive on the west coast. The selection of a leading woman has not yet been announced.

Another starring vehicle selected by Warners during the week is "The College Widow" for Syd Chaplin. This George Ade stage success will be Chaplin's second starring picture for Warners. It will follow "The Man on the Box," in which Chaplin is now working.

"The College Widow" had a tremendous vogue as a stage play. Long before he started his screen career Thomas Meighan scored a hit in this stage presentation as leading man with Frances Ring, who is now Mrs. Meighan.

Fox Enlarges West Coast Publicity Staff

Fox has reorganized and enlarged its west coast publicity staff in preparation for the handling of the national campaigns on the product for the 1925-1926 season. Jack Hill will continue as western director and will have as his assistant Erle Hampton, who was sent to the coast from the home office.

Frank Murray, who was engaged to write special production publicity on "The Iron Horse" from location in Nevada, will have a permanent place on the reorganized staff. Others added to the department are Meredith Davis, former Sunday editor of the Los Angeles Times, and William Walling, Jr., son of the actor.

Hunt Stromberg Purchases "Shipwrecked"

Hunt Stromberg has purchased picture rights to "Shipwrecked," a melodramatic success of the speaking stage, and will produce it as a special for release by Producers Distributing Corporation some time during the coming year. The play was written by Langdon McCormick and first produced a few years ago at the Frazee Theatre, where it enjoyed a successful run.

Three Added to Cast for "Not So Long Ago"

Julia Swayne Gordon, Jacqueline Gadson and Don Crimmons have been added to the Paramount cast for "Not So Long Ago," which features Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez. It is a Sidney Olcott production.

Scenes from "The White Monkey," in which Barbara La Marr will be starred by First National.

Warners Signing Casts for Many Pictures

Warner Brothers have signed another director and made announcement of a number of assignments to casts for coming product. Earle C. Kenton will make his debut as a Warner director in one of the big outdoor stories of the company's enlarged program.

Charles (Heinie) Conklin has also been signed to a long term contract and has been assigned a role with Irene Rich in "The Pleasure Buyers." Others in the cast are Clive Brook, Gayne Whitman, June Marlowe, Frank Campeau, Edward Peil, Don Alvarado, Winter Hall and Frank Leigh.

James Flood has started the direction of "The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted," with a cast that includes Irene Rich, Huntly Gordon, John Harron, June Marlowe, George Pearce, Edward Peil, Gayne Whitman, George Kuwa, Wilfred Lucas, Gertrude Astor, Elinor Fair and Don Alvarado.

The cast being assembled for "Bobbed Hair" includes the following: Otto Hoffman, Francis J. McDonald and Pat Hartigan. Otis Harlan has been assigned the role of Mr. Joffrey in "The Limited Mail," with Monte Blue, and E. J. Ratcliffe will play Colonel Annesly in "The Man on the Box."

Additions to "Half-Way Girl" Cast

First National made several additions this week to the cast of "The Half-Way Girl," which features Doris Kenyon. Among those signed within the past few days were Teddy Sampson, Martha Madison, Harriet Sterling and Charles Wellesley.

Others in the company are Lloyd Hughes, leading man; Hobart Bosworth, Tully Marshall, Sam Hardy and Sally Crute. Director John Francis Dillon has been working on this production for two weeks and the studio reports excellent progress. Lloyd Sheldon wrote the story.

Al Lichtman is Recovering From Serious Illness

Al Lichtman, who has been seriously ill at the Hotel Alamac for several months, has fought his way back to recovery and is leaving for the Adirondacks to spend the Summer. Mr. Lichtman will return early in the Fall to complete arrangements for important production activities which he will direct.

"Iron Horse" Canadian Premiere Set

THE Canadian premiere of the Fox picture, "The Iron Horse" is scheduled for the Princess Theatre in Montreal, Quebec, May 30th. This will be the first picture ever to be shown in the Princess, which ordinarily, is a Keith vaudeville house. The Keith management has passed up the usual form of entertainment in order to show "The Iron Horse" for at least four weeks and probably longer.

The Canadian Pacific Railroad is lending its backing to the picture and will help in its exploitation in every way. The elaborate plans for exploitation are in the hands of W. W. Decker, veteran advance man, who is familiar with Montreal and the surrounding country.

Lasky Completes Coast Work

Leaves for New York After Finishing the Paramount Production Details

HAVING completed all details in connection with the extensive production program mapped by Paramount, Jesse L. Lasky has departed Hollywood for New York. Just before his departure, Lasky held his last conference with directors, stars and writers and then made known the company's latest production plans.

Among the Lasky announcements was one that Betty Bronson will be starred in "The Golden Princess," based on Bret Harte's "Tennessee's Partner." Neil Hamilton will play opposite Miss Bronson and the production will be directed by Clarence Badger.

Zane Grey, author, and Lucien Hubbard, one of Paramount's production editors, rushed to Hollywood from Red Lake, Arizona, where "Wild Horse Mesa" is being produced, for a final conference with Lasky on the details of production for "The Vanishing American," which will be made as a big Paramount special.

Lasky also conferred with Pola Negri on her next production, "Flower of the Night," which will be made in Hollywood upon completion of "The Crossroads of the World." The story is by Joseph Hergesheimer and was written especially for Miss Negri.

Several pictures in the editing stage occupied Mr. Lasky's attention. Among them are "Light of the Western Stars," produced by William K. Howard; the James Cruze production, "Marry Me," and "Paths to Paradise," co-featuring Betty Compson and Raymond Griffith, which was directed by Clarence Badger. Upon Mr. Lasky's return to New York he will view "Lost—A Wife," which William de Mille brought to New York for final cutting and editing.

Mr. Lasky also found time to supervise filming scenes of several photoplays, including Raoul Walsh's lavish production, "The Wanderer," the screen version of famous Biblical story of "The Prodigal Son," Zane Grey's "Wild Horse Mesa," directed by George B. Seitz and co-featuring Jack Holt, Noah Beery, Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.; "Not So Long Ago," a Sidney Olcott production with Betty Bronson and Ricardo Cortez in leads; "A Son of His Father," Victor Fleming's production of Harold Bell Wright's novel, featuring Warner Baxter, Bessie Love and Raymond Hatton; Gloria Swanson's "The Coast of Folly," which Allan Dwan is producing and "Rugged Water," Irvin Willet's production of Joseph Lincoln's story, with Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter and Wallace Beery in featured roles.

Buxbaum and Meighan Are A. M. P. A. Guests

H. H. Buxbaum, manager of the eastern division for First National Pictures, and Thomas Meighan were the guests of honor at the weekly luncheon on the A. M. P. A. in New York last week. Meighan in a brief address stressed the advantages of proper publicity over notoriety. Buxbaum talked on the selling end of the motion picture industry. President A. M. Botsford presided at the meeting.

J. B. Blystone to Direct Series of Urner Stories

J. C. Blystone has ben chosen to direct the series of eight two-reel pictures based on Mabel Hurber Urner's "The Married Life of Helen and Warren," to be released by Fox next season.

Exhibitors Service Bureau

Manager John B. Carroll of the Victory theatre, Tampa, devised a splendid selling lobby on "Excuse Me" (Metro-Goldwyn) with relatively simple and inexpensive means, as illustrated here. The railroad atmosphere of the picture was well established.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Puzzle Contest is Aid to Run of "Monster"

Free passes to see "The Monster" at the Strand theatre in Evansville, Ind., each good for two tickets, were recently awarded for correct solutions of a cross word puzzle contest run by Charles Glickauf, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer. This competition ran for three days in advance of the opening and attracted attention to the showing.

Announcements of the run were printed on the pay envelopes of all the leading Evansville factories, thereby popularizing the picture with thousands of employees and creating much word of mouth exploitation. Window displays helped exploit the engagement also, a leading jeweler contributing an exhibit of pearls and jewelry and a clothing store donating a display of smoking jackets. Art cards were featured in both these windows. In addition, 1,000 heralds were distributed, three slides and a trailer were used and there was a special lobby display. The town was lavishly posted as well, and the entire campaign was supported by a vigorous newspaper drive.

Varied Campaign Put Over for "Greed" Showing

"Greed" at the State theatre in Washington, Pa., recently was given a thorough going campaign waged by Norman W. Pyle, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer. All street cars carried a half sheet card on the front and rear ends for a week in advance of the showing, and every taxi cab in the city bore a banner on the spare tire for three days in advance reading "Use This Cab to State Theatre to see 'Greed' ".

A street float carrying two 24-sheet cut-outs and two 2 by 12 banners on the sides, with a 2 by 7 banner on the rear paraded the streets for two days before the premiere, and 8,000 heralds were distributed both in Washington and in surrounding towns. A trailer was used in the theatre three days before the opening.

Highly ingenious lobby display piece on "Husbands and Lovers" (First Nat'l) by Manager F. J. Miller at the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga.

A card with mounted stills in a bank window exploited the difference between "Thrift" and "Greed," and musical instruments were featured in the window of a prominent music store with the caption: "Musical Instruments Play a Big Part in 'Greed' at the State Theatre. We can supply your needs. Give us a trial." Newspapers cooperated effectively by donating plentiful space to special stories and cuts, a total of 262 inches of space being used. In addition the picture was advertised in the press for two weeks in advance of the opening. The billing consisted of ten 3-sheets, eleven 24-sheets, twelve 6-sheets and twenty 1-sheets. A 24-sheet cut-out was placed on the marquee and a 6-sheet cut-out in front of the box-office. Green lights were used on the marquee and stuffed money bags were hung from it. A varied display of photographs in frames were exhibited before the theatre.

Stages "Mad Whirl" Program With Film

A typical "Mad Whirl" program of film, music and exploitation was used recently in Seattle by Manager Robert W. Bender of the Columbia theatre to put over his engagement of "The Mad Whirl. " As the future of the week, Bender presented what he chose to call his "Triple Feature Bill." This was a program in which the feature, comedy and music were all equally billed.

Bender used "Now or Never" as his comedy, and for the musical attraction, arranged for the Columbia orchetsra to stage a special Jazz week. A feature of this was the appearance of "the world's largest saxophone"—an eight-foot instrument played by a five foot man, much to the merriment of the audiences. The entire program, as is quite evident, was one "mad whirl" of entertainment.

For his lobby display, Manager Bender arranged a circular display box in front of the box office with each feature of the program lettered on transparent paper. Behind this, electric lights were installed and by means of a revolving flasher system there was a constant "whirl" of different colors appearing behind the program. All cashiers, ushers and attendants of the theatre wore glassless horn rimmed spectacles "in honor" of the Lloyd film.

Bender's newspaper advertising carried out the spirt of the program. All ads were specially designed in a round shape to attract attention, and the entire program was featured as a "Mad Whirl" of continuous entertainment. Special window cards and billboards featured the same copy, and the exploitation for the week was further aided by tieups with Seattle radio broadcasting stations.

Effective miniature railroad display used in the lobby of Loew's Vendome theatre, Nashville, Tenn., to herald the coming of "Excuse Me" (Metro-Goldwyn). A tiny train, a tunnel, a railway station and a mountain curve were all built in miniature.

Col. Levy's Teaser Stunts on "If I Marry Again"

An unusually attractive teaser campaign was used by Col. Fred Levy in calling attention of residents of Lexington, Ky., to the showing of "If I Marry Again," at the Kentucky theatre.

The town was blanketed on the Friday and Saturday preceding the opening with 10,000 cards, printed in black carrying the title of the picture on both sides, with a question mark after, above and below the title.

This was followed by newspaper advertising teasers, one column wide and four inches deep: "There's a lot of them to pick from If I Marry Again," "I'll sure watch my step next time If I Marry Again," "It will be a blue-eyed, sweet child If I Marry Again," "I'll keep all the cash in the bank If I Marry Again." In each case the title was in large type in the centre of the adv. with white space below and between the title and the catchline.

White cards, with a lock of woman's' hair inserted in a slit and bearing the wording, "I am looking for a woman with this color hair If I Marry Again," were distributed over the town.

Three thousand imitation marriage licenses, advertising the picture on the inside, were distributed, as were fourteen gross of tags to which small imitation-gold wedding rings were attached. The wording on the tags was, "Wear this lucky ring and you'll never be confronted with the problem—what will I do If I Marry Again."

Buffalo Hunters Invited to "Thundering Herd"

Coincident with the showing of "The Thundering Herd" at the Majestic theatre, the Statesman published an invitation sponsored by Manager E. B. Roberts, inviting all the old buffalo hunters of Austin to be the playhouse's guests at a banquet. In addition each would receive a pass to see the photoplay at the Austin, Texas, playhouse.

Besides the five old hunters who were guests of honor, the press was well represented at the banquet. A picture of the banquet with special stories about the feast and write-ups on the various experiences of the hunters, appeared in all newspapers.

A striking feature of Manager Robert's campaign was the use of a 24-sheet on top of the marquee with a concealed thunder machine. The machine was operated by special motor and gave a vivid impression of thundering hoofs. Another strong unit was the advance lobby display consisting of a miniature desert scene with several cut-outs.

The standard campaign started a week in advance, was augmented by a private screening for 250 Boy Scouts, who later distributed rotos on the attraction throughout the city free of charge.

Ten days prior to opening a feature story on "The Thundering Herd" was run in the newspapers. Two special slides and a trailer carried the personal endorsement of the management, as well as all other advertising. All ads stressed the fact that this picture was in a class with "The Covered Wagon" and "North of 36".

What the critics said about "Smouldering Fires" (Universal), when it was shown at the Piccadilly theatre, New York, provided the basis for this lobby display.

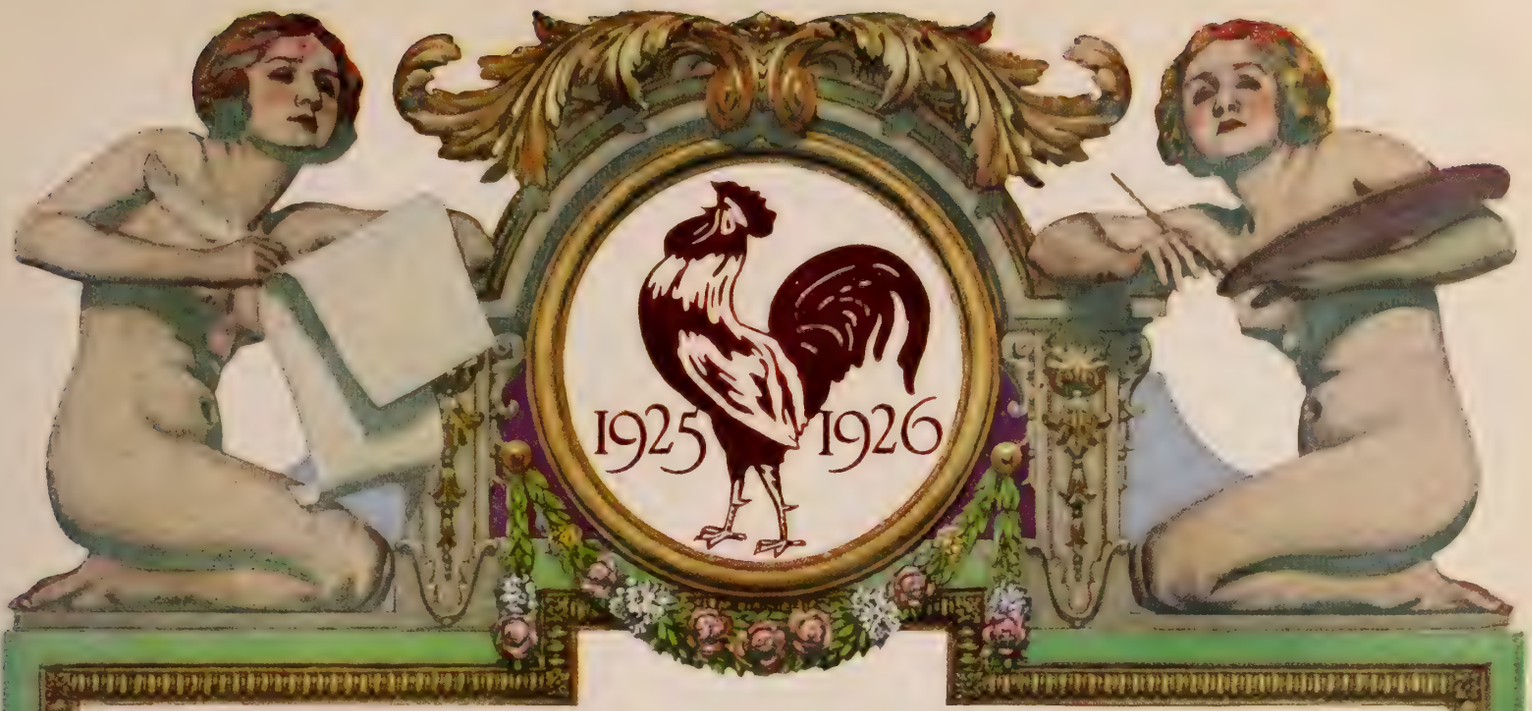
Novelty Ballyhoo Devised to Aid "Oh, Doctor"

Manager Chris Behrens of the Family theatre , Davenort, Ia., and Jack Edwards. Universal exploiter, conceived an unusual ballyhoo for the engagement of "Oh Doctor!" A 1906 Cadillac roadster was secured from the local automobile agency and decorated with a beaverboard stork carrying a new arrival, a small baby carriage, and numerous signs. An ex-performer was engaged to make up as an old-time physician with a Prince Albert coat, high silk hat, striped trousers and carrying a dactor's bag.

The car drove through Davenport, Moline and Rock Island, which are just across the river, paying visits to newly married couples. A list of these was procured from the marriage license bureau. Instead of going directly to the young couple's house, however, he would stop a few doors away and inquire for them. Then after securing the desired information, he would depart leaving a prescription calling for a visit to the Family theatre.

Five thousand prescriptions reading "An Apple a Day Keeps the Doctor Away, But a Pretty Nurse, Oh, Doctor. Family Theatre, etc.," signed Reginald Denny, were distributed three days in advance.

Five hundred post cards were mailed to physicians and chiropracters in Davenport, Rock Island, and Moline calling their attention to engagement and suggesting they might want to prescribe "Oh, Doctor" to some of their patients.



Reward Heralds Advertise "A Thief in Paradise"

Two thousand heralds, offering a reward for the capture of Ronald Colman, the "Thief In Paradise," were distributed by Manager E. D. Turner of the Imperial, Ashville.

The splendid herald carried two pictures of the star, together with special copy, title, cast and play dates. This was followed up in the newspaper by an ad campaign along similar lines with daily change of copy during the three days run.

To carry out the idea of the title, in building his lobby display on "Contraband" (Paramount), Manager H. C. Farley of the Strand theatre, Montgomery, Ala., borrowed a quantity of miscellaneous boxes, barrels and crates and pasted "Contraband" strips on them all. Piled up boxes framed the three-sheets at each side.

PATHÉ

We are positive that comedy and variety entertainment has a much stronger appeal to the picture loving public than has drama or tragedy, as evidenced by the program we have arranged for your approval.

When you share this opinion and evidence that fact by properly featuring your short subject selections in all your advertising, your weekly and monthly box-office statements will show a tremendous increase.

Our 1925-1926 output is costing about 30% more than last year's program, —the improvement is delightful.

We believe you will cheerfully pay more for a better product.

We know you can get more for it no matter how you present it, but if you refrain from booking inferior short subjects and really advertise well, people will very shortly be attending your theatre regularly regardless of their like or dislike of any particular dramatic offering.

Resolution; Pathe shall not release anything that is not the best of its kind on the market.

Mickey, Farina, Mary, Jackie,—

What family doesn't know them,—look for them on the screen?

More familiar, more popular, than princes and presidents; loved for their antics, their naturalness.

Shown to more audiences than any two reel comedies known; praised by more exhibitors, reported on more times in the trade papers.

Their quality is proven, their box office value is no experiment but a certainty.

TRADE MARK

Give the Short-Subject Its Due

By Elmer R. Pearson

Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

TRADITION and custom are the unwritten laws born of experience. While they never, in themselves, get into the written record, yet they possess a degree of permanency far beyond that of the duly recorded government statute. Laws have been made and abrogated overnight without even jarring the observance of customs against which the laws were designed. The impetus to change or discard custom or tradition must come from within the group; from their recurrent experiences and the realization that past methods and time-honored ideas have outlived their time.

The motion picture industry is not so young that it has not acquired its own body of customs and traditions. Some have come to us as a heritage from the stage. Of these there can be no criticism; their survival is sufficient proof of their usefulness. A certain portion of our trade customs, however, came into being with the rise of the motion picture itself.

Program Tradition

There is the custom, for example, of regarding dramatic fare as necessarily the principal ingredient of any successful theatre program. This is due no doubt to the fact that the motion picture producer from the beginning has stressed the dramatic rather than the comedy theme. There are very definite reasons for this. In the first place, a comedy is harder to produce, foot for foot, than a dramatic subject. The comedy demands greater fertility of imagination, more painstaking takes and retakes of many details. The dramatic feature often gets over by reason of its elaborate properties, gorgeous backgrounds or costumes, or spectacular effects. It is not surprising, therefore, that the producer should have more frequently gone in for dramatic rather than comedy pictures. Nor is it surprising that bigger first-run theatres affiliated with producers of feature-length dramas should have nourished and sustained this standard by throwing the emphasis on the drama in their advertising and presentation.

The independent exhibitor has succumbed to the subtle example of the affiliated houses, and to his own disadvantage. By throwing the force of his advertising on the feature he has increased the rental prices of the feature production while reducing the prices on the short-subjects. Good short-subject stars and directors have been attracted into feature-length production in order that they may secure advertising recognition and financial returns denied them because so many theatres' advertising ignores them until they show up in a five-reeler.

Public's Preferences

But, now, let us look at the other side of this picture—at the public's side. The whole history of human kind proves that men are more disposed to laugh than to cry. The greatest authors and playwrights of all time knew well this propensity of humankind to relish laughter above all else. Shakespeare, for instance, realized that both the gentry in the gallery and the fans in the pit demanded comedy in huge gobs, and he gave it to them not only in whole doses as in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "As You Like It," but also saw to it that both his straight dramas and even his tragedies were liberally sprinkled with the spice of comedy.

What the Stage Teaches

Showmen of the present day might well take a page from this master-showman's book and give the comedy the consideration it deserves when planning their programs. Look over the list of New York stage offerings for the past several years. There have been ten dramatic flops to every comedy failure; and while the dramatic offerings outnumber the comedies two to one the list of big successes contains two comedies for every one drama.

Every normal person wants to laugh. Let your advertising guarantee him a lot of laughs, and he will be there even though he cares not much for the rest of your bill.

Very many of the smaller theatres have already established "Comedy Nights," "Pathe Nights," "Short-Subject Nights," etc., with surprising increases in their box-office receipts.

Custom Impeding Progress

As we said at the beginning custom and tradition possess a permanence never enjoyed by written law. Here we face in an advanced stage of development a trade custom of centering nearly all our theatre advertising on only one unit of our program; even though most of us must realize upon deliberation that this procedure is dead wrong in the light of present short-subjects and the results obtained by those who have already made a partial correction.

Tracing this pernicious tradition to its source may help us realize the unfairness of its continuance. Most of us can remember the days when the five-reeler came into being as a complete program and competed with the short-subject program; we can also remember that the short-subject of that day, foot for foot, could not compete with the excellence of the feature-length picture. In fact, up until about four years ago the average short-subject had not improved to any great e tent, whereas the better feature-length pictures had improved manyfold in excellence. It is not be wondered that exhibitors acquired the habit of depending upon the feature-length dramatic picture for their drawing power.

Short Comedies Improved

Progress, however, will not be denied, and patron demand for better and better entertainment led to the necessity for more variety than the dramatic picture offered. Thus, exhibitors began adding an average of about four reels of short-subjects, which a few years ago were of such quality that the less said about them the better. But as short-subject producers and distributors saw a better market they set about to improve the quality of their product until today the actual average of all short-subjects is the equal of all feature-length subjects.

However, there are quite a number of feature-length pictures that cost upwards of $50,000. per reel, whereas the average cost of the best short-subjects is probably slightly under $25,000. per reel. Not that cost in dollars is a fair comparison of excellence because in comedy at least excellence is measured in ingenuity rather than by dollar-bought elaborateness.

Need Advertising Support

Film rentals for good short-subjects are slowly but gradually increasing, but in every instance only quite awhile after the producer and distributor have increased their cost. Short-subject rentals have not increased as rapidly as it has been necessary to increase the production cost. Thus, in the case of comedies, Mack Sennett, Hal Roach and Pathe have at this moment hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in the last two years' product that can never be gotten back from those particular pictures. We can only hope that the missionary and introductory work of those pictures together with the further increased cost and excellence of this year's product will result in the exhibitor according us more time on his screen and higher rentals; and above all else that he will tell the public about our excellent pictures in his advertising.

We stress this last point because we are certain the public will assert very positively its preference for comedy entertainment and for our comedy offerings once we break down this foolish tradition which threatens the exhibitors' independence as well as the biggest forward improvement ever made to place short-subjects out front where they can do this industry so much good.

Use of All-Short-Subject Program Increasing

By J. E. Storey

General Sales Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

THE Short-Subject is rapidly coming into its own.

The season just closing has seen the Short-Subject in the ascendancy, and we confidently predict that the 1925-1926 term will witness even greater advances by the Short-Subject in popular prestige and usage by the exhibitor.

More than ever before the public is throwing its patronage to the Variety brand of entertainment. The increasing popularity of the vaudeville bill is one proof of this; the report by libraries of the tremendous demand for short stories, or for books embodying series of short stories, is another.

Many showmen have already heeded this demand and have increased their use of Short-Subjects within the past year to a notable extent. With each succeeding month we find increasing instances of this practice among first-run exhibitors. St. Louis recently witnessed day-and-date showings in every one of its first-run houses, except one, of thirty-three Pathe short-subject releases. Boston is another big city that has given the Pathe short-subject product one hundred per cent representation simultaneously in its first-run theatres.

New York is also on the roster of the big towns giving increased program space to the Short-Subject. Within the past year Broadway's first-run theatres have repeatedly shown four and five Pathe short-subject releases day-and-date. The Grand Opera House in New York City ran, with highly profitable box-office receipts, a Pathe two-reel comedy for practically every day of the month. Another remarkable instance of short-subject popularity is the booking arrangement made by the Stone theatre of Brooklyn whereby Pathe's short-subject product was signed for showing on forty days out of a period of fifty consecutive days.

Los Angeles recently put on a Pathe banner week during which four two-reel comedies appeared day-and-date at four prominent first-run theatres. Five of San Francisco's first-run houses presented during the same week four different Pathe comedy offerings, the New Fillmore and New Mission theatres doubling on one of the subjects day-and-date.

J. E. Storey, general sales manager, Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Perhaps the most important feature of this increasing prominence being given the Short-Subject is the ever-widening use of the All-Short-Subject Program.

Edward J. O'Keefe, operating the Criterion theatre in Atlantic City, N. J., has given his Short-Subject Programs an all-comedy cast. His report on the box-office reaction is typical.

"I am very glad to tell you that All Comedy Day never fails to do capacity business. When I first introduced this unique idea of a program consisting of nothing but comedies the general opinion of picturesmen whom I discussed the idea which was that it would never go over. However, I am very glad to say that with every recurring year if anything it grows even more popular."

That has been O'Keefe's experience on the East Coast, but the Western reports are just as enthusiastic. In fact, the Dreamland Theatre at Bandon, Ore., went the Atlantic City Exhibitor one better and extended the All-Comedy Program from one day to an entire week.

Within the past few weeks the West has added still further to the record of the All-Comedy Program's success. The Egyptian and the Aztec, two of San Francisco's prominent first-run houses, recently staged programs made up largely from comedy product appearing on the Pathe schedule. Max Graf, managing director of both houses, was so favorably impressed by the box-office returns that he declared his intention of repeating the plan in the near future.

"Chronicles" Offer Many Box-Office Tie-Ups

By Harry L. Knappen,

Sales Manager of "Chronicles of America" Department, Pathe Exchange, Inc.

The great headway made during the year by the "Chronicles of America" photoplays in establishing themselves as permanent screen fixtures in hundreds of theatres throughout the country marks a very definite and significant trend in the history of motion pictures.

The outstanding success of the "Chronicles" has been due in no small measure to the fact that both Pathe and the Yale University Press united in furnishing impressive publicity and exploitation aids.

In addition to the ordinary facilities of its branch offices, Pathe put specialty men in the field whose sole mission is to keep the daily papers and other public prints liberally supplied with reading matter and to effect social group organization, thus insuring liberal attendance. In many cities Better Film Committees have been interested to the point of giving the pictures the kind of box-office support which encouraged exhibitors to run the entire series.

By getting the cooperation of these organizations and individuals and aiming whenever practicable to show appropriate "Chronicles" on national and state holidays, exhibitors with the vision to book this product have been well rewarded for their efforts.

A group of Pathe stars. Glen Tryon, who will be seen in Hal Roach productions; Allene Ray, star of "Sunken Silver" and "Play Ball," Pathe serials; and Charley Chase, star of a series of two-reel comedies produced by Hal Roach.

Pathe's 1925-26 Schedule of Feature Releases

By Harry Scott

Feature Sales Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

AT THE time of writing this announcement Pathe has definitely scheduled two feature productions for release during the early part of the 1925-1926 season. Additions will be made to the feature program and plans to this end are already under way. It is Pathe's plan, however, to build up a schedule of feature releases that will be notable for their quality entertainment rather than their mere numbers.

The two feature productions already assigned to the Pathe program for the new season are the Harold Lloyd feature comedy, as yet untitled, which is based on a highly diverting story of college life; and the Hal Roach feature, "Black Cyclone," in which "Rex," the Wild Horse, plays the title role.

Harold Lloyd's new comedy is a distinct departure from his more recent types of roles. The story deals with college life and presents Harold as an undergraduate with particular aspirations of becoming a football star.

The comedy is largely in the nature of a character study. A youngster sets out on a college career with the ambition of becoming the most popular man in the school. To achieve his purpose he resorts to all manners of ludicrous devices and situations with the result that he becomes the laughing stock of his associates. The crucial test comes in the football game when Harold is called into the contest by accident. Disillusioned at last and aware of his companion's real feelings towards him, the boy throws all artifices aside, becomes his real self, and by sheer grit wins his way to the popularity that he has so long sought for in vain.

In the matter of time consumed and money spent this production promises to be the most ambitious one ever undertaken by Lloyd. Some marvelous shots were obtained at the annual gridiron classic between the University of California and the Stanford University at Berkeley, while other football scenes were filmed at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

Paul Fuller, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

A high light of the action is a ninety-five yard run by Harold, said to be the funniest if not the most spectacular gridiron dash ever seen on or off the screen. While concerned with the football sport the picture has been so constructed that those not acquainted with the technique of the game will be able to follow the action with a maximum of interest.

Sam Taylor and Fred Newmyer are once more teamed in the direction of the production, while the cast includes Jobyna Ralston as Lloyd's leading woman, Brooks Benedict as the heavy, Hazel Keener, James Anderson, and Joe Harrington.

A number of preview showings have already been held on the West Coast. These showings have convinced the Harold Lloyd company that they have in the new feature production the funniest comedy that Harold Lloyd has yet been identified with. It is Pathe's plan to release the new picture in the fall so that the exhibitor may capitalize on the widespread interest in the gridiron sport with which the comedy directly ties up.

"Black Cyclone" is the successor to "Rex, King of Wild Horses," which proved one of the screen's sensations during the past season. The new Hal Roach feature, starring Rex, is hailed by all those who have seen it as decidedly superior to the first "Rex" picture in point of story values, thrilling action, and the individual performance of the equine star. The story of "Black Cyclone" is a romance of the plains in which the major roles are carried by animal actors, the human characters being relegated for the most part to subordinate parts in the action. Between the great Morgan thoroughbred "Rex" and an equally powerful Pinto stallion, known as "The Killer," is waged one of the most thrilling contests ever seen on the screen. The picture was staged in the Nevada desert under the direction of Fred Jackman.

Preceding the national release of the picture, "Black Cyclone" will be given a series of key-city exploitation runs, the first of these to be staged was at the Capitol Theatre, New York, where the world premiere was held, opening Sunday, May 17th. Following the Capitol engagement, "Black Cyclone" will be shown over the Loew Circuit, having been engaged for the maximum, or 120 days.

S. L. Rothafel, in speaking on Sunday evening, May 10th, through Station WEAF and six allied radio stations throughout the country, announced that "Black Cyclone" was the best picture that he had seen in five years and urged all his listeners to view "Black Cyclone" at their earliest opportunity.

Another striking evidence of the unusual merit of "Black Cyclone" is seen in the remarkable report just handed down by the General Committee of the National Board of Review who viewed the production.

"This is a remarkably interesting photoplay, with horses in a wild state on the range for its principal actors. It has thrill, love, adventure—all the qualities of intense dramatic action. Pictorially, it is often superb."

Pathe's Two Reel Comedy Hits for 1925-26

By Stanley B. Waite

Sales Manager of Two-Reel Comedies Department, Pathe Exchange, Inc.

MACK SENNETT and Hal Roach Studios have outlined a program of comedy production for the season of 1925-26, to be distributed by Pathe Exchange, Inc., that will outdo anything these two leading comedy producers have ever attempted in the past.

The 1925-26 season finds this policy continued on an even more elaborate scale. The schedules laid down for the Hal Roach and Mack Sennett organization call for the delivery of 104 two-reel comedies for the coming season.

On the making of these comedies both Hal Roach and Mack Sennett will employ five units each. Four of the companies from each studio will be headed by individual stars, while one company from each of the producers will make comedies in which various members of both stock companies will be featured.

Three of the Mack Sennett companies will be headed by Harry Langdon, Alice Day, and Ralph Graves respectively. In addition, there will be a Mack Sennett Comedies series in which various members of the Mack Sennett stock company will be featured, including such prominent comedy players as Madeline Hurlock, Raymond McKee, Natalie Kingston, Billy Bevan, Thelma Parr, Sid Smith, Vernon Dent, Jack Richardson, Kewpie Morgan, and Andy Clyde.

In addition to the above named stars Mack Sennett's organization has added many new names and faces to its producing staff. Six leaders in their field are represented in the Mack Sennett directorial lineup. These include Eddie Cline, Harry Edwards, Del Lord, Ralph Ceder, Reggie Morris and Lloyd Bacon. Harry Edwards, who is responsible for the direction of Langdon's past screen hits, will continue to wield the megaphone for this Mack Sennett star. Lloyd Bacon handled the direction of Lloyd Hamilton prior to his coming to the Mack Sennett lot, Del Lord is one of the tried and proven directors on the pioneer lot, comedy-producer's lot, having made twenty-five pictures for Mack Sennett, Pathe Comedy producer.

Mack Sennett. Eddie Cline will direct Ralph Graves in his new series of comedies.

For the coming season John Waldron, General Production Manager of the Mack Sennett Studios, has enlarged his scenario staff to nine people who will work under the supervision of Arthur Ripley while a large staff of "gag" men have been recruited to work with Felix Adler.

In addition to the regular lineup of the far famed Bathing Beauties the stock company at the Mack Sennett Studios includes Sid Smith, Vernon Dent, Madeline Hurlock, Natalie Kingston, Thelma Parr, Virginia Gilbert, Billy Bevan, Jack Richardson, Kewpie Morgan and Andy Clyde.

Early this Spring Pathe and the Hal Roach Studios signed a new contract which calls for the delivery during the coming season of a minimum of 48 and a maximum of 52 two-reel comedies. This represents by far the most formidable lineup of two-reel comedy product ever planned for the short-subject market, the production costs alone on the comedies for one season aggregating over $4,000,000.

To take care of this huge production program, Hal Roach has added extensiely to his studio personnel. The staff of directors works under the supervision of F. Richard Jones, who has been identified with the direction of comedies since the days of the Keystone Comedies.

"Bob" McGowan, the "Our Gang" director, is the dean of the Hal Roach directorial staff. The marvelous success of this series of comedies is due in large measure to the skilled and sympathetic handling of the troupe of youngsters by McGowan. James W. Horne, known for a long time as a successful director of feature-length productions, is handling the megaphone for the Glenn Tryon two-reel comedies. The two-reel series of comedies featuring Charley Chase will be made under the direction of Leo McCarey. This director is accredited to a large degree with the development of Chase during the past season.

Clyde Cook, the newly signed Hal Roach-Pathe star will be directed by Lloyd Buckingham. Buckingham has established an international reputation as a comedy director. Mr. Buckingham has directed the majority of productions made by Clyde Cook since his entrance into the motion picture comedy field. Fred Guiol will direct the Hal Roach Two-Reel Comedies Series.

Among those to be co-featured in this series are several names that have already made their mark as stars of wellknown comedy brands. Reference is made especially to Al St. John, Lige Conley, Dot Farley, and Lucien Littlefield. Among the other prominent members of the Hal Roach company are Katherine Grant, Jimmy Finlayson, Martha Sleeper, Blanche Mehaffey, Fay Wray, and Kathleen Collins.

Other departments of the Hal Roach organization have also been added to. Many new title writers and film editors are now at work under the direction of H. M. Walker, while F. Richard Jones has increased his "gag men" staff to six headed by the well-known author Rob Wagner.

Stars and featured players in Pathe pictures: Alice Day, Mack Sennett's new star; Jobyna Ralston, leading lady for Harold Lloyd in his new feature for Pathe; and Ralph Graves, featured in Mack Sennett's comedies.

Forthcoming Patheserials, Season 1925-26

By E. Oswald Brooks

Sales Manager of Serial Dept., of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

EMBOLDENED by the great success of the "greater and better" Patheserial plan, our lineup for serials during the forthcoming season of 1925-1926 is necessarily even more ambitious than any introduced since this policy was put into effect.

On May 10th we released an Albert Payson Terhune story of the Florida Everglades under the title of "Sunken Silver." This is a direct picturization in Patheserial form of Mr. Terhune's very successful novel "Black Caesar's Clan." The featured players in "Sunken Silver" are Allene Ray and Walter Miller. By this time Miss Ray has gained a very favorable reputation as a Pathe serial heroine. Her work in "The Way Of a Man," "The Fortieth Door" and "Galloping Hoofs" has endeared her to millions of serial fans throughout the country, who now look forward with keen anticipation to her next starring vehicle. Walter Miller is a new recruit to the Patheserial fold. In the opinion of many he is about the best leading man we have ever had.

Following "Sunken Silver" we shall release a tremendously interesting serial or Western import, entitled "Wild West." This is being produced by C. W. Patton at the Miller Bros. 101 ranch in Oklahoma. It will carry all of the allure of a Wild West show, the circus atmosphere, and in retrospect the great Oklahoma land rush of 1889. "Wild West" is not a period story. It is an excellent, up to date, thrilling and romantic narrative of life "on the show." For this production Helen Ferguson has been selected as the leading woman and Jack Mulhall as the hero. Mr. Mulhall's work in "Into The Net" was to a large extent responsible for the enormous success of Mr. Enright's story.

To follow "Wild West," none other than John J. McGraw himself has written for us a very thrilling story which has the great national game of baseball as its atmospheric background. John J. McGraw and most of the stars of the Giants team will appear personally in various sequences of "Play Ball" —the title of the John J. McGraw serial.

Hal E. Roach, Pathe comedy producer.

The leads will be played by Allene Ray and Walter Miller, with magnificent support from such well known artists as J. Barney Sherry, Harry Semels and others of equal prominence.

In order to give our exhibitors and public the necessary variety which is essential in a succession of Patheserials, the production to follow "Play Ball" will be of a Western nature. The story for this originally appeared in the All Story Magazine under the title of "Janie and the Waning Glories." It is a splendidly written narrative of the modern West with ample excitement and action from the start to the finish.

As a successor to that Western serial, we have already selected a story written by the famous English author, Edgar Wallace, entitled "The Green Archer." This is a mystery story with its locale in and around New York and the eastern United States.

That schedule carries us up to the Summer of 1926. From then onward plans have already been laid for a continuance of Pathe serials of high quality, big box office attractiveness and infinite variety.

The "greater and better" Pathe serial has already, by sheer merit, forced itself upon the attention of literally thousands of the higher class theatres which heretofore have not looked upon serials as being suitable attractions for their type of audiences. It would be tedious to enumerate a long list of such houses which now regularly play Patheserials, but as an indication of their calibre we might mention such theatres as the Newman, Kansas City, the Missouri, St. Louis, the Hoblitzel houses in Dallas, San Antonio, Fort Worth and Houston, the Southern Enterprises Circuit, the West Coast Theatres Circuit, the Pacific Theatres Circuit, the T. & D. Jr. Circuit, the Saenger Circuit, the Stanley Circuit, the Comerford Circuit, the Gordon Circuit, etc., ad infinitum.

The "greater and better" type of Patheserial has infused such a tremendous amount of new life into the serial proposition that we confidently look forward to the day, in the not far distant future, when a Pathe serial will form a regular part of the program in at least 50% of American theatres —and in this 50% we include theatres of every class, from the biggest first run houses to the small one night a week shows.

To Continue Roach Single Reel Comedies

The Hal Roach brand of single-reel comedies will continue to be an important feature of Pathe's program of short subject releases during 1925-1926 season.

As heretofore, the Hal Roach single-reelers will comprise featured players selected from the Roach stock company at the Culver City Studios. The comedies in this series will be released at the rate of one every two weeks. One of the players who will appear in the featured roles in this series will be Martha Sleeper, whose work as an eccentric comedian in the Hal Roach comedies has commanded much favorable comment during the past season.

F. Richard Jones, supervisor of productions for Hal Roach; Martha Sleeper and Frank Butler, who will be featured in Hal Roach comedies, and Eugenia Gilbert, a Mack Sennett featured player.

Pathe Review's Features Will Continue

PATHE REVIEW'S comprehensive production program for the 1925-1926 season assures its continued leadership in the "screen magazine" field. An outstanding feature of the new season's plans will be the continuance of the feature series recently inaugurated by Editor Emmanuel Cohen.

In line with the very successful Pathe Review release of the Andrews-American Museum Expedition into Mongolia, under the title, "The Origin of Man," there will be released shortly the film story of Count de Prorok's Expeditions in Northern Africa.

Another feature series now in production for fall and winter release is a series of new-type microscopic films, made by Louis H. Tolhurst. Mr. Tolhurst's work on short length subjects will appear exclusively in Pathe Review.

Color novelties in production include a brand-new series by Arthur C. Pillsbury, of Yosemite National Park. Mr. Pillsbury has taken the "Life of American Wild Flowers" as his subject, and by "time-lapse" photography has produced a startlingly beautiful series in which the life of each flower is shown.

The new "multiple-image" camera invented by Staff Cameraman Alvin C. Knechtel—the sensation of the past few months in technical circles—has been improved, and additional "mystery-pictures" will shortly be available.

Willard Vander Veer, whose "Prettiest Girl I Know" series proved one of the most successful features of the past season's program, is preparing a schedule of subjects designed to appeal especially to the feminine portion of motion picture audiences. "The Brides of All Lands," just finishing in production, will be released through the summer to fall; and another "girl" series, featuring the beauties of Broadway, will follow.

The helpful side of short-subjects—the sort of picture that gives you something more than entertainment—will be represented by a series now in production by Staff Cameraman Charles Charlton. It will be called "Everyman's Home."

The Pathecolor section of the reel, a never-failing standard since Pathe Review was begun five years ago, will be continued during the 1925-1926 season.

"Aesop's Film Fables" Made by Latest Methods

"AESOP'S FILM FABLES," the popular animated cartoon subject produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., which has now passed its two hundredth release by Pathe, is made with even greater care than the average film comedy enacted by human actors.

Cartoonist Paul Terry is assisted by a staff of eighteen artists who are daily engaged in making little drawings of Farmer Al Falfa, cats, dogs, dinosaurs, elephants, and scores of other animals.

After preparing a regular 'script with all its details of situations and gags, the backgrounds are drawn, both exterior and interior.

Working drawings are made upon translucent tissue paper. On a new tissue, he creates just those portions of the character's body which must "move." So, each time a body-member is drawn in a slightly different position. This system reduces the work to a minimum.

The tracers use the drawings on tissue paper as blueprints. Each tissue sketch is traced or transferred to a sheet of clear celluloid of corresponding size.

All the sheets of paper and celluloid are punched and placed upon pegs, like loose-leaf ledger sheets. Thereby, they are kept within register of proper alignment.

Following the completion of the actual cartooning, or animating, the drawings are handed to the cameraman who follows the instructions on the exposure sheet.

Such is the story of the making of the "Fables." Newspaper reviewers single out these animated cartoons repeatedly for special comment in their photoplay departments, and quite a number have compared them favorably with the feature-length subjects on the programs.

"Topics of the Day" Is a Popular Attraction

"TOPICS OF THE DAY," the weekly humor film produced by Timely Films, Inc., for release through Pathe Exchanges, qualifies for the tried and proved class of screen entertainment. Each issue of the film is comprised of jokes and witticisms which have already been tried out upon the readers of the respective publications from which the editorial staff of "Topics" select their candidates.

It requires the combined efforts of an editorial staff of twenty-one people to carefully peruse the several thousand magazines and newspapers which arrive in the daily mail.

The selection of humor for "Topics" involves considerable work not apparent to the layman. Not only must the candidate qualify from a timely and humorous standpoint but there is a limit to the number of words in each one. Oftentimes, it is necessary to cut down the story. This means that the general atmosphere surrounding the original story must either be changed, eliminated or boiled down to its very meat.

Particular care is taken that no joke bears even the slightest suggestion of ridicule toward race, color or creed; also any political reference must be absolutely impartial. This care is taken with the object of not only satisfying one hundred per cent of an audience but also not to offend even one-half of one per cent of that same audience.

Not only are "Topics of the Day" a standby with thousands of motion picture theatres but they register equally as well in vaudeville houses, including the theatres of the Keith-Albee, Orpheum, and other big time circuits.

Players to be featured in forthcoming Pathe releases: Madeline Hurlock, Ruth Taylor, who will be seen in Mack Sennett comedies, Walter Miller, appearing opposite Allene Ray in Pathe Serials, and Helen Ferguson and Jack Mulhall, co-featured in "Wild West," a new serial.

Pathe News Continues Brilliant Record

THE opening of the 1925-1926 season will find Pathe News more firmly entrenched than ever before as a leader in the field of screen journalism. This place of honor has been securely maintained by Pathe News throughout the season just closing both by reason of its marvelous record in the covering of news events at home and abroad and by virtue of its consistent service to its exhibitor patrons throughout the country. A partial list of the special features in Pathe News during the 1924-1925 season follows:

Pathe News secured a feature in being the first to bring to America views of the Funeral of Lenin, the late Russian dictator.

Running the Rum Blockade, an exclusive and impartial camera investigation released in May of 1924, provided a series of sensational scenes, including closeup views of operations taken from specially chartered ships.

The Nomination of Calvin Coolidge as Presidential candidate was not only completely covered but Pathe is credited with having the first pictures of this notable occasion shown in New York and Chicago theatres.

The pictures secured of the Round the World Fliers were of particular interest, exclusive pictures being taken at Port Moller, Alaska, at the Aleutian Islands, and at Shanghai, China, Striking pictures were presented of the Middle West Tornado Disaster, in less than twenty-four hours following the catastrophe.

Films of the Inauguration of President Coolidge were secured in record time. For the very first time in history people living in New York and other Eastern Cities were able to see pictures of the Presidential Inauguration the same day it happened.

Another outstanding Pathe News special was the exclusive pictures of the Funeral of Sun-Yat-Sen. Sensationally dramatic views of the new Bulgarian Revolution, were a feature of recent Pathe News issues.

In addition to pictures of news nature, Pathe News has shown a striking list of spectacular scenes of interesting current events.

Among these are views of the aerial maneuvers of the Aircraft Squadrons at San Diego; Kilauea in eruption was filmed in both day and night scenes; colorful sea views of the Japanese Naval Ship "Kwanto" Pounding To Pieces on a Reef.

Death-defying Air Stunts undertaken by Aviator E. S. Daughterty furnished spectacular thrills in several issues of Pathe News; while marvelous underground scenes were revealed in the Torchlight Exploration of the Hans-sur-Lesse Grottoes.

Exceedingly entertaining thrills were provided in such scenes as those included in Painting the Eifel Tower, Cameraman Speeds Down A Chute On Lumber, and A Girl Looping the Loop Atop a Plane.

Plan "Sportlight" Films For New Program

ONE of the most notable box-office successes on the Pathe program during the past season has been the series of single-reel sport pictures, known as Grantland Rice "Sportlights." These pictures are produced by J. H. Hawkinson from stories written by Grantland Rice.

These sport pictures were first placed on the Pathe schedule of releases in the fall of 1923 and have been released since at the rate of one every two weeks. Their success was remarkable from the first and the close of the 1924-25 season finds them a permanent feature of hundreds of programs throughout the country.

A production schedule commensurate with this tremendous interest in sport has been adopted by Messrs. Rice and Hawkinson for the season of 1925-1926. Among the highlights of this program will be the filming of a series of reels, each devoted to some special sport.

Other interesting highlights of the program follow:

A reel devoted to the "pro and con" presentation of similar sports. For example, who has a better chance of winning in a rough-and-tumble match—the boxer or the wrestler?

A "Sportlight" devoted to "Nervous Moments" in sport—the baseball thriller of three men on base in the ninth inning with two men out and two strikes and three balls on the batter; the final putt in the golf championship match, and similar situations.

A reel devoted to various kinds of recreation—the family type of picnic; the holiday at the amusement park, with all its thrills; the vacation in the mountains; the seaside resort with its attendant water sports and sunburns; and the "wonderbus" version of vacationing, the "wonderbus" being a sort of house-on-wheels peculiar to Arizona and having a cruising radius of about 1,200 miles.

Another "sportlight" devoted to the "Rising Generation" and showing how the idea of sport has taken universal hold at the present day extending almost to the cradle.

"Stereoscopiks" Feature New Schedule

A SERIES of remarkable novelty reels that were added just recently to the Pathe program and will continue as one of the features of Pathe's lineup of short-subject releases for 1925-1926, is the group of third-dimension pictures known as "Stereoscopiks." There are four subjects in the "Stereoscopiks" series, which will be made available at the rate of one release every eight weeks.

Among the prominent first-run theatres that have already introduced "Stereoscopiks" on their screens are the Rialto, New York; the Fenway, Boston; the Missouri, St. Louis; the Rialto, Denver; McVickers, Chicago; the Howard, Atlanta; the Metropolitan, Los Angeles; the Palace, Ft. Worth; and the Palace at Dallas. Some of the first-run engagements have been marked by special presentation effects built around the "Stereoscopik" shown. When the "Runaway Taxi" showed recently at the Rivoli theatre, New York, it was preceded by a specially staged prologue. "Variety," one of the theatrical weeklies, singled the presentation out for particular comment.

The second subject titled "Luna-cy" takes the audience on a highly enjoyable tour of the famous Luna Park at Coney Island. Due to the stereoscopic effect of the picture the audience experiences all the thrills of the scenic railway and toboggan slide as if actually riding on these devices of the amusement park.

One of the breath-taking incidents of "Ouch," the third of the series, takes place when a fierce looking pirate slowly points his pistol at the heads of the audience and pulls the trigger.

MOTHER'S DAY

IN celebration of Mother's Day, the Howard theatre, Atlanta, co-operating with the Atlanta Constitution in whose columns all publicity was conducted, arranged a special showing of the week's program on Monday morning at 10 o'clock, to which were invited free of charge all mothers over forty years old. When the doors of the theatre opened Monday morning over three thousand women poured in and packed the house.

The program was beautifully appropriate. As a special feature, Alex Keese, director of the Howard orchestra, and Howard Price Kingsmore, manager, presented a living portrait of Whistler's mother, with the addition of the son, in the person of Charles Winn, tenor, who sang "Mother O'Mine." The feature picture delighted the audience, and the Home Town String Band of Georgia, featuring Clayton McMichen, brought forth tremendous applause.

The orchestra offered as the Overture "When Mother Was A Girl," a medley of popular hits of forty or fifty years ago. The regular news reel and a beautiful scenic completed the program. Special guests of honor at the Monday morning matinee were the members of the Old Ladies home, who were brought to the theatre in Yellow Cabs, and taken home after the performance, with every thought of their comfort and every attention paid them that would increase their enjoyment.

EFFECTIVE MUSICAL PROLOGUE

THE presentation given "Sally" by the Saenger Amusement Company at the Strand, New Orleans, was a tabloid musical comedy, featuring every song that Sally was ever associated with from the time she lived down in our alley until she reached the rose tinted clouds with the silver lining.

The overture was styled "A Sally of Sally Songs" beginning with "My Gal Sal" "She Lived Down in Our Alley," "I Wonder What's Become of Sally," "Sally's In The Movies Now," and the best remembered hits from the Ziegfeld-Kearn musical show. A dancing team came on as the first curtains parted in a waltz tempo, making an exit at one crossing of the stage. The house blackened out and a transparent drop, done in a monster fan design, ornated with two symbolic floral urns at each side of stage, showed a man and girl at the left of stage. Rappaport, the tenor, then sang "Sally, Won't You Come Back Home" from the Ziegfeld Follies 1921 as an encore; leaving the stage to the girl dancers for a whirlwind clog finale, finishing on their toes—back to back—in a posed position for the final curtain. Tumultuous applause greeted every presentation and Maurice F. Barr who staged this prologue has been the recipient of much congratulation upon its effectiveness.

TRUCK SPEEDS AD SALES

THE service of the Paramount Ad-Sales department in San Francisco has been remarkably accelerated by the use of a two ton truck with a special body equipped to carry a complete line of paper and ad-sales material on fifty pictures.

Credit for the idea goes to Herman Wobber, Paramount district manager, and his so-called "gang." Six months of experimenting to perfect the right type of "sales-wagon" resulted in the model shown here which has earned the praise of exhibitors in northern California. The Paramount Ad-Sales car is not designed simply for the delivery of ad-sales. The actual purpose is to bring a complete line of ad-sales to the exhibitor's door and to permit the ad-sales manager to survey the theatre requirements and assist, if desired, in the ordering of paper, heralds and novelties. If an emergency requires an exhibitor being supplied immediately with ad-sales material the automobile carries sufficient stock to make a spot transaction possible without breaking up the complete line carried for display purposes.

Oscar Kantner, exploitation representative, Jimmy Myers, ad-sales manager, and Myron Shellman, assistant ad-sales manager are the men who have "stepped on the gas," and are continuing to do so in piloting the truck to exhibitors in California.

The interior of the truck is fitted with specially designed bins so that each ad-sales item fits snugly into its own compartment. Leather straps from the tops of the bins to the floor of the car hold the stock tightly in place and prevent any possible injury from the movement or vibration of the machine.

Results have been so satisfactory that during the recent Paramount International convention held in Los Angeles, where the truck was on display, J. B. Dugger, Paramount Dallas branch manager, requested and received an exact duplicate of the truck for the use of M. J. Helms, the ad-sales manager in that city.

SEEING 'EM FIRST

MANAGER T. F. McCOY of the Florence theatre at Pasadena, Calif., sends us a description of the pre-views held at that theatre by Los Angeles producers, and while it isn't exploitation, strictly speaking, we are running it here because we believe other exhibitors will find it interesting reading. Manager McCoy says:

"Out on east Colorado street in 'The Rose City of California,' otherwise known as Pasadena, West Coast-Langley's Florence theatre is located. The Florence theatre is a neighborhood house and the decorations and lighting are about the same as in any other high class family theatre, but, there the sameness ends, for in this cozy little theatre some of the world's greatest pictures have had their first introduction to the public in what is known in southern California as a pre-view showing, or in other words, after the director of a picture has completed his production, his staff, his cast, and himself drive over to Pasadena, and sit with the audience, which is judge and jury. If a picture goes over with the audience at the Florence, it's a hundred to one shot it will go over when it's released.

AND OURS

Emil E. Shauer, manager of Paramount foreign department, and his son, Mel Shauer, manager of ad sales department, with the ad sales automobile in the background.

"Many a director gets his dreams smashed in this little theatre when the audience sits in silence or begins to walk out on his picture. Also many a director and star is made happy when they see the audience at the Florence break into cheers and applause.

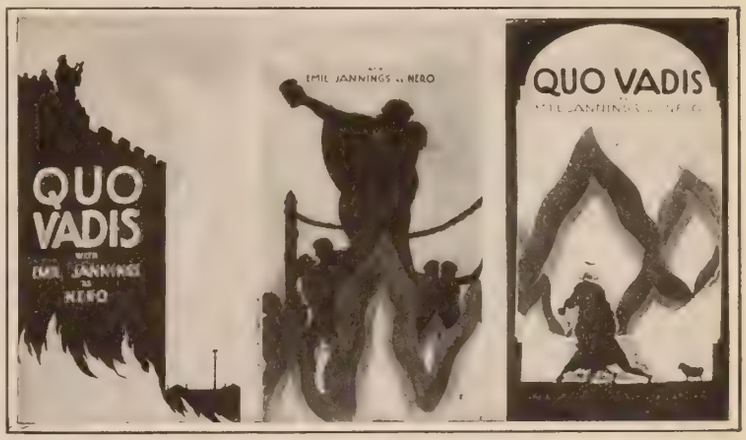
"One director, Mal St. Clair, pre-viewed his latest picture 'Are Parents People?' at the Florence a few nights ago. Mal St. Clair remarked to the writer after the pre-view was over, 'Boy, my picture is clean.' It gave me a thrill when Mal St. Clair stressed the fact that 'Are Parents People?' was a clean picture and the time is coming when directors will turn out clean entertainment or they will be lost in the dust kicked up by the directors who's motto is 'If it's not a clean picture I didn't direct it.' The day of the filth and sex pictures is gone forever and from the number of clean pictures I have pre-viewed lately, I believe the industry is entering a new era.

"Among the pictures that have been pre-viewed in Pasadena in the last few weeks are 'The Phantom Of The Opera,' 'Are Parents People?,' 'Rah, Rah, Rah,' 'I'll Show You The Town,' 'The Teaser,' 'Zander The Great,' 'Spook Ranch' and 'How Baxter Butted In.'

"The Florence has a big battleship searchlight mounted on top of the theatre and it is used only on pre-view nights, therefore when the people of Pasadena see the monster beam of light sweeping the sky they know there's a big pre-view at the Florence and they begin to flock to the theatre like moths to a light. When the searchlight is turned on we get out the S. R. O. sign for the people are always waiting for the sign in the sky and if there is no pre-view showing for three or four days they begin to call up the theatre and inquire as to when we are going to have a pre-view. They like to have the honor of being among the first audience in the world to see the picture; also they enjoy seeing the stars and directors.

"Some weeks we only have one pre-view and others we have as many as five.

"The word pre-view to most exhibitors means little, but to the manager of the Florence and the people of Pasadena it means one glorious night, also to the director and the cast it means either happiness or it means the picture has flopped, for the great American theatre going public never bothers about the feelings of any one man or group of men. If they like the picture they let it be known and if they don't like it they walk out on it, or they sit in silence, as I said when I started this; the Florence theatre, is just like any other high class theatre, except on pre-view nights, then it is in a class by itself."



DOING IT RIGHT

AN excellent example of how to do a fashion show "up brown" without tremendous expense is furnished by that put over by Manager John J. Friedl of the Palace theatre, Dallas, under the title "The Seven Ages of Fashion." With the cooperation of Neiman-Marcus, the South's most exclusive dealers, the offering proved a most elaborate affair with 42 people in the show displaying 68 garments and wraps and settings of huge dimensions.

The style Show opened in film, the idea being based on Shakespear's "The Seven Ages of Man," from the babe in her nurse's arms to the bride just before the ceremony. The film ended with the title—"Thus ends—yet begins this strange eventful history." Here the film faded out—the curtain closed—screen taken up and curtain opened on an elaborate nursery scene. A colored mammy was in attendance at the crib. The orchestra accompaniment opened with "Rock-a-Bye Baby." Six poseurs came on—admired the baby and to the accompaniment of a fox trot modeled down the runway. After the sixth girl had cleared the curtain line the curtain closed for Scene 2.

The curtain opened for the second scene on "A Parasian Flower Market in Springtime," the opening in this scene being thirty-eight feet wide by raising the two tab drops on either side of the screen. This scene was a reproduction of the Famed Fashion Promenade along the Champs de Elyees in Paris. The poseurs in the scene represented in following order—The School Girl, College Girl, Sub-Deb, Debutant and The Age of Travel. After the College Girls had modeled, lights came down and a Polka-Dot effect in film was run off on the set introducing the Polka-Dot Girls. This scene closed with the entrance of six girls dressed as school girls who offered a novelty dance on the runway.

After the six dancing girls had made their exit the overhead lights on the orchestra were dimed to a deep blue and the orchestra bathed in pink from overhead spots began playing "Lady Of The Evening" from the "Music Box Revue," and as poseurs modeled the evening gowns and wraps the stage was set for the final episode. As the last evening wrap was shown and the model made her exit, the curtain opened on a film episode showing the bride leaving her home and entering the church. Just as she entered the church a spot from the balcony picked up the ring bearer coming in from the entrance on the right of the screen. He started up the runway and was followed by flower girls, maids of honor and finally the bride and train bearers. These all modeled to the organ accompaniment of "Lohengrin's Wedding March," until the bride entered. At this point the ring bearer was just returning from the runway and going up to the stage—the orchestra picking up the chorus from "The Rose Maid" and the curtain opening on the church scene—full big opening—dim lights with catherdral glass windows predominating. Choir on stage—groom and best man entering from side, crossing stage and joining bride after she and train bearers had completed runway. As she reached stage full lights came on, minister raised his hands in blessing—and as choir and orchestra finished full—the grand drapery slowly closed on finale.

These art panels on "Quo Vadis" (First National) were designed and executed by Batiste Madalena, chief of the art staff of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y. They were done in brilliant colors, including yellow, orange and red, and in some, various tones of purple.

Continues to pull 'em in on the second wheel of the run. Think Moore is great. (Middle West.)

Heart of a Siren—
While not as good as some of this star's previous efforts still it did well owing to her popularity here. (West.)

Chickie—
Cashed in on extra publicity obtained through publication of story in local newspaper. Pleased generally. (Middle West.)

My Son—
Attendance for the week good. Title drew them. (Middle West.)
A good picture with a crackerjack vaudeville bill with it but the gross was not more than average. The public was asking a lot for their money on this week and slow to come in anyway. (Middle West.)
This one is quite entertaining. Nazimova has cut out her extreme mannerisms and does splendid character work. Business was good in the evenings, but rather weak during matinees. (Middle West.)
Did not draw big crowds. All who saw it were pleased. (Middle West.)

Learning to Love—
A charming picture that is like a refreshing breath. (East.)

F. B. O.

Jimmie's Millions—
An entertaining production that did well at the box office. (West.)

FOX FILM CORP.

The Hunted Woman—
Curwood's pictures always pull. (East.)

She Wolves—
Not overly interesting production. Depends upon scenes of Paris night life for its appeal. (Middle West.)

Frank Newman's Royal theatre, Kansas City, Mo., used this ad on "Charley's Aunt" (Prod. Dist. Corp.)

Using stock material, the Garden theatre, Baltimore, arranged this neat newspaper ad in connection with its engagement of "Gold Heels" (Fox) recently.

The Man From Beyond—
Did fairly well for the week. Not much of a story. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Price of Pleasure—
Stereotyped story which nevertheless pleased the public. Good business. (Middle West)

Up the Ladder—
Virginia Valli a favorite with audiences at this house. An entertaining feature. Well acted. Business good. (East.)
A delightful Virginia Valli offering that was a business getter. (East.)

ASSOC. EXHIB.

School for Wives—
An average production of its type. Business averaged up. (Middle West).

Introduce Me—

STATE RIGHTS

The Virgin—
This one did well with a strong vaudeville bill. (West.)

Secrets of the Night—
A bad picture and business was the same. (Middle West.)

PARAMOUNT

Men and Women—
A swift moving picture that takes. (East.)
An ordinary picture with an overworked plot. Business fair. (Middle West.)
William De Mille handled a hackneyed plot in a courageous manner. Competent cast contributes greatly to film's success. (Middle West.)
This one did a fair business for the week. (West.)

The Charmer—
Pola Negri gives a good performance as the charmer. Patrons were pleased. (West.)

Eve's Secret—
A fair story with good acting and settings. Business was satisfactory. (Middle West.)

Sackcloth and Scarlet—
This is one for sophisticated audiences. An elaborate production and some good acting. Business fair. (East.)
A film with a scarlet thread woven through it that is unpleasant to many. (East.)

The Devil's Cargo—
The work of a fine cast is the highlight of this offering which also possesses a red blooded story packed with action. Business excellent. (East.)

Adventure—
Good entertainment. Drew fair crowds. (Middle West.)

The Little French Girl—
This picture suffers from an overdose of censorship. Doesn't bear much resemblance to the original story, and is disappointing to those who have read the book. Alice Joyce and Neil Hamilton save it. Business good. (Middle West.)

Code of the West—
Fell a bit under the usual average. Not strong on westerns here. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Isn't Life Wonderful—
An exalting picture that gains impressiveness through its extreme simplicity. It had only a moderate appeal, and business was fair. (Middle West.)

PROD. DIST. CORP.

Friendly Enemies
Did good business but the war episodes in it weren't taken so well. (West.)

Charley's Aunt—
This was the first up-town run of this picture following a four-weeks' down-town run, and it played to very big business. Holding it another week. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROS.

On Thin Ice—
Drew big all week, pleasing most of patrons. (Middle West.)
Just a program picture that did a poor business. There's nothing much to it. (West.)

Eve's Lover—
A good story but the title is misleading. Business good. (Middle West.)

A Kiss in the Dark—
Didn't do as well as was expected of it. Business was off for the week. (West.)

VITAGRAPH

Greater Than Marriage—
Not much of a story but production is good. Business was poor. (West.)
A good week's business with this one. (Middle West.)

METRO-GOLDWYN

Man and Maid—

Confessions of a Queen—
A good story and cast make this an interesting picture. It drew well. (West.)

Zander the Great—
A fair picture which failed to hold up, so was pulled off in middle of week. (East.)
Generally regarded as Marion Davies' best vehicle. Backed by publicity campaign in local Hearst paper, it did a better than average business, playing for two weeks in a run house. (Middle West.)

Seven Chances—
Buster Keaton improves upon stage version by use of many funny gags. Excellent patronage throughout engagement. (Middle West.)

The Way of a Girl—
An excellent picture. Good entertainment. Fine business. (Middle West.)

Cheaper to Marry—
Just another picture. Patrons failed to show much interest. Good cast and fair acting. (East.)

The Sporting Venus—
In the opinion of the manager this was a good feature and a picture which should have played up a nice week. It averaged just fair with no theatres in town doing any big business. (Middle West.)

Lady of the Night—
Attendance with this one about up to the usual standard. (Middle West.)
This is the best picture that Norma Shearer has done. A good film. It did not average high here on a week when no houses did much. (Middle West.)

Greed—
A pretty good picture for a program run but it did not average high for the week. The picture public seems to be turning fickle. (Middle West.)

Short Subjects and Serials

Roach Forces Busy on Films for New Season

The Hal Roach comedy forces are engaged on productions which Pathe will offer on the release schedule for next year. Four of the Roach units are now doing camera work for the new program.

The Clyde Cook company is being directed by Jess Robbins in a two-reeler in which the star will be supported by Martha Sleeper, Noah Young and Fay Holderness. Charlie Chase is being directed by Leo McCarey in a comedy entitled "Isn't Life Terrible," in which Katherine Grant will appear as leading lady. Robert McGowan is making an "Our Gang" comedy with the famous juvenile troupers appearing in a back yard "Coney Island" of their own design; and Jay Howe is directing a Hal Roach all-star two-reeler with Martha Sleeper, Al St. John, Lucien Littlefield, Jimmy Finlayson, Lige Conley, Dot Farley, Marjorie Whities and other well known comedians.

New Dinky Doodle Cartoon is Completed

The Bray Dinky Doodle Cartoon No. 10 has been completed by Walter Lanz, cartoonist, for Standard Cinema Corporation and released through F. B. O. It is titled "Dinky Doodle and Robinson Crusoe." It will be released on June 21st.

A trio of comedy moments from "Skinners In Silk," a Mack Sennett production with an all-star cast for Pathe.

Larry Semon in a scene from "The Cloudhopper," his latest Special Comedy distributed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

Educational to Release Eight

Five Two-Reel Comedies and Four Single Reelers in Schedule for June

FIVE two-reel comedies and four single-reelers are on the release schedule for Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., during the month of June. These will start the Summer season off with a bang for this organization. The five two-reelers will introduce two new faces to comedy loving fans.

Eddie Nelson, formerly in vaudeville on the Orpheum circuit, in the west, will make his first appearance in Mermaid comedies in "Going Great". Juvenile Comedies will introduce young Mickey Bennett in the first of his starring series during the month of June.

Larry Semon will be seen in the third of the two-reel releases. It is titled "The Cloudhopper", and is said to be a thriller in which Larry does some hazardous stunts in aeroplanes.

Bobby Vernon will be seen in the last of his present series of Bobby Vernon Comedies under the title of "Air Tight". It is said to be replete with the usual number of humorous incidents.

The Mickey Bennett vehicle of the Juvenile Comedy series will be "Baby Blues". The other of the two-reelers will be the Christie comedy, "Call a Cop", with Neal Burns in the leading role.

The single-reel releases will consist of "Fun's Fun", a Cameo comedy with Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance; "Wake Up", with the same pair in the leading roles; a release of the Lyman H. Howe "Hodge Podge" series, as yet untitled; and "Prop's Dash for Cash", from the Earl Hurd Pen and Ink Vaudeville series.

International to Shoot Milk Fund Bouts

International Newsreel will make exclusive pictures of the New York Milk Fund boxing bouts to be held at the Yankee stadium Friday evening, May 29th, and they will be distributed by Universal, according to an agreement signed between E. B. Hatrick, general manager of International, and Carl Laemmle.

The Milk Fund is one of the biggest of New York's annual sporting events. They are staged by the Free Milk Fund for Babies, of which Mrs. William Randolph Hearst is chairman. As soon as the bouts are over prints of the pictures will be rushed to all parts of New York state by aeroplane and fast mail. The proceeds derived from the motion and still pictures will be devoted entirely to the Free Milk Fund.

Scenes from "Sit Tight," an Educational-Christie comedy with Jimmy Adams.

Release Stills from "Tell It To A Policeman," a Pathe two-reel comedy presenting Glenn Tryon and Blanche Mehaffey. It is a Hal Roach production.

Pathe Program Well Balanced

Comedies and Serial Chapter Feature Releases for the Week of May 31st

A NUMBER of comedies, together with a serial chapter and the usual features will make a diversified program of releases for the Pathe program during the week of May 31st. The comedies include Ralph Graves in a Sennett Star Comedy and "Our Gang" in a Hal Roach production. "Fangs" is the fourth chapter serial title in "Sunken Silver."

Ralph Graves is featured in "Good Morning, Nurse." Jefferson Moffitt and Frank Capra are responsible for the story and Lloyd Bacon for the direction. Olive Borden and Marvin Lobach are in the supporting cast.

The "Our Gang" comedy is titled "Ask Grandma," and all of the youngsters contribute to the fun. The picture was directed by Robert McGowan.

A number of thrills are said to be offered in "Fangs," fourth chapter of the "Sunken Silver" serial, in which Alene Ray and Walter Miller are the featured players. Also in this chapter are Albert Roccardi, Frank Wunderlee, Frank Lackteen, Ivan Linow and Gordon Bennett.

"Dude Ranch Days," the latest Grantland Rice "Sportlight," shows the modern-day treatment of the tenderfoot who goes West. This "Sportlight" which was secured by J. L. Hawkinson on his recent trip West shows activities upon a ranch that is run largely to accommodate tourists from the East.

Pathe Review No. 22 continues the series "American Cities in Pathecolor," showing views of Richmond, Virginia, the Pride of the Dominion. The other features of this Review are "The Sweetheart of Hawaii," giving glimpses of America's colonial sugar industry, and "The House of Mercy," revealing the Hospice of St. Bernard in the Pennine Alps.

"Hot Times in Iceland" is the title of the latest of the "Aesop's Film Fables," animated under the direction of Cartoonist Paul Terry. "Topics of the Day," the reel of newspaper humor, and Pathe News Nos. 46 and 47 complete the Pathe program available on May 31st.

Harry Langdon Completes Feature Comedy

Harry Langdon has completed work in his first feature length comedy for Pathe titled "His First Flame." Langdon, with Director Harry Edwards and Scenarist Arthur Ripley is now cutting and editing the picture, which will be ready for distribution in about three weeks.

The picture was produced under the Mack Sennett banner and the comedian has in the supporting cast Natalie Kingston and Ruth Hiatt, who divide the feminine honors, and Vernon Dent.

Trio of Leading Ladies for Glenn Tryon

Glenn Tryon will have three leading ladies supporting him in the latest of his two-reel comedies for Pathe release which are now in the course of production. They are Blanche Mehaffey, Katherine Grant and Jane Sherman, all of whom has appeared to advantage in Hal Roach comedies. Chester Conklin and James Finlayson will have the "heavy" roles.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

Good Morning, Nurse!
(Pathe—Two Reels)

RALPH GRAVES is featured here as a hypochondriac, fearing germs and scared to death of injury to his precious person. A camping trip, on which he is accompanied by his nurse and her mother and father proves the means of curing our hero of his timidity and supplying as well the material for the comedy gags.

"Good Morning, Nurse!" is not much, so far as story goes, but there are several highly effective laugh situations which the confirmed picture patrons will find greatly to their liking. There are, in fact, enough of these "gags" to make the majority in any given audience pronounce the picture a pleasing and satisfactory one.

Olive Borden supplies a good deal of the good-looks to be found in the film. She appears as the nurse, with whom the hero is in love. Marvin Lobach, is also prominent, as one of his ample proportions and acting skill is bound to be. The direction is by Lloyd Bacon, who has evolved some fast action to bring a speedy finish and whose handling of the gags appears to be thoroughly efficient.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Hello Goodby
(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

THERE is rather a good story in this one, in which Lige Conley is featured. By a series of double exposure shots Lige is the customs inspector and the Alphine Prince, whom the Wellingtons would lionize on his arrival. The real Prince is informed just before his arrival that if he lands he would be assasinated by three mysterious envoys from his native land.

Lige is induced to impersonate the Prince and is invited to the grand reception at the Wellingtons. The three mysterious envoys are also there. The unmasking comes and the chase begins. It is the typical chase that continues all too long, but it has its humorous incidents and will be amusing in some houses.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

(One Reel)

SCENES of the Hospice of St. Bernard in the Pennine Alps, with due recognition to those remarkable animals, the St. Bernard dogs, appear to win the leading place in this interesting number of Pathe Review. With much beautiful Alpine scenery, and a little "scenario" to make realistic the relation of how the St. Bernard dogs effect rescues of people lost in the big snows, the pictures afford considerable entertainment. There are some especially well-done color views of Richmond, Va., and scenes of the sugar plantations of Hawaii included in this issue.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Locked Out

MORE of the trials and tribulations of an ardent young suitor of the sweet sixteen variety are revealed in this one reeler which features Arthur Lake and Olive Hasbrouck. The story is an improvement over recent ones of the series and the picture a fairly pleasing one.

Arthur and Olive contrive to keep an engagement at Olive's house against parental objections and Arthur accomplishes his purpose even though he has to steal his father's clothing to make his getaway. In climbing to Olive's window Arthur tears father's best suit and at the same time is taken for a burglar. The torn portion of the garment is revealed as a clue to the burglary and Arthur's father is unceremoniously jailed as the offender. Olive's father with Olive and Arthur go to identify the suspect and matters are terminated with the young couple sprawled over the knees of their respective parents. This series is a mighty attractive one and should go well in almost any house.—CHESTER J. SMITH

Ask Grandma
(Pathe—Two Reels)

WHILE the "Our Gang" troupers are the stars of this new Hal Roach comedy, it is a "fighting" grandma who makes the greatest impression. Bob McGowan, director of these pictures, has invented a rather novel idea to build his action upon. This shows Mickey Daniels being surrepticiously trained in the manly arts, including boxing, by a grandmother who is opposed to the rather effeminate style of education advocated and practiced upon him by his mother.

Mickey rebels at dancing school and such-like "sissy" doings. He carries a list of "Don'ts" written for him by his mother, so when another boy whacks him, Mickey fails to return the blow, until his grandma urges him on, and there is a battle royal.

The "Gang" aids Mickey admirably in making this offering one which will receive a warm reception in the picture houses of the land.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Rolling Stones
(Universal—One Reel)

THIS is Charles Puffy, the rotund comedian's first effort for Universal and he gives indications that he will provide many laughs on the short subject output of the company. A better vehicle could be had for him than this, but he gets as much as possible out of the comedy situations.

Puffy has the role of a hobo. In the park he rescues the pet dog of a wealthy dowager which is in the keeping of the maid. The maid assumes the role of mistress and invites Charley to dinner. He accepts, gets a job with a tailor as sandwich man; dolls himself in the new suit from which he tears the advertising sign and Charley and the maid proceed to carry out the deceptions, which are revealed with the return of the mistress. There are quite a few comedy touches in the reel, but better things may be expected of Puffy in the future.—CHESTER J. SMITH

Two Poor Fish
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is an Earl Hurd comedy of the Pen and Ink Vaudeville series, in which Props is delegated to take the trained seal out and catch it some fish. Props has all sorts of difficulties and finally lands with his charge on a bombing target which is blown up and the pair are literally deluged with fish. The cartooning is good, the situation humorous and the film should be good for a number of laughs.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Dude Ranch Days
(Pathe—One Reel)

THE exhibition of horsemanship, broncho busting and roping which are offered for the entertainment and recreation of the guests at the well-known "Seven Dash" ranch in Arizona, feature this Grantland Rice "Sportlight" Film, produced under the direction of J. L. Hawkinson. There are some lively moments and the reel is interesting, though it lacks the dash and variety of the majority of the "Sportlight" films.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Sleeping Sickness
(Universal—One Reel)

AN all night poker session rather than a prevalent malady brings all the troubles in this picture upon Neely Edwards, who with Berg Roach is featured. Wifie reads of the sleeping sickness epidemic brought on by flies and becomes alarmed when hubby falls asleep at the breakfast table.

Neely is rushed off to the doctors and upon arrival there falls asleep in a baby carriage which promptly runs away down hill. He successfully evades the heavy traffic only to finally roll off the edge of a high cliff. He crashes through a tent into a soft bed and is found asleep there by the butler and his wife. The doctor is again called and the real cause of his drowsiness is revealed when the M.D. tells of the poker session of the previous night. Wifie then administers a real sleeping potion. There is all the usual gag stuff that abounds in these Neely Edwards and Bert Roach comedies with a few more real laughs in this one than in the usual run.—CHESTER J. SMITH

Sit Tight
(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

JIMMY ADAMS is featured in this story, which has been told many times on the screen. Kathleen Myers plays opposite him. Jimmy gets a wire from his uncle that the latter is about to present him with a new aunt and will also donate to him $10,000 if Jimmy will bring his fiancee and make it a double wedding. It is stipulated however, that Jimmy must have the girl on hand within a half hour.

Jimmy, the girl and the girl's parents hustle into an auto and proceed to break all speed records until they are humbled by a trio of motorcycle cops. By a ruse they get possession of the motor cycles and the chase starts all over again. Twice they step into the wrong wedding ceremony, but eventually land right, only to run into a melee from which they are all sentenced to do thirty days, with the double wedding scheduled to follow. There is nothing new in either story or comedy situations.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Slick Articles
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

THIS is a hodge-podge of slapstick comedy and hokum with a brand of comedy that might be good for a few laughs in certain classes of houses. Hillard Karr and Billy Engle are the featured players.

This pair of comedians have the roles of destitute artists, in arrears in their rent and bound by necessity to get themselves out of hock. They endeavor to accomplish this indirectly through the rescue of a maiden from a bunch of villains on her father's yacht. She poses for them and father becomes interested in a number of pictures they have "borrowed." The rightful owner puts in an appearence just at the wrong time and the pair are captured after the characteristic chase of the short comedy. This one cannot be very highly recommended.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Balto's Race to Nome" at New York Strand

"Balto's Race to Nome", the Educational Pictures Special, with Gunnar Kasson and Balto is having its premiere in New York showing at the Mark Strand Theatre, this week. This will be followed by a week at the Brooklyn Strand.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Fighting Sheriff

(Independent Pictures—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

YOU can put this down as the regulation western—one which concerns a favorite formula—the "framing" of the hero by the villain—and his winning of the girl in a last-minute punch scene after the culprit is captured. It's what is generally catalogued as an "average western" and should attract its clientele in the small downtown and neighborhood houses which play this type of picture. The spectator will see nothing out of the ordinary. Every incident, every character, every detail—these are in their familiar places running true to form. And the form follows the customary plan of making the hero carry a shady reputation for the better part of the action while the bad man is riding high and handsome.

Even though the continuity may be packed with too much hurry-skurry incident so that it appears sacrificed for the sake of action, it won't be hard to discover what it is all about. The formula takes care of that. But it would have been a better western had the director not strained so hard to keep it moving. There are several scenes which are so choppy that the characterization is spoiled—and the suspense becomes obvious.

The action lovers will enjoy it if they don't care particularly about the plot—so long as it moves at high tension. The speed even affects the work of the players as they are unable to appear natural through being rushed in their activities.

The plot reveals the hero as a sheriff who is framed by the arch-villain for interfering with his plot to win the girl and steal the platinum from the mine. The framing is logical enough for when the man of the badge fails to return with the posse he is naturally suspected of the crime. He has been beaten by one of the bad men and suffers loss of memory. His mind returns when he is brought back to camp—and after a series of hectic chases and fights the villains are routed and the romance triumphs. The star plays his role adequately enough without giving a colorful performance. The photography is not very good. Aside from its speed it does not register as one of the better westerns.

THEME. Western melodrama revolving around the theft of ore from a mine and framing the sheriff so that he will fail to win the heroine. The villain is foiled.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The action. The fights between hero and villain. The performance by Bill Cody. The first rate incident and atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Sacrifices continuity to put over the action. Fails to tie the threads together in his ambition to keep story moving. Obvious plot—with nothing new in treatment. Adequate enough for average western.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. If your crowd happens to enjoy Bill Cody, here is your chance to exploit him in a western which certainly keeps on the move all the way. There are no other names in the cast to attract the patrons. Bill it along the usual lines, featuring trailers

DRAWING POWER. For small downtown, neighborhood and community theatres. Strictly a western which will doubtless attract its clientele.

SUMMARY. Just a regulation western which presents nothing out of the ordinary. Plot is obvious and concerns the old quarrel between hero and villain—the robbing of a mine, the framing of the hero, etc. The continuity is jumpy and none of the scenes are well tied together.

THE CAST

Madge Blair	Hazel Holt
Jeff Bains	Frank Ellis
G. Smiley	Walter Shumway
Larry O'Donnell	Bill Cody

By George W. Pyper. Directed by J. P. McGowan. Photographed by Al Zeigler.

SYNOPSIS. Young sheriff loves pretty postmistress. He has rival in leader of bandit gang. When word reaches sheriff that the platinum mine has been robbed of its ore he organizes a posse and pursues the gang. In a fight with one of the bandits the sheriff loses his memory and wanders to a hut where he is cared for by an old hermit. The latter brings him to town and his memory returns after a vicious fight with one of the gang. Eventually he captures the ringleader and wins the girl.

Alias Mary Flynn

(F. B. O.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

EXHIBITORS looking for good program pictures will make no mistake in booking the Evelyn Brent series, of which "Alias Mary Flynn," is the latest. This picture comes in the class of crook stories and here we have a female Raffles being regenerated and finding her way up out of the dark into the light through a series of quick-moving episodes culminating in a climax of real power.

Miss Brent has an appealing role—that of a girl crook who has never had a chance or a friend—until she is saved from capture by the police when John Reagan, citizen of prominence and warm of heart, allows her to ride away from the cordon of officers in his limousine and enter his home, where she is permited to remain as an "adopted daughter." The picture starts off with action and there is a "punch" in each reel.

There is an exciting chase between the girl in a fast auto and three motorcycle cops in the opening reel in which Mary's car is wrecked and she is wounded in the arm. There is appeal in the following sequences in which John Reagan's kindness breaks down the girl's "hard boiled" manner. There is drama in the scene in which the reformed young lady pulls one of her old tricks and "lays low" her benefactor to keep him from going into a dangerous district and then goes herself, meeting with adventures galore. Miss Brent's quick work in donning the makeup of an aged underworld habitue and making her getaway through lines of police, will arouse the fans to enthusiasm.

The production is attractively mounted, while the supporting cast is one of the best seen to date in this series. Malcolm MacGregor as Reagon's son is convincing and a good selection for the lover of Mary. William V. Mong does exceptionally well as Reagan, Sr. Gladden James look the part of the yegg and John Gough injects some good comedy moments.

THEME. Crook melodrama showing how a feminine second story worker gets her chance to reform and then repays the man who aided her by saving him from the electric chair when she runs down the real murderer of a wealthy jewel collector.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The auto-motorcycle chase, the wrecking of the car and the wounding of Mary. The murder of Forbes and the arrest of Reagan Sr., for the "job."

DIRECTION. Ralph Ince has turned out a very good little picture here in which the star gives a fine account of herself. There is action right through and an adequate mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie-ups with jewelry stores. Tie-up with police, etc. Play up Evelyn Brent's name and promise your audience lots of action.

DRAWING POWER. A safe bet for the average houses and one which should do business with a little exploitation support.

SUMMARY. An entertaining feature showing Evelyn Brent, at her best in a story that boasts much action. Well mounted, acceptably directed and interpreted by a personnel of talented players.

THE CAST

Mary Flynn	Evelyn Brent
Tim Reagan	Malcolm MacGregor
John Reagan	William V. Mong
Picadilly Charlie	Gladden James
Jason Forbes	Lou Payne
Maurice Dupre	Wilson Benge
Mickey	John Gough
Chief of Crooks	Jacques D'Auray

By Frederick Kennedy Myton. Directed by Ralph Ince. Scenario by Mr. Myton. Photographed by Silvano Balboni.

SYNOPSIS. Mary Flynn, girl crook, after having been saved from capture following a "job" is "adopted" by John Reagan, who reforms her and starts her on the "straight and narrow." Forbes, a jewel collector, threatens to expose an episode in Reagan's past if he does not aid him get a valuable gem. Mary steps in, gets the jewel herself, and helps capture the real culprit who murdered Forbes and for which Reagan was held. Mary then weds Reagan's son, an assistant district attorney.

Drusilla With a Million

(Associated Arts Corp.-F. B. O.—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

IT looks to us as though another "Over the Hill" has hit the screen. And "Drusilla With a Million" is the picture which has all the heart appeal, human interest and wonderful acting of the former success. And this later offering is more artistic and just as well acted by a superfine dramatic personel. You hear of pictures with souls, but seldom see them. Well, here is one and it is a photoplay that is going to reach for the hearts of the nation with its human, colorful, clean, dramatic story. And we'll wager the women everywhere will be aroused to heights of enthusiasm over this one.

Mary Carr, who won fame over night through her work in "Over the Hill," again leads the cast and in a role that has just as much pulling power on the emotions. Miss Carr as Drusilla, an aged inmate of a charity institution, who suddenly finds herself with one million dollars and who forthwith dedicates her fortune to caring for babies abandoned on the doorstep of her palatial residence, contributes to screen literature one of the finest character paintings of many years and one which is going to be remembered. And right here we want to tell the world that Priscilla Bonner reaches the heights with a magnificent performance.

Folks will not soon forget the entrance of Drusilla into her new mansion, the antics of her baby charges, the scene in which Collin wrecks his car to save the life of Sally May, whom he soon marries; the episode in which Daphne persuades Sally to leave Collin so that he may have his chance in life, the birth of Sally's baby and so on and so forth through a long sries of wonderful moments that lead up to the powerful court room sequence which is going to raise patrons out of their seats as if they had a hoisting machine pulling them up. Everyone is going to like Drusilla. We recommend it to exhibitors everywhere.

THEME. A society drama in which a charming old lady, inheriting a million, devotes her fortune to caring for abandoned tots and is hailed into court when she takes in the baby of the wife of the son whose father disinherited him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene in which Collin wrecks his car and injures himself in order to avoid hitting Sally May. The sequence in which Drusilla is informed of her million dollar inheritance. The scenes showing Drusilla and her baby charges. The court room scene. The leave-taking of Sally from her husband's home.

DIRECTION. F. Harmon Weight may well be proud of his accomplishment. He has brought out the highlights of the story in an understanding way. He has packed the tale with heart appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Displays of the book. The names of the cast, playing up Mary Carr in another "Over the Hill," kind of role. Put on a show for the orphans of the town in co-operation with your newspaper.

DRAWING POWER. The finest houses in the land should be proud to show entertainment of this type. For any type of house.

SUMMARY. A distinct relief from the usual run of screen offerings. A different kind of story, a cast of real brilliance in which Mary Carr again triumphs and in which a new star is made in the person of Priscilla Bonner. A picture with which to win new patrons for your house. A self-made box office success.

THE CAST

Drusilla Doane ..... Mary Carr
Collin Arnold ..... Kenneth Harlan
Elias Arnold ..... Henry Barrows
John Thornton ..... William Humphreys
Daphne Thornton ..... Claire Du Brey
Sally May Ferris ..... Priscilla Bonner

Adapted from Elizabeth Cooper's book. Scenario by Lois Zellner. Directed by F. Harmon Weight. Photographed by Lyman Broening.

SYNOPSIS. Drusilla Doane, the only charity patient at the Cliftondale Home for Old Ladies, is left $1,000,000 by Elias Arnold, who disinherited his son, following a quarrel. Drusilla's mansion becomes the "dropping off place" for abandoned babies, one of whom belongs to Sally May Ferris, a former inmate of an orphan home, who weds Collin Arnold, Elias' son. The neighbors protest Drusilla's act in making a home for the castoff babes and she is haled into court when she takes in the baby of Sally May, who is also arrested. Sally has left Collin because his former fiancee has influenced her to do so. However the court rules in favor of Drusilla and Sally May and Collin are reunited.

WITH the opportunity here to extract sympathy and pathos for the central figure—a lovable old man who wishes himself upon his son and daughter-in-law as their guest, it would seem that James Cruze could not fail to take advantage of these precious elements. Let it be understood that he has concocted a fairly human—a fairly humorous slice of life—which would have been far more interesting had he not sketched it at such a halting pace. The piece lacks spontaneity and instead of developing it to show the old man's humiliation and the half-sincere toleration by the young people, the director and adaptor have capitalized upon the comedy values. Thus, they have worked it out according to a series of gags and incidents.

It's a slight plot at best—one that calls for the best kind of character acting. But Luke Cosgrave, who flashed a real comedy characterization in "Hollywood" seems to be lost here. It is as if he was obeying orders instead of enacting the part of his own inspiration. No attention is paid to build the pathos—and the piece fairly cried for it. The old man comes into the house and proceeds to upset the orderly arrangement of things. He will argue with the young folks and the servants when they refuse to entertain his ideas. He never seems to appreciate that he is a meddler.

Of course there are several moments which are amusing. But it would have hit the bulls-eye had the old fellow realized that he was only in the way. It isn't until he joins some cronies at an Old Men's Home that he decides to live his own life without being reprimanded or ordered about.

Cosgrave makes a fairly picturesque figure and scores some points with his comedy—but had he balanced the humor with flashes of pathos in appreciating the disparity between youth and old age the picture would have come closer to the truth. There is nothing to keep it going except the incident and the atmosphere. As a result the action sags and the interest wanders. It is adequately played by the other members of the cast.

THEME. Character study of conflict of age and youth, showing how a meddlesome old man nearly destroys the happiness of his son and daughter-in-law. He leaves them to join the Old Men's Home.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The subtitles. The sets and atmosphere. The incident. The scene when the old man upsets the young couple's home. The moment when he realizes he belongs in the Old Men's Home. The comedy moments.

DIRECTION. Fails to extract the pathos and make the central figure real. Relies too much upon comedy incident. Shows good reaction of young folks toward the old man, but misses with the latter. Good staging and atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up as a conflict between youth and old age. Feature title and use it for teaser campaign. If there are any festivities occurring in your town tie up with them through the title. Place sign featuring title in lobby. Play up director.

DRAWING POWER. For better class neighborhoods and small towns. Title should attract—as well as exploitation of director.

SUMMARY. Does not come up to expectations through failure to capitalize the pathos. Too much dependence upon gags and incident Great opportunity to build a heart interest story, but humor is too dominant. Leading role miscast. O. K. with atmosphere and settings.

THE CAST

Old Man Prouty ..... Luke Cosgrave
Fred Prouty ..... Warner Baxter
Nettie Prouty ..... Lois Wilson
Jim Corey ..... Ben Hendricks
Lil Corey ..... Margaret Morrie
Miss Pringle ..... Josephine Crowell
Annie ..... Adele Watson

From "Minick" by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber. Scenario by Walter Woods. Directed by James Cruze.

SYNOPSIS. Old man wishes himself upon his son and daughter-in-law. Visits them and makes himself at home, thus upsetting their carefully arranged plans. Embarrasses the young wife and quarrels with the servants. Becomes friendly with some old men who urge him to join Old Men's Home. In the end he leaves the young people upon discovering that he is in the way.

Raffles

(Universal—5557 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A NEW film version has been built around E. W. Hornung's celebrated character, Raffles—a character that became immensely popular with fiction readers and playgoers over a decade ago. The polished crook's adventures are a trifle old-fashioned as visualized now and the director found no opportunity to enliven the story with crackling incident. Consequently it makes a listless picture—one which builds in a laboriously slow fashion without offering any compensating highlights of surprise and suspense.

The film becomes interesting only in spots. For one thing House Peters is miscast in the title role. He doesn't make the famous thief the suave, resourceful, polished figure of the story, nor does he even approach Kryle Bellew's memorable performance on the stage. He strives hard enough—too hard in fact in a role which is more suitable for a Barrymore or a Menjou. Had the director shot his action to indicate something of careless abandon the film would have been more in atmosphere. In other words he has failed to appreciate its possibilities for reckless adventure and a conflict of wits.

The picture has been given an elaborate production. Technically, there is nothing the matter with it. The cracksman gets in and out of a few scrapes, but his escapades lack sparkle. It is as if such a type of story had been filmed too often to register any suspense at this late day. As the plot is sketchy and repetitious naturally very little could be made from it. Raffles has two conspicuous escapades—one aboard ship where a necklace is stolen and the other at a country home where he steals a string of pearls under the very eyes of a detective and wins the love of the owner's daughter. The play of wits is mostly carried on in the subtitles—which are more in character than the situations.

The picture lacks punch—which will disappoint those who were charmed by the book. As a result it fails to come up to expectations. The supporting cast is adequate.

THEME. Crook melodrama revolving around escapades of polished cracksman who evades the law at every turn. Reforms by meeting the right girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Settings and atmosphere. The subtitles. The scene aboard ship when a necklace is stolen. The situation in the country home where the crook steals a string of pearls and wins the love of the heroine.

DIRECTION. Has slight, sketchy scenario and naturally fails to make much out of it. Fails to inject any punch and incident lacks action. Points the interest too much on conflict of wits.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You have the famous novel by E. W. Hornung—and the fact that nearly everybody has either read it or seen the play in stock or otherwise. Play up House Peters

DRAWING POWER. The title has pulling power—and so has House Peters. Should do business in average houses. Suitable for downtown, community and small town houses.

SUMMARY. Fails to come up to expectations as plot is slight and sketchy and lacks incident and action. More might have been made from the melodrama which could have been treated with a splash of humor. House Peters not the type for title role. Acting is adequate without being inspired.

THE CAST

Raffles	House Peters
Gwendelyn Amersteth	Miss Du Pont
Mrs. Clarice Vidal	Hedda Hopper
Capt. Bedford	Frederick Esmelton
Crawshay	Walter Long
Lord Amersteth	Winter Hall
Lady Amersteth	Kate Lester
Bunny Manners	Freeman Wood
Lord Crowley	Roland Bottomley

Adopted to the screen by Harvey Thew from E. W. Hornung's novel and play by E. W. Presbrey. Directed by King Baggot.

SYNOPSIS. Excitement is created aboard a ship bound from India to London that the famous cracksman, Raffles, is aboard. He warns one of the passengers to look after her necklace, but it is eventually stolen. The necklace is returned in a box of cigarettes. Raffles bobs up at a country home and encounters a criminologist who guarantees a string of pearls cannot be stolen. But the pearls disappear. The cracksman is cornered, but makes his escape with the daughter of the house—with whom he has fallen in love. The pearls are returned and Raffles reforms.

Black Cyclone

(Hal Roach-Pathe—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

WE doff our sombrero to Hal Roach. He has come out with "something new under the sun." And what a relief it is. We believe "Black Cyclone," to be one of the finest bits of screen entertainment released in many moons. It is different and one need not hesitate in recommending it for the finest houses in the land. Here is a picture that is nothing short of a directorial achievement. While there are a few humans in the story, most of the "characters" are "portrayed" by animals, principally horses. Fred Jackson who presided at the small end of the megaphone is to be congratulated on his work which evidently must have exercised one's patience to the Nth degree.

"Black Cyclone," is 50 percent. better than "King of the Wild Horses," Mr. Roach's former release. There is more "class" to this production, more of a story, more novelties, more selling points and more beautiful backgrounds. In fact the outdoor mountain exteriors at times approach resemblance to paintings by the masters. Rex, the horse, is again the star and he is "supported" by Lady, a beautiful white thoroughbred and The Killer, a handsome piece of horseflesh that is just about as wicked a four-footed battler as we've ever come across. Then there are mountain lions and wolves and a donkey that is sure to arouse the risibilities of the fans.

The plot has to do with Rex's efforts to protect Lady from the vicious Killer and in his effort to do so puts over some remarkable battles with the equine Dempsey. There are also some fights between Rex and a puma as well as with a pack of wolves. We are sure any audience will be aroused to enthusisam when Guinn Williams, praying for the fastest horse in the world to ride to the rescue of his sweetheart, finds Rex at his side and jumps upon the animal using neither bridle or saddle and stages one of the most exciting rides ever screened. There are also some great shots showing Guinn helping Rex out of quicksands and more views of the animal trying to tell his man-friend that Lady is in need of aid. "Black Cyclone," is a picture that every exhibitor should show his patrons.

THEME. Animal picture in which Rex, the horse, being saved by a man, aids the latter in saving his sweetheart. He triumphs over The Killer, villain of the horse world, and rescues Lady, his mate.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The battles between Rex and The Killer as well as with the mountain lion and the wolves. The rescue of Rex from the quicksands. The wild ride of Quinn Williams on Rex. The climax in which Rex wins a great fight with The Killer.

DIRECTION. A very skillful and patient bit of direction. Has made animals put forth almost human efforts. Has injected some whirlwind riding and a goodly quota of dynamic episodes. Has given the picture a setting of pictorial grandeur.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Have a man in cowboy attire lead a black horse about the streets with suitable advertising. Get co-operation of local riding clubs. Play up the fact that the principal characters are horses in the wild state on the range. Promise patrons one of the treats of the year.

DRAWING POWER. Should be shown by the best houses because of its novelty. Everyone should enjoy it and it should do business if you get behind it.

SUMMARY. Intense action, thrills, romance, in fact all the qualities of good screencraft are possessed by this unusual filmplay which we believe has real entertainment value. There is some wonderful work offered by horse players and a climax that will pull 'em out of the seats. The mounting is immense.

THE CAST

The Horses	Rex, Lady and the Killer
The Players	Guinn Williams, Kathleen Collins, Christian Frank
Unidentified	The Pest

By Hal Roach. Directed by Fred Jackman. Photographed by Floyd Jackman and George Stevens.

SYNOPSIS. Having led Lady out of a trap in which they were driven by their men enemies, Rex crosses the line into The Killer's territory. There, following a fight The Killer drives off Rex and keeps Lady. Jim Lawson, forced to flee to escape a charge of murder, is discovered by Rex. Man and horse make friends. Rex saves Jim from a mountain lion and then Jim saves Rex from quicksands. Then Rex carries Jim after the villain who has Jim's sweetheart and incidentally "beats up," The Killer and is reunited with Lady.

The Teaser

(Universal-Jewel—6800 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A COMEDY-DRAMA of good and bad manners is on display here—with enough romance, divorce complications and conflict of wits to make it a well-balanced picture—one which is thoroughly diverting even if it is a reel too long. What transpires could reasonably happen if you care to stretch a situation or two. At times it develops a farcical flavor in the way the feminine characters try to fool one another; but it never gets out of its element in order to depend upon farcical speed—with the usual farcical trimmings.

William A. Seiter, the director, has handled his scenes in the correct tempo and he has uncovered some delightfully amusing episodes and bits of business which punctuate the romance and make it breezy. His characters act as if they belong to the social circles they represent. His settings are in good taste—unmarred by any bizarre atmosphere.

The story gets off to a good start and is more amusing in its early scenes than when it develops the complications. We have the fair scion of a wealthy family who gives up a cigar-counter in a commercial hotel to become the ward of her society aunt in New York. She is betrothed to a flashy cigar salesman whose manners are too boorish to be accepted by the girl's guardian. Even the girl is sent away to a finishing school to learn etiquette. It is the comedy flourish of contrasts that keep it sustained with humor here. The highlight of mirth comes when the salesman attends his sweetheart's coming-out party—in a hired dress suit.

Meanwhile the girl, deprived of her boy friend, proceeds to flirt with all of the men—married and unmarried—in her new social set in order to get even with her aunt. Of course it is innocent play which is taken too seriously to ring true. The climax shows all the misunderstandings swept away and the romantic triumph of the young people. It is smartly played by Pat O'Malley, Laura La Plante, Hedda Hopper, Walter McGrail and Frank Finch Smiles—who makes a rich sketch of the butler whose diplomacy runs amuck in his effort to be loyal to his master.

THEME. Comedy-drama of girl who becomes ward of society woman—the latter depriving her of her uncouth fiance. The girl gets even by compromising herself and her aunt. In the end she has her way.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The many deft comedy touches. The scene when boorish salesman is introduced to Park Avenue. The debut of the girl—and the uncouth antics of hero.

DIRECTION. Keeps it at fine tempo and never gets out of touch with his story and characters. Develops a neat thread of comedy and refrains from spoiling it with melodrama and farcial trimmings. Handles players and situations to make them real.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can spread the campaign on this one and feature it as an exceptionally bright and amusing comedy-romance. Play up the society angle and put on prologue featuring society dances, etc. Tease the title.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for first run and houses catering to select clientele.

SUMMARY. A bright and entertaining comedy-drama is flashed here—one in harmony with its story, sets and characters. The tempo is keyed at the correct pitch—the action is punctuated with deft humor—and it is played with good sparkle.

THE CAST

Ann Barton	Laura La Plante
James McDonald	Pat O'Malley
Margaret Wyndham	Hedda Hopper
Roderick Caswell	Walter McGrail
Perry Grayle	Byron Munson
Lois Caswell	Vivian Oakland
Jeffry Loring	Wyndham Standing
Janet Comstock	Margaret Quimby
Jenkins	Frank Finch Smiles

By Adelaide Matthews and Martha Stanley. Scenario by Edward T. Lowe, Jr., and Lewis Milestone. Directed by William A. Seiter.

SYNOPSIS. Wealthy society woman adopts her niece who has been clerking at cigar-counter of small city hotel. The girl comes to New York, but embarrasses her aunt and her social set with her bad manners and the fact that she is engaged to flashy salesman. The aunt embarrasses the salesman who gives up the girl to learn etiquette. The girl gets even by compromising herself and her aunt. In the end she has her way in romance.

Speed

(Ben Verschleiser Production-Banner—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE is still another "jazz" picture for those houses that cater to patrons desiring this type of film. It is an adaptation of Grace Sartwell Mason's Saturday Evening Post story and is decidedly modern in theme.

Sam and Mary Whipple are quiet, easy-going town folk who are perfectly satisfied with their old fashioned way of living until their children tell them they are out of date. Then pa and ma determine to show the young folks some "speed." They go to the city, buy a big motor car and lots of "glad rags." Their return is quite a surprise and more so when they announce plans for a cross country tour. This trip gets the personnel into the mountainous part of the west where an attempt is made to swindle the Whipples in a gold mine scheme which fails, but the climax shows a hold-up and a mad dash down a treacherous road by two autos, one without brakes. The car containing the bandits go over the cliff, but not until the hero has climbed from one machine to the other to grab the heroine therefrom. Then the brakeless car ends up safely in a hay mow. These sequences are packed with pep and will keep most audiences on edge.

Betty Blythe, Pauline Garon and the Duchess Stella di Lanti have the principal feminine roles. Miss Blythe, of course, has an opportunity to display some elaborate gowns and Miss Garon again flaps her flapperest. William V. Mong, Arthur Rankin, Robert Ellis and Eddie Phillips are seen in the leading male parts. The remainder of the cast is good. The picture is attractively mounted and affords opportunity for some snappy musical settings. It is good, light, airy stuff for summer consumption because it won't call for much work on the part of the grey matter.

THEME. A modern society drama of the well known "jazz" type in which the parents of two products of the "saxophone age," decide to show their offspring some fast stepping themselves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The return of Mr. and Mrs. Whipple outfitted for their "jazz" adventure. The dancing parties. The holdup at the mountain lodge. The dash of the two autos down the mountain road.

DIRECTION. Edward LeSaint has accomplished what he started out to make—a fast moving picture. He has tacked on a climax that carries a punch and has given the production a satisfactory mounting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange to have a wrecked auto towed about town with sign on it "This is one result of 'Speed,' see the others at the Strand." Promote a cross country run with your local Y. M. C. A or other athletic organization, offering prizes.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for houses catering to the folks that like the flapper stuff. Has some popular stars in the cast which should help greatly in selling it to the public.

SUMMARY. There seems to be some demand even at this late date for the tales of flapper doings and here's one that is a bit off the beaten path in that it shows the parents also deciding to try the jazz life themselves as an example for their children.

THE CAST

Mary Whipple	Betty Blythe
Wiletta Whipple	Pauline Garon
Sam Whipple	William V. Mong
Dick Whipple	Arthur Rankin
Nat Armstrong	Alfred Allan
Nat Armstrong, Jr.	Robert Ellis
Jack Cartwright	Eddie Phillips
Senor Querino	Fred Becker
Senorita Querino	Duchess Stella di Lanti

By Grace Sartwell Mason. Directed by Edward Le Saint. Scenario by Lois Zellner. Photographed by King Glenn and Ora Jackson.

SYNOPSIS. Called old fashioned by their children, Sam and Mary Whipple, parents, decide to "step out" and jazz things up a bit themselves. They go to town, buy a car, sport clothes and announce a motor trip 'cross country. Wiletta, daughter leaves her sheik behind, so that when they arrive in the west Nat Armstrong, Jr., another suitor, has the field to himself. Nat, aided by the children, save the old folks from being swindled in a gold mine deal. Then there is a hold-up and a mad chase down the mountain side to save Wiletta who has been kidnaped. All decide to give up "speed" and "jazz."

THE Duchess Theatre, Queen Street, Sault Ste., Marie, Ontario, has been purchased by the Algoma Steel Corporation, whose property the theatre adjoins, the price paid being $10,000. The theatre is to be rejuvenated and the building used for the many employes.

Manager H. N. Jernberg of the Province Theatre, Winnipeg, one of the big downtown theatres in the Manitoba Capital, reduced prices of admission for the summer months, starting May 11 but made it plain that the reduction was only for the hot weather. Incidentally, Mr. Jernberg put an idea into effect whereby a special added feature is presented at the matinee performances only as an extra inducement for matinee patronage. Top price is now 25 cents.

For some time the Hillcrest Theatre, Toronto, Ontario, had been bothered by rowdies and Manager Many Bergman tried various methods to deal with the problem without resorting to the assistance of the Toronto Police. All is now rosy at the theatre, however, because Manager Bergman had two roughnecks hauled up with the result that one was fined $50 and costs and the other was sentenced to pay $25 and costs. Disorderly conduct was the charge.

Buffalo

THAT a west side motion picture house is to be built in Rochester, is a rumor strongly current in Kodak Town. Financial backing has been obtained, according to the report, and negotiations started for a site in Main street west, beyond the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh office building at South Washington street. Although the names of Chester and Paul Fenyvessy, owners of the Strand theatre, and William A. Calihan, manager of the Regent, have been linked with the plan, these men have denied any connection with it. The proposed theatre will have a seating capacity of 3000. Several weeks ago the Fenyvessy interests announced a plan to erect a large theatre in William street, Rochester.

Al Teschemacher, former booker at the Buffalo Pathe exchange, and now owner of the Casino theatre in the same city, has been appointed keeper of the exchequer at Crystal Beach this summer. Now how's that for a soft life? Al's brother will operate the Casino during his absence at the Canadian shore resort.

Sid Horen has been assigned to the Rochester territory as Fox representative. Manager Bill Rowell reports much interest among exhibitors in the new product announced by the company. He anticipates a busy season at the Fox office.

Earl Kramer, Universal branch manager, has returned from the company's convention, all pepped up over the new White List. The Buffalo "U" office is going "on high!"

A special committee of the Rochester Parent-Teacher association is acting as an advisory committee in reviewing the picture programs for the Eastman Saturday morning performances for boys and girls. Although these programs are first scrutinized carefully in New York by representatives, they are gone over once more before being presented in Rochester.

It is reported that the Schine interests have taken over the Dellinger Opera House in Batavia from Houghton & Crosby of Buffalo and will run it as a daily picture house. The house has been offering legitimate attractions.

The new house which Simon Wertheimer will build in Hertel avenue, Buffalo, will be called the Parkview theatre. A large sign has been placed in front of the property declaring the theatre will be one of the most magnificent community houses in the country.

Harry Dixon, Buffalo F.B.O. manager, as usual, opened the straw hat season along film row, when he came forth on May 15 resplendent in latest style panama kelly. Harry is soon to introduce also some new shirts that are sure to knock his colleagues for a row of film cases.

Members of the Rochester Exhibitors League staged a big Movie Ball last Wednesday evening in the Kodak Town convention hall. George Caffery of the Clinton theatre, Frank J. Koch of the Lyndhurst and Jules Greenstone, president of the Rochester league, attended the convention in Milwaukee.

Stockholders of the Border Amusement company held a meeting in the Hotel Statler, Buffalo, the other evening and authorized the directors to accept a deposit of $5000 from an unknown client who is seeking the Star, Ellen Terry and Marlowe, the three houses in the chain.

Joseph A. Schuchert, owner of the Columbia and Colonial and interested in several other Buffalo houses, is now mingling with the joys of "that so beautiful Paree." Joe, Jr., is hoping to make a similar tour to the French capital this summer. When Joe, Jr., arrives those French flappers are going to have a lot of heavy dates.

George Eastman of Rochester has announced that as a result of letters received from Martin Johnson, noted explorer, he will visit British East Africa in the fall of 1926, his objective being the camp which Mr. and Mrs. Johnson have established in the wilds of North Kenya on Paradise Lake.

E. G. Dodds, former manager of the State theatre in Corning, N. Y., has gone to East Rochester where he has taken charge of the Rialto. He has been succeeded in Corning by Walter H. Smith of Hornell. Charles J. Rose, manager of the Princess, Corning, has been made district manager of the Schine theatre corporation.

Cincinnati

THE Metro-Goldwyn exchange has moved to the new offices on the sixth floor of the Broadway Film Building. The entire suite has been newly refurnished and looks spick and span. The office force is much elated with their new quarters and declare them to be far superior to the ones they had on the third floor.

Bob Burns, office manager for Standard, who has been ill at home for a week has taken a turn for the worse and had to be taken to the Good Samaritan Hospital. It is hoped however that with proper care he will soon return to health and his desk in the film building.

Arthur Kaspar, formerly with the Universal Office at Charleston W. Va. has joined the forces of the Ideal Standard office as booker. Johnny Eifert who has been filling in this capacity for some time will assume the position of special representative for the firm.

R. M. Lauer, is a newcomer to the Universal offices in the capacity of salesman.

Fred Strief and Charles Lowenburg, Universal Manager and Exploiteer respectively have returned from a three days stay at Chicago and a similar length of time at Milwaukee. They were both much elated with their sojourn and think that there is nothing on the market like the big U product.

Ed. Booth, manager for F.B.O., returned from the managers convention at Chicago all enthused over the firm's new product.

E. D. Byron, of the Columbia Theatre, Athens, O., spent several days in the city last week.

Andy Hettesheimer, manager of the Orpheum Theatre and one of the most popular exhibitors in the territory, who has been ill for some time has had a relapse and was forced to go back to the hospital for further treatment. It is hoped by all that Andy will recover at a rapid rate for he is more than missed from film row.

C. H. Groves of the Palace Theater, Columbus, O., is ill in the hospital with pneumonia.

Mark Horwitz, manager for the local Lande Film Office, returned from a week end trip to the home office at Pittsburgh, where he spent some time renewing old acquaintances.

Max Greenwald has been transferred to Pittsburgh to assume the branch managership of the Famous Players Exchange in that city. He was formerly in the same capacity in this town. His place here will be taken by C. E. Peppiatt, former branch manager for Paramount at Memphis.

Billy Bein, former branch manager for United Artists, and Lou Perlman, also a film man, have opened the Cincinnati Theatre Poster Company and bill themselves as The Poster Kings.

Ben Strasser, of The Ben Strasser Productions Company returned from New York much elated with the success he attained placing his new comedies.

Ben. Wheeler, of the Ideal Theater, Dayton, O., spent several days in the city visiting various exchanges.

Jules Frankel, returned from his vacation in Quebec and New York looking much better and feeling the same way.

A rare visitor in the city was Dick Anderson, owner of the Edale Theatre, Edale, W. Va.

Wm. Combs, of Sassafras, Ky., has taken over the Gay Theatre at Jeff, Ky., from Troy Combs, who has owned it for some time.

Albany

WHEN Leon Medem entered his office the other morning, upon being appointed manager of the Pathe exchange in this city, he first thought he had made a mistake and entered a florist shop. Upon his desk reposed a huge basket of flowers from the film salesmen of Albany while on a nearby table was another bouquet from the office employees. Charles Stombaugh, who had been handling the office for the past year and who has just been transferred to the management of the Newark, N. J. branch, was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the office at the Hotel Kenmore, one night last week. At the conclusion of the dinner, Mr. Stombaugh, was presented with a traveling bag, Frank Harris making the presentation speech.

Sam Burns, local manager for Vitagraph, is now on the West Coast, having left on the "Wolverine" last week, for Frisco, where he will attend a convention.

Judging from the expressions heard from several of the exhibitors who attended the Milwaukee gathering, "a good time was had by all." This section of the state sent five exhibitors including William Benton, of Saratoga Springs; Meyer and Louis Schine, of Gloversville; William Shirley, of Schenectady, and William Smalley, of Cooperstown.

O. R. Reiffel, manager of the Fox exchange in this city, is now enjoying a three weeks' vacation, and incidentally recuperating from the effects of a recent operation.

Things are running so smoothly these days between the exhibitors and the exchange managers, that the meetings of the Arbitration Board are becoming shorter and shorter. The one last week lasted only about thirty minutes. The exhibitors were represented by Uly S. Hill, of Troy; Abe Stone, of Albany, and Louis Buettner, of Cohoes.

William C. Allen, who runs the Casino, in Antwerp, and likewise runs it well, was in Albany for several days last week, handling a crew of salesmen in connection with a selling drive on cheese. Along with running a theatre, Mr. Allen sells cheese which is quite natural in view of the fact that his home section is one of the greatest cheese-producing areas in the country.

The film salesmen of Albany are getting all spruced up these days in anticipation of the dance which they will hold at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Monday night, May 25. Exhibitors throughout the entire section are invited to the affair.

A new publicity committee for the Albany Film Board of Trade is to be named at once. It will be rather a hard matter to find one who can fill the place of Charles Stombaugh, who has been chairman of the committee, but who has been transferred to Newark. Mr. Stombaugh has a natural bent for news and has been keeping the Board before the people in an excellent way.

Harry Buxbaum, district manager for First National, was in Albany one day last week, meeting Al Herman, and then journeying on for the purpose of meeting some of the larger chain exhibitors in this territory.

John Mattice, who runs the Novelty, in Middleburg, but picks up many a stray dollar on the side with his "hot dog" stands at county fairs and other gatherings, was in town the other day and declared that he never knew a spring to drag so as the present one. He can hardly wait until the people begin to demand his "hot dogs."

There were few exhibitors along Film Row during the past week the majority apparently deciding to wait until after the Milwaukee convention and to see what action might be taken relative to block booking.

Jacob Golden, manager of Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany, set a new house record the past week, when he was obliged to turn hundreds away that could not be accommodated even though the house seats 2,000, or more. Along with double features, Mr. Golden put on an excellent program of home talent entitled "Albany Vanities."

Robert Mochrie, manager of the Producers' Distributing Corporation, in Albany, was called to New York city on a sad mission last week, through the death of his father.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hellman, of the Royal theatre in Albany, were in New York a portion of last week. Mr. Hellman keeps his theatre spick and span and the house has long proved a veritable mint for the owner.

In order to brace up his matinees on Tuesday and Thursday, Walter Suckno, handling the Regent theatre in Albany, is presenting souvenirs to patrons. Mr. Suckno is a great believer in exploitation and his lobbies, for he has the Albany theatre as well, attract a great deal of attention and also patronage.

Oscar Perrin is further improving both the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, by carpeting the same. The carpets at the Leland have long been threadbare; but apparently the patrons cared nothing about this, for the house has been playing to capacity business for so many months that a dull night is practically unknown.

The Mark Strand theatre, in Albany, through the use of a handsome lobby frame placed near the sidewalk, is attracting attention these days to coming attractions.

The combined orchestras of the Olympic and Avon theatres in Watertown, both owned by Nate Robbins of Utica, gave a morning concert last Friday that attracted a large audience. It is the intention to run these concerts quite frequently during the coming summer.

Vic Bendell, who has been a film salesman in Albany for the past twelve years or so, is now engaged in selling advertising, and "doing quite well," thank you.

Ray Smith and L. A. Herman have joined the sales force of the local Universal exchange. Mr. Herman is a brother of Alec Herman, local manager for First National.

E. J. Wolfe, owner of the Bijou theatre in Lowville, added another plume to his cap last week when one of his Great Dane dogs carried off all the honors at a Buffalo dog show. The same animal duplicated the feat at the Pittsburg show the week before. Mr. Wolfe was at the Buffalo show and upon returning home was as pleased with the blue ribbons as a child with a new toy.

The Strand theatre in Carthage has a new orchestra leader in the person of Joseph LaFara, who succeeds Wilbur Bardo, leader for the past ten months, who will devote his time to study in New York and Europe.

There is some speculation in Albany these days as to whether or not the city is to have a new motion picture theatre in the near future. A report to that effect spread about town last week following the securing of options on the Belvidere Hotel and adjoining property by persons who refused to divulge their future plans.

Harry Berinstein, of Elmira, was in town during the week. While here he stated that the work of remodeling the Regent, in Elmira, would get under way at once in order that the theatre which is the only one on Main street, might be in a position to accommodate the crowds in the early fall.

The motion picture theatre in Lake George, belonging to Mrs. William Carpenter, opened for the season last Saturday evening with Mr. Wills, of Warrensburg handling the projection machine.

George Roberts, of the Colonial in Albany, but who also handles the entire Berinstein circuit, motored last week to Elmira, and then on to New York. In connection with the Colonial theatre, Mr. Roberts stated that along with the recent decision of the Film Board of Trade to the effect that the theatre would be obliged to pay for film stolen, some months ago, that he was wondering if the Film Board of Trade was to become a collecting agency for the exchanges.

Stock at the Capitol, in Albany, is apparently doing well this season and there will be no attempt to inaugurate it at any of the theatres now given over to motion pictures. It is said that the stock company in Albany is faring better than the one in Syracuse.

Gypping the Exhibitor

with Inferior Prints is not necessary with Exchanges who faithfully use

Liquefied Film Waxing Process

Corrects Brittle and Foul Film Stock

Exhibitors should not be held responsible for Film Damages, if new prints are just merely waxed at the sprocket holes. Emulsion Deposits will scratch any print and Lack of Moisture, caused by High Amperage, Hot Operating Booths, Hot Climates, will rob a print of the strength necessary to withstand the strain of the Projector. The results are Ripped and Torn Sprocket Holes.

Put the blame upon unprotected prints for Film Damages and not upon the Operator, the Projector, or Poor Film Stock.
Exhibitors—Insist upon your film being processed with Liquefied Film Wax.

Chicago

FOX FILM CORPORATION will open a Milwaukee exchange on July 1st and Jack Lorentz, who has been Milwaukee representative for Fox, will be manager in charge. Practically the entire state of Wisconsin will be handled out of the new Milwaukee branch.

Z. M. Harris is now in charge at the Randolph Theatre, having come on from New York to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of J. L. McCurdy. Mr. McCurdy has a connection in view which may take him away from Chicago.

Louis Marks is now vacationing at French Lick, following the return of his brother, Meyer, from that resort. Meyer was accompanied on his sojourn there by Mrs. Marks and his son Julian, who has developed into an A-1 golfer and gives his father a hard battle on the links.

The opening of Lynch Theatres, Inc., beautiful new Manor Theatre at 5609 W. North Avenue, was a gala event of May 16th. President Vincent T. Lynch was on hand to welcome his many friends from among exhibitors and exchange men who attended, and was the recipient of many congratulations on the beauty and magnificence of the new playhouse. The theatre has a seating capacity of two thousand seats and one of the finest Kimball Organs in Chicago has been installed; a symphony orchestra also adding to the pleasure of the patrons. Jack Lynch, a brother of V. T., has been appointed manager, and the policy of the house will be high class first run pictures and specialties.

Tom Mix and Tony broke into Chicago society last week when the popular western star did some equestrian stunts at a Gold Coast riding academy. Tom also appeared at other points in the city and received his usual ovations. It was necessary to call out police reserves to hold the crowd back.

Mannie Goldstein of Universal, returned to Chicago from Louisville, where he attended the Derby and after a conference with Branch Manager Roy Alexander, left for New York City. President Carl Laemmle also went from Milwaukee to the Derby and is returning to Chicago by way of French Lick. He expects to spend two or three days in this city before leaving for New York.

Salt Lake City

WORD was received here yesterday of the death of Howard Archibald, at Pocatello, Idaho, day before yesterday. Young Archibald, who is the son of one of the partners in the Carruthers and Archibald Amusement Company of that city operating theatres, was killed as he was returning to his home after spending the evening dancing at Inkom, a dancing resort near Pocatello. As he negotiated a curve in the road, his car turned turtle, killing him almost instantly, and rendering his wife in such a precarious condition that she is not expected to live.

One of the most unique theatres in all of the United States is the Venice located at Nephi, Utah. It is built directly over a pure running mountain trout stream, and say boy, there are real trout in the waters too. Vic Foote, owner of the theatre has built a trap door in the floor of his office in the theatre, and often he drops a hook and line into the stream and catches a mess of speckled beauties for dinner. In the summer time he keeps a continuous ventilation in his theatre of the icy temperature of the stream. He installed a five horsepower motor over the stream which fans the cool air into the theatre. Ed. C. Mix, local manager of the Associated Exhibitors exchange was down there the other day and while he was selling Foote film productions, he dropped a line through the trap door and succeeded in pulling out a large trout.

Mr. Mix is getting things started in a lively manner in this territory for Associated Exhibitors since taking over the local office as manager two weeks ago, returning from his first trip this week.

W. S. Wessling, Western Division Manager for Pathe, is here conducting a sales conference of both Pathe and Associated Exhibitors staffs. He arrived from the Butte office, and leaves tomorrow for Portland, Oregon, where he will conduct a similar conference.

C. M. Van Horn, Pathe manager in Denver, came over to sit in at the local sales conference.

R. D. Boomer, short subject salesman out of the Pathe branch office, is heading for his Nevada section tomorrow.

Charles Hamel, selling in this territory for Pathe, had a narrow escape from death this week while driving in the northern Utah territory. He was driving his Ford along the edge of the Weston canyon, when it slipped off the road into the stream sixty feet below —and Charley was in the car during the entire drop. Luckily the car stayed right side up until it was within a few feet of the stream, then it struck a protruding rock and turned over. All Charley got was an icy bath and a bruised shoulder. The car was very badly damaged, losing the hood, banging up the engine and fenders, but—here is one for Henry Ford—after Charley had pulled it out with equine aid, he drove the danged thing into town under its own power.

R. S. Stackhouse, manager in this city for Vitagraph, is in Los Angeles where he is attending the national convention. He is expected home in a few days.

David T. McElhinney, special representative in the territory for Vitagraph is burning up contracts in Nevada, while George Jensen is doing his stuff in Montana.

Joe Solomon, who joined the local selling force for F.B.O. last week is making his initial trip into the Idaho section this week.

The affairs at the branch office of F.B.O. are being presided over by E. M. Gibson, assistant manager, during the absence of his chief, L. A. Davis, who is attending the Chicago convention.

A wire received at the local Universal office yesterday indicates that Samuel Henley, branch manager, will arrive home Sunday, after sitting in at the convention in Chicago. He took a jaunt over to Milwaukee to witness round two of the doings there.

Lew Herns, who came here from Portland, last week, and G. A. Margetts, who was transferred from Ontario, Canada, are both out in the territory for Universal. Herns was assigned to the southern Utah section, while Margetts is in Idaho.

Harmon and Lou Perry, exhibitors at Ogden, Utah, announce that they have closed the Cozy theatre in that city. A store building will be erected on the site. Several weeks ago they sold the site of the Utah theatre for a hotel building, which leaves them with two theatres, the Ogden and Egyptian. The Cozy will close May 18. They were both in town today lining up new business.

Art Schayer, Fox exchange manager, left for Butte, Montana, after his return to this city from New York City where he attended the general convention. He will return the first part of next week. James R. Keitz, Greater Features exchange manager is making a short selling trip into the northern Utah and southern Idaho territory this week, in the interest of the dandy new release schedule of C. B. C. productions.

Alan Burke, manager of the De-Luxe feature independent exchange here, says that business has started out in dandy fashion since opening the exchange several weeks ago. He just returned from his first trip into the territory going as far as Yellowstone Park in Idaho and Wyoming, where he enjoyed good business. Burke is well known in this section, having been manager of the old Shooker exchange which operated here on Regent street for several years.

C. F. Parr, manager of the local Producers Distributing Corporation exchange, is making a trip into the Montpelier district of Idaho this week.

S. Z. Williams, traveling auditor for Producers Distributing Corporation is here going over the books and records of the local office. He came in from Denver.

Idaho exhibitors who visited the local mart this week include: M. C. Maddison, owner of the Rex and Elk theatres at Rexburg; W. H. Burt, operating the Rialto theatre at Twin Falls; Dr. Klein, owner and Ott Schmidt, manager of the Colonial theatre, Idaho Falls; and I. H. Harris, manager of the Burley theatre, Burley. Wyoming had a representation this week in E. R. Ashton, owner of the Isis theatre, Green River, and M. F. Harris, operating the Strand theatre, Evanston. The Utah boys consisted of John Rugar, managing the Orpheum theatre, Park City; J. J. Gillette, Strand theatre, Toeele, and Mel Stringham, owner of the Rains theatre, at Rains.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Picture and Super Feature Independent exchange in this city is in Idaho for several weeks. Elwin Peck has charge of the office during his absence.

George L. Cloward, Metro-Goldwyn exchange manager, is back after a swing into the northern territory.

Harold Pickering, exploitation manager in this territory for Famous Players-Lasky, who has charge of the entries for the school to teach motion picture acting that will be inaugurated by Famous in the fall, is receiving some photographs and data on aspirants that are to be proud of, and he says he would not be at all surprised to see some winners of places from this neck of the woods.

San Diego

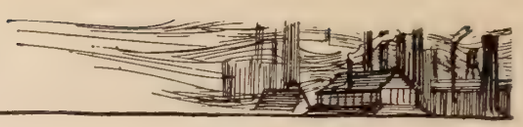
JAMIE ERICKSON, who has been known for several years as one of the most accomplished of youthful organists, and who has been at the console of several of the local motion picture houses, has begun an engagement as organist at the Savoy Theatre, which has recently reopened in stock. For many years the Savoy was the chief vaudeville house of the city.

The Balboa management has made a decided change in policy by bringing to this high class motion picture house a 3-day-a-week vaudeville program from the Orpheum circuit. The theatre will continue its screen attractions the other four days of the week, and a feature picture and news reel are being given with the vaudeville programs. Owing to the manner in which the Balboa stage was constructed no changes were necessary to accommodate the vaudeville acts.

J. E. Carroll recently opened at Jacumba Hot Springs, a back country mountain resort, a motion picture theatre in a new building specially constructed for it, with modern equipment in every way.

Mrs. Wallace Reid has come to San Diego to make her next great film production at the Grossmont Studios, near La Mesa. Mrs. Reid and Mrs. Sydney Drew, who is also to make pictures at the Grossmont Studios, have been making a tour of the back country to select locations available for their screen work. Both of these stars were given warm welcomes by the chamber of commerce committees and others.

Helen Holmes and members of her company have been at work at the Grossmont Studios, following preparatory arrangements by J. P. McGowan as director and producer. Al Hoxie heads another unit which will do work at the same studios.



The Colonial Theatre, which has been operating at various times as a vaudeville house, motion picture and stock theatre, has closed.

Among the California theatres who have recently improved their musical programs by the installation of Wurlitzer organs are the Bard Theatre Co. of Los Angeles, who have installed new units in their Los Angeles Adams St. Theatre and Bards Pasedena, the New Glendale, operated by West Coast Langley, the Egyptian at Maywood, owned by J. W. Dodge, the Aztec and Egyptian of San Francisco, under the Marion Realty Co., the Hayward, at Haywards, Cal., belonging to Pacific State Theatres, Inc., the Mission at Monterey Park, one of the West Coast chain, and P. Lashers Wabash theatre in Los Angeles.

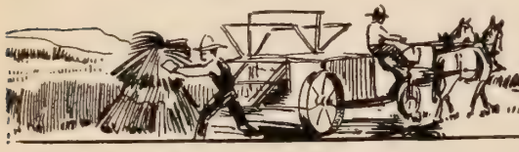
THE Arcade theatre property, in Shenandoah, has been sold by P. G. Seiwell, to Oppenheimer & Sweet, at a price said to have been $100,000. The new owners have not yet disclosed what use they will make of the property.

Purchase of a valuable plot of ground at Lackawanna and Hull avenues, in Olyphant, Lackawanna county, six miles from Scranton, by the Sterling Amusement Company, has given rise to a report that the company ultimately will erect a motion picture theatre there. The property was bought from Davis and Louis Raker, at a price said to have been $30,000. The plot is "L" shaped with a frontage of 47 feet on Lackawanna avenue and 287 feet on Hull avenue. The identity of the members of the Sterling Amusement Company has not at this writing been disclosed.

Announcement is made that the new theatre recently opened in Nesquehoning, by Benny Freed, Samuel Weiss and Silas Henry, will be managed by Mr. Freed. J. Howard Wiley has been employed as organist.

A protest has been filed with the town council of Minersville against its recent action in increasing the local taxes on motion picture shows to the extent of 400 per cent. The protest was made jointly by C. F. Kear, owner of the Minersville Opera House and Marton J. Falger, owner of the Lyric theatre. The theatre men claim the new levy would add an expense of $25 a month to the operation of each theatre.

Only a spirit of good fellowship was exhibited between the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre Company, which controls six theatres in Harrisburg, and the Marcus Loew interests which took over the Regent theatre in that city on May 11, notwithstanding the entrance of Loew to Harrisburg means keen business rivalry between the two concerns. As evidence of the lack of any feeling of ill will on the part of the Wilmer & Vincent interests, C. Floyd Hopkins, their representative in Harrisburg, inserted in his newspapers advertisements on the day that Loew opened his theatre, a four-column "streamer" which stated: "The Wilmer & Vincent Harrisburg Theatres Extend Greetings to MARCUS LOEW and the Distinguished Guests He Has With Him Today. Moreover it was noted that A. L. Bernstein, manager of Jackie Coogan, who was present as a guest of Mr. Loew at the opening of the Regent, called attention in an interview in one of the Harrisburg papers to the fact that a Jackie Coogan film play, was to be shown the latter part of the week in the Victoria Theatre, Harrisburg, one of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres, and rival to the Loew theatre.



Building wreckers are making rapid progress in the demolition of the Orpheum Theatre, Harrisburg, for some years seat of the legitimate drama under Wilmer & Vincent management in that city, which is being torn down to be replaced by a combined vaudeville and picture house that will seat 2,500. The house was built in 1903 when it was opened under the name of the Lyceum.

The management of the Hippodrome theatre, Reading, a Wilmer & Vincent picture house, recently gave the free use of the theatre to the Reading Lodge of Moose for the holding of the fifteenth annual Lodge of Sorrow for departed members of the order.

Scranton newspaper recently printed a report that a big new motion picture theatre is to be erected in the populous suburb, West Scranton. Gossip connected the name of the Comerford Amusement Company, which operates a big chain of picture and vaudeville houses in Scranton and vicinity, with the project, but the Comerford offices declined to make any definite announcement on the subject.

The Pottsville Rotary Club has elected Charles Hausman, manager of the Hippodrome motion picture theatre in that city, as a member of its board of directors.

Elmer B. Carpenter, for a number of years leader of the orchestra in the Orpheum Theatre, a Wilmer & Vincent legitimate house in Harrisburg, has accepted the position of director of the orchestra in Loew's Regent motion picture theatre, just opened in Harrisburg by the Marcus Loew interests. Mr. Carpenter has organized the orchestra, which incidentally is the first ever to be maintained permanently by a Harrisburg picture theatre, entirely from Harrisburg musicians of established ability.

Des Moines

E. C. CLAY, salesman for F. B. O. from the Des Moines office, was badly injured in an unusual auto accident. While cranking his Ford in a garage at Waterloo, Iowa, the car started forward upon him and crushed him against a cement wall. He's been in the hospital at Waterloo, much the worse for wear. However, none of his injuries seem to be permanent.

Jack Edwards, the genial exploitation man for Universal, returned from convention in Milwaukee.

Irene Hank, billing clerk for Universal, is leaving the firm to devote all her time to house keeping. The office is mourning her as the best stenographer in town.

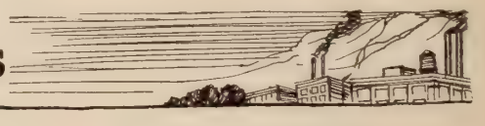
Charlie Clants, calling from the Esco office, wanted to report that he has just bought a $4,500 airplane and that free rides will be given on his half day off on Saturday. He said that he also invested $12 in a Maryland car, the only one of its kind in Des Moines. His only purpose, it seems, in buying is to be able to give his friends treats both on earth and above.

R. S. Ballentyne, manager of the Pathe office, has purchased a splendid new Essex coach.

A. W. Nichols, district manager for Des Moines at the Famous Players headquarters, found the bookers up to their ears in work here. Bill Barker formerly head booker, has just returned to the road, in the north central zone, making six on the sales staff of Famous, and Lyle Uteser has been added to the booking staff. George Stephenson, who used to be employed in the shipping staff of Famous-Players, returned to that department to take the vacancy left by Mr. Uteser on his promotion.

Manager Banford of the Metro-Goldwyn office and his sales staff, returned to Des Moines from the sales convention in St. Louis.

Lee Phillips, head salesman for Esco from the Des Moines office, is out of the hospital after his bad accident on the road last week.



Mr. Peterson of the Gem Theatre at Armstrong called at the Des Moines exchanges to transact a lot of business. A. C. Shuneman of the Isis at Webster City, spoke up for Paramount Week. And Mr. Eddy of Indianola called at the Metro-Goldwyn office.

W. H. Bishop, special exploitation man for Metro is now at the Des Moines exchange.

N. C. Rice, salesman for F.B.O. is in Milwaukee for the convention there.

Indianapolis

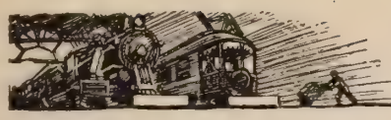
C. M. WALKER, owner of the Irving theatre, Irvington, Ind., is planning extensive improvements to his house and will also double the seating capacity.

The New Princess theatre at West 10th St., and Holmes Ave., Indianapolis, is opening under the direction of Frank Donas. The Princess will be one of the best equipped neighborhood houses in the city. Chas. Koch will assist with the management.

J. J. Ryan who operates the Indiana theatre at Anderson, Ind., is back attending to his business despite a severe accident from a fall on the ice last November. During his absence the management of the house was ably taken care of by Nell Riker.

The New Miami at Union City, Ind., will open June 10th under R. S. Wenger. The seating capacity will be 380 and the house will have new and modern equipment throughout. Mr. Wenger will continue to operate the Victory, also at Union City, on week ends and will show westerns at the latter.

S. W. Neal is the new manager of the Isis theatre at Kokomo, Ind. The former manager, Mr. Spellman having resigned to take a position in New York City.



The Grand Amusement Co., operating theatres in Kokomo and Anderson, Ind., will open two new houses during July and August. Peru and Tipton, Ind., will be the location of the new theatres and will bring the circuit up to four.

F. D. Walters and Mrs. Walters who own the Orpheum at Hartford City, Ind., will open the New Jefferson at that city, about June 1st. They will remodel the Orpheum and in the future will show only big features and road shows at that house.

A. E. Bennett, owner of the Liberty at Muncie, Ind., will leave May 12th for an extended visit to Florida.

The Pendleton theatre, Pendleton, Ind., has been taken over by B. E. Bennett. Bassett, the former owner is now looking around for a new location.

Kansas City

C. R. WILSON, owner of the Liberty theatre, Liberty, Mo., who has been acting as official membership solicitor in the Missouri territory for the M.P.T.O., Kansas and Missouri, will be recalled next week, in accordance with a plan of the association to send C. E. Cook, business manager of the organization, on a tuor of the territory. Mr. Cook, who will cover all of Kansas and Western Missouri, will devote one week to the territory and then back to the office for a week, maintaining such a schedule until the task is completed.

Hardly had the new Central theatre, a suburban house of Kansas City, opened its doors the other day until the sale of the house was announced. The theatre was purchased by Gregg & Crandall from Jack Tiller of McCook, Neb., for $12,000.

Although managers for the Newman and Royal theatres of Kansas City have not yet been selected, the deal, whereby the two theatres will be sold to Paramount, will be completed in a few days, Frank L. Newman, owner, who returned last week from the Paramount convention in Los Angeles, said. Mr. Newman will become manager of three Paramount houses on the West Coast, while Milton Feld, managing director of the Newman and Royal, will become manager of productions on the West Coast for Paramount.

Charles F. Terry, a 22-year-old youth of Kansas City was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary this week, after pleading guilty to participating in the $2,400 hold-up of the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, the other day. Terry denied firing the shot which wounded Sam Rayburn, theatre doorman, who was assisting in taking the money, which was box office receipts, to a down town bank. The other two bandits have not yet been arrested.

The announcement of Al Kahn, president of Film Classics, Kansas City, that he had disposed of his entire interest to Warner Brothers, the product to be distributed through Vitagraph, was followed this week by the announcement that he and his brother, M. A. Kahn, would continue in the distribution business, handling Preferred Pictures, the franchise for which they have held since last year.

The continued steady patronage at the Tackett theatre, just over the state line in Oklahoma from Coffeyville, Kansas, has convinced J. B. Tackett, owner, that he made no mistake in building outside his state on virtually a prairie to thwart reformers, who opposed Sunday shows.

The following openings, closings and changes in management of theatres in the Kansas City territory have been annouced: Bogue theatre, Bogue, Kansas, closed, following a fire which partly destroyed the house; Crooks theatre, Howard, Kansas, purchased by F. P. Osborn; Star theatre, Holten, Kansas, purchased by H. Haganmaier from H. Koch; Royal Play House, Grain Valley, Mo., re-opened after having been remodeled, now under the management of T. B. Peal.

A. E. Jarboe, owner of the Royal theatre, Cameron, Mo., contends that it always pays to have a staunch friend in the editor of your home town daily newspaper. The other day scores of students paraded up and down the streets of Cameron in effort to attract attention to a school show in opposition to the Royal, even bally hooing directly in front of the Royal.

The following excerpts of a front page editorial in the Cameron Progress not only turned the tide in Mr. Jarboe's favor, but forever banned the ballyhooing of school shows on the streets:

"The Royal theatre is owned by a local man and owned by a local citizen. To injure their interests is an injustice to Cameron's people. The Royal theatre for years has brought crowds to Cameron and is distinctly allied with the business interests of the city. Certainly we should not injure our own interests."

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City territory last week were: F. G. Weary, Farris theatre, Richmond, Mo.; Laurence Brenninger, Topeka, Kansas; S. A. Christian, Beyer theatre, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

The fact that Branch Manager M. A. Levy was in New York attending the Fox convention did not keep the Kansas City branch from doing a near record business last week. J. H. Zimmer, New York auditor for Metro-Goldwyn, was busy on the Kansas City office books last week. J. M. Duncan, personal representative for Sam E. Morris, general manager of Warner-Vitagraph, was in Kansas City for a brief visit, after which he left with C. A. Schultz, Kansas City branch manager, for the Warner sales convention on the West Coast. The completion of the transfer of the records from Film Classics, Warner Brothers distributors, to Vitagraph was accomplished in Kansas City last week by Sam Chapin, auditor. C. E. Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn branch manager, left behind a busy office long enough to attend a district sales convention in St. Louis. Earl Bell, former Film Classics sales manager in Kansas City will leave for California, next week to visit his parents about six weeks. Tom Byerle, First National branch manager, and Bob Withers, Enterprise branch manager, returned from the territory last week and announced they were more than satisfied with business. Leon Silverman, new salesman for the Independent Film Company, started out this week to make his debut to exhibitors. Miss Sarah Jane Brooks of the Metro-Goldwyn branc, is resigning for no other reason than to become a housewife, it is rumored.

Denver

ED. GAGE, western division manager for Universal Film Exchanges, arrived in Denver this morning from Milwaukee convention. Mr. Gage also attended the General sales convention of Universal held in Chicago last week. The entire Universal sales force proceeded from Chicago to Milwaukee to attend the convention. Mr. Gage was accompanied by Eugene Gerbase, local manager of Universal Film Exchange.

J. J. Goodstein of Philadelphia arrived in Denver for a short visit. Joe Goodstein is the owner of the Palm Theatre, Pueblo, and the New Longmont Theatre, Longmont, Colorado. Although now a resident of Philadelphia, Mr. Goodstein is one of the veteran exhibitors of the Denver territory. Mr. Goodstein announces plans for a new $150,000 theatre in Pueblo. Definite arrangements and details will be announced in the near future. However, it is safe to say that if Joe builds a theatre it will be high class in every respect.

Sid Weisbaum, popular manager of the Film Booking Office Exchange of Denver, arrived back last Wednesday from Chicago where he attended the annual sales convention of the Film Booking Offices' Organization. Soon after his arrival back to Denver, he was taken suddenly ill and for a time was threatened with pneumonia. Reports today are that he is somewhat better although still confined to his bed.

R. J. Garland, Metro manager, and C. E. Pace, his star salesman, made a hurried trip to Pueblo and Colorado Springs. It is safe to say that the new production lineup of Metro was given a very thorough and effective presentation to exhibitors in those cities.

Harry Cassidy, manager of Fox, and Joe Ashby, manager of Associated First National, were also visitors in Pueblo and Colorado Springs.

The local Paramount office was a very busy place during the past week. Lou Marcus, new manager, John B. Clark, division sales manager, and C. E. McCarthy, general manager of publicity for Paramount, were all in conference at this office a few days ago. Exhibitors of the territory will soon know what it was all about.

W. A. Seaman who will be remembered as former owner and manager of the Star Theatre, Ft. Lupton has just opened a new 300 seat theatre in Brighton Colorado. It will be known as the two theatres operating in Brighton but owing to the recent rains in this beet sugar country both houses are due for a very profitable season.

The Isis Theatre at Boulder, Colo., owned by Hickox & Diez has just opened a large new Wurlitzer Unit Organ.

Seattle

THE Clemmer theatre in Spokane, formerly owned by Dr. H. S. Clemmer and Dr. H. C. Lambach, reopened last week under the ownership of the Universal Film Company, after having been closed for repairs and remodeling for the last several days. Roy Boomer, formerly associated with Universal in the capacity of film exchange manager, has been awarded the management of the house. Upon reopening the Clemmer, Mr. Boomer announced that all existing contracts for film with any and all distributing companies would be retained, and the theatre would play every picture contracted for or booked by the former owners, regardless of company or dating.

Manager George P. Endert of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange, returned last week with his staff of salesmen and office assistants from the recent international convention in Los Angeles. Reports indicated that "a good time was had by all." Mr. Endert was accompanied by a number of the Vancouver exchange representatives on the return voyage, in addition to the employees of the local office.

F. W. Graham's Lyric theatre in Shelton, Wash., was scheduled to be opened the latter part of May, according to reports reaching Film Row this week, and was to be the scene of an enthusiastic community celebration. The house has a seating capacity of approximately 750, and was built at a total cost in excess of $50,000. It will be the newest and largest house in that territory, and will be a fitting addition to Mr. Graham's theatrical interests.

L. K. Brin, Warner Brothers franchise holder in the Pacific Northwest territory, left the city last week for Los Angeles, to confer with Warner Brothers prior to the national convention scheduled to be held by that company this month. H. A. Black, manager of the Vitagraph exchange here, took his departure two days later, bound for the same place. It was expected that both managers would return to this city about the same time, following the settling of the new distribution and exchange policy to be carried on by the combined Warner and Vitagraph interests. Mr. W. K. Beckwith remains in charge of the Vitagraph exchange during Mr. Black's absence, while Mr. Brin's brother remains in charge at that office.

Miss Evangeline Russell, whose work in "Red Love" has won her a leading role in the Jans picture, "Married."

Seth D. Perkins, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange, returned last week from the recent national convention of that organization in New York City, and reported an exceptionally pleasant business and pleasure trip. Mr. Perkins is now making plans for a concerted drive over the Washington and Oregon territory on the new Metro-Goldwyn product.

Seattle's Educational Film Exchange recently entered into the national sales contest of that company with all four feet, according to J. A. Gage, manager.

The golf experts of the Washington territory lined up for a last desperate effort this week to regain their lost lead in the Portland-Seattle tournament. The event was the second half of the competition, being played on the Rainier Golf Club Course in this city. Hugh McCredie, Jr., of the Venetian theatre in Portland, captained the visiting squad, while the local players were under the leadership of Charles W. Hardin, manager of the local United Artists exchange.

Fred G. Sliter, manager of the First National office, was expected back in this city early next week from the convention recently held by his organization in Los Angeles. A. C. He will go from here to New Orleans, leaving sometime next week, and from New Orleans to St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Denver, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, and other points. About the first of September Mr. Curran will leave the States and go to Australia by way of Honolulu.

J. T. Freeman, manager of the Alamo Theater, Griffin, Ga., ran in on Sunday and out again on Monday, after a short visit with relatives and business friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Sparks sailed from New York Friday of this week for a six months tour of Europe. They will go to England first and then to the continent returning home November 1st.

C. R. Beacham, branch manager of First National, called in all his salesmen last Sunday for a special sales conference concerning the new product. They all left again Monday for their respective territories. The salesmen are J. M. Young, who travels North Georgia; George Almon, South Georgia representative; P. A. Strachen Alabama; and L. W. Carter, Florida.

In the recent sales drive staged by Enterprise Distributing corporation John W. Mangham, manager of the Atlanta branch, came out winner, with a big cash prize of $350. Coming in second and third respectively were Wallace B. Walthall, of Oklahoma City, and George Chester, of Charlotte. Not content with the excellent results of this sales drive Enterprise is planning another, to be put on in the near future and designated Enterprise Month.

Jack Connolly, Washington representative of Will Hays, spent a few hours in Atlanta on Wednesday en route to Washington. Mr. Connolly who was on his way back from Dallas, Texas, where he has been attending the exhibitors convention, stopped over between trains for a brief visit with his friends and one-time associates on Film Row.

Mystic Lighting Effects For M. P. Theatres

Light solos, projected scenery, color accompaniments made possible by Clavilux

By George Vail

Projecting scenery, painting with light, a solo in light; these are some of the accomplishments of a new art that is to take its place in the motion picture theatre. Light will be played in all colors during the prologue or musical numbers just as the organ is now; the stage electrician will attire in a tuxedo and vie with the organists for solo honors as the result of the almost uncanny control of light now made possible through the Clavilux. Mr. Vail, who is giving performances of this remarkable apparatus in leading motion picture houses, describes the Clavilux in a most interesting way in his article as follows.—EDITOR'S NOTE.

Patrons of the principal eastern photoplay houses have by this time become accustomed to the almost eerie thrill of a Clavilux performance that weird sense of something unearthly, yet somehow strangely familiar, as the forms creep silently over the screen, changing in shape and color, dissolving in misty radiance, magically reborn in new and enchanting surroundings—all at the will or whim of the performer at the keyboard.

It is useless to speak of this fascination to those who have never experienced it, as useless as would be the effort to describe pure abstract music to one whose conception of the art was limited to purely descriptive effects of the type dispensed by the trapdrummer in those good old nickelodeon days. For the Clavilux—one of the most marvelous inventions of an age of wonders—makes possible for the first time in history a visual art as pure and abstract as music itself. Its figures and patterns, its rhythms and progressions, have no imitative object whatever; they are not intended to suggest or represent anything outside themselves, their sole justification, like that of the sonata or symphony, being merely their intrinsic beauty.

George Vail, playing a Clavilux instrument which is described in the accompanying article.

True, many spectators imagine they detect fanciful resemblances to opening flowers, esoteric symbols, poetic landscapes or cloud formations, but these parallels exist purely in the mind of the onlooker. In a very real sense it may be asserted that any such objective description of a Clavilux performance is far more revelatory of the nature of the narrator than it is of the visual composition on the screen.

Enough has been said to explain, therefore, the absence from this article of any attempt at detailed description. The accompanying photographs of a few of the various models of the Clavilux will serve to impart some idea of the keyboard by which optical effects of well-nigh infinite variety can be secured at will—improvised or played from notation analogous to that of music but having no organic connection with the latter art. The photographs of screen images—taken at various points in the development of moving compositions—will serve to suggest the bare static structure of certain episodes but can convey no real conception of the marvelous sense of depth—"a window opening into space"—of the complex interplay of contrasting rhythms, of the glorious harmonies of color prismatically pure and of any desired intensity.

To the exhibitor, concerned as a rule more with practical matters than with esthetic considerations, the Clavilux, however interesting and profitable as a solo act, is perhaps even more attractive by reason of the promise it holds forth of ultimate keyboard control of all lighting effects in the photoplay theatre. It is only a question of time until all light affecting the vision of the spectator is played from written notation by a performer in the pit. Then we shall see no more herculean struggles with vast and unwieldy switchboards in the vain attempt to make the lighting follow the music in color overtures. For it assuredly is vain to expect any delicacy or subtlety of graduation from great slow-moving dimmers which require considerable muscular exertion to operate and with which any visual equivalent of the

finer musical phrasings and nuances is utterly out of the question. We shall not have long to wait for the appearance of a player-mechanism, situated behind and controlling the main switchboard, and operated from a lightconsole not so very different in external appearance from that of the pipe-organ. The chief electrician may just as well make up his mind that sooner or later he'll have to peel off his overalls, crawl into a tuxedo and take his rightful place in the public view.

Such subordinate lighting effects, synchronized with music and other action, will never take the place of the solo Clavilux act much of the exotic beauty of which is inseparable from its velvety background of perfect silence. But aside from this primary solo function many uses will be found for this versatile instrument as its capacities are better realized. Experiment has already demonstrated its value in decorating plain subtitles with beautifully appropriate moving designs, either in monochrome or delicately colored. And its fanciful patterns will be found an ideal background for poems and lyrics of which the significance is abstract rather than literal.

A minor duty of the Clavilux player of the future—but one of no mean importance—will be the harmonization of the house-lights with the changing tints of the film, a feat which is difficult if not impossible under present conditions. But any producer who has tried the experiment will testify to the tremendous dramatic enhancement produced by this simple device whereby the crimson glow of the conflagration or the steely blue of the moonlight idyl are instantly reflected in the subdued illumination of the theatre.

And last, but by no means least, must be mentioned the enormous value of the Clavilux for projecting mobile or static settings for dramas, dances, pantomimes and ballets. Only a few weeks ago the entire scenic background for the last act of an elaborate production presented at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York City was projected by a specially constructed stage Clavilux which also controlled all the lighting for the act.* This will be good news, indeed, to the exhibitor whose storeroom is cluttered up with expensive sets built especially for some five-minute prologue or overture and used but once.

* See Theatre Arts Magazine of May 1925. For the use of the Clavilux in the ballet see Vanity Fair, May 1925.

Proper Planning of Lobby Display Frames Reduces Costs

A VERY important point in the planning and execution of the lobby display frames for a theatre has been brought to attention in a short article prepared by Samuel Weinstein, president of the firm of Menger, Ring and Weinstein. Mr. Weinstein's article follows:

In the planning of a theatre, the lobby frame is not given sufficient consideration. As a consequence, many theatre builders allow the work to reach a stage of completion that makes the installation of lobby frames very costly, and often not suited to the real needs of the exhibitor. It is invariably a compromise to meet the conditions in the lobby or on the outside piers. The plan is usually laid out by the architect, who looks at the project from a point of architectural design and proper construction, but rarely from the show-man's standpoint. By this, the writer does not mean to imply that all architects are ignorant of the show-man's needs; on the contrary, some of them, who have made a specialty of building theatres, are well versed in the needs of the theatrical man, and could be considered authorities on the subject. We are referring to the average architect, who only occasionally builds a theatre, and to whom the lobby frame is merely an incident under the heading of theatrical equipment. When working under such conditions, it would be well for the builder to consult a reliable lobby display frame manufacturer, and get a layout as to what types of display cases are necessary for his particular theatre, which will depend on the nature of shows that will be run in his house; the type theatre he is building; and the class of people he intends to cater to. If it is vaudeville, one type frames would be necessary; if it's moving pictures, another, and if it's a legitimate house, still another.

For instance, if the house is going to play to the working classes, and is situated on a busy thoroughfare, it will no doubt require a good display of three-sheets, some one-sheets, a banner frame, and possibly a six-sheet; on the other hand, if catering to the so-called high-brows, in a residential section, its needs would be mainly for photographs, and possibly one or two one-sheets for comedies. In addition, some space should be provided for hand-made cards. The vaudeville house, with its constantly changing road shows, each one bringing their own photographs, in a variety of sizes and shapes, needs a special type of display case that will permit flexibility and ease of display. On the contrary, the legitimate house has needs all its own, that would apply to neither of the above classes.

The writer could mention some of the biggest theatrical owners who have spent considerable money on removing stone pilasters, expensive plaster work, mirrors or marble, after paying a small fortune to the general contractors to have it installed. This is no reflection on the architects' efficiency. It simply shows that the lobby display frame is not taken seriously enough when the building is planned. It is generally classed as part of the equipment, such as the projection machine, the screen, or brass railings, which is a great mistake.

Few realize what an important effect it has on the appearance of the house, and the box office, also what economies could be effected on the marble and decorations, providing it were taken in consideration at an earlier stage of the game.

Atlanta Tudor Undergoes Many Changes

Manager James Jackson has done a record piece of work in having the Tudor theater, Atlanta, redecorated. Within two days almost everything was completed—and the plan of redecoration included exterior, lobby, box office, interior, with new drapes, floor coverings, and other decorative fixtures.

Work began Saturday morning, and by Monday night everything was in readiness. The box office of the theater has been remodeled and the lobby done over in dull blue and gold. The lights have been replenished, cleaned, and the arrangement changed a bit.

Inside, new draperies, floor covering, and fresh paint make the theater very attractive. Everything was done with practically no confusion, and the public became aware of the changed appearance of the house only after the changes had taken place.

Eastman Office Force Now Has Own Private Theatre

The office force of the Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, numbering about 1200, now can boast a theatre of its own. In the new five story building recently added to the State street group in Rochester an entire floor has been set aside for use of the workers.

The theatre is 80 feet wide, 150 feet long and 20 feet high and has a seating capacity of 1200. The entire stage is 64 feet wide and 34 feet deep with a proscenium opening of 36 feet. A thoroughly up-to-date stage lighting system provides for three sets of border lights and a set of footlights, grouped in reds, whites and blues, so controlled that any single color or combination of colors may be used. A rheostat is installed for controlling light intensity. A fully equipped motion picture booth has been built at the rear of the theatre with two projection machines and two spot lights installed.

Inquiries and Comments

A. C. Arc and Shutter Flickers Combined

WHEN using an alternating current are for projection purpoes the projectionist has the choice of one of two light sources. He can either focus the flame of the arc on the aperture, adjusting the angle of his carbons to favor this method, or he can use still another carbon setting and use the crater on the top electrode.

From the standpoint of maximum brilliancy and greater steadiness of the screen illumination the use of the top crater is desirable. From the standpoint of even screen illumination the use of the flame possesses advantage.

As regards visible flicker on the screen which results from the use of one or the other of these two sources, suffice it to say at this moment that it is a case of "six of one and half a dozen of the other." They are both bad and leave much to be hoped for.

Stroboscopic Effect

It is interesting, however, to analyze the resultant screen flicker for both conditions as some rather peculiar conditions are exposed.

When considering either the shutter flicker or arc light flicker alone the condition is fairly simple and the vanishing-flicker frequency for each case can be easily found from the curves shown in preceding articles.

But when both the shutter and arc light flickers are combined the condition becomes somewhat complicated to say the least.

The subject of the stroboscopic effect on the screen, as this combination of shutter and arc light flickers is commonly called, is by no means new and has already been extensively investigated (Stroboscopic Observations on the Alternating Current Arc-Lombardi and Melazzo-1904).

The particular study of stroboscopic effects as found in motion picture projection, however, has apparently suffered a lack of publicity, since little has been said concerning it.

Use of Arc Flame

In an alternating current arc, as is well known, the current repeatedly reverses its direction through the lamp with the result that first one electrode is positive, then the other, etc. As a consequence a crater is formed on each electrode and for any given amperage, the craters so formed are smaller than that which would be formed on the positive electrode of a D. C. arc of the same amperage.

Hence, there are three sources of light with such an arc. The two craters and the arc flame.

Since the flame is always present no matter which electrode is positive, it will have the same frequency as that of the current, viz: 120 cycles (for 60 cycle current). The both craters, however, which also fluctuate in brilliancy in synchronism with the current, will have a frequency of only 60 cycles per second (for 60 cycle current) since half the time they are positive and half the time negative. When they are negative their brilliancy is not as great as when they are positive, which fact gives use of their lower frequency.

Combining Both Flickers

In determining the resultant frequency when both flicker waves are combined the following formula is used.

$$F_r = F_a - F_s$$

Where F_r = Screen Flicker (resultant)
F_a = Arc lamp flicker.
F_s = Shutter flicker.

These flickers are all expressed in cycles per second.

To find the frequency of the shutter multiply the number of blades by the revolutions per second. Thus, a two-blade shutter running at the standard speed of 16 revolutions per second (60 feet per minute) would have a frequency of

$2 \times 16 = 32$ cycles per second.

A three-blade shutter running at the same speed would have a frequency of

$3 \times 16 = 48$ cycles per second.

Now the frequency of the arc lamp flame flicker is constant for all practical purposes since, any slight variations in the frequency of the generators can be neglected. The Projector speed on the other hand, is anything but constant and usually wanders all over the lot, since the speed requirements of different theatres widely vary.

This condition naturally gives rise to a variety of resultant flicker waves on the screen, some of which, due to their low frequency, are visible and the others having a high frequency, are invisible, even though present.

A. C. Arc Flame Flicker-Curve

It is possible to show the resulting screen flicker waves for various shutter speeds in curve form and this has been done in Fig. 4.

A glance at this curve, in the light of the preceding articles, is all that is required to see that if the screen illumination is high enough it is practically impossible to avoid visible flicker, when using the flame of an A. C. arc.

Fortunately, it is extremely difficult to obtain high screen illuminations (6 to 10 foot-candles) when focusing the flame of an A. C. arc. It is, therefore, possible to avoid bad screen flicker by choosing the proper projector speed.

The curve (Fig. 4) is analyzed as follows:

With the arc flame flicker constant at 120 cycles per second and using the flicker formula already given

$$F_r = F_a - F_s.$$

At zero shutter speed (no shutter used) there would be no flicker visible on the screen since the 120 cycles obtained by use of the formula would be too fast to be visible. Thus:

$$F_r = 120 - 0 = 120 \text{ cycles.}$$

As the shutter started rotating and increased in speed, there would result two flicker waves on the screen, one of high frequency (invisible) and one of low frequency (visible). All that is necessary is to wipe out the low frequency wave and no flicker would be visible so part (D) of the curve represents the increase of frequency

Report of a 6,000 Seat Theatre for Broadway

A 6,000-seat picture house in the Broadway district was built by substantial rumor yesterday. The report came via Max Bischoff, chief architect of the Ufa Theatres in Central Europe. Mr. Bischoff is now in this country studying film theatre architecture.

From an architect he learned that this projected house, the largest in the world, would be built by an independent film company, Universal, Fox, or Warner Brothers. While definite information could not be gleaned from these companies it was verified that the architect had such an order.

It was further learned that E. F. Albee will build a 5,000-seat vaudeville-picture house, probably at 50th Street and Broadway. Although both the architect and the Albee offices protested the report, it was discovered from other sources that it was founded on fact.

Allone Corporation Will Build Two in N. Y.

The Allone Corporation which already has fourteen houses in its circuit will add two more on the east side in New York. They have purchased property at 279 Houston street running through to 180-86 Suffolk street and will build a 1,600-seat house there costing $300,000. They also purchased the five buildings at 107-9 Rivington street and will erect an office building and 600-seat house costing $250,000.

The Allone Corporation is a combination of interests headed by Charles Steiner, Harry Blinderman, Sam Weiss and Dave Rosenzweig.

Des Moines Theatre Installing Refrigeration Plant

A refrigerating plant of 125-ton capacity is being installed in the Capitol theatre, Des Moines.

Fans force the air from outside through ice water and iced coils, under the theatre system in the floor releases the air into the auditorium, keeping the temperature at 70 degrees.

The system will be in operation by Memorial Day it is estimated.

Bratter & Pollak To Build 1,700 Seat House in N. J.

On May 5th the Supreme Court of New Jersey issued an order directing the Common Council of the City of Englewood, N. J., to grant and issue to Bratter & Pollak a license to operate a theatre in that city. The building that these men will erect will be directly opposite the city hall and will contain aside from an auditorium that will seat 1,700 people, 5 stores and 15 offices. The plans have been drawn by William E. Lehman of Newark and it is expected that figures will be in and work started not later than May 15th. The building will be constructed of limestone, concrete and steel.

Colonel Varner Opens New House in North Carolina

COLONEL VARNER'S new Concord theatre in Concord, N. C., was opened May 4th, according to an announcement made by the manager, Miller Meriwether. The new Concord theatre is modern in every respect, being built entirely of concrete and steel and having a seating capacity of 700 downstairs and balcony.

There are five different color lighting circuits in the theatre which will add greatly to obtaining the desired effect with the pictures on the screen. These five color circuits are controlled by the projectionist from the projection room.

A Hope-Jones Organ has been installed, also two Motiograph de Luxe Projectors and a Typhoon ventilating system consisting of two six-foot fans on the roof.

The stage equipment was built especially for this house, and everything possible has been installed in the theatre to assure the patrons of all the comforts possible in a modern theatre.

Jack F. Lewis of Kansas City has been employed to handle the big organ.

The color schemes of old ivory and gold were carried out through the entire auditorium, making this one of the most attractive theatres in the State. The theatre was built by J. A. Cannon of Concord, N. C., and has been leased by Colonel H. B. Varner of Lexington, N. C.

M. Meriwether, who manages The Concord, has had experience in managing theatres in North Carolina, having been with R. D. Craver of Charlotte for a number of years and who was of late manager of the Ideal theatre, Winston-Salem.

of the visible wave with increase of shutter frequency. This reaches a maximum at a shutter frequency of 40 cycles per second.

Between flicker frequencies of 25 to 40 cycles per second, the flicker wave, under ordinary conditions is not visible or bad.

As the shutter speed still increases, the frequency of the flicker wave drops off (Part C) and when the shutter frequency reaches 60 the minimum flicker wave is zero. Between shutter frequencies of 40 and 60 the flicker wave changes rapidly.

With further increase of shutter speed the flicker wave again rises rapidly and again reaches a maximum of 40 cycles per second.

Rising still further the flicker wave again slowly descends to zero at a shutter speed of 120 cycles per second.

This shows the flicker cycle for the condition of focusing the arc flame. When using one of the craters, the conditions are very much different as will be shown next week.

House Being Remodeled and One Built in 2 Pa. Towns

A new corporation is being formed to erect a vaudeville theatre in Shamokin, Pa., to have a seating capacity of 1,200, on the site at present occupied by the P. O. S. of A. Building, on Independence street. The corporation will be known as the Shamokin Amusement company, and the incorporators will include the following Shamokin men: Casper A. Tharp, Galen H. Clark, George Clark, Jr., Raymond Leitzel, C. K. Morganroth and Chester Tharp. Efforts will be made to have the house open for business about November 1. William H. Lee, of Philadelphia, is the architect.

Plans have been perfected by Edgar Brown, proprietor of the Garden Theatre, Pittsville, Pa., to enlarge it from a house with a seating capacity of 600 to one capable of seating 1,000. To effect the improvements Mr. Brown has purchased the building outright from Gottlieb Schall, for $110,000, according to the bill of sale filed in the Schuylkill County court house. The improvements will include the installation of a new Marr & Colton organ and refurnishing the theatre with air-cushion seats. A large electric sign will be placed on the front of the theatre.

Ground Broken for 2500 Seat House, Orange, N. J.

Ground has been broken for the erection of the largest theatre to date in the Oranges, N. J. This theatre will be located at the corner of Essex Avenue and Main Sts., in the heart of Orange, it will be equipped for both vaudeville and pictures and will seat not less than twenty five hundred. No expense is being spared on this building, the stair-case leading to the balcony from the lobby alone, costing twenty-five thousand dollars. It is expected that the theatre will be ready to open by October first of this year. In addition to the auditorium there will be 8 large stores and 30 offices arranged in suites of three each. The building will be constructed by the Clifford MacAvoy Corporation of Newark. It was designed and is being supervised by William E. Lehman.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Sporting Venus" — Metro-Goldwyn, Capitol, New York

Evening World: "Miss Sweet particularly puts over a splendid performance as the reckless daughter of a reckless Scotch nobleman, and is convincing throughout. Ronald Colman is perfectly cast as the upper-class 'commoner,' his natural dignity making him appear really true to type. And Lew Cody added considerable merriment to the endeavor. A big appeal of this picture will be the clothes worn by Miss Sweet."

Herald-Tribune: "In 'The Sporting Venus' Miss Sweet has suddenly become one of the handsomest, most alluring and sophisticated actresses on the screen. The titles are startling, they are so good. Whoever wrote them has made his people talk exactly as people do talk. Then, Mr. Neilan has directed the picture with such humor and understanding that, if there ever was any doubt in our mind as to his ability to make pictures real, it has vanished forever. We reveled in 'The Sporting Venus,' with its sophisticated people and its beautiful, appropriate wearing apparel."

Sun: "With Blanche Sweet, Ronald Colman and Lew Cody in the cast it will come as no surprise to you to know that 'The Sporting Venus' revolves about a lovely young lass, her handsome sweetheart and the 'other man.' The 'other man' is, of course, played by Mr. Cody. Their triangle is unwound against the background of four countries—Scotland, Spain, England and France—and we are treated to beautiful scenery, as well as beautiful women and beautiful clothes. Mr. Neilan has lavished much care on this production and Miss Sweet, Mr. Colman and Mr. Cody prove that they are as accomplished a set of screen actors as you will meet in many a day."

Graphic: "This picture will be liked by lovers of the romantic. Need we say we liked it? Lew Cody as the villain injects a welcome bit of comedy and Miss Sweet wears some beautiful gowns. You will find 'The Sporting Venus' entertaining."

Brooklyn Eagle: "'The Sporting Venus' may lay claim to more than its share of good, cinematic qualifications. The film is well played. Blanche Sweet continues the improvement in her screen portrayals which was first marked in Neilan's recent revival of 'Tess of the D'Urbervilles.'"

"Zander the Great"—Metro-Goldwyn, Capitol, New York

Journal: "Marion Davies in 'Zander the Great' is a wonderful actress in a wonderful picture. She is an adorable comedienne, and where there were flashes of comedy in 'Janice Meredith' and 'Little Old New York' she permeates this production with a sparkling skill that is a revelation. There is pathos and drama and comedy in this picture, which has a delightful story, splendid acting and direction, and unusually effective settings."

Mirror: "Marion Davies scores a personal triumph in the screen version of that comedy-drama stage hit, 'Zander the Great.' The star is seen in the role Alice Brady created on the stage. Marion runs the emotional gamut with rare finesse and artistry. She amuses in the comedy situations and grips in the dramatic scenes. In our opinion this picture shows Miss Davies to better advantage than she has ever appeared before."

Daily News: "Marion Davies is too clever for words as the half-starved orphan with spindly legs, freckled nose and and-I-hopes-you-likes-me-grin. She has the comedienne field all to herself right now. There is no one to compare her with unless it is Mabel Normand's past glory. From the moment she steps into camera focus as an abused orphan to the idyllic and where she finds love in the great open spaces Miss Davies is a sheer delight."

Bulletin: "It is seldom that a successful play turns into such a splendid film as does 'Zander the Great.' Marion Davies and the supporting cast gave excellent performances, and showed the result of intelligent direction. The scenes taken in the Mojave Desert are especially worthy of mention."

Evening World: "In 'Zander the Great' Marion Davies gives a portrayal which is one of the best seen hereabouts in weeks. And this portrayal is all the more commendable in that it calls for, comedy, pathos and melodrama, each of which she does remarkably well. Of course, Miss Davies has the expert assistance of a really all-star cast, but even so her work stands out prominently."

Post: "Marion Davies turns comedienne at the Capitol this week and the result is a more than usually entertaining picture. 'Zander the Great' lends itself well to film treatment, and an excellent cast has been gathered together for the picture. Miss Davies succeeds in being very amusing."

Graphic: "'Zander the Great' is this week's feature at the Capitol Theatre and take it from us it's a great picture. It proves what we have always said, that Marion Davies is one of the most versatile stars in the film firmament. As a comedienne the lovely Miss Davies has few equals."

Herald - Tribune: "Marion Davies is such an inimitable comedienne that she actually wins one's immediate sympathy. It takes courage to play twelve years old, show your freckles and let yourself look as ugly and awkward as Marion Davies looks in the first part of the picture; but, along with it, is great acting. She is a female Charlie Chaplin, and so firmly did she hold one in her grasp that one—this one at any rate—grew sick with horror when Emily Fitzroy the cruel matron of the orphanage, lashed Mamie's hands together, dragged her into a dark room and locked the door.

America: "'Zander the Great' demonstrated again and again yesterday how perilously close lie our tears and our laughter. Those in the audience at the Capitol Theatre took Marion Davies to their hearts, anguishing over the troubles of her Mamie one moment and laughing at her antics the next. Here is the finest work of her career. I say finest because she uses so effectively her knowledge of pantomime in her understanding of the thin dividing line between slapstick and straight comedy."

Cleveland

W. C. Bachmeyer's resignation as central division manager for Metro-Goldwyn caused a big stir in the Film Exchange Bldg. For ten consecutive years Bachmeyer has been Metro district manager and everybody who is now in the picture business or who has been in the picture business any time during the past ten years knows Backmeyer, and is eagerly awaiting the announcements of his plans for the future.

Clifford E. Almy has been named central division manager for Metro-Goldwyn to succeed Bachmeyer. Almy has been with Metro for the past seven years. Six of them have been spent in Cleveland as branch manager. The first one of the seven was spent in Chicago. Everybody wishes Cliff success in his new undertaking.

A. A. Schmidt was halted in Chicago en route to the Milwaukee convention by an unexpected attack of illness. Latest reports are that he is recovering and will soon be on his way to the Coast.

The West Park is Cleveland's newest motion picture theatre. It was built by Messrs. Lefkowitz, Polster and associates. It has about a thousand seats, completely equipped with the latest of everything and is located at Kamm's Corners.

The Ivanhoe Theatre Company, Cleveland, has leased the Ivanhoe Theatre, Euclid Ave. and Ivanhoe Road, for a period of fifteen years. Rental begins at $12,000 a year with a gradual increase to a maximum of $17,500. The theatre, which is now in process of construction, will have 1000 seats.

The Sigma Theatre Building, Dayton, has been sold to Frank Hollenkamp of the Hollenkamp Brewing Company. The property is to be held as an investment, the theatre has 500 seats.

A. G. Moberly has purchased the Forum theatre, Hillsboro, from Ronald Stratton.

W. Lavon Boon is manager of the new 800-seat Capitol Theatre, Hicksville. The Capitol was formerly called the Opera House.

Cleveland Heights, fashionable residence suburb of Cleveland will have its second motion picture theatre when the new house, now in process of construction at Lee and Cedar Roads is completed. The new house is being erected by the Cedar-Lee Realty company, in which Alva Bradley, Malcolm Vilas and many other prominent busines men are interested. The building, which will be a two-story structure, will house a 1000-seat theatre on the ground floor with office space on the second floor. Recreation parlors will be in the basement. Sunday movies are taboo in Cleveland Heights.

M. B. Horwitz, president and general manager of the Washington Circuit is home again after a four week's vacation at Hot Springs, Arkansas. Among other things Moe brought back with him a beautiful coat of summer tan caught while chasing the elusive golf ball.

One by one they go. Ruth Gordon, secretary to Howard Chistman of the Film Board of Trade is wearing a solitaire and confesses it means the usual thing. Some time next June when you meet Ruth you'll be calling her Mrs Sam Simon—that is, if you don't just keep on calling her Ruth as everybody in the Film Bldg. does. So the industry's loss is Mr. Simon's gain, and we'll have to publicly offer our congratulations, although we don't at all approve of letting Ruth go.

F. H. Olds has taken over the Opera House at Farmington, O.. Olds also operates the Opera House at Middlefield.

Good photography plays no small part in making a picture popular. It has a definite box office value.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

—does justice to the cinematographer's skill. It carries all the quality of the negative through to the screen.

And you know when the picture is printed on genuine Eastman Film—the identification "Eastman" and "Kodak" in black letters in the margin tells you.

CLEVELAND, O.

Greeting THE GREATER FORTY!

CONGRATULATIONS on your fine new theatre, Mr. Sams, and thank you for your wire.

With such stars lined up as Gloria Swanson, D. W. Griffith, "The Ten Commandments," Douglas MacLean, Zane Grey, Harold Bell Wright, Pola Negri, James Oliver Curwood and a host of others equally big, the Rosemary is due for very prosperous days. For, as you, Mr. Sams, and many other prosperous showmen can testify, the strongest, most reliable foundation for a theatre anywhere is Paramount Pictures,

P.S. And how those Greater Forty contracts are flocking in!

New York, N.Y.

Gentlemen:

We are pleased to tell you that the Robert-Morton organs which you have installed for us at several theatres are giving entire satisfaction.

At the Plaza Theatre particularly, we cater to a very discriminate audience, this theatre being located in what is known as the social centre of New York, and being attended by people of prominence in the social and cultural activities of the city.

Many of our regular patrons are leaders in the musical world, and it is an accomplishment to please them with our musical offerings. We are pleased to say that the Robert Morton organ is responsible to a large extent for these results.

Very truly yours,

MARĒ NOSTRUM (Our Sea) Rex Ingram, Director. From the novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez. Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno play the leading parts. A powerful love story. By the author of "The Four Horsemen," "Blood and Sand." Great panoramic sweep with tremendous battle scenes, including a gigantic sea fight. A year in production, here and abroad. Ingram dedicates this stupendous production to the world as his successor to "The Four Horsemen."

THE MERRY WIDOW Von Stroheim, Director. John Gilbert, the Prince. Mae Murray, the Widow. One of the greatest theatrical properties of history, Henry W. Savage's stage success by Victor Leon, Leo Stein, Franz Lehar. Three years on Broadway. A triumph in every capital of the world. A passionate love theme against a background of Viennese spice, dash, sparkle. A duel that's a thriller. A production that could run a year as a road show.

ROMOLA Lillian Gish starring with Dorothy Gish featured. Others in cast: Ronald Colman, William H. Powell. Henry King, Director. From George Eliot's classic novel. Ran 16 weeks on Broadway, at $2 top. Four weeks at same price Park Theatre, Boston. Twelve weeks at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre, Hollywood, same price. First popular priced engagement at Capitol, N.Y. a clean-up; held over for second week and could have run a third. Star of "The White Sister" in another big hit!

BARDELYS THE MAGNIFICENT Entirely in Technicolor. King Vidor, Director. Starring John Gilbert. With Claire Windsor and a great cast. By Sabatini, author of "The Sea Hawk," "Scaramouche." This production likewise is on a big scale, befitting Sabatini's vastly popular novel. The great lover, John Gilbert, in a dashing, love-making role. One of the big scenes is a fight on a high balcony, a gripping episode. John Gilbert in "Bardelys the Magnificent" is a real picture event!

THE BIG PARADE A big special production with John Gilbert starred as a special attraction. King Vidor, Director. Renee Adoree and a big cast. By Lawrence Stallings, author of "What Price Glory?" Broadway's greatest current success and also the sensational best-selling novel "Plumes." A vivid panorama of Doughboy adventures, loves, thrills—with powerful heart appeal. One of the biggest and most important productions ever made at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios.

LILLIAN GISH Two Big Productions. This greatest star has just signed a long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Her name always associated with box-office landmarks from "The Birth of a Nation," "Way Down East," "Orphans of the Storm" down to "The White Sister" and "Romola" continues to represent the surest star-draw in the business. Miss Gish will appear in two great pictures, which in story and production will do justice to her position as one of Today's Biggest Stars.

PARIS Robert Z. Leonard, Director. By Carey Wilson. With Pauline Starke, Lew Cody. Erté, the world's foremost creator of feminine fashions, gives your audiences the first Erté-gowned Fashion Special with striking Technicolor scenes. For years he has been dictating the styles of Paris and the world. Now Metro-Goldwyn has brought him to America. "Paris" comes heralded by months of advance advertising and publicity all over the country. What a showman marvel it's going to be!

NORMA SHEARER Three Important Productions. The Great Star, Norma Shearer, in three marvel-productions that will mean a fortune to exhibitors in 1925-26. One is already completed, final title to be announced. It's by Samuel Shipman, wise Broadway playwright, and has Lew Cody, too. The theme is women and clothes and smartly handled with not only luxuriousness and feminine appeal, but thrills—a breath-taking train wreck among others. And Technicolor sequences. Miss Shearer's other two starring vehicles are equally Big!

THE BARRIER Rex Beach, author. A big special in every meaning of the word. With a big All Star Cast as additional drawing attraction plus Rex Beach's fame and the box-office value of what is considered the most thrilling of this famous writer's works. Public demand brings it to the screen in a magnificent production, made into a great, new box-office sensation. Klondike days. Men of iron. Gold! Gold! And beauties caught in the gilded web of the Yukon!

THE TOWER OF LIES Victor Seastrom, Director. Starring Norma Shearer and Lon Chaney. A great special attraction with the combined names of Seastrom-Shearer-Chaney. These three personalities went into the making of "He Who Gets Slapped." Now again they appear in the Selma Lagerlof novel that won the Nobel Prize as the outstanding book of all countries. The story of a girl who goes to the city, her disillusionments and adventures, her great romance. A prize novel that will be next season's prize box-office attraction.

THE UNHOLY THREE Tod Browning, Director. Starring Lon Chaney. With Mae Busch, Matt Moore. For absorbing entertainment it has never been equalled. The novel by C. A. Robbins is one of the most amazing romances of the underworld ever unfolded to public gaze, the story dealing with a ventriloquist, a dwarf and a giant of a side show who band together in a career of crime. Those who have seen it declare it far greater than "The Miracle Man."

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY With Eleanor Boardman, Sally O'Neill, Renee Adoree, William Haines. Hobart Henley, Director. Edward Dowling's famous Broadway stage success which has seven road companies working simultaneously today, at last in pictures. Three featured women stars in one of the biggest titles that exists. Action, fun, beauties, thrills, comedies. It can be banked on as one of the sure-fire standing room attractions of the new season.

THE FLESH AND THE DEVIL The Victor Seastrom-John Gilbert Special. Seastrom as director, Gilbert as star make a marvelous money-winning combination. With Carmel Myers. From the classic novel of Herman Sudermann. A drama of the struggles between a man's passionate desires and the sins which weakness of the flesh may force him to commit. The kind of story that Seastrom will make into a tremendous audience hit. It is the successor to "He Who Gets Slapped."

LON CHANEY As an exclusive Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, Lon Chaney will appear in another smashing vehicle, promised to be the most exciting of his successful career as a leading box-office draw. As in his other big successes Lon Chaney will appear with an important woman star and production will be in fitting bigness. Title and details to be announced soon.

THE AUCTION BLOCK Rex Beach's powerful novel. Norma Shearer as an added attraction. What a combination! A great actress in a story of towering strength, dealing with the sale of human lives on Society's Auction Block. Man-to-man struggle for possession of silk-robed beauty! Metro-Goldwyn is producing it on a scale in keeping with the bigness of Rex Beach's name and the importance of this, his most dramatic masterpiece. A great special attraction.

THE MYSTIC Tod Browning, Director. With Aileen Pringle, Conway Tearle, Mitchell Lewis. A sensational exposure of fake spirit mediums, spooks, spirits, table tapping; beauties who bleed the rich; a tense love theme. The first great showman production to dramatize one of the big newspaper topics of Today! Made by the director of "The Unholy Three," it is a big audience draw in every sense of the word and will be backed by extensive exploitation. A winner!

MONTE CARLO Another Erté-Fashion-Triumph! Against a background of the notorious Gambling Paradise, amidst thrilling action, beauties appear, gowned in the striking fashions designed by Erté, the breath-taking creations of this fashion-genius—many in full Technicolor! Audiences are awaiting Erté-designed pictures with keenest interest! They have been receiving and will continue to receive nation-wide syndicated publicity campaigns. One of the greatest showman stunts in years.

LIGHTS OF OLD NEW YORK A Cosmopolitan Production starring MARION DAVIES. Directed by Monta Bell, a director who has had one big success after another. From the Broadway stage success by Lawrence Eyre, it gives Miss Davies a role similar to that with which she swept to success in "Little Old New York." Uproarious comedy moments mingle with gripping drama to make this production a great audience hit. Produced at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios with an All-Star supporting cast. It will be nationally serialized and advertised.

THE TEMPTRESS A Cosmopolitan Production. By Blasco Ibanez, and like his other great works, "The Four Horsemen," "Blood and Sand," "Enemies of Women," "Marē Nostrum" it will be a gigantic, stirring drama. The prize vehicle of the screen year, it was sought after by many producers. A story of Beauty's mad flirtation with wealth in South America and the gilded café playgrounds of the Continent. Nationally serialized and advertised it will be backed by a tremendous exploitation campaign.

THE TORRENT A Cosmopolitan Production. By Blasco Ibanez, whose name is connected with the outstanding box-office hits of film history. "The Four Horsemen," "Blood and Sand," "Enemies of Women," "Marē Nostrum." "The Torrent" is hailed as his greatest picture story and it will be made into a powerful colossal epic of screen entertainment, featuring Aileen Pringle in a cast of big names. It will receive the special exploitation—nationally serialized and advertised—of Cosmopolitan Productions.

BUDDIES A Cosmopolitan Production starring MARION DAVIES. From George Hobart's successful play, two years on Broadway and then toured the country with several road shows. Pathos, drama, humor in a marvelous audience story. A big supporting cast and a production that will be of unusual stature. It will be given an unprecedented publicity and advertising campaign all over the country. "Buddies" gives Miss Davies the opportunity of her career for comedy and pathos.

FRED NIBLO One Big Production from the director of "The Mark of Zorro," "Blood and Sand," "Ben Hur" and other outstanding triumphs. He will make one gigantic production this year that will be worthy of his name and fame. You can depend on a truly great attraction from this genius of directors whose reputation for high-quality, beautiful mounting and intelligent handling of big stories is unexcelled. Watch for the important announcement.

THE CIRCLE Frank Borzage, Director. With Eleanor Boardman, Malcolm McGregor, George Fawcett, Creighton Hale, Alec B. Frances. From the stage success that ran two years on Broadway and toured the country. By Somerset Maugham, author of "Rain" and equally powerful. A big well-known title. And a production of magnitude. A frank presentation of tangled romances in Society's innermost places.

PRETTY LADIES Monta Bell, Director. With Zasu Pitts, Tom Moore, Lilyan Tashman, Anne Pennington. By Adela Rogers St. Johns. Based on the exciting Cosmopolitan Magazine story of a husband reclaimed from a life of wine, women and song. Anne Pennington in the "Follies" sequence. More beautiful women in this production than any ever made. And they're shown in full Technicolor.

SUN-UP The stirring Broadway stage success of two-years. By Lula Vollmer. With Conrad Nagel, Pauline Starke, Lucille La Verne. Edmund Goulding, Director. Great dramatic conflict. A passionate love. Mountain feuds. A battle to death. It has the tremendous heart interest that lives among the simple mountaineers of the Blue Ridge, quick to fight, quick to love, ready to die. A masterful play made into a virile screen romance!

NEVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET

A Cosmopolitan Production. Directed by Maurice Tourner. With Anita Stewart, Bert Lytell, Huntly Gordon, Justine Johnstone, George Seigmann, Lionel Belmore and other big names. Peter B. Kyne's million-copy best-seller of California and the South Seas now a vivid romance of the screen, made in America and in the South Seas on a scale befitting the importance of this popular novel. Backed by a big exploitation campaign. It will be nationally serialized and advertised.

THE SPAN OF LIFE Starring Lon Chaney. With Pauline Starke, William Haines. Director, Jack Conway. The famous Sutton Vane stage play that had a remarkable stage history of success in New York, on the road and in stock. It trails a dramatic course from America to London to Africa, with thrills, throbs and powerful love motives. One scene shows a human bridge spanning a gaping chasm, body clutching body across a hundred foot expanse! Watch this one!

THE EXQUISITE SINNER With Conrad Nagel, Renee Adoree. From Alden Brooks' sensational novel "Escape." Josef Von Sternberg, Director. A son of wealth takes the gypsy road to romance and finds beautiful adventures of love. Directed by the new screen genius, it is handsomely produced, rich in beauty with a powerful romantic theme and will prove the surprise picture of the new year.

RAMON NOVARRO Three Great Attractions. The handsome star of "Ben Hur" will be seen in three big, sure-fire hits. Thrilling love-making stories that the public wants. His first is a romance of the Annapolis Naval Academy, directed by the successful W. Christy Cabanne who is also a graduate of Annapolis. Taken with cooperation of the government. Novarro's other two big productions have equally big box-office drawing qualities. A star with a profit-following!

TIME, THE COMEDIAN Robert Z. Leonard, Director. With Mae Busch, Lew Cody, Gertrude Olmsted. Kate Jordon's story of a home-breaker, revealing the love thief who knows no law in his preying on Youth and Beauty. A great dramatic production made by the creator of "Cheaper to Marry," and packed with unfailing box-office qualities.

MONEY TALKS! Rupert Hughes' greatest story. Alf Goulding, Director. With Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel. Successor to "Excuse Me!" with the same author, director, stars. A combination that means another clean-up. The theme is the Almighty Dollar and what it can buy of beauty, brains, honor. It's packed with those irrepressible Hughes' comedy angles—and yet with a real dramatic kick. The title is an exploitation wow!

AN EXCHANGE OF WIVES With Eleanor Boardman, Lew Cody, William Haines, Renee Adoree. Hobert Henley, Director. Cosmo Hamilton's smashing Broadway comedy-drama. The story of a husband with young ideas. He thought he could bend the wedding ring a bit without breaking it. And when his wife starts to campaign, their adventures develop into the merriest and most exciting marriage mix-up a colony of young couples ever got into. A delight for all audiences.

THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND Jules Verne's companion story to "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." It will be one of the most ambitious pictures ever filmed; showing the fight with deep-sea monsters, secret passages through the crater of a volcano, an eruption that carries away an island, attack by pirates. It is a masterpiece of adventure with undersea scenes done by J. E. Williamson. And many sequences in Technicolor. A big, thrilling entertainment!

MAE MURRAY Two Big Productions. Mae Murray will appear in two big Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions in 1925-1926, in vehicles such as she has never before been seen. Coming after her great triumph in "The Merry Widow," in which she gives one of the most beautiful performances ever seen on the screen, the public will want to see this gorgeous star in her newest and greatest film successes.

LOVEY MARY King Vidor, Director. With Sally O'Neill, the Wonder Find. By Alice Hegan Rice and a continuation of her famous "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." The book is a classic dear to the hearts of all readers and is a story known in every corner of the country. The sunshine kid of an orphanage engages her saucy and winning personality in as delightfully human adventures as the screen has ever seen. With the new great screen personality Sally O'Neill.

WOMEN AND WIVES

The best-seller novel of Harvey Fergusson. With Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel. The publisher Alfred A. Knopf reports it as one of his greatest bets. No wonder it's a money-maker at book-stores because it's built of human stuff, the joys, the tears, the drama that go to make great entertainment. That's why in its special screen production, cast with selling box-office names, it's going to be a coin-getter.

A LITTLE BIT OF BROADWAY

From Richard Connell's novel of a beauty among the white lights, her folks back home, a reputation at stake, the boy who waited and another who wanted. A heart of gold and the mud-slingers. It's got the audience wallop, the heart appeal and human interest that makes a sure-fire audience draw. Showmen picked this story and showmen are producing it for box-office profits. It's the kind every showman in the country will want. Director and important cast to be announced.

HOW DARE YOU!

A wonderful Rupert Hughes comedy romance. Remember "Excuse Me!" at the box-office. "How Dare You!" is just like it—only more so! That title with the Hughes audience angle insures pep, action, fun, and a whopping love story. A story that's right up to the second in smartness—peopled with folk that just stepped out of the pages of life and whose human story makes 100 per cent entertainment. The Director and money-winning cast to be announced.

BROWN OF HARVARD

America's most famous college classic, by Rida Johnson Young. With Conrad Nagel, Eleanor Boardman. Not only has it especial appeal for the younger generation to whom the romance of great college life is absorbing, but to every type of picture-goer it offers clean, thrilling entertainment. A surprise sensation, pep, youth, heart-interest. The story of Harvard's famous racing crew is just part of this great story.

JACKIE COOGAN

Two Great Hits. Two winning Jackie Coogan productions. By Willard Mack, who wrote "The Rag Man." They give Jackie even greater opportunities for the heart appeal and human touch. Again the lovable waif in tattered clothes. Watch for "Dirty Face," and "Old Clothes," two great titles and stories that will stir the emotions of all audiences, because they've got the recipe for human happiness—the joy, the tears, the smiles, the little troubles. Jackie in rags steals their hearts away.

DANCE MADNESS

With Aileen Pringle, Lew Cody. By S. J. Kaufman, the famous nationally syndicated author. A romantic love drama between a man of wealth and an obscure beauty whom he trails from the gilded haunts of wealth to her shabby home. Aileen Pringle, as the siren, more ravishing than in "Three Weeks." She has what Elinor Glyn calls "it"—and that's what accounts for her great popularity at the box-office. Here's an audience picture!

THE REASON WHY

Elinor Glyn's world-famous romantic novel, her successor to "Three Weeks" and "His Hour." Jack Conway, director. With the wonderful lovers Aileen Pringle of "Three Weeks" fame and Conway Tearle, who was the romantic hero of "The Great Divide." This is one of Elinor Glyn's best selling novels, a throbbing love story set in a jewelled background of wealth and elegance, with a great cast. Look forward to a sumptuous Glyn gold-getter.

THE QUALITY 52

IN 1924-25 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer established a record for consistent money-making at the box-office that has never before been equalled by any company at any time. The season 1925-1926 finds this great organization more than prepared to continue to set the high pace which has made Metro-Goldwyn the Talk of the Industry. The studio organization, headed by Louis B. Mayer and his associates Irving Thalberg and Harry Rapf, that has shown in the current year its keen knowledge of what exhibitors want, remains intact, an assurance to showmen of business-pictures. The productions listed in the preceding pages are, picture for picture, great big attractions, destined to reap a fortune for exhibitors in the new season. Well known players, big vehicles, directors who have made the industry's successes —that's the Quality Fifty-Two! Metro-Goldwyn delivered the goods this year. You can depend on far greater clean-up attractions in 1925-1926 from the fastest-moving outfit of them all!

~lined them up at 11 P.M.

That's what "CHICKIE" did at the PANTHEON THEATRE Toledo, Ohio.

For the second time in the motion picture history of Toledo, the picture had to play a special midnight performance to take care of the crowds who couldn't pack into the house to see the last regular show. At 11 P. M. there was a line-up outside the theatre as if it were a holiday matinee. And even for that show, there were about 300 who couldn't get in. The show lasted until 2 A. M. And then all the taxicabs of Toledo were rushed to the scene to get the crowds properly distributed and delivered to their homes.

VOL. XXXI NEW YORK, JUNE 6, 1925 NO. 23

Common Sense

THE next year or so will see the sharpest competitive struggle this industry has had in all its stormy career. The lines are forming right now—along circuits, booking combines, first runs, subsequent runs, little theatres, foreign markets, etc. The battle for supremacy used to center around stars, then directors; but no longer. The business is getting nearer bedrock. The big problem today is—Marketing. How to sell the goods; how to buy them. In other words—Merchandising.

There's nothing remarkable about this industrial situation.

In each business there are economic forces. They may be likened to huge wheels, dormant or partly idle; waiting for the right kind of shoulders to put them in swift action. The right kind of shoulders are—capital and brains.

Nothing else will avail much. Just these two — Capital and Brains.

Now if these wheels get off the road and attempt short cuts and mess things up generally—break the rules of the road, in other words—there's justification for the howl that goes up from the injured. And there's recourse to the law or to those commissions created by law to see that business people get fair play.

But if capital and brains are pushing ahead in the grooves of economic law—which they must do if they themselves are to escape destruction—why, the fellow that gets pinched and pushed aside hasn't anybody to blame but himself. His plea for help won't get very far.

You cannot put a check rein on human initiative. The Soviets have tried it and made a debacle of progress.

So the situation is economic and impersonal. What we need is to stop calling names and to study merchandising.

First of all it's a matter of making goods that will sell. I have just had a talk with an exporter of film. He is an independent exporter—that is to say, he is apart from the big American companies who have their own selling offices abroad. He says that the foreign market for the American independent producers is better now than ever; but its future will depend wholly upon the quality of their goods. That market alone is important enough; but the very same gauge will determine the independent company's future in this, the home market—or the future of any American producer, big or little. You can talk till Kingdom Come about outlets for goods; but to what avail, if the goods are not up to the mark?

Then come advertising and selling.

Every year finds these two factors of more moment in this business—as with every business. Any firm that doesn't exploit today for all it's worth is in the shadow. And that, of course, takes capital and brains. We say "as with every business," but advertising in this business, where the goods are so peculiarly elastic in value, is a greater factor than in any other business in all business history.

These truths may sound trite. Our object in emphasizing them is to suggest that we get away from hysteria and down to common sense. Who's got the goods this year? How will they be pushed? What exhibitors are up-to-date with their theatres and know the picture market and how to buy?

The struggle within the industry will be won by business sagacity, nothing else.

AN EDITOR

The Week in Review

ONE of the joys of a trade paper editor's life is to happen in, without previous warning, upon a picture so excellent that it makes you hanker to spread the good news. I had dropped in the Heckscher Building to discuss with R. H. and P. D. Cochrane the details of Universal's new plan of complete service to the exhibitor, and found them on their way to the projection room. So I had a preview with them of Reginald Denny's "I'll Show You the Town," eight reels of fast-tempo farce comedy, which, it is easy to predict, will make the trade sit up and take notice even in these favored days of feature comedies. It is of the Hoyt style with a good story unfolding in a mass of complications that will make any theatre rock with laughter—and almost continuously. Harry Pollard does a remarkable piece of direction. To steer a story smoothly though such lightning-like twists and turns is filmcraft of the best order. That former stage favorite, Cissy Fitzgerald, is at her best; so, in fact, is the entire cast. Marian Nixon, it seems to us, will make a name for herself in the light comedy field. This picture is sure-fire entertainment—anywhere.

* * * * *

COMPLETE film service at a dollar a reel is revolutionary—so much so, in fact, that it revolves back to the early days of the industry, when J. J. Kennedy of the General Film Company told the writer that the secret of successful distributing was simply to keep a film off the shelves and working as many days as the year provided. So that is Universal's answer, probably, to all those who are saying: how can they do it? They expect to do it on the well known basis of volume distribution. Already, they tell me, small town exhibitors are writing in and saying that this scheme is their salvation.

Universal includes in its offer all its released pictures excepting only "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Phantom of the Opera," and the news reel. This makes a list of 52 Jewels and westerns, 6 serials, 70 two-reel series pictures, such as the "Leather Pushers," etc., and 109 comedies.

THIS problem of the small town theatre is to the fore these days. Some people dismiss this army of theatres with a wave of the hand, as inconsequential or doomed to pass out as the bigger and better theatre goes up; others say they will be and must be perpetuated. Some film concerns today make these small houses the backbone of their business.

Here's the situation as we visualize it, and as we presented it editorially some time ago. Make a dot on a sheet of paper—a large dot—and then surround it with, say, six small dots. There's your theatre situation today throughout the rural sections of the country. The large dot represents the larger town and the small ones the surrounding settlements, each the center of a farming community. In these little towns there is or at some time has been a picture house. If the larger central town now has a modern well-run theatre and there are good roads leading to it, it is pretty safe to say that the picture houses in the surrounding hamlets are out of business or temporarily closed or shut down to a few shows a month. Roads have a lot to do with it. In reply to a questionnaire on the situation which we recently sent to country newspapers, many replied in this vein: good roads spell the doom of the small town house.

But good theatres in the main towns and good roads don't prevail everywhere, by any means; and probably the pressure on the little town house has already gone as far as it ever will. And we are told that there are today in the country some eight thousand of these little theatre accounts. We won't call them theatres; we'll call them accounts—from the viewpoint of a distributing company. Some are closed, some running infrequently. They exist, many of them potentially. That is to say, they are ready to run, given pictures and people to see them.

It's quite a problem. The rural population of the country, living on some 6,000,000 farms, exceeds 31,000,000 people. They comprise one-fourth of the country's population. Are they to see pictures, the best pictures, and where?

We publish this week the results of a questionnaire sent out by The Nebraska Farmer, Ex-Governor Samuel R. McKelvie's paper, and a mighty good paper, by the way. The results of the canvass are most interesting. They indicate a weak distribution of pictures in general. These people are not familiar with the new stars. They tell of few pictures seen and many more they want to see.

PARAMOUNT, as has been announced, is going to this large rural population, with an advertising campaign in a country-wide list of farm papers. It is a most interesting and important experiment. We daresay that a lot of distributors of other kinds of merchandise, and the Government itself, will watch it with much interest. It is a far-reaching problem—this one of the farms and the small town dealer.

Paramount's advertising says to the farmer: Go to the movies; go oftener, not merely Saturday night but also Wednesday night; take the family and the help—that's the way to hold them on the farm; take the neighbors, if there's room in the car; support your theatre, make it more prosperous and the theatre, in turn, will give you better service.

Copies of this advertising are also directed upon the storekeepers of these small towns, and so is the voice of the visiting salesman, urging them to get back of their local theatre and help make it more prosperous and attractive—pointing out to them the fact that the oftener the farmer and his family come to town to see the movies the more goods they will buy at the stores.

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

Then, too, the Paramount selling force cooperates with the County agents and home demonstrators, employed by the government, states, and 3000 counties of the states—the former to help the farmer on the farm and the latter to help the farmer's wife in the home.

It all appears to be a very serious thorough-going campaign, and it would seem that the light is going to shine again for the small town theatre.

Universal's scheme is one to be reckoned with, too. With the limited income of the small house, so limited that express charges are even an important factor in operating cost, complete service—feature, serial, comedy—at a dollar a reel is going to get a wide and willing response.

* * * * *

GREAT BRITAIN (and indeed the entire world) continues to be stirred up over the Americanization of the film.

Recently in the House of Lords, Lord Newton pointed out that American films are patronized to the extent of 95% of insular attendance and fully 99% of public attendance in other quarters of the British Empire. He added: "If we are condemned to witness perpetual rubbish, for Heaven's sake let it be English rubbish in preference to American. I gather what the public wants is to see expensive and attractive females."

The New York newspapers have commented widely on this utterance. The New York Evening Telegram says that the argument from this side of the water can be summed up in a single sentence. "Lord Newton seems to think that Britain would be wise to give the public what it doesn't want." And The Telegram further says: "Only if and when the British motion picture industry gives the British public pictures that are superior to the American product and better fitted to British taste can the ratios of popularity be changed."

It is interesting in this connection to read a frank article contributed to the editorial page of The Daily Mail of London. Says the article: "The most serious charge to be made against the British film production is that it has contributed practically nothing to the moulding of national character. Until this omission is made good, its claim for recognition as a key industry is a sheer impertinence."

Whatever American films may be, they are at least developing a universal popular culture, and they have also developed world-wide demand for American clothing, American styles, and American goods in general. It strikes us, as we have stated before, that the American film today is pretty nearly directing the progress of the world. Could anything be more momentous?

It has always seemed to us, as the article in The Daily Mail points out, that British producers have overlooked their vast storehouse of thrilling and inspiring film stories. We have often thought of such great epics as the story of India, and of Australia.

The Daily Mail article says, after reviewing the commercial side of the subject: "Patriotic considerations are, however, much more important, since the people, without adequate expression of their national ideals on the screen, are without the most powerful sociological influence on the present day." The writer refers to such films as "Zeebrugge" and "Livingstone." "In these pictures there is something of the greatness of our country which makes them magnificently inspiring entertainment. There are hundreds of other subjects equally inspiring. It is, for example, an amazing circumstance that our film trade has not yet discovered the rousing China clipper histories by Basil Lubbock."

* * * * *

ENTHUSIASTIC testimonials reach us on Harold Lloyd's last picture, to be called, we believe, "Rah, Rah, Rah!" Lloyd himself called at the office the other week and, with his usual conservatism, said that he is pleased with it and that it is as good as "Grandma's Boy."

We look forward, we confess, to these annual visits of Harold Lloyd. It is refreshing to find one of the greatest of picture stars traveling along modestly, sincerely, and with his feet solidly on the ground. Now he is planning his next picture, which will be the first for Paramount. He recently signed Sam Taylor as his sole director, and Taylor is supervising the Lloyd staff of gag and scenario men in preparation of the story.

* * * * *

ANOTHER interesting caller was Adolph Menjou, the "actor of the lifted eyebrow," who can, with George Arliss, tell a complete story by the eloquence of his pantomime. John Barrymore, we note, pays remarkable tribute to Menjou in a recent interview in The New York Evening Post. Prefacing his statement with "Already there are actors who seem to know everything about the screen," he says, "Adolph Menjou is the greatest. He is uncannily right. I believe it; why not say it? Others are Emil Jannings and Chaplin."

* * * * *

"THE Lost World" is a sensation in Chicago. Opened at the Roosevelt a week ago and very quickly was compelled to go to continuous performances beginning at 9.15 a. m. to accommodate the crowds.

* * * * *

HARRY NOLAN of Denver is going into the circuiting business, lining up the important houses in the Rocky Mountain division, and has strong backing which he cannot divulge as yet via the printed word.

Mr. Hays at West Baden

THAT was an interesting and significant speech made by Will H. Hays to the members of the Inland Press Association at West Baden this week. It covered a number of vital topics—vital to the public as well as the industry.

One of the points discussed by Mr. Hays related to the possible domination of the industry by a "limited group". This situation, he declared, could not come about, because the market is always open to to the really good picture, to which proper distribution and exhibition would always be given because of the picture's very quality.

In view of the present situation within the industry, this pronouncement by Mr. Hays will be given wide attention.

Another problem stressed by Mr. Hays was the removal of unfair non-theatrical competition. He again declared that entertainment pictures belong in the theatres; they should not be shown in schools or churches. The Hays organization is working steadily along the line of segregating pictures, to the end that only strictly religious films shall be shown in churches and pedagogic pictures in schools.

This is an important matter. There have been many exhibitor complaints of unfair non-theatrical competition, and it is gratifying to see that the situation is by way of being remedied.

On Happy Endings

A RECENT editorial in The Christian Science Monitor, under the heading "Motion Pictures and Their Happy Endings," contains a novel and gratifying tribute to the screen.

"Glancing down the long alleys of the past, the particular form the fine arts have assumed in each epoch and in each country appears but the particular consciousness of that time and place made specially manifest," says the editorial.

"And so today, in the motion picture with its happy endings, is it not again the direct will of a nation, of an epoch, even, made apparent, and in an art form best adapted to its needs? Is not the motion picture, in its ubiquitousness, its intolerance of despair and profitless gloom, its universal scope and constant unfoldment, a right reflection of the swiftly mounting democracy and vitality of the New World? There is no doubt that art designed for moneyed minorities would indulge itself in all the idiosyncrasies inimical to such patronage; nor is there any less reason to suppose that the motion picture in its special relation to majority consumption should give off anything other than the healthy, homely optimism that underlies American thought and desire of today. Existing primarily in two of the main elements of twentieth century cosmography, the screen is naturally antagonistic to other day dalliance in inertia, morbidity, and satisfaction with defeat. Victory, right action, and high courage are the keynotes of this youngest of the arts pilgrimaging in our midst, no matter what particular sloughs of despond may be along the way. There is a high destiny for the motion picture in spreading its optimistic, happy-ending outlook over a war-worn world. It is a radiance belonging specially to the screen and to the people of America."

A School for Exhibitors

SOME time ago S. R. Kent started a school for salesmen. Then, Famous Players recently announced the establishment of a school for developing new screen talent. Now, Harold B. Franklin, of the Paramount Theatre Department, announces that a school for training theatre managers will be started.

This is an interesting experiment. Showmanship in this industry is highly developed in spots, but the maximum amount of efficiency in this respect has by no means been reached.

The manager of a picture theatre is a complex job, requiring specialized knowledge. Given real aptitude on the part of the individual, practical methods can be taught, and showmen trained for the difficult job of running a theatre.

A progressive step—and one which the industry will watch with interest.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

James V. Bryson, managing director of European Motion Pictures, Ltd., in London, with the captain of the Leviathan on his trip to America, for "Phantom of the Opera" (Universal).

Dorothy Phillips has returned to the screen, which will be good news to her following, and will be seen in "Without Mercy" (Producers Dist. Corp.).

Mrs. Jack London, wife of the late author of "White Fang" (F. B. O.) snapped with Strongheart, who plays the title role in the film version of the story.

THE FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH

TOM MEIGHAN has re-discovered the celebrated Fountain of Youth. We all discovered it once while studying American History in school—and the vision of old Ponce de Leon trying to regain his youth while drinking and bathing in its waters stirred all of our sentiment and sympathy.

It was while the Paramount star was on location in Ocala, Florida, that he came across a famous watering place called Silver Springs. The water is as clear as crystal.

Meighan made several pilgrimages to the place and learned from a guide that it was old Poncy's w. k. Fountain of Youth. The guide, a talkative chap, said "It is a well known fact that these waters possess the remarkable properties sought by the famous Spanish explorer. Thousands of people come here and regain their youth." Tom pondered this fact for several minutes.

"Well," he said, "after I finish this picture I suppose I'll find myself playing opposite Baby Peggy."

RINGING "HELL'S BELLS"

HERMAN Gantvoort, well known in the motion picture trade as Bill Holland, is ringing down the curtain on his theatrical production, "Hell's Bells." This comedy of two lovable old rogues who come East to bunco, and remain to spread happiness will close this Saturday night after five successful months on Broadway at the George M. Cohan theatre. The producer, always a generous fellow, wants to give his actors a vacation before the play reopens in Chicago next season.

Gantvoort was formerly connected with several motion picture publications, and also promoted the "Teleview." When he started his career as a theatrical producer he checked out his assumed monicker, Holland, and resumed his own name.

In addition to re-opening the New York company in Chicago for a run, Gantvoort plans to send out four other "Hell's Bells," companies on the road next season. Although several offers have been made he has not—at this writing—disposed of the picture rights.

The Iron Horse of Canada—the "Countess of Dufferin," first locomotive to make the trip across the Dominion, which takes the place of "Jupiter" in the Canadian version of "The Iron Horse" (Fox), opening there soon.

Wanda Wiley, Century Comedy star, leaves Hollywood for Kerrville, Texas, on her first visit to the old home town in two years, as Julius Stern sees her off.

And this, as you may see by the hat, is a brother of Buster Keaton, Harry "Jingles" Keaton, who has begun at the bottom of the ladder at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Edgar B. Hatrick, general manager of International Newsreel, snapped as he was sailing for Europe where he will remain for six weeks on business.

LINE FORMS TO THE RIGHT

IN anticipation of the opening of the new Paramount theatre on Broadway sometime in September 1926, the Paramount officials have already received application for a pair of duckets. Robert D. Cogan, a real dyed-in-the-wool fan, made the application. He does not intend to stand in line for a year or even for a night. None of that World Series "stand-up-all-night stuff" for him. He has been advised that he will have seats on the night that the Paramount theatre is given its official opening. The work of breaking ground for the theatre and the twenty-nine story office building is scheduled to begin next week.

Another player is added to the First National ranks, as Joyce Compton signs a five-year contract with that firm. Those in the photo are June Mathis, Miss Compton, Dave Thompson, production executive, and A. L. Rockett, acting West Coast representative.

ANOTHER FOR DENNY

THERE is no doubt about Reginald Denny being one of the fortunate stars of the screen. Universal has given him one sparkling story after another. The popularity stakes which he earned with "Oh Doctor," are carried on with "I"ll Show You The Town." It is a scintillating number—one right up to the minute in its frolicsome tid-bits of humor. There is a dash—a sparkle about it—once it proceeds to weave its net of intrigue around a group of pleasure-seekers. There is also an honesty in its humor—as none of its situations are forced for the sake of capitalizing farce and hokum. Indeed, it is strong enough in its own idea and the execution of it to travel on its own momentum.

It releases much fun—which starts with a smile and explodes in a crescendo of laughs as the merry-makers are gathered together in a restaurant. Here is Denny as a nimble professor trying to be obliging to the ladies. He takes one to the supper club only to discover that the others are parked there. So he jumps from table to table—having the soup with one, the entree with another and the wine with the third. When he dances he places his card on the table. In other words he is caught in his own trap. This situation is but one of many in this bright comedy—which is sound of humor—sound in characterization—and which unravels its plot with a fine spirit of spontaneity.

Mr. Denny can certainly glorify the dashing youth of the day. His expressions have a world of meaning—and he takes his hurdles so easily that it all seems like so much fun—fun in which the spectator gladly enters. You seem to be watching a light fiction story here. You seem to be a part of the action. Such a quality is hard to capture in mirthful pieces. But Denny has a grace and charm in his easy abandon—and his stories run so true. Which accounts for the illusion of being a part of them.

Not a scene is out of key. The characters are well contrasted—and exceptionally well played. The scenes are firmly knit with each one dependent upon its forerunner. This makes for spontaneity. So it dashes along—telling a story of an obliging youth who jumps from the frying pan into the fire in his effort to avoid scandal. We predict big things for Denny. He has set a pace for himself. We believe he can keep it.

GLAD TIDINGS

MR. and Mrs. J. Irving Greene are registering gladness over the arrival of a baby daughter, May 18th. The young lady who tipped the scales at seven pounds, has been given the attractive monicker of Nancy. The father, who is the advertising exploitation and publicity chief for "Chronicles of America," is now commuting to Tarrytown on the 5-15 train. None of New York's attractions can keep him in town a minute longer when he can find so much happiness in the bosom of his family. Both mother and daughter are doing fine. Felicitations.

AUTHOR LOOKS IT OVER

ELIZABETH COOPER, the author of "Drusilla with a Million" which opened at the Capitol theatre, New York, last Sunday, was among those present to look over her brain child. She came to Gotham from Miami where, with her husband, Clayton S. Cooper, editor of the Miami Tribune, she has been making her home for the last three years, for the express purpose of attending the opening of her picture.

Among those comprising the Cooper party were Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Owen (Mrs. Owen is the daughter of William Jennings

Mrs. Cooper registered satisfaction over the screen version of her novel, and also over Mary Carr's interpretation of Drusilla.

CALIFORNIA, HERE I COME

MONTAGUE GLASS, the humorist and playwright, and creator of the celebrated partners, Potash and Perlmutter, will doubtless be given the keys to the cities in Southern California in telling the world that the climate out there is in a class by itself. The man who drew up the partnership papers for Abe and Mawruss has just returned to New York from the Riviera and he states there isn't a Chinaman's chance to stake the climate of Nice against Pasadena, Santa Monica and Hollywood.

Take his word for it—"whoever exploited the balmy, summery atmosphere of Nice was a high-pressure salesman and a press agent extraordinaire. After I was in Nice one night I bought the heaviest woolen suit and overcoat I had ever worn—a model four-ply chinchilla, with fur inlaid. And an evening on the Riviera with its penetrating chill would satisfy a full-blooded Eskimo."

Now Montague Glass is singing—"California Here I Come." He expects to depart for the Pacific Slope just as soon as he stretches his sea-legs.

A TEA DANCE FOR CORINNE

APPROXIMATELY three hundred editors, critics, columnists, actors, actresses, press representatives, theatre managers, musicians, authors, men-about-town, women-about-the-stores, responded to Richard A. Rowland's invitation to meet Corinne Griffith and participate in a tea dance in her honor at Sherry's last Friday afternoon. The doors to one of the private ball-rooms were thrown open at four o'clock and for four hours the guests exchanged greetings with the charming star, the host and his corps of assistants, danced when the fancy moved them—and enjoyed the lobster salad, the chicken salad, the cakes, the ices—and the ice tea.

Among those who shouted "Sherry's—Park Avenue!"—to their chauffeurs—and who came and saw and were conquered by the personality of the star and the host's refreshments were Edna Ferber, author of "So Big," the story in which Colleen Moore starred, and of "Classified" which will serve as Miss Griffith's next picture; Sir Henry MacGowan, Mrs. A. M. Williamson, English novelist; Peter B. Kyne, Rita Weiman, E. M. Asher, Charles R. Rogers, Alice Joyce, Nathan Burkan, Johnny Hines, Sam Katz, Irving Lesser, Spyros Skouras, Robert Kane, C. C. Burr, E. A. Eschmann, Lynde Denig, Herman Bruenner, Dorothy Parker, Gabriel Hess, Courtland Smith, W. J. Watt, Charles Belmont Davis, Walter Camp, Robert Dexter, Mark Kellogg, Karl Kitchen, Warner Richmond, Sofus Berg, First National's general manager in Scandinavia, Svein Aas, manager for Norway, Ken Hall, director of publicity for F. N. in Australia, and Sid Mercer.

JIMMY GLEASON TELLS ONE

JAMES GLEASON, the author of two of Broadway's most successful hits of the season, "Is Zat So?" and "The Fall Guy," tells a story quite in keeping with his waggish way of writing dialogue.

It seems there were two motion picture directors strolling down Hollywood Boulevard—one being more famous than the other. As they stepped along talking "shop" their attention was attracted by a huge tarantula which was strutting its stuff directly in their path.

The lesser known director, registering cruelty, was just about to crush the big bug, when his friend shouted:

"Stop! Don't do that!"

"Why not?" inquired the would-be assassin.

"It might be Lon Chaney," replied the other.

A NEW FACE

WHO is the man who has repeatedly urged new faces on the screen? This is easy. It's Sam Goldwyn.

Having urged for new faces Sam has found one. It belongs to Lois Moran, a Pittsburg girl of sixteen summers. As she is small, slim, blonde, blue-eyed and screens well, according to the tests, she will be placed as Laural in the screen version of "Stella Dallas."

The producer found her in Paris, but the word "convent" does not figure in her education (which earns a good mark for the press agent). Sam wanted a Juliet for Ronald Colman's Romeo, for he intends putting out a new film version of the Bard's immortal love tragedy. She wrote a letter which had such distinctive appeal that his heart was touched. When she had an interview with him her personality bowled him over. The screen test did the rest — and little Loie came on to New York.

Her personality continued to register, for Marc Connolly signed her for a part in his new play, "The Wisdom Tooth," on the strength of it. The play was just a Spring try-out before being fixed up for the Fall customers. Then Henry King came on from the Coast and said to Sam —"You're a wonder — you certainly can pick 'em."

So that's the story of Sam Goldwyn's newest "discovery." There's a "catch" in the contract, however. It is understood between the producer and Mrs. Moran that Lois' contract will be in force as long as the girl remains unmodernized and unsophisticated.

As we've seen the young actress from twenty to thirty paces as a flat-footed waiter walks we hold the opinion that all the worldly wisdom in the world could not change her wistful appeal. She is the fragile, Dresden china type of feminine beauty.

MARY'S DAY

IT'S about time that John D. Rockefeller, Thomas A. Edison, Calvin Coolidge and Henry Ford shared the monoply of their daily schedules with someone who is equally famous. So here goes with Mary Pickford.

7 a. m.—Arises bright and early; 7:45 a. m.—Breakfasts with Doug; 8:15 a. m.—Leaves home for studio; 8:30 a. m.—Looks over "rushes" of film taken day previous; 8:50 a. m.—On the set conferring with director; 9:30 a. m.—Attends conference at studio bungalow; 11 a. m.—Has the Pickford curls shampooed; 11:30 a. m.—Dons costume and make-up; 12 noon—Poses for pictures; 1 p. m.—Lunches with Doug and her family; 1:30 p. m. —Starts picture work for day; 2 p. m.—Continues screen work; 3 p. m.—Still busy; 4 p. m.—Day's "shooting" over; 4:10 p. m. —Refreshments; 4:30 p. m.—Receives guests and poses for more pictures; 5 p. m.—Dresses for dinner; 7 p. m.—Dinner with Doug, family and guests; 8 to 11 p. m.—Recreation and sleep.

A busy day, this. Mary demonstrates that "the life of idle ease" so generally associated with screen folks is largely a myth.

No Small Group Can Dominate Field, Says Hays

Declares Good Pictures are Bound to be Shown

West Baden, Ind., May 25.

WILL H. HAYS spoke tonight to the editors and publishers assembled here for the annual convention of the Inland Press Association.

The motion picture industry is in splendid condition, he said, with sound business methods prevailing, complete harmony in the ranks of his association, and ever-increasing artistry in the pictures themselves.

He negatived the suggestion that any limited group of companies sought to dominate the motion picture field by declaring that a really good motion picture, no matter by whom it might have been made, was bound to have proper distribution and exhibition.

Also he pointed out that the ownership of motion pictures did not rest in any small group. He explained that one producing and distributing company has 316,000 shares of stock, held by 4,288 individuals in 45 different States and 12 foreign countries; while another similar company has 184,000 shares out among 1,521 individuals in 34 different States. Still other corporations soon will have stock on the market for anyone, Mr. Hays said.

He invited the public to offer constructive advice and suggestions about the movies through the "Open Door" of his Public Relations Department.

His address, in part, follows:

"From the business standpoint, the motion picture industry has settled down and is operating along the sound, common-sense lines which govern other American industries. Reckless extravagance is no more. Waste of time and effort has been eliminated. It is no longer the 'motion picture game'; it is the motion picture business.

Producers Harmonious

"Our organization, the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was formed three years ago with nine member companies. It has grown constantly since then until today it comprises the twenty-two most important companies which produce and distribute pictures. It has had a sound, healthy growth. The companies which form our ranks are just as keenly competitive as ever in their quest for material from which to make their photoplays, for actors and actresses to perform in them, for the quality of their product, and in their efforts to sell that product when it is finished. But they are absolutely united in their efforts to carry out their declared purposes and to make the motion picture all it should be in the fabric of society.

"There is always a ready market for really good motion pictures. The very nature of the motion picture business—perhaps the most highly competitive of all businesses—puts a premium on worthy achievement. There are never too many good pictures, and producer, distributor and theatre owner all welcome thought and productions by whomsoever made that are up to the continually rising standards.

"Just as the author of a worthy novel has no difficulty in getting a publisher for that novel; just as that publisher has no difficulty in getting book dealers to sell that novel—for it means profit and prestige to all of them—so with the man or woman who has a really first rate scenario or high class motion picture. Because of severe competition, the market goes to the man with the good entertainment to sell—he does not have to go to the market.

"For reasons not only of good morals but of good business, the men who make motion pictures decided more than a year ago that the more or less prevalent type of novel and stage-play must not make any serious advances toward becoming the prevalent type of motion picture. And so the producing members of our Association set up a system of their own to that end. Here is how that system operates: When any member company is offered the screen rights to a book or play of a probably questionable nature, representatives immediately inform the offices of our Association, representing about 85% of the producing elements. If the judgment of the member company to the effect that the picturization of the subject matter is inadvisable is confirmed, a notice is sent to all the other member companies, giving the name of the objectionable book or play. Such company members thus having their attention directed to the subject in question, have the opportunity of avoiding the picturization of the novel or play. During the year just passed, this plan has resulted in more than 100 books and plays, including some of the best sellers and stage successes, being kept from the screen, not only that group of books and dramas much talked about but also a large number of others.

Unscreenable Subjects

"There is one unfailing way to have a continuing supply of vital and wholesome pictures, and that is by patronizing the good pictures already in existence and thus encouraging the making of more and more good ones.

"Through the cooperation of our members, augmented by the interest and cooperation of a large number of theatre owners, there will be in operation this summer in at least 32 'key cities' of the United States, special performances on Saturday mornings for boys and girls, admission to which will be 10 cents.

"This is the 'Saturday Morning Movie' of which you will hear. The very best sort of pictures will be available for the youngsters. Every picture will have the endorsement of our Department of Public Relations. Parents and guardians may send their children to these performances with complete confidence that what they see will be altogether wholesome and beneficial. These pictures come from the vaults of treasury films of our members, from all the great feature pictures of the past, together with innumerable comedies, travel pictures and other films which possess educational as well as entertainment value. From among 3,300 selected reels, material enough was chosen to complete 52 distinct and complete programs, a year's supply, each program consisting of 8 reels, generally divided up into a 5-reel feature, a 2-reel comedy and a 1-reel scenic or educational subject.

"Before saying anything publicly about this plan, we conducted a series of experiments to learn if it was as good in actual operation as it seemed to be in theory, with the most amazingly satisfactory results.

Church Pictures

"There is another experiment going on which may be of real good—this is the joint effort with certain forward-looking religious agencies to discover whether the motion picture may not be adapted to church use, be made effective in stimulating church attendance and in arousing greater interest in the church and in religious subjects.

"It must be remembered, however, that the pedagogic picture and only the pedagogic picture belongs in the schools. The strictly religious picture and only the strictly religious picture belongs in the church. What we call the entertainment picture does not belong, and in my opinion should not be shown, in either church or school. To show entertainment pictures—the sort we see in the motion picture theatre—either free or at a low price or at whatever price, in school or church, is to set up an altogether unfair, unjust and uneconomic competition to the theatre owner whose livelihood comes from the showing of pictures, who has a large investment in his property, his building, his music and his film rentals, and who pays extra-high taxes, insurance rates and the like from all of which the churches and schools are free. Remember he is engaged in an essential business."

Rapid Changes in the Theatre Map

Universal Takes Over Alhambra, Milwaukee, on August 1—Famous Players Active in New York State and Elsewhere

ACTIVITIES in the theatre field this week included several important developments. It was announced that Universal would take over the Alhambra, one of the leading houses in Milwaukee, on August 1, on a long term lease from the Uihlein interests. The Alhambra is a 3,000 seat theatre and is the second largest in Milwaukee.

There were other important deals in the Middle West. The Lubliner & Trinz Theatrical Enterprises, a subsidiary of Balaban & Katz, took over three theatres in Elgin, Ill.—the Rialto, Crocker and Grove.

Phil Ryan of the Capitol Theatrical Enterprises, Kansas City, made a deal with the McClure interests in Emporia, Kas., whereby Capitol will acquire the two McClure houses in Emporia. This acquisition brings the total numbers of theatres controlled by Capitol up to 24.

In Bay City, Mich., Famous Players took over five houses. It was also learned that Famous is negotiating for a fifty per cent interest in the Strand and Hamilton Theatres, Yonkers, N. Y., which will be operated as first-run theatres.

In the South, it was reported that Famous Players was negotiating with the Pryor-Leitch interests in Greensboro, N. C., to take over houses in Danville, Va., Greensboro, Durham and Fayetteville, N. C.

Montgomery Hill, Carolina supervisor for Famous Players, was in Raleigh, N. C., the past week in conference with Jack Reville of the State and Superba theatres recently acquired by Arthur Lucas, of Atlanta. His visit was interpreted to mean that Mr. Lucas in taking over control of these houses was acting for Famous Players, though this could not be officially confirmed.

Mr. Lucas has also acquired the ideal in Charlotte, N. C. and has opened his new Egyptian Theatre in Greenville, S. C.

The very few weeks that E. J. Sparks held possession of his recently acquired theatre holdings in Gainesville, Ocala, and Sanford, Florida, before turning over the entire lot to Famous Players, was interpreted in Atlanta to mean that Mr. Sparks was acquiring the towns in question for Famous, and furthermore, that he was arranging the purchase of still other Florida theatres to be sold, in turn, to Famous.

Atlanta exchanges had hardly time to get bookings set under the Sparks regime for the three towns above mentioned, it is said, before receiving notice to the effect that Famous had taken them over from Mr. Sparks. A proposition was recently made to C. E. Williamson for the purchase of his theatres at Winter Haven and negotiations proceeded to such an extent that Mr. Williamson accompanied Mr. Sparks to New York last week with a view to getting the Williamson holdings for Famous. Mr. Williamson, returned early this week, however, with the word that all negotiations had been called off.

Three new theatres were announced and one extensive remodeling task started in Kansas City last week, close upon the heels of the announced $300,000 improvement of the Warwick theatre, the construction of a $1,000,000 theatre and office building at Broadway and Valentine road and the construction of a $500,000 theatre and office building at Mill Creek boulevard and Forty-third street.

The new theatres announced were the proposed construction of a new downtown house to replace the Old Victory theatre near Twelfth street and Grand avenue, a suburban house at Indiana and Howard avenues, and a theatre at Fifth street and Elizabeth avenue, Kansas City, Kas. In the construction of the theatre to replace the Victory, the Wonderland, one of Kansas City's oldest down town second run houses, will be razed to make room for a modern building plan, included in the erection of the new house.

A 70-foot frontage was purchased last week by James M. Kopulus from Sig Harzfeld for a motion picture site at Howard and Indiana avenues, but detailed plans of the theatre have not yet been announced. The new down town building will cost about $300,000, probably being a smaller second run house. The Kansas City, Kas., theatre, to be constructed by a group of lodges and operated on a public basis, will consist of a $20,000 improvement on a building which now occupies the site. The theatre will have an ample stage and be modern in every respect. E. Keyser is the architect. The architects for the other theatres have not yet been selected.

Famous School for Theatre Managers

Course Will Be Continuous With Sessions Held at Rivoli Theatre in New York City

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, Director of Theatres, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announced this week the establishing of a training school for theatre managers. This school will open its first term August 15th, and upon the graduation of the first class, February 1, 1926, the second term will open. The courses will be continuous thereafter and will embody every phase of motion picture theatre management.

The school, the sessions of which will be held at the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, will be under the direct supervision of one of the Famous Players-Lasky Theatre Department's experts and its administration will be in charge of an Executive Council. In addition to this Executive Council, Mr. Franklin states, there will be a Board of Directors consisting of some of the most important figures in the motion picture industry.

There will be complete and thorough instruction in all practical details of theatre management, in the course of which students will learn the daily routine of the modern, up-to-date theatre and will be given definite instruction by special experts in each branch of theatre activity. In addition to classroom instruction, students will be taken into intimate contact with every phase of motion picture theatre operation and from time to time will be assigned to tasks in which they will be brought into contact with the actual details of theatre management.

Among the subjects which will serve as bases for courses in the school will be the history of the development of the motion picture theatre, the inter-relation of production, distribution and exhibition; the selection of advantageous sites, the various types of theatres, from the de luxe first run house to the neighborhood theatre; theatre architecture and equipment, house service, the relation of the theatre to the community, music, projection and lighting, presentation and prologues, exploitation, advertising and publicity; good-will building, programs and theatre accounting.

Requirements for entrance to the school will include good health, absence of deformity, and a clean-cut, pleasing personality. No applications will be received from men under eighteen or over twenty-eight years of age, and while it is preferred that applicants be college graduates, exceptions will be made for high school graduates whose other qualifications are deemed favorable. Applications for admission to the first session of the school will be received between July 1st and July 15th. On July 20th, or thereabouts, the tentatively successful candidates for admission will be notified and they will be interviewed in New York City by appointment between August 1st and August 10th.

In connection with his announcement, Mr. Franklin made the following statement:

"Although motion picture theatre management is a highly technical field requiring specially trained experts, there has hitherto been no central training point for those engaged in this important work. Through their own sheer ability there are men, at different points throughout the country, who have developed through experience and the progress of the theatre business a capability which measures up to requirements.

"The establishing of the Paramount theatre managers' training school is the first step toward preparing thoroughly trained managers to carry on the work of motion picture theatre management. This school will not only prove of benefit to the industry, but will offer an attractive vocation for young Americans and an opportunity for good financial return. Its purpose is essentially practical and it will lay a solid foundation for the future."

Readers of Farm Paper State Picture Preferences

Survey Conducted by S. R. McKelvie Publication

SAMUEL R. McKELVIE, former Governor of Nebraska and publisher of The Nebraska Farmer for many years, has recently completed a survey among his readers on their preferences as to types of motion pictures, popularity of stars and other interesting data.

The results were tabulated from ballots sent in by readers covering several different questions. The total number of replies was 351, of which 239 were from farm women, and 112 from farm men. The summary shows:

In answer to the question "What motion pictures have you seen lately that you like best?" 378 pictures were mentioned, divided into first, second and third choices. "The Covered Wagon" was first on the list by an overwhelming vote. The second question, "What pictures would you like to see?" brought mention of 360 films divided into three choices. In answer to the query "What type of picture do you prefer?" the responses showed:

Melodrama, 138; Society Drama, 115; Short Comedies, 93; News Films, 91; Farce Comedy, 81; Society Comedies, 77; Serials, 69.

"Are you tiring of the so-called jazz-age pictures?" brought these answers:

Yes, 139; No, 108.

Readers were also asked to name their favorite star. Ninety stars were mentioned, the leaders being as follows, in the order named: Tom Mix, Fred Thomson, Thomas Meighan, Colleen Moore, Norma Talmadge, Mary Pickford, Rudolph Valentino, Gloria Swanson, Lois Wilson, Hoot Gibson, Harold Lloyd, Betty Compson, Pola Negri, Jackie Coogan, Jack Hoxie, Bebe Daniels, Silver King, Baby Peggy, Lillian Gish, Buck Jones, Richard Barthelmess, Rin-Tin-Tin, Constance Talmadge, Lila Lee, Richard Talmadge, May McAvoy, Ben Lyon, and Ronald Colman.

Players in the next division of popularity were as follows: Betty Bronson, Viola Dana, Richard Dix, Johnny Walker, J. Warren Kerrigan, Shirley Mason, Douglas MacLean, Arthur Rankin, the late Wallace Reid, Strongheart, Anita Stewart, Marion Davies, Robert Ellis, Julia Raye, Maurice Flynn, Harrison Ford, Corinne Griffith, Dorothy Gish, Jack Gilbert, Agnes Ayres, Robert Agnew, Warner Baxter, Wesley Barry, Monte Blue, Harry Carey, Ricardo Cortez, Alice Calhoun, Marguerite Clark, William Desmond, Dorothy Devore, William S. Hart, Jack Holt, Wanda Hawley, Hope Hampton, Alice Joyce, Leatrice Joy, Doris Kenyon, Frank Keenan, Rod La Rocque, Cullen Landis, June Marlowe, Antonio Moreno, Jack Mulhall, Carmel Myers, Katherine McDonald, Mae Murray, Mary Miles Minter, Ramon Novarro, George O'Brien, Marie Prevost, Mary Philbin, Aileen Ray, Alma Rubens, Vera Reynolds, Irene Rich, Milton Sills, Norma Shearer, Lewis Stone, Conway Tearle and Claire Windsor.

In preference for pictures "The Covered Wagon" led by a big majority. Next in order among the leaders in this group came: "North of 36," "The Sea Hawk," "Hot Water," "When a Man's a Man," "Abraham Lincoln," "The Mine with the Iron Door," "The Thundering Herd," Tom Mix Pictures, "America," "The White Sister," "Girl Shy," "Peter Pan," "Lone Star Ranger," "Safety Last," "Call of the Canyon," "Comin' Thru," "Dr. Jack," "King of Wild Horses," Harold Lloyd Comedies, "Mask of Lopez," "North of Nevada," Mary Pickford Pictures, "The Ramblin' Kid," "So Big" and "To the Last Man."

Three hundred and sixty pictures were mentioned as those the readers of The Nebraska Farmer want to see. Those receiving over eight votes were:

"Code of the West," "The Covered Wagon," "The Thundering Herd," "North of 36," "Hot Water," "The Rag Man," "I Want My Man," "Too Many Kisses," "Peter Pan," "Thief of Bagdad," "The Great Divide," "So Big," "Ben Hur," "The Lady," "The Ten Commandments," "America," "Abraham Lincoln," "The Sea Hawk," "The Deadwood Coach," "The Air Mail," "When A Man's A Man," "The Hurricane Kid," "Lone Star Ranger," "Sundown," and "To the Last Man."

In connection with the survey, Mr. McKelvie pointed out to his readers that their preferences would be made known to the producers of pictures. On the general subject of motion pictures, he wrote in part:

"Usually, we associate the movies with comedy, drama, tragedy and adventure, but there is an educational side that is of equal importance. The news films reproduce before our very eyes views from all parts of the world that are of hourly and daily public interest. Also, the use of pictures as an aid to scientific research and understanding is of universal importance.

"There was a time not so long ago when these types of entertainment, information and education came to us only in books, upon the spoken stage and through the press. Without interfering seriously with the progress of any of these, the movies have taken their place at the head of the list. Thus, we have in every community one or more theatres where pictures alone are shown. So, also, have the movies become so important a part of community life and social welfare that our interest in them no longer is confined to our personal desires.

"This prompts us to ask, how the movies may be directed into the channels of greatest service to the community? If this is a question of public interest, it is no less a subject of prime importance to producers. They realize full well the strength of public opinion. They know better than any one else that an articulate, popular will can force any just issue. So public demand has encouraged producers greatly to improve the character and quality of pictures in art, theatrical effect and wholesome entertainment value. And the end is not yet. Indeed, the larger sphere of progress is only entered upon. Producers are alert in an effort to secure further expressions from patrons of the movies regarding the kind of pictures they prefer. This is why we ask our readers to answer the questions."

Success of Morning Shows Gratifying, Says Hays

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is enthusiastic over the success of the Saturday morning performances for children at the Eastman, Rochester. In a letter to the management, Mr. Hays says:

"I have watched with great interest the initiation of the Saturday morning movie project at your theatre in Rochester. It is very gratifying to note from your letter with the enclosures from the Rev. Clinton Wunder and Superintendent of Schools Herbert S. Weet that these special shows for children have met with such signal success. The results at other theatres since the inauguration of the service at Rochester has further demonstrated that our plan for these shows is receiving the same enthusiastic welcome that has been evidenced at Rochester."

C. G. Kingsley Funeral Held in St. Louis

Funeral services for C. G. Kingsley, special representative for Producers Distributing Corporation, were held in St. Louis May 24, under the auspices of the Masons. Interment was in Valhalla Cemetery.

Kingsley, who worked out of the New York office, was in St. Louis in connection with his duties and while riding in the automobile of C. D. Hill, manager of the local office, was stricken with an attack of apoplexy. He was taken to the Missouri Baptist Hospital where he died.

SAM RORK SIGNS LEON ERROL

To Do "Clothes Make the Pirate"

ANOTHER great stage celebrity was added to the galaxy of stars that will appear in the pictures released through Producers Distributing Corporation during the coming season, in the signing of Leon Errol, famous Ziegfeld Follies star who is now creating a furore in the musical comedy "Louis XIV" at the Cosmopolitan Theatre in New York City.

Errol affixed his signature to a contract with Rork recently to appear in a big production to be made from the current story success "Clothes Make the Pirate" by Holman Day and published by Harper.

"Clothes Make the Pirate" is a delightful farce comedy and how well it is suited to the talents of Leon Errol may be gained from the following summary taken from the book's review as published in the New York Times:—Tidd, a mild-mannered, henpecked Boston tailor in the colonial days is so fascinated by pirate stories that he makes a suit of pirate clothes for himself and one night, for the sheer pleasure of wearing the costume he dons the pirate togs and saunters off down dark streets. Near the water front he comes in contact with a band of real pirates who, mistaking him for an expected leader, carry him off to a waiting pirate ship and off on a quest for plunder.—What follows in the way of comedy may be imagined when the meek little tailor, finding himself the captain of a blood-thirsty crew, tries to bluff the thing through by using terms and actions gleaned through reading pirate yarns.

The production will be made in the east, to fit in with Mr. Errol's stage work. Alfred Green will direct, and Producers Distributing Corporation will release the picture some time during the coming season.

Warners Offer Franchise Plan

Arrangement Will Provide Exhibitors Two to Ten Year Option on Product

A FRANCHISE plan under which exhibitors will be offered an option of from two to ten years on all product of Warner Brothers is being worked out in detail by executives of that company. The Franchise policy, which was announced this week by H. M. Warner, was evolved at the recent convention of the Warner and Vitagraph organizations held in Los Angeles.

A detailed outline of the plan will be made public within a short time, it was announced. In general aspect the plan is described as an arrangement under which theatre men may secure to their theatres for a term of years the Warner product on a contract basis.

In announcing the plan H. M. Warner said: "We have decided to franchise our product to all exhibitors, whether big or small, for any period from two to ten years.

"This franchise, which is virtually an option on Warner product for successive years, gives the exhibitor the protection and security of knowing that he need no longer be forced against the wall because he lacks the product to keep his theatre open and doing business profitably.

"Regardless of what other product an exhibitor wishes to book for his house, he is safe in the knowledge that through the Warner franchise, that may extend from two to ten years, according to the term decided upon, he has the opportunity to expand and keep right on growing.

"Now that we have purchased the Vitagraph company, and thus procured our own distribution centers throughout the world, we have gone a step further. Through our new franchise policy, we now offer exhibitors renewed encouragement to remain in business profitably and, at the same time back that up with the high calibre of product we have scheduled for production and release this coming season."

Plans Drawn for Cincinnati Theatre by Cino Co.

Plans have been drawn for a large motion picture house which the Cino Theatre Company, of Cincinnati, proposes to build in the downtown section of that city. The site of the new theatre is the properties at Fifth and Vine streets, of the old Stag and Honing hotels. The estimated cost of the theatre is $1,000,000.

The Cino Theatre Company has been incorporated by Ben Heidingsfeld and I. Lisbon, owner of several downtown Cincinnati picture houses.

Bowsky, New York.

Democratic Majority in New York Commission

The New York State Motion Picture Commission has now switched in its majority from Republican to Democratic, through the naming of Mrs. Elizabeth V. Colbert, of Albany, to the Commission.

Last week, T. J. Donnelly, of New York city, a Democrat, was appointed deputy at $4,000 a year, to succeed Fred Wightman. Mrs. Sallie Minsterer, of Brooklyn, was also named as a deputy at $4,000 a year, to take the place of Mrs. Burton, of Rochester a Republican leader in Monroe county, who was named to the Commission by Governor Nathan L. Miller shortly after its organization in 1921. Mrs. Anna Connelly, of Yonkers, has also been named in place of Edna La Rose, as deputy at a salary of $3,500 a year.

New First Run House for Baltimore

Thomas D. Sorerio has promised Baltimore another first run house that will be in operation within the year. It will be one of fifteen theatres under construction in different parts of the United States being built by the Sorerio interests. The plans for the new house call for a seating capacity of 3,500, with a large stage equipped with all the latest production contrivances.

Rotchford Wins Promotion With Vitagraph

JOHN J. ROTCHFORD, who for a long time has been statistician in the contract department of Warner Brothers, has been promoted to an executive position with Vitagraph. He has been named assistant general manager and will serve as General Manager Sam E. Morris's right hand man.

M.P.T.O.A. Pushes Play Date Drive

Bureau of Trade and Commerce Active; New Schedule of Dues Announced by Treasurer

PRELIMINARY to the meeting of the new Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in New York the week of June 1, National Headquarters this week started a drive for the further mobilization of playdates begun at the Milwaukee Convention.

Louis M. Sagal, National Treasurer, also sent out appeals for the payment of dues to the organization, the scale being based on the seating capacity of theatres. It follows:

500 seats or under—annually, $26; semi-annually, $13; quarterly, $6.50.

500 to 1000—annually, $52; semi-annually, $26; quarterly, $13.

1000 to 1500—annually, $78; semi-annually, $39; quarterly, $19.50.

1500 to 2000—annually, $104; semi-annually, $52; quarterly, $26.

2000 to 2500—annually, $130; semi-annually, $65; quarterly, $32.50.

Over 2500 seats—annually, $156; semi-annually, $78; quarterly, $39.

In his letter to theatre owners, Mr. Sagal points out that "the only income we have is dues. The money the producers and distributors are contributing is for the Bureau of Trade and Commerce alone, and no part of it goes to the support of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. That is up to you."

The Bureau of Trade and Commerce is functioning actively and is sending out additional playdate pledge cards, which exhibitors are asked to sign and send to headquarters. It is stated that the Bureau will soon make public a complete list of all producers and distributors affiliated with it. The letter says in part:

"It is the purpose of this Bureau to give to these Independents—producers and distributors who are not building and operating theatres in competition with their customers, the greatest possible number of play dates.

For that purpose we drew up the enclosed pledge card for the mobilization of play dates for the Independents; and by the enthusiastic response in written pledges which we received at the Convention, we know that the independent theatre owners realize that if they are to continue in business themselves they must give a greater percentage of their play dates to the independent producers and distributors than ever before.

"We know you want to do your part in preserving the Independence of the Industry also, and would urge you to fill out the enclosed play date card and return it signed to this office at the earliest possible moment. We are enclosing a return addressed envelope for your greater convenience.

"We will not presume to attempt to tell you how to run your own business, we only urge that you carefully scan the market for the coming year and assign a far greater number of play dates to the real Independents than you have ever done before. This you can do with the full sasurance that there will be an ample supply of Quality pictures for your needs. Our survey shows that.

"There will be plenty of Independent pictures of the highest quality. You have hundreds of play dates. See to it that a proper proportion of these are given to these Quality Independent pictures. Fill out the enclosed card and let your conscience be your guide. Remember, that every play date given to a producer-distributor-exhibitor is a brick in a theatre in competition with you or a fellow exhibitor. Do not be short-sighted. Look ahead and encourage the independent producer and distributor to make better and better product by your active, personal support of play dates this year. Unless they get this assurance from you, they cannot remain in business and without the independent producer and distributor what hope has the independent theatre owner. Your interests are inseparable and by helping each other you help yourself.

"Your play dates properly filled mean life to your theatre, in that your screen is adequately supplied with product. Your play dates equitably distributed among Independents mean money to those producing and distributing forces who are doing most to keep you in business, money which will enable them to continue to do so."

Gleichman, Famous Hearing Still On

Interesting Testimony Develops at Detroit as Details of Alleged Contract Breach Are Revealed

THE suit for alleged breach of contract brought by Phil Gleichman against Famous Players was continued in the circuit court at Detroit during the week with a number of witnesses offering some interesting testimony. Gleichman is suing Famous for alleged violation of a five-year contract, which terminated after three years, when the plaintiff charges Famous made a deal with the Kunsky Theatres.

According to Gleichman the contract called for the showing of Paramount pictures at his Broadway-Strand. S. R. Kent, of Famous, denied any intention on the part of his company to abrogate the contract with Gleichman until he failed to pay his bills and also refused to consent to rental charges for the fourth year commensurate with the class of pictures he demanded for his house.

It was the contention of Kent that the five-year franchise with Gleichman was contingent upon annual booking contracts differing in rentals and other terms and dependent upon costs and other conditions. In the course of his testimony Kent said that Famous signed between 300,000 and 400,000 contracts a year. He denied the contention of Gleichman that certain theatres in Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Denver and Atlanta with seating capacities similar to that of the Broadway-Strand should be compared with the Broadway-Strand.

Regarding the Gleichman contract, Kent testified in part as follows:

"As the fourth year approached, Gleichman demanded the best pictures and refused to pay the rentals we wanted from them. We made a series of offers to him. He turned every one down. We never promised to extend him credit for rentals over the summer season of 1922, the third year of the contract. I merely told him I would withhold pressing him for payment of unpaid bills until I held a conference with other officials. He still owes us.

"As for us making different contracts with exhibitors in different towns. We admit it. We have to do it for our protection as well as protection of the exhibitor. Some towns are good show towns. Others are not so good. Some houses are larger and take in more money and higher rentals are charged, of course."

The contract entered into between Kunsky and Famous was introduced. It showed that after Kunsky took $2,500 from each week's business, Famous took $2,500 for rental of special pictures. Overhead expenses approximating $5,000 a week were then deducted by Kunsky and the remaining profits were split on a 50-50 basis between the two. Rentals for pictures not classified as specials were specified at $1,500 a week.

According to the testimony of George W. Trendle of the Kunsky interests, that company paid Famous rentals and profits totaling $300,000 between August 1st, 1922, and September 1st, 1924.

Trendle testified that between these dates the Adams theatre had paid $155,416.23 in full settlement to Famous; the Madison had paid $121,435.25, and the Capitol, which had only been open since January, 1922, had paid $92,372. This covered a playing time of 44 weeks at the Adams, 34 weeks at the Capitol and 53 weeks at the Madison.

The plaintiff requested that the gross receipts be submitted by the Kunsky interests but this was objected to on the defense that it would affect future Kunsky booking rates. Trendle also testified that Gleichman had sought to purchase either the Adams or Madison.

Trendle testified that Gleichman and Kunsky had always been good friends and that on this account Kunsky had never asked Famous for any other pictures than the Wallace Reid, Thomas Meighan and Elsie Ferguson productions, with which the Kunsky houses previously had been supplied. Hearing, however, that Famous was considering negotiations with C. H. Miles in Detroit, Kunsky asked to have any others available if Miles was to have Paramount.

George W. Weeks, of Famous, testified that the films were rented to the Kunsky interests because Famous was losing money at the Broadway-Strand.

He said that, although there was a five-year contract between the corporation and Gleichman, there never had been any question but that the producers had a right to supply pictures to the Kunsky houses.

Eschmann.

Plans For Jersey Convention

Board of Directors Meets to Arrange for the Sessions at Asbury Park

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey held their monthly meeting on Wednesday, May 27, at the New Monterey Hotel, Asbury Park, New Jersey, when plans for the New Jersey convention were discussed and committees for the convention were appointed.

The committees are as follows: Entertainment committee—Henry P. Nelson, Morris Kitinsky and Leon Rosenblatt. Committee on attendance will be headed by Sidney Samuelson as chairman, with twenty-one members still to be selected. Finance committee—William Keegan, Jacob Unger and Wm. H. Lamont. Reception committee—Fred Mertens, Peter Adams and Pierson Hume. Business committee—Harry Hecht, William Hunt and Louis Rosenthal. Registration committee—Benjamin Schindler, Eugene Steinhardt and Louis Castlebaum. Speakers committee—I. M. Hirshblond, Charles Hildinger and George Jacobs.

The above-mentioned committees will start upon an active campaign for entertainment at the coming convention which will be held at the New Monterey on June 29, 30 and 31, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

R. F. Woodhull, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, addressed the meeting and received a great ovation, this being his first appearance before the New Jersey Board since his elevation as National President.

The reduction in power rates was taken up and a letter sent out by President Joseph M. Seider to all theatre-owner members. Three engineers were engaged by the New Jersey organization on a contingent basis and if they are successful it will mean a great saving to the theatre owners as well as a rebate for overcharge since 1914.

The recent National Convention was reported and the Board approved of the report of the National Convention delegates. New Jersey members were asked to sign pledge cards allotting part of their play dates to independent productions and await further advice from the National organization whose Board of Directors meets on June 3 and 4.

The organization of New Jersey theatre owners was greatly gratified on the election of R. F. Woodhull to the National Presidency and on the election of their president, Joseph M. Seider, as a member of the National Board of Directors.

A full Board of Directors was present as well as the officers of the organization. Those present were:

President Joseph M. Seider, Vice-Presidents, Charles Hildinger and Peter Adams; Secretary, Henry P. Nelson; Treasurer, William Keegan; Board members: Sidney Samuelson, R. F. Woodhull, Benjamin Schindler, Louis Rosenthal, I. M. Hirshblond, Leo Juskowitz, Leon Rosenblatt and W. C. Hunt.

President Seider's report on the month's activities was read and approved.

$1,700 Theatre Receipts Are Taken by Yeggs

Albert J. McGinness, 25 years old, publicity manager for William Goldman's Kings theatre, St. Louis, and Miss Margaret Johnson, 21, an office employe of the theatre. were held up on the east side of Forest Park at 10.30 a. m, Monday. May 18, by four armed men and robbed of $1,700, the receipts of the theatre for Saturday and Sunday. The money was being conveyed to the bank at the time.

McGinness and Miss Johnson were on their way from the theatre, 820 North Kingshighway, to the Chouteau Trust Company, Vandeventer and Chouteau avenues. This was the third recent experience of the Kings theatre with robbers.

Famous Creates Special Music Department

Frederick Arundel has been placed in charge of a newly created department of music as a part of the Famous Players theatre organization. He will make his headquarters at the home office, but will take a swing around the circuit in order to familiarize himself with the music problems in each city.

Arundel, who has had considerable experience as a conductor and composer will arrange musical repertoires according to the size of the individual orchestra.

Syracuse Meeting To Name New State Officers

New state officers as well as new chairmen and boards of directors for the Buffalo and Albany zones will be elected at the meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, Inc., in the Hotel Onondaga, Syracuse, Tuesday, June 2 at 12 o'clock. The present boards of directors will meet Monday evening, June 1, in the same hotel at 8 o'clock.

A large delegation of exhibitors will attend from Buffalo and western New York towns, many planning to motor to the Salt City for the big pow-wow. Walter Hays, president of the state organization; J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone and Charley Hayman, state treasurer, Niagara Falls, will head the western New York delegation. Much important business will come before the meeting including the mapping out of a uniform procedure in arbitration. A committee representing the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo as well as one representing the Albany board, will attend.

Vitagraph Exchanges Take Over Warner Product

Warner Brothers product, heretofore held by franchise holders, is rapidly being taken over by the Vitagraph exchanges. On May 11th the Denver and Salt Lake City offices acquired the Warner product which had been handled by Kwality Pictures. This included all Warner releases to date.

On May 18th the San Francisco and Los Angeles branches of Vitagraph replaced A. Oppenheimer as distributors of Warner product in those fields. Morgan A. Walsh is now to be representative of Warners with headquarters at Vitagraph's San Francisco exchange. W. C. Wheeler remains as branch manager in that city.

Ground Broken for New Los Angeles Exchange Building

Ground was broken last week for the erection of a new film exchange building to be built by Gore Brothers in Los Angeles at the corner of Washington and Vermont streets. The building will be devoted exclusively to the motion picture industry, being planned as offices of the various local film exchanges and affiliated businesses. It will be completed in August of this year.

Copyright Suit is Filed Against Iowa House

RAY B. McConlogue, Iowa attorney for the Society of American Composers, Authors and Publishers has filed suit at the instigation of Sherman-Clay Company of San Francisco against the Hiland Theatre of Highland Park, Iowa, for the alleged performing of the musical composition "Sleep," without a license from the society.

The charge against the Hiland states that the theatre played "Sleep," although the stipulated royalty of the association was not paid. McConlogue stated that similar suits would be brought by him in the near future in various Iowa towns to force strict observance of the copyright laws.

Prepare "Greater Movie" Campaign

Unprecedented Commercial Endorsement Given Movement as Field Operation is Lining Up

THE National Greater Movie Season Campaign inaugurated by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., Will H. Hays, President, is almost ready for field-operation. Accessories covering pretty well everything from a balloon to a twenty-four sheet have been prepared, the territories fixed, and exploitation men are engaged to work in co-operation with exhibitor committees which will be formed in each center embraced in the August drive.

"They're Better Than Ever" is the slogan most in evidence with "Let's Go" or "Come On In" as variations according to the use for which the accessory is intended. Three designs of block posters—a twenty-four sheet, a three-sheet and a one-sheet—are available together with a special pictorial one-sheet, tack cards and banners, pennants, heralds, slides, trailers, cut-out letters, window-signs and stickers give exhibitors wide choice in outdoor advertising material; while novelties include metal badges, buttons, balloons, paper hats, fans, metal puzzles, walking-dolls, cloth flowers, snapperjacks, steel bells, etc. By arrangements with the manufacturers all accessories will be sold to exhibitors at cost. The twenty four sheet, for instance, sells for 72 cents.

The complete plan and methods of organization are detailed in a twenty-four page press sheet, wherein advertising, publicity newspaper stories, talking points for four-minute speakers, and exploitation from a practical, common-sense and profitable angle, are all covered intensively.

Endorsement of the season has reached a point where nearly all the great national organizations have pledged their support.

Calling the movement a commendable undertaking, Governor George S. Silzer of New Jersey has written to Mr. Hays offering cooperation to aid as lies within his power.

Governor A. G. Sorlie of North Dakota says, "You may be assured of my interest, and I am sure you may count upon the people of North Dakota to support this movement and to cooperate in all ways possible to bring about interest in the better quality of moving pictures. I believe the exhibitors of moving pictures in this state are almost unanimously back of such a campaign as this and will lend their best efforts to promote the work."

Governor John H. Winant of New Hampshire and Governor Franklin S. Billings of Vermont have also written Mr. Hays endorsing the campaign. Similar support is forthcoming from the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae and the Maccabees; while Frank J. Irwin, national commander of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, acknowledging the co-operation of Producers and Distributors given in the interest of disabled veterans, promises the support of his organization.

The principal exhibitors throughout America look forward to big business increases as a result of the campaign, according to letters Mr. Hays is receiving.

"Count on me 100 per cent. I hope the season will be such a success this year that you will make it an annual event," declared W. A. Steffes, member of the M. P. T. O. A. Board of Directors.

"The benefits of the first Greater Movie Season have been made so very certain to us as a result of our participation in its activity during August 1924 that we are taking advantage of this business getting opportunity this year with renewed vigor and enthusiasm." That from Sol Lesser of West Coast Theatres, Inc., California, is a striking testimony to the season's permanent value.

Samuel Carver of the Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Mo. has already started interesting the Women's City Club and the Parent Teachers Association. "I want this city to go over with a bang," he says. All through the South and New England there has been a unanimous wave of approval, while from Iowa, A. H. Blank expresses that State's "tremendous need of something as we face a new season and turn wearily away from a depression that has spread in a most devastating fashion over two years. Only a great and national campaign of the scope you have outlined can renew the public's interest, upon which the very foundation of the industry rests."

The Montana Film Board of Trade has received endorsements of the project from the principal theatres of Butte. Colonel Fred Levy of Louisville, Ky., will swing his theatres behind it, as will the Moore and Greaves Amusement Company controlling houses in Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Greeley, Colo. Twenty Skouras theatres in St. Louis will celebrate Greater Movie Season. John B. Carroll, manager of Consolidated Amusements of Tampa, Fla., assures the cooperation of his chain. The Capitol, Royal and Gem of Little Rock, Ark., are enlisted, while A. L. Block, president of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, remarks, "We are fully of the belief that the new pictures for the coming season are going to be better than any we have been privileged to see before. This in itself is of such tremendous importance that it should help materially to obtain the desired result."

John H. Kunsky of Detroit, Harry M. Crandall of Washington, George H. McDermit of Oklahoma City, Frank Dowler, Jr., of Atlanta, are other names found among the list of exhibitors who have enthusiastically accepted the idea. A perusal of these endorsements show not one State that has not its quota of theatres anxious to participate.

Tom Mix Thrills National Capital

Fox Star All But Interrupts Traffic as Great Crowds Hail Him in Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C., fell just as hard for Tom Mix and his horse Tony as all other cities have done both here and in Europe. He created a veritable sensation in the National capital wherever he appeared and on a number of occasions all but blocked traffic in the city which houses America's greatest celebrities.

Mix and Tony are said to have stirred up so much excitement that the news associations wired detailed reports to their clients all over the country. In fact, Tom shared honors with President Coolidge at a White House garden party given to 1,000 wounded veterans. The boys who fought "over there" hailed the Fox star as one of their own, as he has seen service in any number o fengagements and carries scars to prove it.

At the National Horse Show, the high water mark of Washington's social season, Tom again put everything else in the background in comparison. In a reserved box, especially decorated, with Tony regally installed in the ring, the screen star was kept busy meeting the social and political great of the world.

In the Washington papers Tom was given all sorts of publicity and every move he made was reported in detail. His visit to the White House attracted innumerable still and movie cameramen.

From Washington Tom went to Baltimore, which proceeded to emulate the actions of every other city and feted and hailed the cowboy star from morn till night.

Perhaps no city will exceed or surpass the reception accorded Mix in Buffalo, N. Y. The Lake City simply stopped everything to honor the visiting star. The papers carried banner lines and pictures eight columns wide on the star's movements. The crowds dogged his every step. It was reported by one of the papers that there were one hundred thousand visitors in town on the day Tom arrived, and it attributed this influx to curiosity regarding Tom and also Tony.

Tom went from Buffalo to Pittsburgh, where all sorts of parties were arranged in his honor. From the Smoky City he went to Washington.

Before Tom starts West again he will visit Philadelphia and Atlantic City. Then he will jump out to Cincinnati and from there he will make a bee line for Hollywood and "location," stopping off at Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha.

These cities are all prepared to receive the Western star, and, according to reports from the Fox exchanges in the territories he will visit, there is a famine in Mix prints. The demand is so great that S. O. S. calls for more have been sent to the Home Office.

For instance, in St. Louis there will be 40 Mix prints playing the day he arrives in town. The same situation will exist in Kansas City, where 23 prints will be running through the projection machines of that many theatres the day Tom arrives.

Schiller Will Go Abroad to Direct Starting of Theatre Chain for Loew

Atlanta, Ga., May 25

E. A. SCHILLER, general representative of Loew, Inc., while here last week stated that he will have the direction of the extension of American theatre methods to Europe and Africa on behalf of the Loew interests. Leopold Freidman, general counsel for Loew, accompanied Mr. Schiller on his visit here.

Mr. Schiller will sail from New York June 9 for Europe, where he will set to work opening a chain of theatres in England, France, Sweden and Egypt, in which the most modern and effective system of management will be employed.

Stating that this is the pioneer enterprise in this class of amusement started by an American firm in foreign fields, Mr. Schiller discussed the details of the movement which will broaden considerably the scope of Loew, Inc. and the Metro-Goldwyn organization.

"American pictures are rapidly forging to the front in European cities and have reached a point of popularity where we feel justified in establishing a chain of motion pcture theatres in association with the Gaumont enterprises in Europe and Egypt which will be operated under the most modern and most efficient ideas of management."

Canada Protests Copyrights

Strong Plea Against Music Royalties Not Copyrighted in the Dominion

A STRONG protest against the amendments to the Canadian Copyright Act which are designed to permit the levying of royalties on all copyrighted music in moving picture theatres of Canada by the authors or composers holding the copyrights, has been presented to W. E. Raymond, M. P., chairman of the Copyright Committee of the Canadian House of Commons, Ottawa, by Col. John A. Cooper, Toronto, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, which is affiliated with the Hays association in New York.

In making the protest, Col. Cooper declares investigations show that the move made against Canadian exhibitors for the collection of the royalty fees has come from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. He points out that, so far as can be noted, no demand has been made upon Canadian exhibitors by European holders of copyrights.

Col. Cooper declares that a new principle is being introduced into economic life in that holders of copyrights or patents are to be permitted to collect more than once from the use of a copyrighted or patented article. There are no court decisions which uphold this principle, he states. The series of civil damages and fines introduced in the bill for unauthorized use of copyrighted music are unfair, Col. Cooper states, and there is no precedent for the penalties.

The difficulty of ascertaining the owner of certain copyrights is also evident, he declares. Theatre owners might make arrangements with the American association, paying a lump sum covering the compositions of all its members only to find perhaps a hundred different authors whose compositions were not held by persons represented by the American or any other association. Without registration of copyrights in Canada, there is no knowledge of ownership.

Col. Cooper complains that no notice had been given the theatre owners of Canada by Parliamentary representatives of this proposed legislation and no representatives of theatres had been invited or given the privilege of appearing before the Copyright Committee at Ottawa. If the exhibitors are to be called upon to pay large sums of money annually to foreign holders of copyrights, it is only fair that they should have ample warning, concluded Col. Cooper.

Film Ownership Verdict for Companies

The ownership of films, contracts and advertising matter was the subject of discussion in the Second Divisional Court at Toronto. The appeal was taken by Film Booking Offices and R. C. Pictures Corporation of New York, from the order of Justice Fisher in bankruptcy setting aside an agreement with the United Exhibitors, which named the U. S. firms as the owners of the property.

The United Exhibitors were the selling agents of the corporations in Canada, and when the United Exhibitors, went into liquidation the trustee claimed the films on hand on behalf of the creditors.

The Appeal Court varied the order of Justice Fisher to the effect that the contracts are the property of the corporations, and ordered a list of these to be submitted to the court.

Joseph Mogler Again Heads St. Louis League

Joseph Mogler, owner of the Mogler, Excello and Bremen Theatres of North St. Louis, was re-elected president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of St. Louis for the twelfth time, at the annual election of officers held May 19th.

The other officers elected were: Fred Wehrenberg, vice-president; Louis Hehl, recording secretary; W. C. Reeves, financial secretary; Oscar Lehr, treasurer, and Chester Kaiman, sergeant-at-arms.

Farley Adds Another House to Farash Chain

William Farley, head of Farash Theatrical Enterprise, has purchased the Community Theatre, in Catskill, N. Y. The company's other interests include seven theatres in Yonkers and three in Schenectady.

Skouras Brothers Show a Healthy Profit

The net income of Skouras Brothers Enterprise, Inc., of St. Louis, for the first quarter of 1925, ended March 31, before deducting Federal income taxes, but after deducting interest and depreciation and expenses, was $58,979.17.

The Board of Directors at their meeting May 16, declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share of the 25,000 shares of Class A no par value stock. It is payable August 1 to stockholders of record July 25. This dividend will total $18,750.

The board approved the contract with the Boaz-Kiel Construction Company for the general work on the New Ambassador theatre and office building which will cost $5,500,000.

Gerson to Make 24 Features Next Year

Gerson Pictures will produce twenty-four features during the coming year, it has been announced by B. Berger, general manager of the company, who states there will be a series of ten starring Richard Holt, six Superior All-Star Melodramas, and a series of eight action outdoor stories.

The schedule will add two producing units to the company's production forces. Gerson last year had only one production company. The company official states that an extensive exploitation campaign will be carried on the support of these productions, all of which are to be released in the independent market.

Graf Charges False Arrest; Asks $50,000 Damages

Directors of the Graf Productions, Inc., were named defendants in a suit for $50,000 for false arrest in San Francisco filed in Superior Court by Max Graf, motion picture director. Graf alleges that the directors caused his arrest on July 28, 1924, on a charge of embezzlement of company funds and then on May 12th last, requested that the complaint be dismissed. He alleges that his reputation was damaged to the sum requested. Charges of embezzlement were dismissed by Police Judge Jacks.

Buckley Named Director of United Artists

AT a special meeting of the board of directors of United Artists Corporation held last Monday Harry D. Buckley, for the past two years acting general manager of the Douglas Fairbanks Corporation, was elected a member of the board of United Artists to succeed Maurice G. Cleary, who recently resigned.

In addition to the place he will occupy on the board, Buckley will act as personal business representative for Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. His headquarters will be at the home office of United Artists in New York, but he will divide his time between there and the west coast.

At present Buckley is launching the New York showing of "Don Q, Son of Zorro," which opens at the Globe Theatre on June 15th for an eight weeks engagement.

Mayer Announces Production Plans

Metro-Goldwyn Will Distribute Fifty-Two Pictures, One Each Week, Starting on August 16th

METRO-GOLDWYN will distribute a picture a week or fifty-two for the year, starting August 16th, according to announcement by Louis B. Mayer on his arrival on the coast from the New York conferences of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials. The production schedule has already been launched and will be increased in the immediate future.

Four players recently promoted to stardom will be seen in many of these pictures. They are Norma Shearer, John Gilbert, Ramon Novarro and Lon Chaney. Those already established as stars are Lillian Gish, Buster Keaton, Marion Davies, Mae Murray and Jackie Coogan. Among the featured players will be Eleanor Boardman, Aileen Pringle, Pauline Starke, Mae Busch, Lew Cody, Carmel Myers, Claire Windsor, Conway Tearle, Renee Adoree, George K. Arthur, Paulette Duval, Harriet Hammond, Conrad Nagel, Sally O'Neill, Gertrude Olmstead, Za Su Pitts and Bert Roach.

The directors who will contribute to the program are Monta Bell, Tod Browning, Marcel de Sano, Alf Goulding, Edmund Goulding, Rupert Hughes, Hobart Henley, Rex Ingram, Robert Leonard, Fred Niblo, Al Raboch, Victor Seastrom, Mauritz Stiller, King Vidor, Josef von Sternberg, Marshall Neilan and William Wellman.

In discussing the production plans Mayer said:

"Nationwide interest as to the initial screen vehicle for Lillian Gish under the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer banner has been evidenced. I take particular pleasure in announcing the fact that we have found Miss Gish's own suggestion the best. Her first starring vehicle for us will be an elaborate picturization of the famous classic 'La Boheme.' I am sure everyone will immediately realize what a great subject this offers Miss Gish. For 1925-26 she will star in two Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions. 'La Boheme,' to be started immediately, will mark Miss Gish's first screen work in California in five years.

"In Washington recently we closed a contract with the Government to produce at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., an original story by Carey Wilson with Ramon Novarro, temporarily known as 'Midshipmen Sterling.' This will mark the first instance in which the Bureau of Navigation has utilized a popular form of universal entertainment to bring to the public attention the life, benefits of and important work performed in the Naval Academy. Christy Cabanne and his players have already started work on this production following the approval of the scenario by Admiral Shoemaker.

"Among the stories I have just purchased in New York are 'The Backslapper,' the popular play by Paul Dickey and Mann Page, now running on Broadway; 'When We Were Twenty-One,' the stage success by Henry V. Esmond; 'White Pants Willie,' the well known story by Elmer Davis and several other noted stage and literary successes details which will be ready for announcement shortly.

"Marion Davies' initial vehicle for us will be 'Lights of Old New York,' an adaptation of 'Merry Wives of Gotham.' This picturization will be started at the Culver City plant within the next few days and will mark Miss Davies' initial work at our studio.

"Rex Ingram's 'Mare Nostrum' with Alice Terry and Tony Moreno, by Vincente Blasco Ibanez, author of 'The Four Horsemen' is now being finished in Paris and will receive its public presentation in December.

"'Ben Hur' will be presented on an elaborate scale in the leading cities throughout the country in the fall. Arrangements for these presentations are now underway. The production will be handled as a gigantic theatrical production and will be shown for a year or more in the theatres in which the picturization will have its territoral premieres.

"Other unusual productions which will be seen during the coming months include 'The Merry Widow,' to be released in September; 'The Big Parade,' by Lawrence Stallings with John Gilbert as an added attraction, in October; 'The Tower of Lies,' with Norma Shearer and Lon Chaney, in November, and 'Paris,' with Pauline Starke and Lew Cody, disclosing Erte's fashion creations.

"During the coming season Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will increase its activities in the establishing of new stars. During the past year we have developed a number of players into internationally popular stars. The success of this policy has encouraged us to increase our efforts in this connection during 1925-26."

Warners Take Over Six Theatres in Carolina; Four Are Craver Houses

INFORMATION reached Motion Picture News this week from an authoritive quarter that Warner Brothers have acquired five houses in the South and have taken over the management of another.

The theatres acquired are one in Concord and one in Lexington, N. C., from the estate of the late Col. H. B. Varner and three theatres from R. D. Craver, First National franchise holder in Carolina.

The Craver houses are the Broadway and Strand in Charlotte, N. C., and a theatre in Columbia, S. C. The Warners will also operate the Craver house in Winston-Salem, N. C.

It was reported in the South that Warner Brothers were negotiating for the First National franchise in six Southern states. At the Warner offices in New York, it was said that this report would neither be denied nor confirmed.

In connection with the acquisition of the Carolina theatres, it was pointed out that the Warner policy of non-competition with independent exhibitors was being followed, inasmuch as Paramount would be the only exhibitor competitor in the towns mentioned.

Hold New York Sales Meeting

First of Three Conferences for Producers Distributing Corp. Sales Forces Completed

THE eastern branch managers and bookers of Producers Distributing Corporation met this week in a two-day conference held at the Hotel Commodore in New York. The convention was the first of three like sessions which are to be conducted under the direction of F. C. Munroe, president, and John C. Flinn, vice-president and general manager of Producers Distributing Corporation.

In an opening address in which he announced that a new corporation was being formed to handle foreign distribution and summarized the program of production arranged for next season, Mr. Flinn announced that William J. Morgan, for eight years associated with First National in charge of sales, had been appointed to the post of sales manager of Producers Distributing Corporation. Mr. Morgan will join the organization as soon as he can conveniently withdraw from First National, Mr. Flinn said.

The convention heard the full plans outlined for the budget system devised by H. O. Duke as a guide in the allotment of quotas. By means of this system the complete charges against each picture, including production cost, prints, exploitation charges, etc., are charted and the costs allotted on a prorata basis to each exchange.

Mr. Munroe told the convention that the organization has the material and is dedicated to the policy of taking a position of leadership in the industry. "With the enthusiasm of our sales force and the confidence of the exhibitors, backed by the quality product pledged by the reputable producers now affiliated with us, there is nothing that can stop us from taking the highest place under the sun," he said.

The second conference will be held at the Congress Hotel in Chicago on May 28th and 29th, and this will be followed by the west coast convention held in San Francisco on June 3rd and 4th.

British Industry in Good Shape

James V. Bryson, Universal Chief in England, Reports Thriving Condition

CONDITIONS in the British film industry were never better, both for exhibitors and for American pictures, according to James V. Bryson, managing director of European Motion Pictures, Ltd., the London office of Universal Pictures corporation, who is here on a brief trip to the home office.

Despite heavy taxes and many difficult conditions, there are more than three thousand motion picture theatres in healthy, active operation in the British Isles, according to Bryson, who is highly optimistic over the present and future of American films in that country.

"The competition today is almost entirely among the various American companies," he states. "British production is at low ebb, and the only serious attempt at competition in that market is from Germany, who is making a strong effort to break in through bringing English capital into production in Germany, and through importing British actors, directors and producers to her studios.

"Despite all the statements to the contrary, American pictures are popular with the British public and exhibitors know they will make money with them. Rentals compare very favorably with those obtained in America."

Another point stressed by Bryson is the progressiveness of the British exhibitor, who is giving his colleagues a close race for high standards of operation.

"It is a great mistake," he says, "to suppose that the British exhibitor is far behind the times in presentation, exploitation and the other branches of showmanship. He is conservative, yes, but never backward. Good orchestras are the rule, and our cue sheets are prepared by Jim Hastings, Charles Cochrane's right hand man and one of the best arrangers anywhere."

Frank S. Ditchen is acting managing director in Mr. Bryson's absence.

Universal Augments Casts for New Pictures

Universal has augmented a number of casts of pictures now in production or about to be started. Charles Newton has been added to the cast of "Out of the Flood," in which Art Acord is being starred and which Travis Vale is directing at Universal City.

Jack Pratt is a recent addition to "The Two-Fisted Fighter" cast, which William Crinley is directing, with Edmund Cobb in the starring role. Edgar Kennedy has been signed to play in "My Old Dutch," with May McAvoy and Pat O'Malley in the leading roles. Larry Trimble is directing.

W. H. Bainbridge and George Pearce are recent additions to the cast of "Perils of the Primitive," Universal's screen version of "The Swiss Family Robinson," starring Joe Bonomo and directed by Francis Ford.

Shepherd Will Instruct Rod La Rocque

Bert Shepherd, expert with a boomerang and a bull-whip has been signed by Cecil B. De Mille to instruct Rod La Rocque in the proper use of these implements. In the De Mille production of "The Coming of Amos," La Rocque, who is starred, has the role of an Australian rancher, supposed to be adept at the handling of the boomerang and the bull-whip. Shepherd has been giving vaudeville exhibitions with these "toys" for some time.

Production on "The Coming of Amos" starts within a few days at the De Mille studio under the direction of Paul Sloane.

Lee Moran Returns to Play Role in Universal Film

Lee Moran after an absence of two years from Universal City, where for fourteen years he was one of the chief comedy stars, has returned to the Universal fold to enact a prominent role in support of Reginald Denny in "Where Was I?"

The picture is being directed by William A. Seiter from an adaptation of Edgar Franklin's story of the same title. Besides Moran the supporting cast includes Chester Conklin, Marion Nixon, Pauline Garon, Tryon Power, Otis Harlan, William H. Turner, Arthur Lake and James Corrigan.

Warners Acquire Rights to Stage Successes

WARNER BROTHERS this week announced that three stage successes and a popular novel would be put into production at the studios in Hollywood. Screen rights have been acquired to "The Sap," the Raymond Hitchcock stage vehicle; "The Honeymoon Express," in which Gaby Deslys starred on the American stage; "Wanted by the Police," a popular hit in the theatre when it was produced some years ago; and "Ranger of the Big Pines," a popular novel. The two latter works will be made by Warners but will be released under the Vitagraph banner.

Kenneth Harlan will be featured in "Wanted by the Police," and Huntly Gordon is to have the leading role in "Ranger of the Big Pines."

George Rigas Signs Long Paramount Contract

As a result of his portrayal of an important role in "The Wanderer," George Rigas has been signed to a long-term contract by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Rigas, who was born in Greece and educated at the University of Athens, has been in pictures little over a year, but had eleven years' stage experience in Europe and America before going into pictures.

De Mille Signs Two for Studio Organization

The De Mille studio has signed William House to head the men's wardrobe department and Walter Reed as location manager. House for three years was head of the Shubert costume department in New York, and Reed handled the location problems of some of the largest Paramount productions.

Talented Child Star for "East Lynne"

Fox has assigned Richard Headrick, talented child star, to the role of Little Willie in the Fox photoplay version of "East Lynne," an adaptation from the successful stage play by Mrs. Henry Wood.

Two Universal Players Are Injured Making Scenes

Jose Sedgwick and Joe Bonomo, Universal players, are nursing injuries sustained in mishaps during the filming of scenes for the pictures in which they are now appearing at Universal City. Miss Sedgwick is suffering from a dislocated knee, the result of an accident in which a heavy table fell against her when she was struggling in a realistic battle with "Slim" Cole in making a scene for "The Mocassin Flower," a western feature in which she is starring.

Bonomo, who is a champion strong man and serial star, was severely bruised and lacerated when a landslide from which he was supposed to escape, prematurely crashed down upon him. Bonomo was buried beneath a pile of rocks and dirt. He was enacting an episode which will be included in "The Swiss Family Robinson," a forthcoming serial.

Fox Launches "Lazybones" With Buck Jones

The Owen Davis stage success of last season, "Lazybones," with Buck Jones in the title role and Frank Borzage directing, has been put into production by Fox Film Corporation from the scenario by Frances Marion.

"Three in Exile" is the title of this Truart Film Corp. production, from which these, highlight scenes were taken.

Hoffman Outlines Big Program

Head of Tiffany and Truart Completes Details of Extensive Production Plans

M. H. HOFFMAN, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, Inc., and Truart Film Corporation, has announced the completed plans for the production schedules which have been inaugurated by those two companies. The program of features constitutes one of the most extensive of any of the organizations planning releases for state rights distribution.

Under the arrangement Tiffany will offer twelve features, under the brand name of "The Big Twelve," and under Truart banner there will be fourteen productions for the season of 1925-26.

The Tiffany group will comprise the following screen adaptations from the works of writers of established reputation: "Lightning," a Zane Grey adventure romance of the type which has made this author's writings so popular; "Souls for Sables," based on "Garland & Co.," a David Graham Phillips novel; "The Sporting Chance," a drama of racing life written by Jack Boyle and recently completed under the direction of Oscar Apfel with Lou Tellegen, Dorothy Phillips, Theodore Von Eltz, Sheldon Lewis, George Fawcett and Andrew Clark in the principal roles; "Morals For Men," by Gouverneur Morris; "The Lodge in the Wilderness," by Sir Gilbert Parker; "Morganson's Finish," by Jack London; "The Travis Coup," by Arthur Stringer; "Tale of a Vanishing People," by Rex Beach; "The Wrong Coat," by Harold McGrath; "The Dumb Head," by Rupert Hughes; "The Life of a Woman," by De Maupassant; and one other to be announced soon.

In the group of fourteen Truart pictures there will be six Blue Ribbon features, including "Marrying Money," "Dollar Down," "Salvage," "Age of Indiscretion," "The Hurricane" and "Where the Worst Begins"; the Four Novelty Series composed of "Three in Exile," which has been completed with Louise Lorraine, Rex the wonder dog, and Black Beauty, a trained horse, featured, "Pals," "The Silent Witness" and "The Wild Girl"; and the Cinemelodrama series of four features to be made on an elaborate scale and based on plots of the widely popular action-melodrama type.

Work is soon to be started on the Cinemelodrama series, all of which will be produced on the west coast.

The Tiffany and Truart pictures have been acquired by Renown Pictures, Inc., for distribution in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey, and have completed details for the extensive advertising campaign which the company plans to launch in connection with these productions.

In making public the details of the 1925-26 production plans of Tiffany and Truart, M. H. Hoffman declared that the advance preparations give assurance that the promise made by the independent producers at the recent convention held at Milwaukee that the product to be offered the exhibitor will in every way compare in quality and casts with those of the national producers and distributors would be affirmed by the completed works which these two organizations would issue from time to time during the coming year.

Exchanges Sign New Product

Independent Distributors Report Continued Demand for Next Season's Films

INDEPENDENT distributors continue to make rapid strides toward the closing of all territories for the new product which they have announced for next season. The week's reports of sales concluded is marked for the rather unusual number of deals in which the entire product of certain companies has been signed up on a 100% basis by state right exchanges located in various parts of the country. The usual number of deals involving individual pictures figures in the report, while the foreign sales include the booking in South African territory of the entire series of Douglas MacLean's Associated Exhibitors comedies, the first American bookings to be obtained, since prohibitive conditions have kept these films out of South Africa for over two years.

Several important transactions were brought to a close in Milwaukee, during the recent convention. Prominent among these was the deal between Capital Film Exchange of New York, for the entire line-up of twelve Gotham Productions offered by Lumas. The deal was closed by Messrs. Gluckman and Raden and Sam Sax, head of Lumas. The Gotham twelve were also signed by Celebrated Players, Milwaukee, for the state of Wisconsin, and also Gene Marcus for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey; and Trio Productions, Washington, D. C., for Delaware and Maryland.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, announces that Samuel V. Grand, of Grand-Arrow Films, Inc., Boston, has acquired the Arrow franchise for the New England states. This covers the 24 Arrow specials announced for next season.

Chadwick Pictures Corporation announces that the F. & R. Film Company has acquired distribution rights to "The Wizard of Oz" the first of 1925-26 series to be completed. F. & R. will distribute in North and South Dakota and Minnesota.

W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart, who this week returned from a trip through the central western territory, announced the closing of a franchise for the New York City territory for the new Reed Howes series, the Billy Sullivan Series and six Superior melodramas, a total of 26 pictures, with Merit Film Corporation. Rayart has also concluded deals with Rex Film Company of Detroit for the Reed Howes and Billy Sullivan pictures for the Michigan territory.

Ludwig Film Company of Milwaukee secured "Easy Money" and "For Another Woman" for the state of Wisconsin, while S. & S. Film and Supply Company of Pittsburg secured the Billy Sullivan series and "Secret Service Sanders" for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia; Nat Magner secured the new Rayart serial "Secret Service Sanders" for California, Arizona and Nevada, and Eltraban Film Company of Atlanta secured the same series for the six Southeastern states, also purchasing the Rayart Butterfly Comedies for the same territory. Independent Film Service Company of Dallas, secured the Rayart serial "Secret Service Sanders" and the Butterfly Comedies for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

First Graphic Pictures of Buffalo secured "Winning A Woman" a Rayart release for the upper New York territory and Big Feature Rrights Corporation of Louisville, secured the second series of eight Reed Howes pictures for the State of Kentucky.

Barrie to Name Player for New Picture

Sir James M. Barrie will select the player for the leading role in "A Kiss For Cinderella," Paramount's Christmas picture for this year, as he did for "Peter Pan," the Christmas picture of last year, in which he chose Betty Bronson. Herbert Brenon, who will again direct the coming picture, sailed last week for London with a number of screen tests from which Sir Barrie will make his selection.

Semon is Credited With Dangerous Stunts

Larry Semon in credited with a pair of dangerous stunts in connection with his latest comedy for Educational release, "The Cloudhopper." He is first said to have negotiated a leap from a speeding automobile to a flying plane, and later to have climbed down a rope ladder suspended from the undercarriage of one plane and dropped to the top wing of another while in midair.

Seattle Leads in First National Contest

The Seattle branch was first, with Oklahoma City second and Charlotte, N. C., third, at the end of the fifth week of First National's Summer play date contest. These teams have maintained these positions for the past three weeks. The contest is to obtain play dates for the months of June, July and August.

Neilan Signs Owen Moore for "Sky Rocket"

Owen Moore has been signed by Marshall Neilan to appear opposite Peggy Joyce in "Sky Rocket" the first of the Neilan-P. A. Powers productions for release through Celebrity Pictures, Inc. Miss Joyce left New York for the coast this week and will start work in the production immediately upon her arrival.

Ann Pennington is Added to "Pretty Ladies" Cast

Monta Bell has added Ann Pennington to the cast of "Pretty Ladies," which he is producing for Metro-Goldwyn release. She will play in scenes reproducing the Ziegfeld Follies, for which Ziegfeld has selected the screen chorus.

Valentino's Next Will Be "The Untamed"

RUDOLPH VALENTINO'S first starring vehicle for United Artists will be an adaptation of "The Untamed," a novelette by Pushkin, Russian author, it is announced by Joseph M. Schenck. The production of "The Bronze Collar," which had been selected as the next vehicle for the star will be postponed.

The story will be adapted by Rupert Hughes and Hans Kraly will write the scenario of "The Untamed," which is a story of Russia during the reign of the late Czar. Valentino will have the role of an officer of the White Guards and as a Tartar bandit. Clarence Brown has been engaged to direct the production, which is to be started early in June.

Pathe Home Office Ball Tossers Busy

The Home Office baseball team of Pathe has started the baseball season with two wins out of three games played and is looking for challenges from teams representing other picture organizations.

In the opening game of the season the Pathe crew defeated a team recruited from the New York and Newark exchange branches of Pathe located at 1600 Broadway. The second game brought a defeat at the hands of the Royal Insurance Company, while in the third Pathe defeated Fox.

Challengers will be accommodated by communicating with Manager R. S. Coyle of Pathe Exchange, Inc., 35 West 45th street, New York City.

Scribners Aiding "White Monkey" Exploitation

Charles Scribner's Sons will aid materially in the exploitation of "The White Monkey," the third Sawyer-Lubin production featuring Barbara La Mar for release through First National on June 7th. Whitney Darrow of the publishing firm is sending a personal letter to all dealers advising them of the coming of the picture and the possibilities for the exploitation of both book and picture.

Pauline Starke and Lew Cody Get "Paris" Leads

Pauline Starke and Lew Cody have been assigned to the leading roles in "Paris," the Carey Wilson story which will go into production shortly at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

What is said will be an outstanding feature of this film will be a wealth of new fashion creations by Erte, famous French designer. Miss Starke and a bevy of screen beauties will appear in a lavish display of beautiful gowns, it is said.

New Fred Thomson Vehicle is Selected

Fred Thomson's first starting picture under his new contract with F. B. O. will be "The Wild Bull of Skull Mountain," from a story by Marion Jackson, who has been responsible for a number of his other successes. Silver King, Thomson's famous horse, will have a prominent part in the picture.

Lionel Barrymore Star of "Wrongdoers"

"THE WRONGDOERS," the first True Story Film Company's production to be offered to independent exchanges by Astor Distributing Corporation, will have Lionel Barrymore as its star. Barrymore was selected by Harry Rathner, president of Astor Distributing Corporation, and Nat G. Pendleton, general manager of True Story Film Company.

Aside from the starring role, two other selections have been made for the cast. They are Charles Mack, who gained prominence in Griffith's "America," and Ann Cornwall, prominent in Fox and other productions. Hugh Dierker will direct "The Wrongdoers," which will be made in the former Pathe studio in the Bronx. Initial scenes were shot this week.

Barbara La Marr in scenes from "The White Monkey," Sawyer-Lubin production based on John Galsworthy's novel of that title, to be released by First National.

Prepare to Film 17 Features

First National Scenarists Working on Adaptations to Be Started Soon

SCENARISTS are working on continuities for 17 feature productions scheduled to be put into work soon by First National and producing units contributing to the First National program for the new season.

At the First National eastern studio the following stories are being prepared for filming: "The Unguarded Hour," being adapted by Luther Reed from Margaretta Tuttle's novel; "The Scarlet Saint," which Eugene Clifford and Jack Jungmeyer are adapting from Gerald Beaumont's short story, "The Lady Who Played Fidele;" "The Pace that Thrills," in which Ben Lyon will have the featured role, is being scenarioized by Raymond Harris from the Byron Morgan story, "Men of Steel," a forthcoming Special, is being adapted by Marion Fairfax from "United States Flavor," a novel by R. G. Kirk, "The Beautiful City," Richard Barthelmess' next vehicle is being put into continuity form by Josephine Lovett from a scenario by Edmund Goulding.

The Sawyer Lubin staff is putting the finishing touches to its next Barbara La Marr picture, adapted from Elsie Jean Jerard's story, "Florrie Finds a Gentleman."

Goldburg Off To West Coast

Goes to Supervise Production Program of Independent Pictures Corporation

JESSE J. GOLDBURG, president of Independent Pictures Corporation is off to the west coast again after a brief series of conferences with heads of departments in New York.

Just prior to his departure Goldburg announced a new series of eight Big Timber stories starring Lightnin', the dog. The titles of these productions are as follows: "Lightnin' Strikes," by Ralph Baum; "The Forrest King," by Selwyn; "His Master's Voice," by Adele Buffington; "Flaming Timber," by Adele Buffington; "The Danger Call," by Charles Pinkerton; "Pal O' the Redwood," by George Wise; "Silent Hero," by Edith and Thomas Long, and "Crimson Fangs," by George Hayward.

William J. Craft, who is now directing the Bob Custer series of Texas Ranger stories for Independent Pictures Corporation and F. B. O. release, will take over the direction of the Big Timber stories.

The Big Timber series together with the Bill Cody westerns and the Texas Ranger series, starring Bob Custer, will constitute the twenty-four feature releases produced by Independent. In addition there will be twenty-six single reel productions.

Independent announces the eight stunt westerns starring Bill Cody as follows:

"Shooting Straight," by Robert Sterling; "A Man's Fight," by Robert Sterling; "Tracked," by Arthur Sommers; "The Deadline," by Grace Harding; "Beyond the Rockies," by Edgar Van Pelt; "Blue Steel McCoy," by Edgar Hayward; "The Code of the Desert," by Arthur Sommers; "The Sierra Trail,' by Thomas Lassen.

Mary Pickford May Make Next in Louisiana

Louisiana may be the locale of Mary Pickford's next picture. The story, an original of the marsh country, is by Katherine Hennessey and was adapted by Winifred Dunn. Harry Oliver, supervising art director for Miss Pickford, will shortly make a trip into some of the sections near New Orleans in search of locations.

Gasnier to Film "Parisian Love" for Schulberg

B. P. Schulberg announced this week that "Parisian Love," based on the novel of that title by F. Oakley Crawford, would be the first Gasnier directed picture on the Schulberg schedule for 1925-1926.

Hal Roach Here Looking for Beauties

HAL ROACH is in New York on a quest for beauties that will fit in with his company at the Culver City studios. The candidates will be given local screen tests and those accepted will stand an excellent chance of being introduced into leading roles if they can make good, according to the producer.

Screen tests will be given only by appointment at the local offices of the Pathe Building and applicants have been asked to send photographs of themselves preliminary to appointments.

Fox Features Booked for Rivoli and Rialto

THE Fox Film production of "The Iron Horse" has been booked for a two weeks' engagement beginning September 20th at the Rivoli Theatre in New York. The Rivoli engagement will be followed by a week or more at the Rialto.

It was also announced this week that the Tom Mix features, seven in number, on next season's program had been booked for the Rialto. The first of the forthcoming Mix features is "The Everlasting Whisper," which has been completed. The announcement states that definite play dates have been assigned for each picture, the first to be shown at the Rialto being scheduled for August.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Buy Additional Stories

Screen rights to the musical comedy, "Sally, Irene and Mary," as well as to three original stories have been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The musical comedy by Edward Dowling enjoyed a successful Broadway run a few seasons ago and has since been popular as a road attraction.

The original stories are "The Light Eternal," Benjamin Christianson's first under his new contract; "I Can Do It," a comedy drama by Max Marcin, and "Paris," by Carey Wilson. All three are to be produced at an early date.

Warner Brothers Sign Two Scenarists

Warner Brothers have made two additions to their list of editors and scenario writers. They are Edward T. Lowe, Jr., and Lewis Milestone. Lowe adapted "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and prepared the adaptation and wrote the script of "Red Hot Tires," which is to be Monte Blue's next starring vehicle. He has been signed to a six months' contract with options of renewals for a year and half in six month periods.

Ellman Will Open the New Exchange in Chicago

Henri Ellman announces he will open the Capitol Exchange, the new Chicago independent distributing organization at 738 S. Wabash Avenue, on May 12th. This organization will distribute pictures in Illinois and Indiana and has already arranged for the handling of a series of eighteen Preferred Pictures, eighteen Columbia Productions and a list of single reel novelties.

Shipman Story is Given New Title

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have changed the title on the Samuel Shipman story now in production as "Nothing To Wear." It will be released under the title of "A Slave of Fashion." Norma Shearer and Lew Cody are the featured players, with Hobart Henley directing. In the supporting cast are Mary Carr, Miss Du Pont, Estelle Clarke and Vivia Ogden.

Julanne Johnstone Engaged for "Big Parade"

Julanne Johnstone has been engaged by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for an important role "The Big Parade," which is now in production under the direction of King Vidor with Renee Adoree and John Gilbert in the featured roles. Miss Johnstone will play opposite Gilbert, cast as a young Southerner, who leaves her behind when he goes to war.

"Steele of Mounted" Cast is Completed

With the addition of three players, Vitagraph has completed the cast for "Steele of the Royal Mounted," the James Oliver Curwood story being produced on the west coast under the direction of David Smith. The recent additions are Mabel Julienne Scott, Sydney DeGrey and John Toughey.

Margaret Livingston Lead in Fox Features

Margaret Livingston has signed a contract with Fox Film Corporation to play leading roles in forthcoming features from that company. Her first assignment with Fox was the role of Violet Derring in "Havoc." Miss Livingston has been cast for an important part in "The Wheel" and will appear in other films based on the John Golden stage plays.

Pennington and Eltinge in French Farce

AL CHRISTIE has decided upon "Madame Lucy," the French farce comedy by Jean Arlette as the vehicle in which to feature Julian Eltinge and Ann Pennington. The feature will be filmed immediately following the production of "Seven Days," which is now in work. Both will be released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

30 GREAT UNIVERS

Reginald Denny
in California Straight Ahead

by Byron Morgan

Cast: Gertrude Olmstead, Tom Wilson, Frances Raymond, John Steppling, Charles Gerrard, Fred Esmelton, Lucille Ward, Leo Nomis

A Harry Pollard Production

An origina story by the author of "Sporting Youth," one of Reginald Denny's greatest successes. One of the big novelties of this production is the wonderful bus built at a cost of $25,000 with all the conveniences of a millionaire's villa. This bus is to make an exploitation tour from San Francisco to New York and back exploiting this and other productions on Carl Laemmle's Second "White List."

It is a hilariously funny and action-full story. A transcontinental race with Dennys's car in flames at the finish is one of the stirring scenes in "California Straight Ahead." Harry Pollard has made most of Denny's pictures.

Rex Beach's The Goose Woman with Jack Pickford, Louise Dresser Constance Bennett

heading a brilliant Cast including: Gustav Von Seyffertitz, James O. Barrows, George Cooper, George Nichols

A Clarence Brown Production

Rex Beach, one of America's greatest authors and certainly one of the most popular living today, is the author of this tremendously powerful story which appeared in Hearst's International Magazine. Rex Beach's name in front of any theatre means a crowd inside. An exceptionally fine cast is featured in this production. It is directed by Clarence Brown who is responsible for "Smouldering Fires," "The Signal Tower," "The Acquittal" and other Universal Jewel productions. Three big stars, known to every picture fan, head the cast.

Hoot Gibson
in Spook Ranch

by Raymond Shrock and Edward Sedgwick

Cast includes: Jules Cowles, Helen Ferguson, Robt. McKim and Frank Rice

Directed by Edward Laemmle

Hoot Gibson's first Jewel picture. Here is no guess work. There are no two ways about Gibson. There are no two ways about this picture. Both are sure fire. A number of houses haven't played a western picture in years. This is the one to start with. It's the merriest, breeziest Western that ever gripped an audience from opening to finish. Play "Spook Ranch" and your patrons will be asking for Gibson's next one.

Virginia Valli
and Eugene O'Brien
in Siege

Serialized in Collier's and published as a novel
by Samuel Hopkins Adams

Cast: Mary Alden, Marc MacDermott, Beatrice Burnham, W. H. Turner, Kingsley Benedict, Spottiswoode Aitken

A Svend Gade Production

You have been waiting for Virginia Valli to get a part in which she could shine as she did in "The Storm." She has found it in "Siege." This story, written by Samuel Hopkins Adams, the famous novelist, got a wonderful play as a serial in Collier's, the National Weekly. Harper's then put it out as a novel and you will find it in every book store in every city and town of the United States. Furthermore, we are getting out a special photoplay edition of this book to mop up what the Two Dollar book left open. We figure that this story has been read in a million and a half homes. And what a picture Svend Gade did make!

Norman Kerry in Beauty and the Brute with Patsy Ruth Miller

and a fine supporting Cast including: Philo McCullough, Joseph J. Dowling, Harry Todd and Doreen Turner

Story by Isidore Bernstein

An Edward Sedgwick Production

Here is not only one of the biggest bets on the Second White List but probably one of the biggest box-office sensations of the year. It has a big star—the idol of feminine America—Norman Kerry. He is supported by a large cast headed by Patsy Ruth Miller. Sedgwick, director of many Gibson successes, has turned out a big smash. It is a tremendous dramatic spectacular novelty. Thrills and unusual situations tumble over themselves and blend with beautiful love scenes in gorgeous tropical settings. Sell this as though you were selling Barnum & Bailey's Circus. That is the way to get behind the picture and make circus money.

Laura La Plante
in The Teaser
with Pat O'Malley

From the Wm. A. Brady Broadway Stage Success

by Adelaide Matthews and Martha M. Stanley, with a Cast including Wyndham Standing, Margaret Quimby, Hedda Hopper, Walter McGrail, Vivian Oakland, E. Alyn Warren

Directed by William A. Seiter

Laura La Plante has been growing in popularity with each picture in the opinion of exhibitors and the public. In "The Teaser," which was originally produced on the stage by William A. Brady with Constance Binney in the starring role, Miss La Plante reaches the fulfillment of the promise she gave in "Smouldering Fires," "Sporting Youth," "Butterfly" and "Dangerous Innocence." Both the picture and Laura are clever, funny and beautiful throughout. An excellent cast of big names, all capably cast and directed by the man who handled her so well in "The Fast Worker," have built this into a hotsy-totsie of a hit!

AL JEWEL PICTURES

House Peters
in The Storm Breaker with Ruth Clifford

Supporting Cast includes: Mrs. Lou Tellegen, Jere Austin, Gertrude Clair, Lionel Belmore, Ray Hallor
From the Novel by Charles Guernon
Directed by Edward Sloman

House Peters has come to be universally recognized as the greatest actor of the he-man type on the screen today. His popularity is limited to no special type of audience, but takes in all classes of people. He is just as popular in small towns as in the largest cities. In "The Storm Breaker," a powerful dramatic story of the sea, he is given a role that fits him thoroughly and will add materially to his wide and growing popularity. An excellent supporting cast of real box-office names helps to make this the kind of a picture you and every fan loves to see.

Reginald Denny
in Where Was I?

with Lee Moran, Wm. Turner, Tyrone Power, Pauline Garon, Marian Nixon, Otis Harlan, Chester Conklin
From the Magazine Story by Edgar Franklin
Directed by William A. Seiter

Edgar Franklin, noted author, playwright and deviser of unusual situations, has here furnished Reginald Denny with a unique and most startling story. Suddenly a young business man is confronted by a beautiful girl who declares that he promised to marry her on the 15th day of March. He never saw her before but in spite of his diaries, records and the testimony of all his friends, he is absolutely unable to establish as an alibi definite proof of where he was on that day. A scream all the way!

Hoot Gibson
in The Arizona Sweepstakes

by Charles A. Logue
Cast: Helen Lynch, Emmett King, George Ovey, Philo McCollough, Kate Price, Kingsley Benedict
Directed by Clifford Smith

Hoot Gibson's name in any announcement is a sure fire guarantee of action plus. "The Arizona Sweepstakes" is a picture that is brimful of surprises, fast riding western thrills, and for a climax the best cross country horse race ever pictured in a western photoplay. Attaboy! Zip into this one! Gibson's smile—his breath-taking riding—his sizzling action—it's all here in a picture that will send them out thanking the manager of the theatre.

Dorothy Canfield's
The Home Maker with Alice Joyce and Clive Brook

Supported by a Cast including: George Fawcett, Mar·· Campbell, Martha Mattox, Jacqueline Wells
A King Baggot Production

Here is a combination of four big elements—two stars, a big-selling novel and an unusually famous author. This is the first time Alice Joyce, one of the best-known screen stars, has ever appeared in a Universal picture. Clive Brook is destined to be one of the screen's most popular leading men. "The Home Maker" will go far to advance him. Dorothy Canfield has written a score of popular and widely sold novels. As a screen offering, "The Home Maker" will be a delightful surprise. It affords an entirely new angle on man, woman and the home. King Baggot is giving this the greatest production of his long, successful career which includes "Human Hearts," "The Tornado" and many others.

Glenn Hunter
in The Little Giant

with Edna Murphy and David Higgins
From The Saturday Evening Post story " Once a Peddler" by Hugh McNair Kehlar
A Will Nigh Production

In "The Little Giant" Glenn Hunter steps into the heritage which promised itself in the stage and screen version of Harry Leon Wilson's "Merton of the Movies." There isn't a theatre or screen enthusiast in the world doesn't know Glenn Hunter through this play. Universal was fortunate to secure him for the star of the first picture which it has made in New York in many years. With all the great theatrical companies to draw from, Will Nigh has chosen a cast of stage celebrities. The story gives an unusual opportunity for delineation of New York, its night life and society. Effective tieups of an unusual nature which can be used by every theatre manager to put this over, add particular value to this picture.

Laura La Plante
in The Beautiful Cheat with Alexander Carr

and Harry Myers, Kate Price, Helen Dunbar, Tom S. Guise, Bertram Grassby, Prince Youcca Troubetzkoy
From the Saturday Evening Post story "Doubling for Cupid"
BY NINA WILCOX PUTNAM
Directed by Edward Sloman

Scarcely an issue of the The Saturday Evening Post without a story by Nina Wilcox Putnam. She is one of the best known and best loved of American authoresses. In "The Beautiful Cheat," she has written a plot which was made for the movies and for Laura La Plante. We don't have to tell you anything about Laura La Plante. She is bursting her way into film prominence faster than any other star on the screen except Denny. When "The Teaser" comes out, her other pictures will sell like hot-cakes. Alexander Carr, who is featured in the supporting cast, is already famous as Perlmutter in the "Potash and Perlmutter" stories on stage and screen. His name alone insures rare comedy as well as lovable characterization. He is another added asset to the drawing power of this picture.

Mary Philbin
in Stella Maris

BY WILLIAM J. LOCKE
A Charles Brabin Productiom

Mary Pickford's most brilliant success in her long and marvelous career was made in "Stella Maris," from the internationally popular novel by one of the best living authors. Universal stepped out and paid an enormous sum for the screen rights in order to give Mary Philbin a proper place among the elect of screen stardom.

Charles Brabin, who directed "So Big" and "Six Days," has staked his reputation on its possibilities for Mary Philbin. Watch for this one!

THE BEST BOX OFFI

My Old Dutch

by Albert Chevalier and Arthur Shirley with MAY McAVOY, PAT O'MALLEY, CULLEN LANDIS, JEAN HERSHOLT, AGNES STEELE,
EDGAR KENNEDY and others
A Lawrence Trimble Production

May McAvoy and Pat O'Malley have been selected as the best types on the screen today to portray the lovable characters in this picture. Mr. Laemmle was also fortunate in securing Lawrence Trimble, the same director who made "My Old Dutch" such a tremendous success before, to provide a new and more elaborate production for the Second White List. Trimble is also well known as the director of the famous "Strongheart" pictures which have made plenty of money for exhibitors in this country. "My Old Dutch" will be the heart throb of the Second White List.

Hoot Gibson in The Man in the Saddle

Adapted from the Novel, "A Daughter of the Dons"
by William McLeod Raine
Cast: Virginia Browne Faire, Georgie Grandee,
Cesare Gravina, Otto Hoffman
Directed by Herbert Blache

Hoot Gibson, the hero of a dozen big box-office smashes, will be starred in a picture that fits him admirably. This hard riding, fast-action story is set against colorful, highly romantic backgrounds. It is by an author known from coast to coast. Virginia Brown Faire, who several years ago won international fame as a screen beauty, will play the feminine lead opposite Hoot Gibson. Watch out for this one to clean up.

Reginald Denny in The Whole Town's Talking

From the Stage Success
by John Emerson and Anita Loos
A Harry Pollard Production

Universal stepped out with a big money bag to buy "The Whole Town's Talking" for Reginald Denny. It was a six month's success on the Broadway stage and starred Grant Mitchell, and its authors gained wide fame through its exceptional success. John Emerson and Anita Loos are unique as authors. Emerson was a big stage star and director before he turned his talents to the screen and the combination with Anita Loos, one of the best title writers in the world, has won them the first place among screen authors. "The Whole Town's Talking" is an intensely funny and highly dramatic play which will give Reginald Denny the opportunity of a life time.

On the Frontier with Norman Kerry

by Ralph Spence
Directed by Edward Sedgwick

"On the Frontier" will introduce in his own right a star that Mr. Laemmle has been grooming for several years and who has met with tremendous success in co-star roles with other Universal players. "On the Frontier" was written especially to fit Kerry. In this story we have taken full advantage of the appearance of Kerry in a uniform, as demonstrated by "Merry Go Round" and in "The Phantom of the Opera." In "On the Frontier" we are shooting straight at the heart of feminine America and box-offices of exhibitors. It's a cinch that Kerry will score a bull's eye.

Peacock Feathers with Jaqueline Logan and Cullen Landis

FROM THE NOVEL BY TEMPLE BAILEY

with a supporting Cast including:
George Fawcett, Edwin J. Brady, Carolyn Irwin, Ward Crane,
May King, Prince Troubetzkoy
A Svend Gade Production

Another great screen team—another best selling novel—another internationally known author. A great combination. Another clean-up.

"Peacock Feathers" is admittedly the best of this famous authoress's big successes.

Critics have long held Jacqueline Logan as the most beautiful girl on the screen, and associated with her in the leading role is Cullen Landis. Svend Gade has given this the same beautiful and compelling production which makes "Siege" such an outstanding gem on this list.

There are unusual selling angles in this, in the story, the title and the cast. It will be the first American appearance of Prince Youcca Troubetzkoy.

"Peacock Feathers" makes another reason why you will be proud to show the Second White List pictures.

Two Blocks Away with George Sidney and Charles Murray

THE STAGE PLAY BY AARON HOFFMAN

Aaron Hoffman achieved fame in theatrical circles for his keen characterization and broad, rib-tickling comedy. Numbered among his many successes of the American stage are "Friendly Enemies," "Welcome Stranger," and "Two Blocks Away." There is no need to tell you more about the story. Aaron Hoffman wrote it!

George Sidney, who attracted national attention by his work in "Welcome Stranger" on the stage and in "Potash and Perlmutter" on the screen, and Charles Murray, one of the outstanding cinema comedians, head an unusually brilliant cast, in this hilarious entanglement of a poor shoemaker suddenly become rich on a fortune that didn't belong to him. If you have laughs, prepare to use them.

Hoot Gibson in Kings Up by Ralph Spence

Directed by Edward Laemmle

Edward Laemmle, who has made such a corking good picture with Gibson in "Spook Ranch," has given you another clean-up in "King's Up." It breathes action, drama, suspense, comedy and a pippin of a love story. It is one of those breezy westerns in which lovers of Gibson delight and for which Ralph Spence, the author, is popular.

House Peters in The Man from Outside

Directed by Edward Sloman
Greater than either of his two previous big successes

Picture the title—"The Man from Outside!" Picture the possibilities of a story in the big lumber country, and then, to make it like a home run with the bases full, picture House Peters as the star! But nothing that you can picture will compare with the kick that exhibitors are going to get out of this latest House Peters production. Remember "The Storm." "The Man from Outside" will carry every bit as much appeal with the audience and cash to the box-office as "The Storm."

CE BETS FOR 1925-26!

Mary Philbin
in Sally In Our Alley

A Charles Brabin Production
by Johns Chickering

"Sally in Our Alley" is as well known to you as your own name. "Sally" has been sung and whistled and hummed and loved for a generation or more. Now Universal brings it to life in the person of none other than Mary Philbin. A story written especially around the lovable character by Johns Chickering promises a wealth of comedy, tender pathos. all blended with a charming background and a beautiful love story.

Reginald Denny
in This Way Out

Novel by Frederick Isham

One of the laughing hits of the year is "This Way Out" by a very popular author, Frederick Isham. If he had had Reginald Denny in mind he couldn't have written a better Reginald Denny story than this one. Comedy, romance, action, suspense, thrills, corking good climax—all fresh, original, unique, are potpourried into a story that will give audiences plenty of thrills and laughs.

Reginald Denny
in The Love Thrill

with Laura La Plante

By Byron Morgan

Byron Morgan, author of a dozen screen successes including "Sporting Youth" and "California Straight Ahead," has written a story that insures delight to audiences and real profits to exhibitors.

It is a gem! A great title—a charming star—keep time open for this one!

Hoot Gibson in
Chip of the Flying U

From the Novel by B. M. Bowers
Directed by Herbert Blache

As if Hoot Gibson's name alone wasn't enough, look at the title. Oh, Boy! "Chip of the Flying U." That promises action. Of course, Herbert Blache who has made "Secrets of the Night" and "Head Winds," directed the mad, wild riding bunch of cowboys that supports Hoot in this thunderbolt western. Plenty of jack in B. O. for friend exhibitor here.

Norman Kerry
in Under Western Skies

To be filmed during the 1925 Pendleton Roundup

"Let 'Er Buck" was such a dramatic whirlwind western success that Universal purchased the exclusive right to the Pendleton Roundup this coming year for a new type of Norman Kerry story. It will not be a western. The Pendleton Roundup will be thrown dramatically against a society background with big sets, a great cast and a splendid love story. Don't be surprised if this is one of the biggest on the Second White List. It's a great story.

The Still Alarm

Adapted by Harvey O'Higgins
From the famous Stage Play by Joseph Arthur and A. C. Wheeler
Directed by Edward Laemmle

You have seen a lot of fire pictures, but the daddy of them all, the most famous of them all, is "The Still Alarm." This is now being lined up as a big spectacular thriller. It has a corking good story, a lot of real human interest, a great romance, but first, last and always it is a thriller! Harvey O'Higgins, who helped write "Smouldering Fires," is responsible for the story on this one.

Sporting Life
WITH A GREAT ALL STAR CAST

Famous Drury Lane Melodrama
by Seymour Hicks and Cecil Raleigh
A Maurice Tourneur Production

The Drury Lane is famous the world over for its big spectacular melodramas. The greatest that has ever come out of that theatre and the one by which it is best known, is "Sporting Life." No director in the business is better qualified to make this production than the man Mr. Laemmle has selected as its director. Tourneur's name is associated with big productions, lavish sets, superbly-directed crowds and intense action. You'll get them here, all right, all right.

His People with Rudolph Schildkraut and Alexander Carr

Story by Isidore Bernstein

A delightful story written around Alexander Carr's ability to portray a lovable character and fill it to overflowing with humor and pathos. But this is no simple characterization. It is an intensely dramatic story which has a tender love story running through it and builds up to a gripping and unusual climax. Mr. Laemmle promises a surprise in this one!

Hoot Gibson
in The Calgary Stampede

with Virginia Browne Faire
Directed by Herbert Blache

Remember "Let 'Er Buck"? What a regular circus of a western! The Calgary Stampede is going to out-circus anything the western screen has ever seen. This year's Calgary Stampede will mark the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of Fort Calgary and the coming of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police to Canada. Two hundred thousand people are expected to witness this gigantic spectacle which will be filmed by Universal. Universal's famous ranch riders will enter the sporting events. An exploitation campaign backed by the Canadian government will make this year's Calgary Stampede the biggest event in Canadian history. When translated to the screen, you are certain to have a Hoot Gibson production the biggest of its kind in the western field. Let 'er rip!

Universal's Production Set for Next Season

UNIVERSAL is all set for the greatest year in its history, with an array of pictures far greater in quality than any ever before made at Universal City. In all fifty-four features will be released between September 1925 and August 31, 1926.

This unprecedented offering from Universal is called the Second White List. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, selected this title because of the great success he is having with the first White List, Universal's current group of releases.

The Second White List will consist of thirty Jewel productions made with such stars as Reginald Denny, Laura La Plante, Virginia Valli, Mary Philbin, House Peters, Hoot Gibson and others of similar popularity, and also of twenty-four Western photodramas. The Westerns will be made by Jack Hoxie, Art Acord, Josie Sedgwick and others.

The first Second White List production to be released is William J. Locke's best known story, "Stella Maris," which is being made by Charles Brabin with Mary Philbin as the star. Miss Philbin, as did Mary Pickford ten years ago, will play the dual role of Stella Blount and Unity Blake. This will be followed by a story written around the old song, "Sally in Our Ally."

Laura La Plante, is represented with three productions. The first is "The Teaser," in which she will be supported by Pat O'Malley. "The Teaser," is the William A. Brady Broadway stage success by Adelaide Matthews and Martha M. Stanley. Miss La Plante's role was played on the stage by Constance Binney. The other two productions in which she will be featured are "The Love Thrill" by Byron Morgan; and "The Beautiful Cheat" is an adaptation of Nina Wilcox Putnam's Saturday Evening Post story, "Doubling for Cupid."

Reginald Denny is represented in the Second White List by four productions. "California Straight Ahead," on which he has been working for some time, is an automobile story by Byron Morgan. Denny is supported by Gertrude Olmstead. The second Denny picture will be "This Way Out," a novel by Frederick Isham; the third, The John Emerson-Anita Loos stage success, "The Whole Town's Talking," in which Grant Mitchell played in New York; and the fourth, Edgar Franklin's magazine story, "Where Was I?" in which Denny is supported by Marian Nixon, Tyrone Power, Pauline Garon, Lee Moran and Chester Conklin.

House Peters will contribute two productions, "The Titans," by Charles Guernon, in which he will be supported by Ruth Clifford and Mrs. Lou Tellegen; and "Snowbound."

Norman Kerry will be seen in three productions, first in "Beauty and the Beast" a dramatic novelty by Isidore Bernstein, in which he will be supported by Patsy Ruth Miller. The second is an American cavalry story entitled "On the Frontier." The third picture which takes place in September and will be entitled "Under Western Skies."

Rex Beach's "The Goose Woman," with a cast including Jack Pickford, Louise Dresser and Constance Bennett; and Samuel Hopkins Adams' story, "Siege," which ran serially in Collier's and was later published in book form, are two of the big productions offered in the Second White List. Virginia Valli is starred in "Siege."

Hoot Gibson, who has been advanced to the dignity and prestige of Jewel stardom, will be starred in six productions, the first of which is "Spook Ranch" by Raymond Schrock and Edward Sedgwick. Great things are expected from "The Calgary Stampede," which will be filmed in Calgary during the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the founding of Fort Calgary and the establishment of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. The four other Gibson pictures are "Chip of the Flying U," by B. M. Bowers; "The Man in the Saddle," adapted from William McLeod Raine's novel, "A Daughter of the Dons," "Kings Up" by Ralph Spence; and "The Arizona Sweepstakes," by Charles A. Logue.

Glenn Hunter, famous as "Merton of the Movies," appears in the Second White List in "The Little Giant," a Saturday Evening Post story by Hugh McNair Kahler. Dorothy Canfield's remarkable novel, "The Home Maker," also will receive high rating in this list. It features Alice Joyce and Clive Brook.

"My Old Dutch," the famous song by Albert Chevalier and Arthur Shirley, and featuring May McAvoy, Pat O'Malley, Cullen Landis and Jean Hersholt, will be a dramatic novelty with plenty of heart interest, as will "Two Blocks Away," a stage play by Aaron Hoffman. This play, on the order of "Friendly Enemies," will feature George Sidney and Charles Murray. Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis are also featured in Temple Bailey's novel "Peacock Feathers."

"Sporting Life," the famous D'Oyly Lane melodrama, will feature Virginia Valli; while "His People," a heart interest story will have Alexander Carr. "The Still Alarm," the famous play by Joseph Arthur and A. C. Wheeler with an original adaptation by Harvey O'Higgins, will complete the Jewel pictures on the Second White List.

Eight features each will be contributed to the Second White List by Jack Hoxie and Art Acord and another eight by Josie Sedgwick and other popular Western stars.

Full Comedy Schedule is Planned by Universal

IN the one and two-reel comedy field, Universal will be especially fortunate during the coming year. In addition to the 52 Century two-reel comedies, there will be a series of twelve 2-reel Gumps comedies, of the same high quality as the first series of twelve, released during the past months, and a series of 52 one-reel Bluebird comedies, made with two popular comedians.

The series of Gumps Comedies will continue the same cast as the first series; Joe Murphy as Andy, Fay Tincher as Min and little Jackie Morgan as Little Chester. These comedies embody all the humor and funny situations of Sidney Smith's popular newspaper comic strip.

Universal's one-reel Bluebird Comedies will be made by Arthur Lake and Charles Puffy. Arthur Lake is the likeable young juvenile who rose to popularity this past winter in Universal's Sweet Sixteen Comedies. He will be supported by Adrienne Dore, one of the prettiest younger girls of the screen.

Charles Puffy is the fattest man in motion pictures. He is a recruit from the Continental stage and screen.

Strong Western Features for Universal

RIDING high on the wave of Western picture popularity, Universal has outlined a schedule of Western features for the coming year that is said to surpass anything that company has ever done before with this brand of picture.

A total of twenty-four western features of five or six reel length are now in the making. They are being made by carefully trained and experienced directors of western pictures and are being used as starring vehicles of a group of western stars who long ago won their spurs as aces of the saddle.

Jack Hoxie stands foremost among Universal's galaxy of Western stars. He is scheduled to make eight pictures for the coming year's release. Among them will be such features as "Two Fisted Jones," "The White Outlaw," "The Demon," "Lightning Jack," "The Border Sheriff," "Bustin' Through,' "Looking for Trouble," and "Peace Medicine."

Another popular star who will make a series of fast-riding, straight shooting, action pictures is Art Acord. Acord won screen fame several years ago by his work for Universal. He has returned to the Laemmle fold. Among the series of eight he now is making for fall release, are "Sky High Corral," "Out of the Flood," "Triple Action," "Rustlers' Ranch," "The Circus Cyclone," "The Scrapping Kid," "The Terror," and "Western Pluck."

Also there will be a series of eight western features made by various stars of screen fame, among whom are Josie Sedgwick, reputed to be the most daring woman in the saddle. Josie is a sister of Eileen Sedgwick and of Edward Sedgwick, Universal serial star and director respectively. She long has been noted as a Western star of great ability and with high box-office drawing power.

Nina Romano is Signed by Universal

Universal has signed Nina Romano to a long term contract to appear exclusively in Universal pictures. The contract is said to have been the direct result of Miss Romano's work with House Peters in "Titans" for Universal.

Miss Romano was secretly married to Lou Tellegen over a year ago and the marriage was revealed in Hollywood only recently. She was a leading woman on the stage for a number of years, but made her first screen appearance in "Titans."

International News Perfects Service System

E. B. HATRICK, general manager of the International News Reel Corporation, makers of the International News Reel, distributed by Universal, announces that during the coming year, the International News will surprise the industry by its 100% service on all news events and by its additional special service in the nature of curious events and expeditions in various unknown parts of the world.

The International News sales record sheets show that there has been an unusual trend to that news reel on the part of exhibitors during the last six months, Hatrick asserts. This awakening interest in the superior advantage of International News Reel service is brought about by the unequaled exploitation given to the reel, it is his opinion.

In addition to exceptional exploitation through regular motion picture channels, the International News is exploited and publicised in all Hearst's newspapers. These newspapers comprise a score or more of the biggest newspapers in the United States and reach a total of 26,000,000 readers.

The exploitation includes still photographs printed from the International News service, with captions giving credit to the news reel for the enterprise shown in getting the pictures. Every Hearst newspaper carries International News photos of this kind every day. There also are special stories on the extra service stunts put over by the International News reel. There is no exhibitor in the entire country into whose community one or more of these newspapers, with their ready-made publicity for the news reel, do not go. This exploitation is proving to be invaluable to the theatre owners using the International News Reel service.

Special Trailer Starts on Trip to Film Country

"SEE America First" is a slogan partly compounded of patriotism and partly of profit. Railroads, steamship companies, summer and winter hotel advertisers have been shouting it until it has lost some of its pristine beauty and ingenuousness. But now comes Carl Laemmle, who has no hotel or railroad or tourist bureau, with a plan to make American familiar with the beauties of their own country without leaving their farms or firesides.

A huge Pullman trailer, drawn by a truck, built in the form of a gigantic roadster, left Universal City recently to make a tour of the country to Cape Cod and return, stopping at all of the principal cities and points of scenic interest for the purpose of incorporating them in a comprehensive moving picture to be called "See America First." It may take anywhere from six months to two years to complete this story, for the stops will vary from one day to one week in each city, and arrangements will be made in each city for the pre-release of the portions of the picture which are taken to be shown immediately after the "See America First" trailer departs.

The unit is in charge of C. E. Holah, with a staff of cameramen, laboratory men and moving picture experts, all of whom will travel in the palatial motor Pullman car built almost entirely in the engineering shops of the Universal Pictures Corporation at Universal City, California. The trailer was designed primarily as a property for Reginald Denny's "California Straight Ahead" but its adaptability to this new purpose was so manifest that it was not broken up or sold but was commissioned to make this "See America First" picture.

The "See America First" trailer, mounted on a truck chassis, is designed on the lines of a Pullman car, with observation platform at rear and center door leading into the car itself. The rear three-quarters of the car is equipped as a modified Pullman sitting room, with easy chairs and a divan. At one end is a cabinet, built into the wall, which, unfolded, becomes a small piano. Panels in the walls above the wide windows have control knobs for an elaborate radio set with loud speakers built into the walls; another folding cabinet houses a phonograph.

At night two folding beds pull out of a door in the wall. Electric lights and an electric heater complete the living room equipment. Telephones connect it with the driver of the car ahead, and a ship's telegraph is also installed to signal directions to the men at the wheel.

Beyond this living room is a door leading to a small corridor. On one side of this is a bathroom and a shower, a gas water heater, clothes press and other conveniences. On the other side is the kitchen. An ice box is surmounted by a three-plate gas stove, and folding dish racks, a folding sink, and a cabinet for provisions and a rotissierie cooker completes this equipment.

Two Reel Western Series for New Season

WESTERN pictures with real Western heroes will be seen soon, following a new plan started at Universal City, by which the most daring of the members of the Universal Ranch Riders, an organization of more than two hundred cowboys chosen for their records at rodeos, will be elevated to stardom. The new plan was worked out by Raymond L. Schrock, new general manager at Universal City, in conformity with Carl Laemmle's oft-e pressed policy of raising his stars from the ranks of his players.

The new schedule of production, featuring the Ranch Riders, will be as follows: A series of two-reel Western dramas in which Edmund Cobb, already well known to the screen, will alternate with Freddy Humes, famous broncho rider, with William Crinley directing. Also ten two-reel Western comedies from published stories by W. C. Tuttle, Vin Moore directing, in which Tuttle's famous characters, "Dirty Shirt" and "Magpie," will be enacted by Ben "Smiley" Corbet and "Peewee" Holmes.

In addition there will be a series of Western dramas in which Al Smith, well known in recent Western productions at Universal City, and Tommy Grimes, world champion roper, are to be featured.

Many Popular Stories on Universal Schedule

"California Straight Ahead" is a cross-continent laugh with Reginald Denny, one of the screen's most reckless squanderers hilarity.

"California Straight Ahead"

The original story was written by Byron Morgan, who wrote many of the late Wally Reid successes. Harry A. Pollard, who produced "Oh, Doctor!" "Sporting Youth," "The Reckless Age" and other comedies well remembered by audiences and box offices everywhere, is the director of "Cal.-Ahead."

This picture is backed by a tremendous advertising campaign and the most novel, and thorough exploitation campaign ever devised; "The Honeymoon Trailer," a wonderful palace on wheels. This magnificent "traveling bungalow" was built as a prop for the Denny film.

Denny is supported by Gertrude Olmsted, Tom Wilson, Frances Raymond, John Steppling, Charles Gerrard, Fred Esmelton and Lucille Ward.

"Siege"

"Siege," from the novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, is a story that has found its way into a million homes, first in the form of a serial in Collier's Weekly, and afterwards as a book which has gained nationwide popularity. It is a great picture for any kind of an audience.

Virginia Valli and Eugene O'Brien, the stars in this production, as well as Mary Alden, who plays a brilliant role and holds the centre of the stage a great deal of the time; Marc MacDermott and Beatrice Burnham, of the supporting cast—all these are good names from the box office viewpoint.

The story is one that appeals to all ages and classes, dealing with a phase of life that everyone knows, and that every woman deeply feels. The epic struggle of the young wife with her husband's relatives is the theme of this splendid picture. It was directed by Svend Gade, who has not only made of it a powerful dramatic play, with heart interest and suspense in every foot, but he has also staged a climacteric ending that is thrilling beyond words.

"The Calgary Stampede"

The success of "Let 'Er Buck," and interest which the Pendleton Round-Up picture created inspired Universal to make arrangements for the exclusive filming of this year's Calgary Stampede. The Stampede this year is going to be the most important one of recent years because 1925 marks the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Fort Calgary and the coming to the Calgary territory of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. In honor of these two anniversaries the Calgary Stampede this year will be the biggest and most gorgeous ever held in Canada.

The cast will include Virginia Browne Faire, who won her first role in the movies on the Universal lot through a beauty contest.

"The Home Maker"

This is one of the most important dramas of American home life ever produced on stage or screen, being an adaptation from the novel by Dorothy Canfield, famous authoress.

The story shows the hell-on-earth which is often created for children by a conscientious and devoted woman who is a good housekeeper and a fine manager, but having no comprehension of child nature, warps and stunts and deforms and tortures her own children, although she loves them devotedly and thinks she is giving up her life for them. Contrasted with the tragic waste of such a failure is the harmonious, healthful, vigorous family life created out of the same materials by one who is gifted in real home-making.

"The Teaser"

"The Teaser" is a well dressed, sparkling, wholesome society comedy starring Laura La Plante in an amusing and refreshing role. As the "teaser" she brings forth a new type of screen vamp in the laughing vein. Pat O'Malley, the featured player in support of Miss La Plante, has registered so many laughs in this picture that Universal has signed him up for future productions.

Director Seiter has splendidly caught the spirit of the William A. Brady stage success in which Constance Binney was starred, and he has found in Miss LaPlante's engaging performance the fulfillment of the promise she gave in "Smouldering Fires," "Sporting Youth," "Butterfly" and "Dangerous Innocence."

The story, by Adelaide Mathews and Martha Stanley, is the tale of a girl whose aristocratic relations discourage the attentions of her cigar salesman fiance, and who takes revenge by flirting with a married man of the "monocled" set, getting herself into a situation where she temporarily sacrifices her good name in order to protect another woman. The working out of this distressing state of affairs results in one of the laughingest comedies of the year.

Alice Joyce and Clive Brook are featured in this production and the supporting cast includes George Fawcett, Mary Campbell, Martha Mattox and Jacqueline Wells.

"Beauty and the Beast"

"Beauty and the Beast" is the accepted title for the vivid, gripping drama of contrasts hitherto exploited as "Lorraine of the Lions," starring Norman Kerry with Patsy Ruth Miller in the role of Lorraine.

The story concerns the daughter of a circus owner. The ship is wrecked and all hands perish save little Lorraine and many of the circus animals. Twelve years are passed in the jungle of a South Sea island where Bimi, a giant gorilla, acts as bodyguard to the girl, saving her from savages once and from an alligator in her favorite swimming pool on another occasion.

Back in civilization, the girl's grandfather still believes the girl is alive. A young Englishman, who has studied Yogi philosophy, sees her in his crystal and they set out despite the objection of a cousin who had hoped to inherit the old man's great fortune.

The cast supporting Norman Kerry, with Patsy Ruth Miller, includes Fred Humes, Joseph J. Dowling, Philo McCullough, Harry Todd, Doreen Turner and Jack Goodrich. The story was written by Isadore Bernstein, and was directed by Edward Sedgwick.

"The Beautiful Cheat"

This is another hit that fits Laura La-Plante to perfection. It is just enough like "The Teaser" to recall the delightful society comedy in which she won the hearts of audiences everywhere; and just enough different from past successes to make a refreshing, new, happy run for box office and audience.

This production, under the direction of Edward Sloman, whose remarkable success with "The Titans" will live for many a day, was adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Doubling for Cupid," by Nina Wilcox Putnam, one of the foremost writers of humor in America, who has a following of millions of readers.

It is a merry, rollicking comedy-drama of Long Island society in the splendor of fashionable attire and the airy carefreeness of life, filled with laughs and chuckles of the kind that audiences expect from Laura and which she knows how to deliver.

"The Man in the Saddle"

Adapted from the novel, "The Daughter of the Dons," by William McLeod Raine, and directed by Herbert Blache, this is one of the all-round finest Western features in which Gibson has ever appeared, and that means one of the finest ever produced, for it goes without question that this superb Western star is being recognized everywhere as a peer in the saddle.

Gibson is the hero of a dozen box office hits, and this picture is as good as the best. A hard riding, fast action story set against a colorful, highly romantic background. It is by an author known from coast to coast. Virginia Brown Faire, who, several years ago, won fame as a screen beauty, plays the feminine lead opposite Gibson.

"My Old Dutch"

"My Old Dutch" is the heart throb of the Second White List. Pat O'Malley has been selected to play the role of the lovable character in this picture which was adapted from the famous play and song by Albert Chevalier and Arthur Shirley. He is supported by Cullen Landis and a splendid cast.

Lawrence Trimble directed the picturization of the simple and beautiful story of love and devotion of two people; a love that never falters, although beset with every earthly woe; a story of two ignorant young people, a coster boy and his "sweetie," who look on their marriage as a sacrament; a story that should be set before all as a model to be followed. It plays upon the heart strings, running the gamut of the emotions.

Much delightful comedy is woven into the story, and the inimitable Pat O'Malley is here to see that they laugh at least as much as they cry.

"Where Was I"

Another Denny medium of mirth that draws audiences in and brings back their friends. After the success of "Oh, Doctor!" "I'll Show You the Town," and "California Straight Ahead," a string of triumphs which places him unmistakably at the top in his art, his name on a laugh picture is a foregone conclusion of success for the exhibitor.

William Seiter, who produced "The Fast Worker," is the maker of "Where Was I?" adapted from the magazine story by Edgar Franklin, noted author and playwright and one of America's leading contrivers of unusual dramatic situations.

In this unique comedy-drama the popular appeal of this superb actor takes a decided step forward, for he has exceptional opportunities growing out of the unusual predicament of a young business man who is suddenly accosted by a very beautiful girl who declares that he promised to marry her on Friday, March thirteenth. He never saw the girl before in his life, but in spite of his diary, records, and the testimony of his friends, he is unable to establish as an alibi definite proof of his whereabouts on that day. It is a scream all the way through.

Strong Line-up of Films in Second White List

"The Goose Woman"

Mystery, thrills and a revelation of the methods employed by newspaper reporters in ferreting out a murder, await those who attend the picturization of Rex Beach's dramatic story, "The Goose Woman."

It is a story of love and protection and just one hate—enough to put the story into motion. First there is the love of the former opera singer for publicity—that power which makes and breaks. The singer has a son who loves a girl. Jack Pickford, Louise Dresser and Constance Bennett have these roles. But the stage doorman at the theatre where the girl works loves the girl and hates an old rounder who forces his attentions on the girl. James O. Barrows, one of the screen's most capable character actors, has this part.

Then a murder is committed. The singer satisfies her craving for publicity by a false statement about the killing. Her son is arrested for this and then startling incidents heap on each other to make this a thoroughly enthralling picture.

"Peacock Feathers"

This topping comedy-drama in which Jacqueline Logan and Cullen Landis have the stellar roles, is unique in that it marks the screen premiere of Prince Youcca Troubetzkoy, a member of the Russian nobility, and is also the third production on American soil of Svend Gade, noted Danish director.

The story is from the novel by Temple Bailey, being adapted by James O. Spearing, former dramatic editor of the New York Times. There is not a dull moment in the picture. When the plot hesitates in its trend, a bit of comedy is injected to round out a complete play which is a splendid family picture.

Others in the cast are George Fawcett, Edwin J. Brady, Carolyn Irwin, Ward Crane, Emmett King, Aggie Herring and Dunbar Raymond.

"Stella Maris"

Mary Pickford established her reputation as a dramatic actress with William J. Locke's remarkable novel, "Stella Maris." When Universal engaged Charles Brabin to direct Mary Philbin, he suggested that Universal make this remarkable novel for Mary Philbin.

"Stella Maris" presents as much opportunity for character drawing, for dramatic expression and for pictorial beauty as any story ever written. Furthermore, all of Hollywood is agog as to whether Mary Philbin can play the role better than Mary Pickford did. Any time a controversy of such a nature is started about a picture, that picture is certain to be talked about, and any picture that is talked about will be seen in the theatres.

The cast is being selected with extreme care. The role of the feminine heavy has been entrusted to Gladys Brockwell. Phillips Smalley has also been chosen for an important part. The roles of John Risca and Walter Herold, extremely important and difficult, are attracting offers from many important juveniles in Hollywood.

Century Plans Excellent Comedy Releases

JULIUS and ABE STERN, the makers of Century Comedies, have projected one of the most ambitious schedules ever attempted in the two-reel field. For their 1925-26 output, to be released through Universal, they have planned twelve Wanda Wiley-Century Comedies, twelve Edna Marian Century Comedies, twelve Buster Brown-Century Comedies and a number of other two-reelers.

Included in the Century list will be six pictures made with Al Alt, six made with Eddie Gordon and four with Charles King. The Century Film Corporation also will release a Special, "Little Red Riding Hood," a two-reeler made with Baby Peggy and built around the popular fairy tale.

The Wanda Wiley, Edna Marian and Buster Brown comedies will be of exceptional quality. The Stern brothers have gone to great expense and pains to obtain a high class studio staff in order to assure a good brand of comedies.

Miss Wiley, whose popularity has pyramided during the past year, is lined up for one release a month. This permits exhibitors to cash in on her drawing power and to take advantage of the large public which has been built up for her. The same is true with the Edna Marian comedies. Knowing that he may expect one a month, the theatre owner will be fully cognizant of the box-office value of this star.

The Buster Brown Comedies will be a distinct novelty in the comedy field. They will be patterned after the famous newspaper cartoons by R. F. Outcault, but will be made with live actors. Little Arthur Trimble has been obtained to play the role of Buster, Doreen Turner that of Mary Jane, and Petey the screen dog-wonder, the role of Tige, Buster's famous dog. These comedies already are in production and previews of the first indicate that they will be a sensation. They are regarded by Universal as strictly first-run comedies.

"We have formulated a new policy in regards to Century Comedies," says Julius Stern, president of the Century Film Corporation. "We are determined to make two-reelers of the highest possible quality. Our stars have proven their box-office worth. Our directors are veteran fun-film makers. Our studio facilities have been bettered. Thus, we are equipped to turn out the best comedies in the industry and I will not rest until our product is so far ahead of all others that they will be the humorous touchstones of the screen world."

"Lucky Six" Chosen as Name for Chapter Plays

CARL LAEMMLE of Universal announces six serials for 1925-26 under the above title.

The first will be "Perils of the Wild," a story based on the famous book "Swiss Family Robinson." This will be released August 17, 1925, and will be ten episodes in length. In the cast of this picture are Jack Mower, Margaret Quimby and Joe Bonomo. This is an all star cast, directed by Henry McRae and is one of the biggest serials released in years. The story was written by Isadore Bernstein and William Lord Wright.

The second serial, "Ace of Spades," will be released October 19, 1925. This is a story of the "Oklahoma Land Rush," a big western action drama story with William Desmond, supported by Mary McAllister, Clark Comstock and Al Smith. It is a ten-episode serial directed by Henry McRae. This story was written by Isadore Bernstein and William Lord Wright.

The third serial, "The Scarlet Streak," will be released December 21, 1925, with Jack Daugherty, the star of "The Fighting Ranger" playing the lead supported by a big cast directed by Henry McRae. This is a ten-episode serial from an original story written by Isadore Bernstein and William Lord Wright and is based on the "death ray" which is now so prominently in the types of the nations.

The fourth serial, "The Winking Idol," by Charles Van Loan, was adapted to the screen by Isadore Berstein and William Lord Wright. This will be a big Western serial with William Desmond and be directed by Francis Ford. It will be in ten episodes, released February twenty-first, 1926.

The fifth serial "The Radio Detective," by Arthur B. Reeve, from the Boy's Life Magazine story of the same name will be released April 19, 1926. This will be directed by Henry McRae with an all star cast including Joe Bonomo and will be in ten episodes. It is a Boy Scout and Radio Serial from the story in the Boy's Life Magazine and was a sensation.

The sixth serial, "The Strings of Steel," will be released June 22nd, 1926. This story marks the fiftieth anniversary of the invention of the telephone and is a semi-historic story based on the early development of the telephone. It is a strictly action story and it is planned to play Jack Daugherty in the lead with Francis Ford directing. It will be ten episodes.

Laemmle Says "Phantom" is "U's" Greatest

UNIVERSAL'S greatest contribution to the screen world during the coming year will be "The Phantom of the Opera," a super spectacle made with Lon Chaney in the chief role, and with Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry in featured parts. Directed by Rupert Julian at great expense and representing the ultimate in studio and technical progress, it is regarded by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation as the greatest achievement of his carerer.

"The superlatives have all been exhausted," said Mr. Laemmle, "and all of the high and mighty boasts that can be made as to the greatness of a picture have been pretty well used up. So I'll just let you glance over these simple figures and facts about the production of the 'Phantom,' and you can draw your own conclusions.

"Here they are:

"'The Phantom of the Opera' is the biggest picture Universal has ever made, surpassing in every sense The Hunchback of Notre Dame.

"Fifty principals and five thousand people in the cast. Lon Chaney, Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Gibson Gowland, Arthur Edmund Carew head the cast.

"Staff of one hundred and fifty technical experts assisted the director. They include architects, mining engineers, camera men, artists, musicians, ballet trainers, animal trainers, illusionists, electrical, chemical, optical, mechanical engineers, etc. Three hundred stage hands and electricians continually employed during production.

"Eleven sculptors spent six weeks making frescoes, statues, etc., for Paris Opera House settings.

"Seven blocks of Paris streets built in complete detail.

"Construction of exact reproduction of famous Paris Opera House marks the ultimate in motion picture settings.

"No studio in the world large enough to hold this setting; a special building had to be put up for it. The completed setting could easily contain the two largest stages in Hollywood.

"Interior of the Opera House over one hundred feet high, contains five tiers of balconies, and seats 3,000 people. For the great opera scenes the house is packed to capacity.

"Stage of opera house is one hundred feet wide and 75 feet high, exactly the dimensions of the original.

"The grand staircase, one hundred feet high, with six levels, was built in exact size. In this setting are exact reproductions of the famous sculptors and decorations of the original.

"Opera scenes, grand masquerade ball scenes in foyer, taken entirely in color.

"The great box-office feature of 'The Phantom,' however, is the strength and suspense of its gripping story. It moves with a tempo and dramatic crescendo rarely seen either on stage or screen and is regarded as a perfect example of an audience picture."

WILLIAM A. SEITER

Director of Comedy Successes

The name of William A. Seiter is almost synonymous with comedy and farce. He has an unusual number of successes to his credit along these lines and he promises to add a lot more to the Universal schedule.

Seiter, a New Yorker, educated at the Hudson River Military academy, elected to pursue the career of an artist and writer and he made no mistake. Success has been his almost from his initial effort. He started his film career with Selig and later was with Reliance, Universal, Majestic, Crown City, Universal, Goldwyn, Paramount, F. B. O., Warner Brothers and First National.

Among his early successes were thirteen comedies for Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven for Goldwyn. For Paramount he did "Passin' Thru," for F. B. O. "The Foolish Age," 'Eden and Return," "Boy Crazy" and others; for Warners, "The Beautiful and Damned."

"Daddies," which he made for Warner Brothers last year attracted almost universal commendation and added materially to his already large following. Others of his recent successes were; "The White Sin" and "His Forgotten Wife" for F. B. O., "Listen Lester" for Principal Pictures, and "The Family Secret" and "The Fast Worker" for Universal. Seiter's chief hobby aside from the making of pictures, is golf, which may have some bearing on his overdeveloped sense for comedy situations, though to most devotees this sport is more inclined to develop the dramatic.

LOUISE DRESSER

Character Actress in Demand

After a very successful stage career in light opera and musical comedy, Louise Dresser became very much sought by motion picture producers and she yielded to the demand for her services. She has probably never regretted the change either, for she has appeared in some prominent successes.

Miss Dresser has been engaged continuously by the leading companies. She has appeared almost exclusively in pictures made by Paramount, Metro, Hodkinson, First National, F. B. O., and now she is lined up with Universal, where she will be assigned roles that admirably suit her exceptional talent.

In her early screen career Miss Dresser was with F. B. O. and among other pictures she made "The Glory of Clementina." For the same company she also appeared later in "Cheap Kisses." In 1923 she appeared in a number of pictures that were among the real leaders of the year. Some of them were, "The Fog" for Metro, and "Salomy Jane," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Woman Proof" and "To the Ladies," for Paramount.

The year 1924 was also a busy one for Miss Dresser and she went right from one success to another. With Paramount she appeared in "The Next Corner" and "The City That Never Sleeps." She also was prominently cast in Hodkinson's "What Shall I Do." Her first picture this year was First National's "Enticement."

ERNST LAEMMLE

Skilled in Screen Technique

Ernst Laemmle is a nephew of Carl Laemmle, the Universal president, which fact has no bearing on the remarkable success he has gained as a director. Sheer determination and hard work alone are responsible for young Laemmle's rapid rise in the industry.

Working his way up the ladder step by step he is a product of the ranks. He studied the art of picture making at Universal City without asking favors of anyone. After an apprenticeship of some duration in the world capital of motion pictures, Laemmle thought his progress might be more rapid with additional education, so he spent a year in Europe completing his studies.

When he returned to Universal City he started again as prop man and delved into every branch of picture making. After much hard work he was assigned as director of a Universal picture. He made "The Ghost City" with Pete Morrison as the star and the deft touches he put into it helped largely in making a success of it. Laemmle's future was assured.

More recently he has directed William Desmond's Universal picture, "Red Clay," and "The Best Man." His last picture for the Universal organization was "The Ropin' Venus," with Josie Sedgwick in the starring role.

JEAN HERSHOLT

Portrayer of Many Roles

Comparatively few screen actors have been as much in demand as Jean Hersholt. He is a player who can be relied upon to properly portray any role assigned to him. Born in Copenhagen, Denmark, he has the true artistic temperament, backed by a career on the speaking stage that covered a period of twelve years in Denmark, Sweden and Norway. A director as well as an actor, he knows every angle of acting and production technique.

It is not to be wondered at that Hersholt has appeared in some of the greatest successes produced in this country. His film experience started ten years ago when in 1915 he started work with Thomas H. Ince at Inceville. Since that time he has appeared with all of the leading producing companies.

For the United Artists he scored in "Tess of the Storm Country" and for Metro in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and "Jazzmania." For Goldwyn he appeared in "Red Lights," "Greed" and "The Stranger's Banquet." Among the First National pictures in which Hersholt has figured prominently are "Torment," "The Goldfish," "The Woman on the Jury" and "Her Night of Romance." He was also prominently cast in "Sinners in Silk" for Metro-Goldwyn and "Cheap Kisses" for F.B.O.

HARRY A. POLLARD
MARGARITA FISHER

There are few directors who keep busy more continuously than Harry Pollard, for there is no angle of the drama or comedy he is not thoroughly familiar with. A widely diversified career on the stage and in the picture field qualify him to handle any type of picture.

A success from the start as a director, Pollard attracted wide attention to himself when he made "The Leather Pushers" for Universal three seasons ago.

Pollard got his early training on the stage. For ten years he was in stock and vaudeville, and as well, was a producer of plays. Among his early pictures were "The Danger Game," "The Girl Who Wouldn't Grow Up," "Trimmed" "Confidence" and "The Locked Door."

Margarita Fisher, leading lady of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara and star for several seasons, had been in retirement as the wife of Pollard, and returned to play the second feminine role in Virginia Valli's Universal-Jewel "K—the Unknown," under the direction of her famous husband.

She did such wonderful work in this picture that her reputation as one of the stellar players of the screen was at once re-established.

Miss Fisher began her stage career when she was only eight and continued on the speaking stage until she entered motion picture work, in which she was starred in numerous productions.

EDWARD SLOMAN
Director of Sterling Worth

Born and educated in London, England, Edward Sloman has had wide experience both on the legitimate stage and in pictures. He attained much success as an actor in both, but even greater fame in the direction of stage plays and picture productions.

Sloman started his professional career on the speaking stage in London and has never gotten very far away from the profession since. However, since coming to America he has been in pictures exclusively and for the most part as a director. The services of Sloman have been much sought by the leading companies. He has had marked success with a number of productions for First National, Goldwyn, Metro and Universal.

Two of the most notable recent Universal productions he was responsible for are "The Price of Pleasure" in which Virginia Valli and Norman Kerry are co-stars, and "Up the Ladder," in which Virginia Valli again has the starring role. His latest production for this company is the House Peters Universal Jewel, "The Titans." The Sloman name will adorn other Universal pictures during the coming season.

Carl Laemmle is one of Sloman's greatest boosters. The president of Universal regards him among the real leaders in the directorial field and feels assured when he has assigned him to the direction of a feature it will be developed to its full worth when it is presented on the screen.

JACK HOXIE
Starring in Westerns

Always popular among the fans who take their Westerns seriously, Jack Hoxie has made tremendous strides and added thousands to his legion of followers since his advent with Universal, where stories are moulded to his six feet of height and 200 pounds of brawn and muscle.

A Western fits Hoxie like a glove for he was raised in that country whose characters he depicts so well on the screen. It was on a cattle ranch in Oklahoma that Jack got his early training as a cowboy and he grew to be the champion rider of all those wide open spaces. He boasts several championships and has the trophies to show for his skill as a trick and fancy rider.

He was a Lasky star in his early screen career and made "Lightning Bryce." With Arrow Film Corporation he made a number of pictures, among them, "Thunderbolt Jack," "Man From Nowhere," "Dead or Alive" and "Cyclone Bliss."

Hoxie's affiliation with Universal followed and his popularity has been on the increase ever since. Among his Universal pictures which have brought him his greatest success are the following: "Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande," "Where is this West?" "Men in the Raw," "The Red Warning," "The Man From Wyoming," "The Galloping Ace," "The Phantom Horseman," "Ridgeway of Montana," "The Back Trail," "Fighting Fury," "Daring Chances," "Western Wallop" and "The Sign of the Cactus."

EDWARD LAEMMLE
Successful Director

It is quite a long call from machinist and electrical worker to motion picture director, but that is the achievement of Edward Laemmle. If the engineering field lost a good mechanic, the motion picture industry gained a better director.

Laemmle's screen career has been with Universal and he has directed some mighty popular pictures. He gained considerable reputation when he directed "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," which created a sensation in all parts of the world. Others of his most popular pictures were: "Winners of the West," "Fair Fighting," "Top O' the Morning," "The Oregon Trail," "The Victor," "That Kid From Madrid," "The Fast Steppers" and "The Man in Blue."

Laemmle is a comparatively young director. With each succeeding picture he has registered a greater success. He is the type director who profits by any slight error he might make with one picture. He is a student, a deep student of everything in connection with the industry.

FRANCES IRWIN

Director Francis Ford who is making the Universal-Serial "The Perils of the Primitive" (Swiss Family Robinson) in which this child of five, Frances Irwin, has the part of the son of Robinson, has pronounced the young actress as one of the most gifted of juveniles of the screen. The director points to the great scene in which she weeps over the faithful dog which gave its life for Jack. It is predicted by all who have seen Frances that her future seems bright.

EDGAR ULMER

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR

"PHANTOM OF THE OPERA"

Although barely 21 years old, Mr. Ulmer won the recognition of being one of the leaders on the continent in theatrical art work. While in Europe he was a pupil of Max Rhinehardt, famous European producer. Mr. Carl Laemmle discovered this young man's genius and brought him on from New York to join Universal's directorial and art staff.

CISSY FITZGERALD

Prominent Comedy Star

CISSY FITZGERALD is a comedy star whose fame has spread to all parts of the world both on the legitimate stage and in pictures. Her latest and what she thinks her best picture is the Harry Pollard production for Universal, "I'll Show You the Town," in which she has the role of Mrs. Clebenger.

Among Miss Fitzgerald's current releases are, "Lillies of the Field" and "Flowing Gold" for First National, "Vanity's Price" and "The Woman Who Sinned" for F. B. O., and "Babbitt" and "Cornered" for Warner Brothers. Another of her past successes was "Daring Love" for Truart.

FREDERIC MALATESTA

Skilled Screen Actor

BORN in Naples, Italy, and educated there and in Rome, Frederic Malatesta had considerable stage experience in Italy and South America before entering upon his screen career in this country. Since he became a screen player he has appeared in pictures for practically every leading company.

He started with Pathe and has since been with Griffith, Metro, Paramount, Fox, First National, Preferred, United Artists, Universal and others. Among the pictures in which he has won his most success were: "The Man Between" for Fox, "Don Coyote," "Broadway or Bust" and "The Reckless Age."

CULLEN LANDIS

Brilliant Young Actor

FEW screen players have attained more continuous popularity than Cullen Landis. He has appeared in a large number of excellent pictures in the past few years and will be seen in some equally as good if not better with Universal during the coming season.

Landis is a Southerner, a product of Nashville, Tennessee and he has played in pictures for all of the leading companies. He will be featured among others in "Peacock Feathers" for Universal next season. Among his most successful pictures have been "The Fighting Coward" for Paramount, "Pampered Youth" and "Steel of the Royal Mounted" for Vitagraph, "The Fog," "Soul of the Beast" and "The Man Life Passed By" for Metro and "A Girl of the Limberlost" for F. B. O.

MARY PHILBIN

Star of Great Promise

MARY PHILBIN started her screen career with Universal and has been a good bet for that company ever since. She has made pictures for other companies, but her best work has been with the Laemmle organization.

Among the outstanding successes of Miss Philbin with the Universal company were: "The Blazing Trail," "Danger Ahead," "No Clothes to Guise Her," "Once to Every Boy," "Merry Go Round," "False Kisses," "Where is This West," "Fools Highway," "The Gaiety Girl," "The Rose of Paris" and "Fifth Avenue Models." For First National she scored in "Penrod and Sam" and "Age of Desire," and for Fox in "The Temple of Venus."

ARTHUR JASMINE

Well-Known Leading Man

ARTHUR JASMINE has won himself a place with Universal because of his consistently good work in pictures over a period of more than five years, and he will be seen in a number of important roles in the product that company will turn out during the coming season.

Jasmine hails from St. Paul, Minneapolis, and started his professional career in musical comedy, where he achieved considerable success. He appeared in the Holywood Pilgrimage play and his screen services have been in demand ever since. One of his most successful roles was that in "Scaramouche" for Metro and another in "The Lure of the Yukon," for Lee-Bradford. He has also appeared in several pictures for Universal.

MARGARET QUIMBY

Stage and Screen Favorite

MARGARET QUIMBY, the former Follies beauty and more recently of the Music Box Review and George White Scandals, was born and educated in Minneapolis, Minn. She is now 20 years old. Her first screen work after several years on the leitimate stage as actress and fancy dancer, was with Jack Dempsey in the Universal serial "Fight and Win," as the leading lady in the champ's photoplay. She has won several physical culture prizes as "The Perfect Woman" of the New York stage.

Director Julian has called her the "Most nearly perfect specimen of womanhood in the world." Universal has cast her for the leading feminine role in the coming production "The Swiss Family Robinson."

KATE PRICE

Popularity is Perennial

KATE PRICE is one of a comparatively few players whose popularity year after year is ever on the increase. She has been in pictures since the early days and her services seem to be more sought now for character roles than ever before. There is not a leading producing company in existence in this country to which Miss Price has not contributed the artistic portrayal of a character role.

Universal, Fox, Vitagraph, Keystone, First National, Pathe, Hodkinson, Goldwyn, Producers Distributing Corporation, Metro, United Artists have not regretted they have had this popular player in their pictures. Among the most prominent of many successes in which she has appeared were the following: "The Spoilers," "The Sea Hawk," "Fools Highway," "Another Man's Wife," "The Tornado" and scores of others.

FRANCIS FORD

Famous Star and Director

FRANCIS FORD has won an enviable name for himself in westerns and serials, in many of which he has appeared for Universal. He will also be seen in many more for that company in the future. During his screen career he has directed or played in over 150 westerns in addition to many serials.

Ford started his stage career with Amelia Bingham in stock and entered the picture field as a director and player. For a time he was with Fox, the Pathe serial, "Haunted Valley" and with Arrow in "The Fighting Skipper." He also was with Universal in "Measure of a Man," "The Sign of the Cactus" and many others. Ford has also officiated behind the megaphone for a number of productions for various companies. Great things are expected of him by the officials of the Universal corporation.

CESARE GRAVINA

Celebrated Character Actor

CESARE GRAVINA has played a wide range of character roles and has done them so well that his services are constantly in demand. He was an unusually busy actor last year and Universal intends to keep him busy this season.

Gravina appeared in some of the leading pictures in 1924, after having appeared in such successes as "Foolish Wives" for Universal and "Daddy" for First National. In 1923 he had prominent roles in "Circus Days" for First National and "Merry Go Round" for Universal. Last year his best pictures were: "The Humming Bird" and "Contraband" for Paramount; "The Family Secret," "Butterfly" and "The Man In Blue" for Universal; and "Greed" for Metro-Goldwyn.

GEORGIE GRANDEE

New Comedy Character

GEORGIE GRANDEE who has been a well known figure in vaudeville for nearly four years under the name of Georgie Coan, with the act of Cook and Coan, is one of the latest newcomers into pictures.

He was engaged to play the second role of importance with Wm. Desmond in his new Universal starring production "The Meddler," directed by Arthur Rosson.

This is Grandee's first motion picture engagement and his work proved so extraordinary that he is considered a coming film actor. He is extremely short, slender, red haired and dark eyed. He plays the role of a valet to the hero, a comedy characterization.

He finished a successful tour over the Orpheum Circuit only a few weeks before he took up screen work as a means of livelihood.

WILLIAM DESMOND

Star of "Westerns"

The name of Bill Desmond has been synonymous with motion pictures of the Western type and the majority of those in which he gained his great following in all parts of the world were made for Universal.

Desmond is from the rich old sod of Dublin, but he came to this country when a youth and was educated in the public schools of New York. He gained much popularity as a legitimate star before going into pictures.

His successful pictures have been almost too numerous to mention. It is only necessary to recall some of those he made for Universal such as, "McGuire of the Mounted," "Shadows of the North," "Beasts of Paradise," "The Riddle Rider," "Barriers of the Law" and "The Sunset Trail."

HENRY McRAE

Director of Promise

Henry McRae has had a long career on the stage and screen. In fact he has devoted his time to little else since he graduated from the schools in Ontario, Canada. He launched his own company shortly after graduating and toured with it for two years. Later he operated stock companies in various cities along the coast and then took shows to Japan, Hawaii and the Orient.

He started his screen career with Selig and later went to Universal, where he was made director general. From Universal he went to Hodkinson and then back to Universal, where he promises some big things for this season. Among the successes with which he is credited are "The Critical Age," "The Indian's Lament" and "Racing for Life."

CLIFFORD S. SMITH

Director of "Westerns"

Few directors have had more success with westerns than Cliff Smith. Having been educated at Stillwater, Oklahoma, he knows the western environment and its ways. When William S. Hart needed a director who knew whereof he was directing he decided upon Smith and they made some forty-five pictures together, and then he made eighteen with Roy Stewart and others with Tom Mix, Texas Guinan and Edith Sterling.

Paramount signed him and he started to work again with William S. Hart. They made "Wild Bill Hickok" and "Singer Jim McKee." Smith has been with Universal in his latest pictures and has scored with "Ridgeway of Montana," "The Back Trail," "Fighting Fury," "Daring Chances," "Western Wallop" and "The Sign of the Cactus."

OLIVE HASBROUCK

Brilliant Young Player

Few young screen players have more brilliant prospects than Olive Hasbrouck. Universal has brought her to the front rapidly and seems to have struck just the right type of vehicle for her exceptional talent in the Sweet Sixteen series in which she is one of the featured players. She has the youth, beauty and vivaciousness so necessary for roles of this type.

Aside from the Sweet Sixteen series Miss Hasbrouck has played in a number of Universal features, her latest release being "Lightning Jack," a western. Other pictures in which she has appeared for this company are "Ridgeway of Montana," "The Little Savage," "Big Timber," "Alone at Last" and "Smoked Out." This popular young player who has proved her sterling worth, will be seen in quite a number of Second White List productions for the Universal Corporation.

EDGAR ULMER

Director and Designer

Was born in Olmuetz, Austria, 22 years ago. He was educated in the schools and University of Vienna, and of Stockholm, Sweden. His education as designer and art director he obtained at the famous Royal Burg Theatre in Vienna, at one time the foremost stage of Europe. He played in the Burg Theatre for several seasons.

He was regarded as a protege of Max Reinhardt, and made sets for Nibelungen Opera and for the Metropolitan Opera.

He has designed several sets of scenery for Universal and his art work will be on display in a number of pictures to be released by that company this season.

CHAS. H. PUFFY

Charles Puffy is Hungarian by birth and cosmopolitan by education. The man who created a sensation in European theatrical circles, with his antic clowning, has signed a five year contract with Universal.

Puffy was born in the Capital of Hungary, Budapest, Sept. 3, 1888. He attended the college of his home city and the University of Berlin. His stage career extends over sixteen years. He has played under Europe's greatest stage wizard, Max Reinhardt, in Berlin.

Puffy weighs two hundred and ninety-five pounds.

PRINCE YOUCCA TROUBETZKOY

Handsome Leading Man

Prince Troubetzkoy, like so many other scions of old Russian families, found himself considerably impoverished by the war and was persuaded by his friends, because of his fascinating way and good looks, to enter the picture profession. So he pursued Carl Laemmle all through Europe and finally succeeded in getting himself signed to a contract. Mr. Laemmle is satisfied that he made no mistake in signing the Prince.

Troubetzkoy is no stranger to America. In fact he is a native son of California. When he was still a baby his parents took him back to Europe and had him educated in Russia and France. The young Prince is in his early twenties, a six-footer and a trained athlete. Universal officials confidently predict a brilliant future for this young scion of a noble family.

The Advent of the Silversheet Has Made the Hollywood of Today

There may be other conditions instrumental in building Hollywood, but none whose influence has had so great an effect as the Motion Picture Industry.

Picture the Hollywood of ten years ago—a town of about 25,000 people, here and there a shop, just four banks, patches of desert with their oasis of orange and lemon groves. Hollywood today! Skyscrapers, hundreds of smart shops, numerous artistic theatres, thirty banks, fifty-one churches, a vast stretch of beautiful residences, a population of 130,000—and so rapidly growing. Due, mostly—we can safely say—to the Cinema folks. Not only to the Actors, but the Producers, Directors, Writers and other people of the intellectual world who have built up the Industry.

The "Movie" people are Hollywood boosters—their payroll finds its way into the local stores. Our own business owes much of its success to their generous patronage.

A Vote of Thanks to the Silversheet—and to the Universal Pictures Corporation who have shared greatly in giving us beautiful and progressive Hollywood!

We Are Equipped To Cater To the Studios

—With The Most Appropriate Of Apparel For Every "Set"

Garments whose photographic value is excellent. Accessories, too, pretty scarfs, hosiery, underthings, negligees, etc. The Studio whose costume department fashions apparel for its scenes will be satisfactorily taken care of in our yardage and trimmings section where the beautiful and the newest are ever on display.

The Smartest of Millinery For Professional Use

Whether the "call" is for a saucy little affair for the vivacious flapper, a picturesque creation for the featured heroine, or a conservative model for her who is to be the "screen mother"—the Hat is here that will complete the success of the "set." Just the right colors and trimmings for the camera. A model is available for any occasion—business, sports, street, dinner—and always Fashion's last dictate.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

What the New York Critics said

in BLACK

TIMES

THE SCREEN

By MORDAUNT HALL.

Horses as Players.

BLACK CYCLONE, with Rex, a horse; Lady, a mare; The Killer, a stallion; Guinn Williams, Kathleen Collins and Christian Frank; written and presented by Hal Roach; directed by Fredrick Wood. At the Capitol.

Jackina, overture; "Pyramids," Moment Mozartesque," "In Old French Canada," a scenic; Lieutenant Gitz-Rice renders a pot-pourri of Canadian folksongs; "Hold My Baby," a comedy. At the Capitol.

The wild horses in "Black Cyclone" will not have to drag people to the Capitol for this week, as the presence of these animals on the screen will undoubtedly make the journey to this theatre a thrilling and pleasant one. "Black Cyclone" is an admirable picture which has been directed with studious ingenuity, and although horses are seen in the principal roles, there is never a dull instant. Rex, the horse which possesses all the histrionic talents, is a splendid actor, and the manner in which the horses have been handled for the different scenes makes one forget that a camera was anywhere near at the time the scenes were photographed. One sees so much that is surprising when one stops to think it over, that after a while one is so absorbed that it appears to be perfectly natural to witness stallions in the characters of a hero and a villain, a mare as a heroine and a mangy burro filling the comedy rôle.

The long shots as well as the medium ones are most compelling. Now the producers are ever going to catch the horses, is where Rex, the hero stallion, is caught in the quicksands of a shallow river. He struggles vigorously to free himself and he whinnies for help. Then in the captions it is set forth that his legs are numb and useless, and one cannot help but think of a horse in such a dilemma. A cowboy who knows that the cry comes from a horse in trouble, hastens in the direction of the sound, and as soon as he finds Rex he bends the animal's head over so as to force him to kick and use his half-paralyzed limbs. Here you have realism, for there is no doubt that the horse is up to his belly in sand, and that he suddenly struggles partly out of the treacherous swamp. The cowboy then cuts a small load of twigs and places them in front of the horse, who eventually climbs out, joyful in the freedom he has regained.

Lady, the mare, has been captured by The Killer, a black-eyed pinto who knows every animal in his herd, while he bosses like a villain characterized by Wallace Beery. The Killer keeps his weather eye on the fair Lady, knowing that in the past he had scared Rex away from the herd when that animal was an ungainly colt.

So we have the clever Rex enlisting the aid of the cowboy to get Lady back with him, but like Cousin Egbert in "Ruggles of Red Gap," Rex will go "just so far but no farther." He has never been accustomed to having a man on his back and therefore although he is friendly with the cowboy who saved his life, he tosses the would-be rider to the ground rather than be encumbered. In the end, however, he discovers the cowpuncher to the whereabouts of the herd, and while Lady looks on, Rex has a terrible hoof and tooth encounter with The Killer, who seems surprised that this horse, alluded to as an ebony streak in the sunshine, should be able to defeat him.

The Killer looks like a real villain with his fierce black eye. Lady flirts as well as any other motion picture heroine, and she captures the audience when she puts her neck over Rex's back.

A burro, known as the Pest, furnishes the comedy. He is the clumsiest looking donkey one could imagine, but at the same time an animal for whom one is bound to feel sympathy. He is a Fuzzy Wuzzy specimen, wild and nonchalant, who apparently knows that he is not the handsomest beast in the world, but—means well.

Rex's mother is the victim of a rattlesnake. Later Rex has an encounter with a lioness which attacks Lady, and being a motion picture hero he comes out a victor. These sequences are cleverly pictured through double exposure.

We are informed that thousands of acres of Nevada's plains and hills supply the background for this picture which was directed by Frederick Wood Jackman. It is presented by Hal Roach who also mapped out the story.

There are three human participants in this film. They are Guinn Williams, the cowboy; Kathleen Collins, the girl heroine, and Christian Frank, who officiates as the scoundrel. They acquit themselves in sterling fashion.

Rex, the so-called wild horse, was seen last year in a film called "The King of Wild Horses." He is energetic and handsome, knowing just when to neigh for Lady. We should imagine that this is a film which will please almost everybody.

—Mordaunt Hall.

Wild Horses Take the Place of Hollywood Actors in 'Black Cyclone'—'The Crackerjack'

As refreshing and invigorating as the wind which swept the plains where it was photographed is "Black Cyclone," now being unwound at the Capitol with Rex, the William S. Hart of the equine kingdom, as its four footed star.

Rex is the flashing ebony horse that raced through the reels of "The King of Wild Horses" last season. He is a fine figure of an animal, a dashing, dynamic piece of horseflesh, and his performance in "Black Cyclone" reveals that he has made steady strides, or gallops rather, as an actor. Of course, some carping critics may cavil and remonstrate over his trick or expressing deep emotion simply by dilating his nostrils, but then it will be recalled that the good Mr. Hart goes about acting in much the same way.

"Black Cyclone," you should be told, has a decided plot, a triangular one, indeed, in which the principal figures are Rex, who is the upright force; the Killer, who is, as Mr. Griffith puts it, "the force for evil," and Lady, the bone of contention. The Killer is quite terrifying. He is played by a venomous-looking horse with the meanest pair of eyes in filmdom. Looking about for his human counterpart, we should say that his methods of registering evil passion are much the same as those employed by the capable Wallace Beery. Of the three principal characters Lady, a passive, colorless gray mare, shows up to least advantage, but then she has one of those negative roles which permit the actress to do little more than sit on her haunches while the two male members of the triangle fight for her love and understanding.

These combats between Rex and the Killer are thrilling in the extreme, and are not faked. Rising on their hind legs the two animals lock forelegs and bite one another, and, the clinches over, they pound their hoofs on one another's hides. Their fights seemed to this reviewer far more exciting and stirring than the customary encounters "to the death" between the leading man and the character actor, who simply go through the motions in order to earn their $2,000 a week. Rex and the Killer go at it in deadly earnest—for which they are probably well paid with two lumps of sugar soaked in vanilla.

There are beautiful pictures of a herd of wild horses galloping over the plains in "Black Cyclone," pictures that are marvels of composition. Indeed, there are no jarring Hollywoodian notes, except, possibly the subtitles which aid in recounting the stale paces through which the three horses are led. The love life of the horse, according to these written blurbs, is decidedly akin to the love life of the characters in Harold Bell Wright's tales.

Ever mindful of the movie public the producers have furnished comedy relief in the shape of a frowsy, plaintive little burro, a sad eyed little clown who stumbles ever and anon into the plot and gazes sadly toward the camera. This engaging creature is one of the few movie actors whom the writer would like to meet "in the flesh." He, or maybe she, has captured Eleonora Duse's trick of making actual a thing of the soul.

"Black Cyclone" is well worth seeing.

REX, WILD HORSE, STAR AT CAPITOL

"Black Cyclone" Proves to Be Picture of Many Thrills and Much Beauty.

THERE'S A HORSE VILLAIN

By HARLOW J. PETERS.

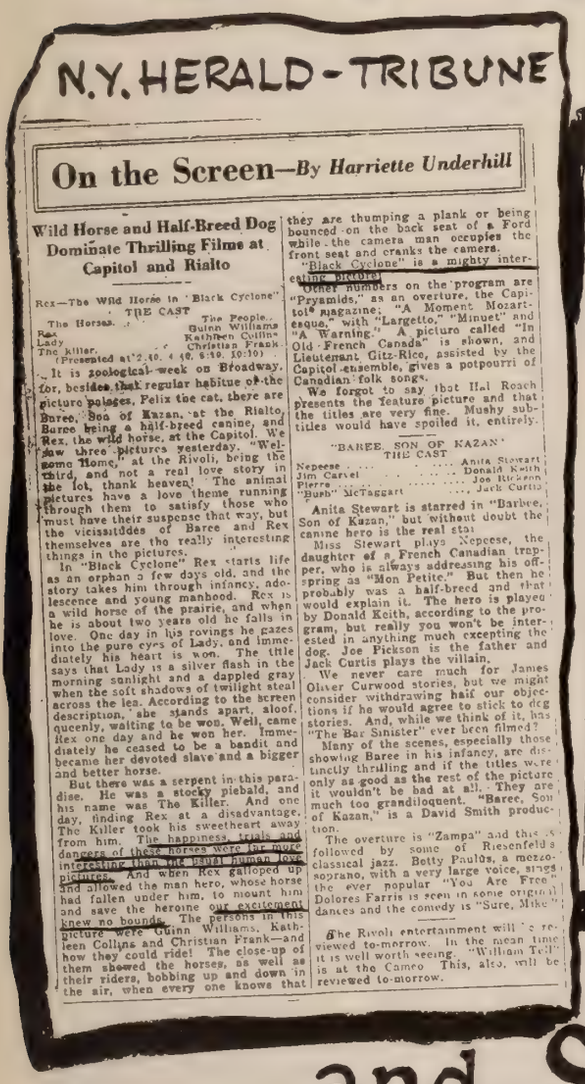
If there were such a thing as a National Film Library wherein pictures of leading works could be placed, one shelf would surely be kept for Hal Roach's production for which release of "Black Cyclone," which opened yesterday at the Capitol. "Black Cyclone" is the second starring appearance of Rex, the King of the Wild Horses, and again he proves that he not only has a fine screen personality, but is an actor of no mean power.

In this mechanical age pictures like "Black Cyclone" are simply invaluable in giving the city-ite and the farmer who knows horses only as something to drag ploughs with an impression of this majestic animal as he was created, and as he looks at his best. The camera shots of Rex and the other wild horses are simply magnificent; they are tremendously thrilling.

In fact, the whole picture is one thrill after another, with horse fights, long runs, and human doings mixed in. The story, by Hal Roach, is a fine background on which to hang the film, and while considerable stretched at times, keeps the action at a great pace all the way through.

Several moments stand out: the first appearance of The Killer, a big roan, who certainly looks the part of the villain; the scenes showing The Killer rounding up a herd; the two battles between Rex and The Killer; Rex's dilemma in the quicksand, and the human hero's work in getting him out; the scenes where the horse is trying to get the man to follow him; the killing of the mountain lion by Rex; and the wild ride after the human villain and the girl. They're all real thrills that no audience can possibly muff.

Lady, Rex's wife in the picture (we don't know whether she is off screen), is a pretty foil for the hero horse, and a nondescript burro plays a comedy part. The picture has all the roles found in a human picture allotted to animals, and it must be said that the casting director did a splendid job.



The supporting bill at the Capitol is of considerable worth, featuring Lieut. Gitz-Rice in a potpourri of Canadian folksongs. He is pleasant, and has an offering of good, if not sterling, material. The best number on the assisting program, however, is called "Moment Mozartesque," three short pieces before a very pleasing set, done by a violinist, spinet, soprano, and the ballet corps.

Also on the film bill is a comedy called "Hold My Baby," with Glenn Tryon starred. This picture, wonder of wonders, is really funny!

Wild Horse and Half-Breed Dog Dominate Thrilling Films at Capitol and Rialto

Rex—The Wild Horse in "Black Cyclone"

THE CAST

The Horses	The People
Rex	Guinn Williams
Lady	Kathleen Collins
The Killer	Christian Frank

(Presented at 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 10:10)

It is zoological week on Broadway, for, besides that regular habitue of the picture palaces, Felix the cat, there are Baree, Son of Kazan, at the Rialto, Baree being a half-breed canine, and Rex, the wild horse, at the Capitol. We saw three pictures yesterday. "Welcome Home," at the Rivoli, being the third, and not a real love story in the lot, thank heaven! The animal pictures have a love theme running through them to satisfy those who must have their suspense that way, but the vicissitudes of Baree and Rex themselves are the really interesting things in the pictures.

In "Black Cyclone" Rex starts life as an orphan a few days old, and the story takes him through infancy, adolescence and young manhood. Rex is a wild horse of the prairie, and when he is about two years old he falls in love. One day in his rovings he gazes into the pure eyes of Lady, and immediately his heart is won. The title says that Lady is a silver flash in the morning sunlight and a dappled gray when the soft shadows of twilight steal across the lea. According to the screen description, she stands apart, aloof, queenly, waiting to be won. Well, came Rex one day and he won her. Immediately he ceased to be a bandit and became her devoted slave and a bigger and better horse.

But there was a serpent in this paradise. He was a stocky piebald, and his name was The Killer. And one day, finding Rex at a disadvantage, The Killer took his sweetheart away from him. The happiness, trials and dangers of these horses were far more interesting than the usual human love pictures. And when Rex galloped up and allowed the man hero, whose horse had fallen under him, to mount him and save the heroine our excitement knew no bounds. The persons in this picture were Guinn Williams, Kathleen Collins and Christian Frank—and how they could ride! The close-up of them showed the horses, as well as their riders, bobbing up and down in the air, when every one knows that they are thumping a plank or being bounced on the back seat of a Ford while the camera man occupies the front seat and cranks the camera.

Other numbers on the program are "Pyramids," as an overture, the Capitol magazine; "A Moment Mozartesque," with "Largetto," "Minuet" and "A Warning." A picture called "In Old French Canada" is shown, and Lieutenant Gitz-Rice, assisted by the Capitol ensemble, gives a potpourri of Canadian folk songs.

We forgot to say that Hal Roach presents the feature picture and that the titles are very fine. Mushy subtitles would have spoiled it, entirely.

"BAREE, SON OF KAZAN"

THE CAST

Nepeese	Anita Stewart
Jim Carvel	Donald Keith
Pierre	Joe Rickson
"Bush" McTaggart	Jack Curtis

Anita Stewart is starred in "Barbee, Son of Kazan," but without doubt the canine hero is the real star.

Miss Stewart plays Nepeese, the daughter of a French Canadian trapper, who is always addressing his offspring as "Mon Petite." But then he probably was a half-breed and that would explain it. The hero is played by Donald Keith, according to the program, but really you won't be interested in anything much excepting the dog. Joe Pickson is the father and Jack Curtis plays the villain.

We never care much for James Oliver Curwood stories, but we might consider withdrawing half our objections if he would agree to stick to dog stories. And, while we think of it, has "The Bar Sinister" ever been filmed?

Many of the scenes, especially those showing Baree in his infancy, are distinctly thrilling and if the titles were only as good as the rest of the picture it wouldn't be bad at all. They are much too grandiloquent. "Baree, Son of Kazan," is a David Smith production.

The overture is "Zampa" and this is followed by some of Riesenfeld's classical jazz. Betty Paulus, a mezzo-soprano, with a very large voice, sings the ever popular "You Are Free." Dolores Farris is seen in some original dances and the comedy is "Sure, Mike."

The Rivoli entertainment will be reviewed to-morrow. In the mean time it is well worth seeing. "William Tell" is at the Cameo This, also, will be reviewed to-morrow.

N.Y. WORLD

AT THE CAPITOL

"BLACK CYCLONE"

Hal Roach presents a picture written by himself starring Rex and supported by Lady and The Killer—all horses. Assisting them are Guinn Williams, Kathleen Collins and Christian Frank.

"Black Cyclone" is a picture full of absurdities and yet one of uncommon interest. Its featured actor is a wild horse; its chief actress and its villian are also wild horses.

It is, of course, impossibe to tell whether or not Rex and Lady and The Killer are actually wild. From the look in the villian's eye, from the way Rex fights, and from the nasty flattening of the ears of Lady it seems safe to say that they are not household pets. And after close scrutiny throughout the film we may report that no branding marks are visible.

The maintenance of this semblance of vicious freedom in three horses trained so remarkably to their tasks seems no small achievement.

A program note relates that Rex was discovered by Hal Roach chained in a locked stall in Colorado. He was regarded as unmanageable, having killed one man and severely injured another. It is well known that such horses exist in the West. If Rex isn't one of them, he certainly gives an exciting imitation.

In the course of events he gets caught in quicksand, kills a mountain lion, drives off a pack of wolves and winds up in a bitter battle with The Killer. Although the action is occasionally and necessarily faked, few more exciting films have recently appeared. For any with even the vaguest kind of friendly feeling for horses the picture can be generously recommended.

"Black Cyclone"

Wonderful Horse Picture Now at the Capitol.

CAST.

The Horses	The People
Rex	Guinn Williams
Lady	Kathleen Collins
The Killer	Christian Frank

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

Well, folks, we won't have to go to the circus to see what a horse looks like this week. Nope, "Black Cyclone" swooped into the Capitol yesterday for a week's melodramatic stay, starring Rex, the "wonder horse," in a story written by Hal Roach, expertly directed by Fred Jackman.

This is the most notable production we have seen in many a day. It's intriguingly different. The action centers around Black Cyclone, who grows from a colt to restless "manhood" alone in the wilds. We follow his courting of Lady, the "silver streak" he adores. His battles with The Killer, an outlaw equine who trespasses and conquers bands of wild horses by might.

Three "humans" are introduced as the story nears its close, their loves and battles closely linked to those of Black Cyclone. There's a race, too, most thrilling and glorious. If you go to the Capitol only to see Guinn Williams race Black Cyclone bareback up hill and down dale, you'll get the thrill of a lifetime.

Lovers of horses will revel in this production. Even gasoline lovers should enjoy it.

N.Y. EVENING POST

Rex, the Wild Horse, Performs at the Capitol This Week

HAL ROACH has produced another picture featuring Rex, "king of wild horses." The new film, entitled "Black Cyclone," is being shown at the Capitol Theatre this week.

"Black Cyclone," naturally enough, is a Western film, but it is different from most in that the cowboy hero and the inevitable fair damsel are decidedly of secondary importance. The cast is made up, for the most part, of animal actors, and how they can act! The picture is a remarkable piece of work.

Rex, or Black Cyclone as he is called, takes unto himself a mate in this picture a dappled gray mare named Lady. Lady is a coy soul, but she adores her hero and eventually precipitates him into two of the fiercest fights imaginable with The Killer, the horse-villain of the piece. The Killer possesses one of the most persevering dispositions we have ever encountered in a movie plot, and it is a pleasure to see him worsted at last.

Altogether "Black Cyclone" is one of the most entertaining pictures we have seen for some time. It is not only a photographic feat, but also a moving drama of life in the wilds. The horse actors could give lessons to many a movie actor with gratifying results. It is a relief to get away from the stereotyped Western rubber stamp for a change.

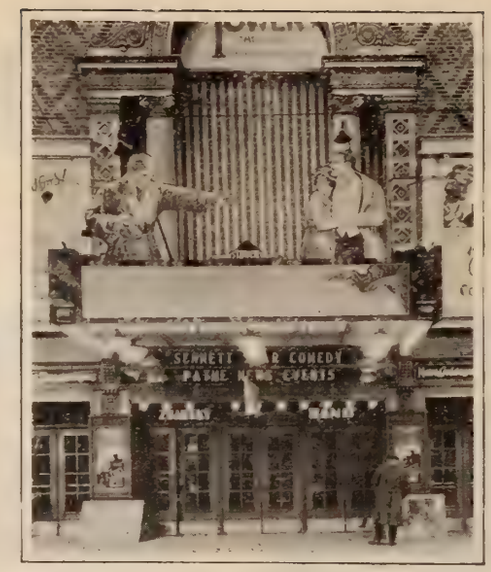
and S. L. Rothafel says:

"One of the best pictures I have seen in 5 years!"

Stormy Marquee Display is Aid to "The Tornado"

When Manager Jim Travers of Proctor's 125th Street theatre learned that his circuit had booked "The Tornado," he immediately started looking for something unusual for his marquee display. He started his teaser advertising in the lobby and on the screen with various tornado warnings, but depended on the marquee stunt to put over the final wallop when the picture opened. He constructed three giant shadow boxes, two of which are shown in the accompanying photographs. Travers rigged up an electric spark device and several wind machines to furnish animation of these displays. With electric sparks going strong giving lightning effects and making a noise that could be heard for blocks and the fans blowing streamers from the sides of the boxes, eccentric wheels moving planes in the boxes up and down,—Travers had a great display.

For street ballyhoo Travers again employed the sparking device in the center of a flashy display on a huge truck, circulating in the neighborhood for two weeks preceding and during the showing.



"Capital Punishment" Ads Addressed to Officials"

Al Selig, special exploiteer for "Capital Punishment", in New York state, devised some novel means of putting the picture over during its recent showing at the Crescent theatre, Syracuse.

The campaign was started twelve days in advance of the opening and when Selig took small teaser space in the four leading papers. A heavy black border helped give a conspicious display to the copy which was addressed each day to a different city official such as "Mayor Waldo, what is your opinion of capital punishment?" Similar inquiries were made to the chief of police, the district attorney, the prosecuting attorney, etc. These ads were followed up with others saying "Mayor Waldo, we haven't heard from you—won't you say what you think of capital punishment?" Public interest was keyed to a high pitch when the theatre came out with a big splash in their Sunday announcement.

Selig secured the cooperation of the Syracuse Telegram to inaugurate an essay contest during the engagement of "Capital Punishment." The theatre's share of publicity was half column story every day for a week in return for which they contributed a total of fifty dollars in prizes—a low rate for very valuable advertising.

The Crescent lobby was made striking by the use of cut-out figures placed in three cells upon which distant spotlights shed a green illumination. The figures were looking across the lobby at the outline of an electric chair and a scaffold.

Airplane Advertising for "Dick Turpin" Showing

The engagement of "Dick Turpin" at the Temple theatre, Birmingham, was supported by a thorough exploitation campaign, conducted by Nat L. Royster. The highlights were:

Distributed 15,000 heralds and specially printed handbills scattered from an aeroplane.

Three days in advance of show date 5,000 heralds offering $5,000 reward for capture of "Dick Turpin" were dropped from plane with newspaper publicity about the flight

On Saturday before opening date of picture, plane flew over city again with 10,000 heralds advising show date. Newspapers carried notices also about plane dropping free passes pasted on front page of the morning papers, and being dropped from the sky. Thousands of people were watching the sky waiting for tickets.

One week in advance, a newspaper campaign was used advising that the famous bandit "Dick Turpin" was headed towards Birmingham and asking citizens to keep on the lookout for him.

All ushers, doormen and pages were dressed in suitable "Dick Turpin" costumes, while a special stage prologue was produced featuring a classic dancer and singer.

Twenty 24-sheets stands were used, with threes, ones and window cards in abundance over the city.

In the Birmingham News on Sunday a four-column, nineteen-inch display advertisement was carried, while in the Birmingham Age-Herald a four-column eleven-inch display ad was carried. In the Birmingham News a special ten-inch story with a two-column cut was used on the sport page with a description of the fights of the olden days and the present day fight.

Through a tie-up on the musical numbers used in connection with "The Navigator" (Metro-Goldwyn), Manager K. Vaveris of the Capitol theatre, Altoona Pa., obtained this window display in a local novelty store, given over entirely to the picture.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

What Price Goofy?
(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS picture carries forward the tradition, now pretty well established, that when you go to see a Charley Chase comedy you will at lease be spared the terrors of boredom. "What Price Goofy?" is a picture giving every evidence that the gag writers, the director, the cameraman, the players have been up on their toes all the time trying to give screen fans something a bit fresh. There appears to be a lot of care and thought put into the work of this Hal Roach unit. Indeed, from the standpoint of honest effort, intelligence and good taste, the Charley Chase outfit ranks as one of the very best units making short length pictures.

"What Price Goofy?" tells the story of a jealous wife who leaves her husband because a catty friend says she saw him flirting with a woman who made him a present of a dog. When he walks in followed by a devoted but unwanted canine trailing at his heels the fireworks start. They keep on going when a "Professor Brown" is introduced by letter from a friend. The professor proves to be a woman and so there is a great go-around about keeping her out of range of the jealous wife. A butler helps the husband to keep up the deceit and the dog, a wizard at finding hidden objects, adds to the difficulties.

The dog is "Buddy," and we must say for it that its performance is perfection. Charley Chase plays the role of the husband with that unassuming, unpretentious air which makes him so likeable a screen comedian. Katherine Grant does her part splendidly, and the same must be said of Lucien Littlefield—capital as the butler—Noah Young and Marjorie Whities.

Leo McCarey directed the picture, which is something more to the credit of this most capable comedy maker.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Horace Greely, Jr.
(Pathe—Two Reels)

HARRY LANGDON is the star of this two-reel comedy produced by Principal Pictures under the direction of Alf Goulding. It provides an effective setting for the actor, who is seen in the wild, wild west, where he meets rough men and becomes a hero in spite of his tremendous respect for their superior fighting abilities.

The picture presents some effective situations and not a few sure-fire gags, but at the same time it is felt that Langdon has traveled far along the road since this offering was made. Langdon is now in the position where his pictures just have to be something more than merely "good" to satisfy his fans. But while "Horace Greely, Jr." is only good, still it stars an increasingly popular comedian and since there is some diversion in the film we expect it will succeed wherever shown.—T. C. KENNEDY.

The Cloudhopper
(Educational—Two Reels)

LARRY SEMON, Norman Taurog and Steve Roberts are responsible for this story that stars Semon. It looks as though three of them might have contrived a better vehicle for the comedian. The story is not so bad, but it could be a lot better for one of the laugh-making proclivities of Semon.

As a matter of fact the lack of real comedy is more than offset by the thrills of the second reel, in which Semon accomplishes what appear to be some exceptionally hazardous feats. In the first place the action shows him changing from a fast-moving auto to the rope ladder attached to an aeroplane. Later he is seen changing from the wing of one aeroplane to the wing of another. There is an exciting battle on the wing of this second plane, one that is apt to hold an audience tense . As a whole the picture should be acceptable where this class of two-reeler is liked.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Riders of the Kitchen Range
(Pathe—One Reel)

EARL MOHAN and Billy Engle play the leading roles in this single from the Hal Roach studios. It is filled with the gags which are dear to the hearts of comedy directors. There are the tumbles, the very vampy vamps, the canister of "Powder" with a long fuse lighted and slowly reaching the point where it will lift the heavy stove which pins the ubiquitous under-dog of the comedy team to the floor. It is all very "usual" but done in an unusually good style for a single-reel offering. Dolores Johnston and Ena Gregory appear in the cast. The picture was co-directed by Tay Garnett and George Jeske.—T. C. KENNEDY.

The Runt
(Pathe—One Reel)

A HUMAN interest drama is presented in the animated cartoons which Paul Terry offers in this interesting "Aesop's Film Fables" reel. "The Runt" is a little pig which is bullied and butted about by the bigger pigs. They pick on the Runt all the time, taking his food away from him and not permitting him to play with them. But the Runt saves the bullies when they are locked in a box car and are on their way to the Chicago packing houses, and then, of course, they hail him as a hero.—T. C. KENNEDY.

Pathe Review No. 23
(One Reel)

A NEW feature "Camera Interviews with American Painters," is introduced in this issue of Pathe Review. The scenes show Henry R. Rittenberg, A. N. A., and a portrait painter of note, at work on a canvas. It should prove a generally interesting addition to this screen magazine as it shows the artist at work and follows the progress of the painting from the first sketchy daubs of the brush to the final touches. A color subject titled "New York the Home Town" reveals Manhattan's residential districts and the final contribution is the fifth installment of the Roy Chapman Andrews expedition into Mongolia, in search of "The Origin of Man."—T. C. KENNEDY.

Earth's Other Half
(Educational—One Reel)

IN this Hodge Podge Lyman H. Howe attempts to show one-half the world how the other half lives and he accomplishes the task in his usual clever style. The arrangement of the picture is pleasing, the cartoons humorous, and the scenic and educational angles well worth while.

The customs of the Seminoles, a peculiar trible of Indians in Florida, are revealed in entertaining fashion, as are those of dwellers in China, South America, Switzerland and the Scottish Highlands. Intersperesd with these are clever cartoons, showing the magnifying of an ordinary glass of Vodka, the putting of holes in Swiss cheese, the making and shipping of Edam cheese and the study of the maguey plant of Mexico. This is a picture that should be pleasing to any audience.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Fun's Fun
(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

CLIFF BOWES and Virginia Vance are the proud parents of a belligerant youngster, who, with the neighbor's kid, succeeds in making a mess of himself and everything about the house. The theme of the picture seems to be for the kids to get themselves as dirty as possible and to be retrieved for their parents by a well-trained dog. The reel is replete with the usual slapstick comedy, with a laugh here and there, but all in all is not up to the standard of some of this series in the past.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Eugenia Gilbert Returns To Sennett Comedies

After a year's absence from the Sennett comedy lot, Eugenia Gilbert has returned and is under a long-term contract to appear in comedies to be made for Pathe release. Miss Gilbert graduated from the bathing beauties group to featured roles with Sennett and then branched out as a "vamp" in dramatic productions, and though her venture in the serious plays was highly successful, she is back to her first love, the short comedies.

Miss Gilbert's first picture since returning to Sennett is "A Rainy Knight," which Lloyd Bacon directed with a cast composed of Raymond McKee, Ruth Taylor, Marvin Lobach and Irving Bacon.

Christie Announces New Comedy Productions

New comedy productions announced by Christie Film Company include "Air Tight," starring Bobby Vernon; "Oh Bridget," in which Walter Hiers plays the star role; "Sit Tight," featuring Jimmie Adams, and "Call a Cop," with Neal Burns in the featured role.

The Bobby Vernon comedy was directed by Harold Beaudine from a story by Raymond Ross. Charlotte Stevens, Eddie Baker and Ward Caulfield. "Oh Bridget" shows Hiers in a play in which he assumes the role of a portly Irish cook. He is supported by Clara Horton, Bill Irving, Bill Blaisdell, Rosa Gore, Lincoln Plumer and George French.

Alice Day Returns for New Sennett Comedy

Alice Day, who is being featured in a series of two-reel Sennett comedies for Pathe release, has returned to the studio after a vacation of four weeks. She has started work in a new comedy directed by Art Rosson.

Ernie Woods, light comedian of the speaking stage who was recently signed by Mack Sennett, makes his screen debut in the leading male role opposite Miss Daly. Others in important roles are Alma Bennett, J. J. Richardson, Barney Hellum and Billy Gilbert.

Short Subjects and Serials

New Cartoon Novelty Reel Offered by J. C. Terry

Cartoonist John C. Terry, one of the pioneers in the field of animated screen cartoons, is offering on the independent market a new novelty reel called "Famous Sayings in Modern Slang." The subjects, 450 feet in length are based on a unique idea originated by Mr. Trry, and consist of a series of famous quotations which are followed by the modern interpretation of the thoughts they embody expressed in modern slang.

Each quotation is decorated with sketches drawn by Terry. The famous sayings and the application of them to modern slang occupy 300 feet of each reel, the balance of the 450 lengths being devoted to a hand drawing illustrating a "cheer up" message.

John C. Terry is a brother of Paul Terry, maker of the "Aesop's Film Fables." He is a veteran newspaper cartoonist and for his slang expressions draws upon a thorough acquaintance with the old Barbary Coast, Coney Island, The American Frontier, the Paddock, the Ring, the Campus and the Diamond. In all his cartoon work he has specialized in "Americanisms" for the dialogue and captions to his drawings. He entered the motion picture field several years ago, his first work being the animation of the T. A. Dorgan (TAD) cartoons. Subsequently he was associated with International Newsreel as chief cartoonist and has done similar work for Paramount, Pathe and other companies.

Charley Chase and Harry Langdon Feature Program for Week of June 7th

THE Pathe short subject program of releases for the week of June 7th contains a Charley Chase two-reeler, a Harry Langdon two-reeler, a Hal Roach single reeler, a chapter of the serial "Sunken Silver," Pathe Review, Pathe News, Aesop's Film Fables and "Topics of the Day."

Charley Chase will be seen in the Hal Roach two-reeler, "What Price Goofy." Assisting the comedian in leading roles are Katherine Grant, Jane Sherman, Marjorie Whiteis and Lucien Littlefield.

Harry Langdon will be seen in "Horace Greeley, Jr.," first of a special series of two Harry Langdon comedies presented by Principal Pictures Corporation. Alf Goulding directed.

"Riders of the Kitchen Range" is the title of the Hal Roach one-reeler which presents Earl Mohan in the featured role. In addition the cast includes Billy Engle, Ena Gregory and Dolores Johnston. Tay Garnett and George Jeske directed.

"Sea Tigers" is the title of the fifth chapter of the Pathe serial "Sunken Silver," adapted from Albert Payson Terhune's novel, "Black Caesar's Clan." Supporting the featured players, Allene Ray and Walter Miller, are Ivan Linow, Frank Wunderlee and Frank Lackteen. This is a George B. Seitz production.

Pathe Review No. 23 continues the series of American Cities in Pathecolor, revealing New York, the big home town. Camera interviews with American Painters introduces Henry R. Rittenberg, A. N. A., the noted portrait painter. Chapter V of "The Origin of Man" series is entitled "The Hill Country" and unfolds further scenes from the exclusive picture log of the Roy Chapman Andrews Expedition into Mongolia.

The Pathe program of June 7th is completed by "The Runt," one of the animated cartoon series, "Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day" and Pathe News Nos. 48 and 49.

N. Y. Police Parade Filmed For Christie Comedy

Scenes of the Police Parade held recently in New York will be one of the features of the Christie Comedy, "Call a Cop," with Neal Burns, which is now nearing completion at the Christie studios, Los Angeles.

Four cameramen, stationed at advantageous points along Seventh avenue, Forty-second street and Fifth avenue, secured excellent views of the parade. These scenes were immediately sent to California and will appear as part of the action in the finished comedy.

Tyler Brooke is Signed by Hal Roach

HAL ROACH has signed Tyler Brooke, featured stage comedian, to a long term contract to appear in Hal Roach comedies for Pathe release. Brooke has appeared before the camera only in one or two minor roles. He is now closing a successful engagement with the musical comedy hit, "No, No, Nannette."

Brooke is well known as a featured comedian in musical comedy. Previous to his present engagement he was with Edith Day in "Wildfire," and has appeared with such players as Gallagher and Shean, Taylor Holmes, William Norris, Elsa Adler, Raymond Hitchcock and Julia Sanderson.

Release stills from "Ask Grandma," a two-reel "Our Gang" comedy produced by Hal Roach for Pathe.

Two New Comedians Signed For Educational Films

Two new comedians are under contract to appear in pictures on the Educational program schedule for June. They are Mickey Bennett and Eddie Nelson, who will make their first appearance in Juvenile and Mermaid Comedies, respectively.

Mickey Bennett attracted much favorable attention due to his work in the Paramount production, "Big Brother." He was recently signed by Juvenile Comedies and his first picture is "Baby Blues."

Eddie Nelson is a vaudeville favorite. He has been appearing on the Orpheum and Keith circuit in his own act, "The Sunkist Kid." His first appearance in New York was a two weeks' engagement at the New York Hippodrome.

"Bride" Series Available for June Showing

The second of the "Here Comes the Bride" series released in Pathe Review will be ready for the exhibitors June 21st. It is "The Dutch Bride" and will be included in Review No. 25. The first of the series. "The Highland Bride," was released May 24th with Review No. 21.

"The American Bride" will be issued in Review No. 28, scheduled for release July 12th, but available by pre-release arrangements, two weeks ahead of the general release date. Other "Brides" features now being prepared for Pathe Review are "The Japanese Bride," "The Spanish Bride," "The Norse Bride," "The Breton" and "The Hindu."

The Crimson Runner

(Stromberg-Producers Dist. Corp.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

PRISCILLA DEAN has a routine film one that does not anywhere near approach her previous productions. While her role—that of a female Dick Turpin or Robin Hood—is colorful enough and gives her the chance to exploit her vivid personality, the plot is a hackneyed affair which never varies in running true to its oft-repeated formula. The author has simply changed the locale—using a background of post-war Vienna instead of Paris. His idea is to present a feminine robber who steals from the rich to give to the poor, but he forgets his theme in having the heroine give up her lofty ideals when she falls in love with a wealthy scion.

It's the customary Apache tale. Even Vienna has this celebrated figure of the Paris slums according to the title writer. The characters are all in their places and the plot courses obviously through its groove. It starts off with a shot or two of starving Viennese, followed by an unscrupulous landlord attacking the heroine. This fracas brings on the death of her paralytic brother and her escape from the flames which destroy the house.

Then comes the heroine as the leader of the Apaches. She is known by the title of the picture. The plot resolves itself into a battle between the heroine and the police. She always eludes capture—even when she is trapped in the hero's home. She makes her last escape by swinging on the chandelier through the window—a stunt that has lost its thrill through much repetition by heroic stars. There is nothing to keep it going at this point except to fall back on a masquerade ball which culminates in the arch-villain tearing the mask from the heroine's face and attacking her again. He had elevated himself from his landlord job to commissioner of police. The hero eliminates him in a duel—and a honeymoon follows in the Tyrol.

The story is too much like the romantic comic opera—and is never convincing. Aside from the star, Taylor Holmes as a butler, and Alan Hale as the villain play their parts well. The photography and lighting are poor.

THEME. Melodrama of post-war victim who becomes a robber to steal from the rich to give to the poor. Exacts vengeance upon enemy and gives up hectic career under influence of romance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting by Priscilla Dean. Taylor Holmes' study of a butler. The villainy by Alan Hale. The masquerade ball.

DIRECTION. Old-fashioned most of the way. Doesn't go over any new ground in treatment of plot, though he was up against it on account of hackneyed story. Permits players to overact.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Mention this as affording Priscilla Dean with another colorful role. You can ballyhoo it with the title. Put on Apache dance for prologue.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses. Where star is popular picture should draw.

SUMMARY. Starts off on one tack and then goes on one entirely different. Old-fashioned, hackneyed story of the comic opera type. Easy to spot every scene in advance. Marred by poor photography and lighting. And acting is stilted aside from star, Holmes and Hale.

THE CAST

Bianca Schreber	Priscilla Dean
Alfred Schreber	Bernard Siegel
Gregory (later Von Krutz)	Alan Hale
Meinhard von Bauer	Ward Crane
Rudolph	James Neil
Semlin	Charles H. Mailes
Cecile	Ilsa de Lindt
Conrad, the Black	Mitchell Lewis
Bobo, the valet	Taylor Holmes
Captain of Police	Arthur Millett

By Harvey Gates. Directed by Tom Forman.

SYNOPSIS. Poverty-stricken victim of war in Vienna resolves to become a robber, stealing from the rich to give to the poor. She is also actuated by a desire for vengeance against the man who disrupted her home and made her an outcast. Eludes the police and has romance with wealthy scion. Forgets her high ideals. Hero eventually saves her from her enemy. The latter is eliminated. Love triumphs

Just a Woman

(First National—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT won't make any difference to the average patron that he hasn't seen the original Eugene Walter play from which this picture is adapted. Some departure has been made from it to fit in with censorship—and working along this line the director and adaptor have found occasion to spice it up with humor. They have certainly worked to disarm those who would be analytical over this favorite triangle pattern—which follows such a well-worn groove. Whoever wrote the subtitles seized the opportunity to indulge in some breezy wisecracks. These are uttered mostly by Edward Gribbon in the role of a flashy friend of the other woman.

Anyone seeing the first feel can spot the finish—as well as most of the intervening incident which transpires. Most of the scenes have been employed a score of times—but they have been kept from being dull through the timely comedy relief which shades nearly every dramatic situation. If the sponsors have erred at all it is in not bringing out the characterization. It becomes difficult to take sides in the domestic quarrel. You don't give much sympathy for the neglected wife—and none at all for the husband and the friend. Such results are not conductive toward building story interest. But the attention doesn't wander, because of the good staging, the share of amusing highlights and the subtitles.

It tells of a steel worker who is elevated to the presidency of the plant, chiefly through the efforts of his wife and their boarder, the inventor of a process to turn out steel finer and cheaper. So they are elevated to wealthy heights without going through any refining process themselves. They carry themselves as if they were accustomed to the ways of the rich all their lives. So the plot unfolds with the husband attracted away from his home by the other woman and suing his wife for divorce. In the end he makes an "about face" and is brought to his senses by the child. It's a formula picture, cut and dried, but offering fair results.

THEME. Domestic drama of poor working couple who are suddenly elevated to high estate through invention of mutual friend. The husband trespasses against marital vows, starts divorce proceedings, but is finally reconciled to wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The comedy flavor which often saves the story from becoming trite. The comedy bit by Edward Gribbon. The vivid portrayal of vamp by Dorothy Revier. Scene when wife is compromised.

DIRECTION. Flavors it with humor, thus saving it from traveling entirely over familiar ground. Fails to get more from characterization — the figures jumping to high circles too abruptly. Keeps it fairly active.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can tease the title from all kinds of angles. Exploit the author, who wrote "The Easiest Way." Feature the players. All are popular. Bill as domestic drama of how a wife saved her child through her willingness to declare him illegitimate.

DRAWING POWER. Has enough tone and quality to get over in first runs. Should prove popular with feminine patrons. Cast should draw them. For better houses.

SUMMARY. While this follows a regulation design in that everything is developed according to set standards, it manages to be tolerably entertaining. This is due to the foresight in pointing it with humor. Acting not above the ordinary as characterization is vague. However, it has a certain tone and quality about it.

THE CAST

June Holton	Claire Windsor
Robert Holton	Conway Tearle
Bobby, their son	Dorothy Brock
George Rand	Percy Marmont
Clarice Clement	Dorothy Revier
Oscar Dunn	Edward Gribbon

By Eugene Walter. Adapted by Jack Cunningham. Directed by Irving Cummings.

SYNOPSIS. Young steel worker is elevated to presidency of plant through invention of friend of family. Moves to New York and is lured away from home by the other woman who urges him to seek a divorce. He starts proceedings in this direction when he believes his wife unfaithful. However, the child reconciles them.

Kiss Me Again

(Ernst Lubitsch Production-Warner Brothers—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ERNST LUBITSCH'S artistic hand is again in evidence in this one. The German director has once again succeeded in injecting a lot of appealing and unusual details which are bound to arouse the interest as well as approval of any audience. These are details noted only in pictures produced by this gifted artist. In fact we would say that the direction is the highlight of this picture, the acting comes next and the story last. There is nothing of startling originality in the plot, although it is a light, airy affair, ideal for warm weather consumption and good for folks who do not like to exercise their gray matter over much when indulging in an hour or so of film entertainment.

The production has a good box office title and it suggests some of the snappy things we see in the picture, in fact so intimate do some of the shots become toward the close that they approach close to the border line. Parents should leave the children home when they see this one. There is, of course, an artistic mounting throughout. We always expect this of Lubitsch. The interiors especially are very pleasing to the eye.

The story is a lesson in procedure in how to retain the love of a wife. The answer being not to become alarmed when "the other man" wins her love, but treat it nonchalantly and step out yourself with "the other woman." At least that is the way it works out here and with great success. The cast is a small, but admirable one. Marie Prevost is a fine selection for the role of Loulou, the flirtatious little French spouse. Monte Blue does his usual appealing work as hubby, while Clara Bow as the vamp, is all that could be desired. Willard Lewis is there with his entertaining facial expressions. John Roche is good as the home destroyer. There is much good comedy and a very clever climax.

THEME. A Parisian domestic mixup in which a husband quickly cures his wife's infatuation for a "pretty" male musician by plotting with a little flapper to step out with him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The player piano episode, in which a music roll is placed in the instrument to play while the lovers "do their stuff," unbeknown to the husband in another room. The snappy titles. The subtle humor in evidence throughout. The scene in which the husband tries to get rid of "the other man." The chateau Rogue interior. The clever climax.

DIRECTION. The best thing in the picture. A joy to behold. We recommend that other wielders of the megaphone sit in and look at it.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Suggests fine opportunities for tie-ups and prologues using Victor Herbert's world-famous song, "Kiss Me Again." Producers have provided a wide variety of stills for use in window displays of pianos, Coronas, clothes, furniture, flowers, etc. Play up the names of the cast and use Lubitsch's name equally as big.

DRAWING POWER. Fame of director, popularity of stars and light quality story should attract business for this one at this time in most houses.

SUMMARY. A vehicle for sophisticated folks containing much subtle humor, good acting and above all, fine direction. Attractively mounted and rich in exploitation opportunities. Recommended for summertime presentation.

THE CAST

Loulou Fleury	Marie Prevost
Gaston Fleury	Monte Blue
Maurice Ferriere	John Roche
Grizette	Clara Bow
Dr. Dubois	Willard Lewis

By H. Kraely. Directed by Ernst Lubitsch. Photographed by Charles Van Enger.

SYNOPSIS. When Loulou Fleury becomes infatuated with Maurice Ferriere, a musician, her husband, Gaston Fleury, gives her his home and a large sum and moves to a hotel. Loulou was not prepared for such quick work and suspected her husband of having "another woman." Loulou's interest in Maurice cools especially when she discovers Gaston at a large cabaret with Grizette, a vamp. But it develops that it was just a plan to make the wife jealous and in the end there is a reunion with Maurice out in the cold.

Stop Flirting

(Producers Distributing Corp.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by William Campbell)

AL and Charley Christie have assembled almost their entire company of funmakers in this latest feature comedy which is filled with fast-moving episodes woven about a flimsy story of a young wife whose flirting with other men drives the husband to plot a phoney disappearance in an airplane so that he can cure his spouse. The wife is inspired to flirt because her husband has been overdoing the same thing with other women. So she invites a few dozen males to a house party and the husband soon finds himself an outcast. It is then that he decides to accept the suggestion of a friend and lead his wife to believe that he has been lost in an airplane wreck.

The sequence showing the husband crawling into the airplane, being knocked senseless by a wrench falling on his dome, and being whirled away into the clouds where he is discovered by the pilots and forced to crawl down a rope ladder from which he swings as a speeding aquaplane tries to rescue him will furnish many a laugh. So will the climax in which hubby, a bogus count, and a butler all impersonate an escaped lunatic, who has an idea that he is the Hunchback of Notre Dame, and which starts a wild chase of some half hundred guests, principals, lunatics and guards about the house.

The cast is a good one for this type of picture. John T. Murray is funny as the husband. His facial expressions adding to the enjoyment of his work. Wanda Hawley is acceptable as the bride, although she is not called upon for much acting. Jimmie Adams contributes several laughs as an awkward nobleman. Hallam Cooley, Ethel Shannon, Vera Steadman and others do well in minor roles. This is a good picture for summertime presentation. It is filled with fun and will offer an hour's wholesome entertainment.

THEME. A farce comedy in which husband and wife cure each other of flirting after both have gone through some amusing and at times thrilling adventures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene in which the husband is forced to descend from an airplane into the sea from which he is picked up by a pursuing aquaplane. The sequence in which the wife discovers the bogus disappearance plan and enters into much merrymaking. The climax in which three of the leading characters impersonate the Hunchback of Notre Dame.

DIRECTION. Scott Sidney has succeeded in accomplishing the aim of the makers of this picture-pure comedy. He has injected several thrills as well as much fun.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of the stars. Tie-up with a safety-first campaign at dangerous street intersections and railroad crossings by placing signs "Stop Flirting—with Death. Drive Carefully." Use popular song tie-up. Song published by New York publishers. Have airplane drop copies of the song if this can be arranged in the larger cities.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for houses where patrons are not too critical and where they would rather laugh than use their brains. Good for some community houses and towns.

SUMMARY. Much ado about nothing, but possessing many laughs withal. A good cast that represents the cream of the Christie studio personnel. Has a few thrills and a climax that carries a kick. Made for laughing purposes only so you'll have to overlook the story.

THE CAST

Perry Reynolds	John T. Murray
Vivian Marsden	Wanda Hawley
Geoffrey Dangerfield	Hallam Cooley
Marjorie Leeds	Ethel Shannon
Suzanne	Vera Steadman
Count Spinagio	Jimmie Adams
Butler	Jack Duffy
Teddy	Jimmy Harrison
Bobby Anderson	David Jones

Based on the London musical comedy by Fred Jackson. Directed by Scott Sidney.

SYNOPSIS. Downhearted because his bride, Vivian, insists on flirting with three or four men invited among others to a house party, Perry Reynolds consents to a friend's plan to disappear. He makes Vivian believe he has gone away in an airplane which later is reported lost. But Vivian overhears the friend talking to Perry, who is hiding nearby in a boathouse. She starts flirting again. Impersonating an escaped lunatic who thinks he is the Hunchback of Notre Dame, Perry scares everyone to death. Eventually there is a reconciliation.

Are Parents People?

(Paramount-Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE first contribution of Malcolm St. Claire to the Paramount program is a decidedly entertaining one. Mr. St. Claire will be remembered for his megaphone work in "The Lighthouse By the Sea," and several Buster Keaton comedies. The story is from the pen of Alice Duer Miller and it ran in the Saturday Evening Post. Proof enough for the quality of the plot. Betty Bronson, who skyrocketed to fame over night in "Peter Pan," Florence Vidor and Adolphe Menjou have the principal roles and who could ask more in the way of popular players?

Although there are only four or five principal characters and the film runs seven reels, little padding is in evidence, except at one point where Mr. St. Claire has permitted the "movie hero" to give us too much of his acting ability. The story has to do with parents, the victims of incompatibility, who decide to separate, but whom are brought together once more by the plottings of their daughter.

Miss Bronson is a "knockout," in this second contribution to the screen. It is a more "grownup" role than she had in "Peter Pan," and she is simply fascinating. Possessing youth, beauty, vivacity, charm, this little player is irresistible. At times she reminds us of Gloria Swanson, exhibiting ever and anon mannerisms peculiar to the Marquise. Florence Vidor, of course, is splendid, while Adolphe Menjou scores again as the father.

The picture is filled with "big moments." There is the parting of the parents, the love scenes between the young doctor and Lita, the scene in which the movie hero demonstrates his art for Lita's mother, the return of Lita after remaining out all night and the reconciliation.

THEME. A modern society drama in which separated parents are proven to be just plain people when a daughter finds that a mutual worry will soon bring them together again.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting of Miss Bronson, Miss Vidor and Mr. Menjou. The opening scenes as the parents prepare to separate. The return of the daughter to hear the sad news. The scene at the girls' school and the beginning of Lita's romance. The movie hero's acting episode. The conference over Lita's being expelled. The reconcilliation.

DIRECTION. Malcolm St. Claire has turned out a fine work here and has brought out several excellent characterizations. Has transplanted the story to the screen in absorbing manner and given it a very beautiful background.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Betty Bronson and tell the folks this in the first screen romance of the heroine of "Peter Pan." Also boost Florence Vidor and Adolphe Menjou. The title. Cover the town with it and use it as a teaser ad week in advance in drama columns. Style store tie-ups on stills of Miss Vidor and Miss Bronson in their striking costumes.

DRAWING POWER. Because of the widespread interest in Miss Bronson as well as the popularity of Miss Vidor and Mr. Menjou, and the fame of author of this tale, we believe the best houses can do business with the picture with a little exploitation.

SUMMARY. A vehicle that reflects the experiences of many folks in real life and therefore sure to offer entertainment. Interpreted by fine cast and mounted in elaborate style. A story with a powerful moral. Rich in comedy relief. A picture for the whole family—clean in theme.

THE CAST

Lita Hazlitt	Betty Bronson
Mrs. Hazlitt	Florence Vidor
Mr. Hazlitt	Adolphe Menjou
Maurice Mansfield	Andre de Berenger
Dr. Dacer	Lawrence Gray
Aurelia Wilton	Mary Beth Milford
Margaret	Emily Fitzroy
Freebody (butler)	William Courtwright

By Alice Duer Miller. Directed by Malcolm St. Claire. Scenario by Frances Agnew. Photographed by Bert Glennon.

SYNOPSIS. When Lita Hazlitt returns to school after refusing to decide between her father or mother, victims of "incompatibility" who have separated, she meets young Dr. Dacer, who advises her that her parents are people and that she can bring them together again by giving them a mutual worry. So Lita gets expelled, suspected of carrying on an affair with a movie hero. Later she stays out all night in the young actor's office. These two events soon bring the parents to a reconciliation.

Scandal Proof

(Fox—4400 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is one of those stories which places a heavy burden of humiliation and disgrace upon the heroine for the sake of clearing away all misunderstanding in the concluding episodes so that she may have some reward in a happy romance. It doesn't pretend to be anything original — and as far as its dramatic construction is concerned it leaves the door wide open for the long arm of coincidence to shut it. The average patrons will give their sympathy to the heroine. It is that kind of a story—one which plays upon the chords of heart appeal. As a result it should please the spectators.

The story has been put together pretty well. Even its gaps are easily bridged by compact action, which, thanks to the film editor, has been trimmed to less than five reels. One cannot be bored with it even if the scenes can be anticipated from the time the murder is committed. There is fairly exciting incident to punctuate it—as well as an adequate line of suspense. As for the performances Shirley Mason has the gift of appearing wistful by drooping the corners of her mouth and puckering up her brows. The rest is easy for her. She is sincere which makes her portrayal ring true. Her acting is far ahead of the plot—which thrusts her, a working girl, into fast society and into a courtroom where she is tried for murder—in the twinkling of an eye.

The story hinges upon two convenient moments. One is the testimony of a witness who states that the girl was with him ten minutes before the murder occurred. The other is when this same witness bobs up to frighten the girl after she has traveled far away from the scene of the crime and assumed a different name. He had rejected her after the trial by declaring his watch to be slow. So she feels herself persecuted and gives up her job as governess. Her spirit of sacrifice still hovers over her, for she saves her young ward's mother from being compromised by making heself appear guilty. After all this trouble the law of averages registers and the girl's honor is vindicated. The man with the slow timepiece makes amends with a proffer of marriage. And there you have it.

THEME. Melodrama of girl who performs big sacrifices only to find herself involved in murder. Stakes everything on her honesty and eventually wins vindication.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The party scene when wild youth is murdered. The timing of this scene to build the indictment. The suspense in the trial. The moment when heroine compromises herself to save her mistress. Shirley Mason's acting.

DIRECTION. Keeps it jogging along at a good pace. Doesn't allow too many heroics to develop—and times his situations to make action compact. First rate work considering it has but one or two vital moments.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with stores for teaser campaign on title. The words, fire-proof and waterproof can be used for the sale of articles. Bill as dramatic story of girl's great sacrifice.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses. O. K. for second runs and neighborhood houses.

SUMMARY. Not so substantial as it contains but one or two dramatic moments, but the attention doesn't wander because it is well constructed. Coincidence spoils the suspense. Is well acted by star. In all a fairly entertaining number.

THE CAST

Enid Day / Grace Whitney	Shirley Mason
Herbert Wyckoff	John Roche
Monty Brandster	Freeman Wood
Thelma Delores	Hazel Howell
Mrs. Brandster	Frances Raymond
Lillian Hollister	Ruth King
Reed Hollister	Edward Martindel
Dick Thorbeck	Joseph Striker
Benny Hollister	Billy Fay
Miss Wyckoff	Clarissa Selwynne

By Charles Kenyon. Directed by Edmund Mortimer.

SYNOPSIS. Working girl is attracted to wealthy cad. Invited to his home she is disgusted at the wild carryings-on—and makes a getaway. Later the youth is murdered and the girl is indicted. She is cleared in some vital testimony and goes far away to begin life anew. The young man who cleared her bobs up in her life again and causes her to give up her job. In the end he makes amends with a proposal of marriage.

Border Intrigue

(Independent Pictures—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

RUNNING true to form in its incident and action, this western makes just an average picture. The plot uncovers a "big brother" role which gives Franklyn Farnum as this character a chance to appear extremely active in registering the usual heroics. As the story is trite and lacks substance—dependent as it is upon a series of melodramatic episodes for its punch scenes—the director has tried to cover up the gaps with comedy relief. He has been fairly successful from a humorous standpoint for playing the comic role himself, he has compensated somewhat for the hackneyed story.

The central character has the task of making heavy sacrifices for the sake of his brother, an irresponsible youth. The latter is continually in trouble—and he is determined to sell his share of the property to a greedy cattleman who knows the value of the land with its rich water supply. Of course all of this intrigue precipitates a lot of trouble for the brothers—trouble which emphasizes the rescue stuff by the hero in saving his relative.

None of the action is convincing—and the director, realizing its weakness, has also attempted to cover up its flaws by concentrating upon the tempo—which is certainly speedy enough. The result is there is something doing most every minute even if there isn't much head or tail to it. The weakling is further intrigued when he escapes across the border after he has believed himself the murderer of the villain. A Mexican vamp has been employed to strut some romance and thus talk him out of the property. But the big brother shows her up as deceitful. In the end the youth has a change of heart and sacrifices the heroine to the hero.

There is no originality in the incident—and the action lacks suspense. But the director's comedy should please the spectators. They should be satisfied with the riding and shooting provided they are not expecting a world-beating western. It is best suited for double feature day.

THEME. Western comedy-drama of irresponsible youth who is always on verge of selling his half of the estate, necessitating his brother to be constantly alert to avert the disposal of the property.

PRODUCTION HIHGLIGHTS. The comedy character sketch by J. P. McGowan. The adequate atmosphere. The card game. The efforts made to eliminate the hero. The capture of the villain. The incident.

DIRECTION. Has no material to work with—the story being trite and lacking conviction, but compensates with some fair incident and some enjoyable comedy relief. Gives it adequate atmosphere, but action is overdone.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Billing this one as a typical western of action and incident should draw the crowds who like this brand of picture. If you think picture is worth it dress ushers in Spanish costumes, etc. Use catch lines.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses catering to westerns. Should satisfy if shown in connection with another feature. For downtown trade and small towns.

SUMMARY. There is nothing here to lift this picture out of the ordinary brand of westerns. Some of its incident is lively enough and it presents some first rate comedy relief. But plot is trite and lacks conviction because of the exaggerated action. However, it doesn't sag and is as good as the average.

THE CAST

Tom Lassen.....Franklyn Farnum
Dick Lassen.....Jack Vernon
Mrs. Lassen.....Mathilda Brundage
Mrs. Edith Harding.....Dorothy Wood
Bull Harding.....Robert E. Cline
Juan Verdigo.....Mack V. Wright
Pedro Gonzales.....“Slender” Whittaker
Rita.....Emily Barrie
“Tough” Tidings.....J. P. McGowan
Tough's Sister.....Dot Farley

By James Ormont. Directed by J. P. McGowan. Photographed by Walter Griffin.

SYNOPSIS. Rancher would shake down cattlemen for water rights on property of hero and his brother. The latter, being irresponsible, is continually on the verge of selling the property, but his older brother always interferes in the nick of time. The younger man is intrigued across the border, but is rescued by his brother. In the end he realizes his mistakes. The hero saves the property and wins the right girl.

Old Home Week

(Paramount—6780 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BACK to the type of story which he can do better than any other star of the screen comes Thomas Meighan—who, in his role of the young fellow returning to his old home town to share in the glories of Old Home Week, gives a mellow performance that rings with conviction. The star needed such a story after some of his recent pictures. This one suggested by George Ade with the script written by Tom J. Geraghty will carry him back into the good graces of his public that responded so heartily to "Back Home and Broke."

It is a convincing little yarn making capital of the home town boys who have made good on other locations—and it is told with fine understanding and considerable charm. Ade knows his small town. So does Geraghty. Between them they have concocted a picture which ripples along with sound dramatic quality, effervescent humor and at a good pace. It's familiar in outline, but it is so packed with delightful incident—it is so neatly sketched in characterization—that it will win friends everywhere.

The hero is innocently drawn into the company of some big moguls who are returning on a private car. He is only a partner in a gasolene station—somewhere in New York State. But his business card reads Amalgamated Company. So the moguls accept him as one of them. What follows is his whimsical way of playing out the deception—his subsequent humiliation in being discovered as a fraud—and his final triumph when he saves the natives from being fleeced by a pair of oil sharks.

The romance keeps hand in hand with the dramatic side of the plot—and every scene has its silvery lining of wit. Humor can be found in the sketches—and in the breezy and pointed captions written by Mr. Geraghty. In all a neat number—one smartly written, directed and played. In mentioning the acting credit must be given Laurence Wheat, Charles Dow Clark and Lila Lee for their convincing performances.

THEME. Comedy-drama of youth who, more or less of a failure after he left small town, returns in style during Old Home Week and proceeds to save natives from being flim-flammed by oil sharks.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The comedy vein. The scene when hero boards the private car. The reception at depot. The efforts to foil plot of crooks. The hero's humiliation. The human note. The subtitles. The acting. The atmosphere.

DIRECTION. Saturates it with good local color—and keeps story dancing along with fine sprinkling of humorous incident. Humanizes scenes and never overstresses action. Might have injected more celebration incident. Well handled story.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You have George Ade, Tom Geraghty and Tom Meighan to exploit here. Tell that it is another "Back Home and Broke" in point of human appeal. Play up the title and tie-up with towns featuring such celebrations.

DRAWING POWER. A sure sell-out in cities and towns. Will be appreciated everywhere. Star and author should attract them.

SUMMARY. A high-class comedy-drama, this—one coming mighty close to real life. An honest, straightforward story in Ade's best vein—and the best that has come along for Meighan in some time. Rich in humor, heart interest and local color.

THE CAST

Tom Clark.....Thomas Meighan
Ethel Harmon.....Lila Lee
J. Edward Brice.....Larry Wheat
Marshall Coleman.....Charles Dow Clark
Townsend Barton.....Max Figman
Uncle Henry.....Charles Sellon
Mary Clark.....Zelma Tiden
Judge Harmon.....Sidney Paxton
Jim Ferguson.....Joseph Smiley
Frikkle.....Jack Terry
Otey Jinks.....Leslie Hunt
Mrs. Clark.....Isabel West

By George Ade. Scenario by Tom Geraghty. Directed by Victor Heerman.

SYNOPSIS. Youth, more or less a failure since he left the home town, returns during Old-Home Week. Comes back in style and is believed to be one of country's greatest men. He keeps up deception though eventually they learn he is a fraud. However, he makes good by saving the villagers from being fleeced by oil sharks.

I'll Show You the Town

(Universal-Jewel—7400 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ZIPPING along at a fast pace after the characters are firmly planted and releasing an assortment of high-explosive laughs in the complications which develop around an unromantic professor who tries his best to be an accommodating chap to the ladies, this picture brings further good luck to Reginald Denny. This star is surely winning a high place for himself in the esteem of his public. He is not only a gifted light comedian but he is also fortunate in being given stories that bubble over with sparkling humor.

Take his latest for example. In the first place it has a sound idea for expression and never becomes dependent upon farcical trimmings except in its climax. It could really happen up to its finish—since the characters appear genuine and the plot and the incident are touched off with authentic humor.

The role of the young professor who is interrupted in writing a book by a group of well-meaning friends has the same quality as the one Denny played in his previous picture, "Oh Doctor." He falls a victim to feminine charms and would entertain the three women by showing them the town. One is a friend's wife, another is a wealthy widow who is ready to save a defunct college after he has talked her into becoming a flapper, while the third is the beautiful California girl with whom he falls in love. He gets into desperate straits—with the high laugh centered in the restaurant as he tries to entertain the three of them, without either one of them aware of the others existence.

These are highly comic episodes—with Denny and Cissy Fitzgerald, as the widow, capturing the laughs in their antics at the table and on the dance floor. The climax shows all the characters running a merry chase through the hero's apartment—each trying to avoid a scandal. It ends with a romantic finish. Surely a bright number—right up to the minute in its laughs. Denny is immense in his "half-seas over" condition. He catches just the right spirit and his enthusiasm seemingly is shared by the others. It's a light comedy with personality written all over it.

THEME. Romantic comedy of youth who in entertaining three women, none of whom know the identity of the others, finds himself on the brink of scandal.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The drinking of the "orange juice." The scene when couple fall through street. The subtitles. The zippy comedy in the restaurant. The fine mounting. The clever acting by the star and his players.

DIRECTION. Certainly puts over the laugh wallops in this up to the minute comedy. Gets away rather slow, but catches its true tempo and keeps it enlivened all the way. Shows results in building up the laughs.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title, the star, the supporting players—all should be exploited here. Denny has reached the heights—and this picture is one of his best. Give it a fine prologue, dance numbers, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For first runs or any type of house. Star and title will draw them.

SUMMARY. One of the brightest pictures of the season. Dashes merrily along after rather slow start and releases a series of highly amusing episodes. Played with fine spirit. Subtitles well pointed. Certainly scores another for Denny who is batting high in the comedy league.

By Elmer Davis. Scenario by Harvey Thew and Raymond L. Schrock. Directed by Harry A. Pollard.

SYNOPSIS. Youthful professor is prevented from writing a book by a group of well-meaning friends. One asks him to escort his wife for the evening, another gives him the task of winning the confidence of wealthy widow that she may save a defunct college, while another wishes a beautiful girl on him. In trying to entertain all three of them he gets involved in a net of scandal. By fast stepping and fast talking he extricates himself and has his romance.

My Wife and I

(Warner Brothers—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ONE would never guess from witnessing this picture that it was written by Harriet Beecher Stowe. But it doesn't belong in the atmosphere of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" because the sponsors have seen to it that it has been completely modernized. It is a story that harps home upon the theme of a wife's disillusionment over her wayward husband—and since it keeps to this key it is shaded too heavily with drama, there being little or no balance to lift it into the sunshine.

With all the characters in their grooves the plot doesn't unfold anything new. The action is obvious though an effort has been made to introduce an element of surprise when father and son court the same flapper. The boy is not taken very seriously in his courtship. For one thing he has to watch out for parental censure and again he lacks the necessary funds to keep the girl interested. The mother, realizing the advancing years, has taken up her daily dozen to keep in trim. Otherwise her life is spent in brooding over her unhappiness—and Irene Rich succeeds through her expressions in making the character lifelike.

The father plays at love and tries to cover his conscience with some knowledge that his wife has been unfaithful. And so the story builds to its obvious conclusion—a fairly effective scene—when the boy rushes forth to shoot the man who has usurped his place in the affections of the girl. The mother rushes in—at the nick of time—and saves the youth from killing his father. On comes the reconciliation and it is all over. This "about face" is too abrupt to ring true.

It all seems quite mechanical in its construction. The action travels a well-known groove, though the situations are enlivened here and there through some creditable acting by Constance Bennett as the wayward miss and Irene Rich as the wife. The parental home is of huge dimensions and it takes considerable walking by the occupants to pass from door to door.

THEME. Domestic triangle drama of a disillusioned wife whose husband has trespassed against his marital vows. After she has narrowly averted a tragedy a reconciliation occurs.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine acting by Irene Rich as the harassed wife. The spirited performance by Constance Bennett who makes the wayward miss convincing. The party scenes. The moment when the wife catches her husband in the limousine. The climax.

DIRECTION. Runs true to form—without showing any new treatment aside from the element of surprise of having the son and father court the same girl. Relies too much on heavy drama and shows no relief. Some of the sets too large.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can tell them that this was written by Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Teaser the title and bring forth that Irene Rich has another opportunity to flash her emotional value.

DRAWING POWER. For average houses or those catering to intelligent clientele. Best suited for neighborhoods. Steady patrons should be attracted by cast and title.

SUMMARY. An orthodox triangle is uncovered here—one which offers the usual mechanics and builds to its obvious conclusion. Is keyed in a morbid pitch and is overdrawn in its important scenes. Finely acted, however, by Irene Rich and Constance Bennett. Well mounted, though sets are too large.

THE CAST

Mrs. Stuart Borden	Irene Rich
Mr. Stuart Borden	Huntly Gordon
Stuart Borden, Jr.	John Harron
Spencer Hobart	John Roche
Betty Allen	Constance Bennett
Valet	Tom Rickets
Estelle Loring	Claire de Lorez

Adapted from Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel. Directed by Millard Webb.

SYNOPSIS. Wealthy husband forgets his marital vows and seeks affection outside his home. Becomes attracted to wayward miss, but is ignorant of fact that his own son loves the girl. The youth has no knowledge that she prefers the older man's company. When the boy discovers the girl's treachery he is determined to kill the interloper. But his mother intrudes and averts a tragedy. A reconciliation follows.

THE Montreal Theatre Managers Association carried through a successful social venture in the holding of its first annual dance and frolic at the Venetian Gardens, Montreal, Friday evening, May 22. A feature was the use of two orchestras made up of musicians from various local theatres.

Following a luncheon held in the Queen's Hotel, at Montreal, the Montreal Theatre Managers' Association, Inc., re-elected their officers for 1925 as follows: President, Geo. Nicholas, general manager of the United Amusement Corp. Vice-President Geo. Rotsky, manager of the Palace; secretary and treasurer, B. M. Garfield, manager of the New Rialto, who, as a reward for his services, was voted an increase of salary; Abbie Wright, manager of the Princess; Harry Dahn, manager of the Capitol, and Frank H. Norman, manager of the Stanley Hall, were elected directors. Mr. Wright is a past president.

K. M. Leach, proprietor of the Regent Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, and one of the outstanding exhibitors of the Canadian West, suffered a distinct loss recently when it was found necessary to destroy "Main Direct," which was regarded as the greatest racehorse that Western Canada ever raised. This horse was a wonderful pacer. Mr. Leach has a large stable of both trotting and running horses.

On the occasion of the opening game at London, Ontario, in the Michigan-Ontario Baseball League, Manager Fred Jackson of Loew's Theatre, London, had all the players of both the local and visiting teams as personal guests at the evening performance. All the players were introduced from the stage, and Mr. Jackson presented the London manager, Mike Baker, with a floral horseshoe.

The Gayety theatre at Montreal re-opened May 17, with a new policy of pictures and vaudeville, under the continued management of C. F. Lawrence. Every day during the week from Monday to Saturday a change of program will take place.

Salt Lake City

THE Western Division of Producers Distributing Corporation meets in convention in San Francisco during the first week in June, and will include all branch managers, assistant branch managers, salesmen and bookers. C. F. Parr, local exchange manager, will leave here next week with six representatives from this territory.

For the final week's business turned in by the local Producers office for the national contest that culminates next week, Parr and his associates enjoyed the biggest week for collections and contract business that the local office has ever had. They are anxiously awaiting final tabulation of results in the contest. The local office has been well up continually. Parr leaves for Idaho this week.

C. C. McDermott, selling out of the local Producers Distributing Corporation, returned to headquarters this week after a highly successful selling trip into southern Utah.

Jack Connors, United Artists exchange representative in Montana, will be here next week.

Vete Stewart, who has been burning up the territory for United Artists in this territory, has resigned to join the selling force out of the Associated First National Office. No successor has been appointed at United for Stewart as yet.

Effective June first, the Butte, Montana, Fox office will be closed, with all business in that state passing through and under the jurisdiction of the exchange in this city. Art Schayer, resident manager, recently returned from a trip to that city.

Carl Laemmle's "See America First" unit will arrive in this city the first week in June, and turn the trick in this city. A wonderful tie-up has been made with the Salt Lake Telegram, with front page photographs and publicity appearing each day. In connection with the visit of the outfit, a beauty contest is being conducted by the paper by which some local beauty will be chosen to represent Salt Lake City in the picture, and then go to Universal City under a six months' contract to work in the movies. We will certainly be powerful glad to see our old friend, C. E. "Doc" Holah, director of the caravan. "Doc" was formerly chief in this territory and made a host of friends who are eagerly awaiting to welcome him. Advance Publicity Man Graham was here last week in the interest of the unit.

Samuel Henley, manager in this city for Universal, returned this week from the convention in Chicago and a visit to Milwaukee to attend the M. P. T. O. A. in session. He reports the convention as a big success in every way, and is enthused over the new product.

Fred Gage, divisions manager for Universal, stopped off here enroute to the coast after attending the convention. R. C. Hudson, Butte office manager, stopped off a day.

Henley is now in the central and southern Utah section with Milt Cohn, stirring up contracts for the new Universal release schedule.

This was home coming week for managers returning from conventions. L. A. Davis, local chief for F. B. O., pulled into town from attending the convention at Chicago, which he said was an entire success. From there he visited the home office in New York City, and then over to Philadelphia to pay a short visit with his family. Mr. Davis rode as far as this city with A. A. Schmidt, Western Division manager; Sid Goldman, San Francisco branch manager; Harry Cohn, Los Angeles manager; Bell Mathews, manager at Portland, and Art Huott, Seattle manager. Davis leaves for a swing over the Montana territory this week.

Word has been received at the local Associated First National exchange that Harry T. Nolan, Mountain Division manager, is back in that city after visiting in New York City.

Another branch manager who "home came" from a convention this week is R. S. Stackhouse, Vitagraph and Warner Brothers resident mentor. He said that he had the time of his life in Hollywood where the convention assembled, and that it was a huge success. He is having the old Vitagraph signs taken off the windows of the local office and the new Warner Brothers one painted on. The local office of the latter company is being dismantled this week preparatory to moving down to the Vitagraph exchange. Stack says that the program mapped out at the convention is splendid.

Traveling Auditor Chapin for Warner Brothers is here getting the books and records in shape to be amalgamated in the transfer.

David T. McElhinney, special territorial representative for Warner Brothers, is in this city preparing for a selling jaunt over the Nevada section.

Joe McElhinney is doing his stuff this week in the territory for Universal, re-enforced with a new Ford.

W. E. Shipley, owner of the Gem and Empire theatres in this city, and "Dad" Rand, manager of the Isis Theatre, left this week for a motor tour through the scenic belt of southern Utah.

C. A. Hartman, promotor from Florida, is here superintending the erection of an open Airdome at Bonneville Park. He will open on May 20 with a combination open air moving pictures and dancing. The Airdome will have a seating capacity of thirty-two hundred.

The Salt Lake City branch of Pathe is leading the Western Division at the close of the third week in the national Storey Victory Compaign. The concluding date is August 8, and W. G. Seib, exchange manager and his cohorts are determined to maintain the lead until the last.

W. S. Wessling, Pathe Western Division Manager, returned to Portland this week after conducting a sales conference in the local branch.

William McFarland, of Eureke, Utah, has sold his Star Theatre in that city to the Bertelsen interests. Possession will pass into the new hands the first of June.

George L. Cloward, Metro-Goldwyn resident manager, is making a short trip to the Provo section of Utah bomming up the new product. Joseph F. Samuels in southern Utah; E. E. Harris in Montana, and Ed Lustig in Idaho, are sending in fine contract business for Metro-Goldwyn.

C. H. Messinger, manager of the local Educational exchange leaves next for New York City to attend the convention which meets May 9. Clyde says that business has never been so good at the local office as it has been the last six weeks.

Carl A. Porter, manager of the Victory Theatre, has been elected president of the managers' association to succeed Ed. C. Mix, who resigned when he became manager of Associated Exhibitors in this city. Porter will leave for New York City next month on business and a visit to his home.

James R. will saw off for a week or so the first of June and hie to Denver where he will assist George C. Walters, Greater Features manager in that city with exploitation in Colorado towns.

Mrs. Bertha Hyde, who has given three years of faithful service at the Greater Features exchange as inspector and shipper, is resigning to take effect the first of June. Al Seal, formerly with the Select Pictures exchange here, will succeed her.

Alan Burke, manager of the local DeLuxe Features exchange will leave Monday for a swing over the southern part of this state in the interest of the independent features he represents.

L. W. Weir, Western Division Manager for Producers Distributing Corporation passed through here the other day making a flying trip from the East to his headquarters in Los Angeles.

Cleveland

C. E. ALMY, recently advanced from Cleveland exchange manager to central division manager, last week made his first tour of the offices under his jurisdiction. The Cleveland office is still without a resident manager.

J. O. Brooks, assistant sales director for Universal, has stated that the Universal policy of promoting from the ranks will be enforced in Cleveland. Since the resignation of Lew Thompson as manager, no one has been appointed to succeed him. Brooks will remain in charge of the branch until someone is promoted from within.

George W. Erdmann has been made manager of the Cleveland Producers Distributing Corporation's local exchange. Mr. Erdmann took possession of the managerial chair on Monday, succeeding Jack Mooney, who resigned last week. Erdmann was previous with the Standard Film Service Company in the capacity of special representative.

W. C. Bachmeyer, who has just accepted the post of central division manager for Fox, will continue to make his headquarters in Cincinnati. Bachmeyer's territory will cover Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and St. Louis.

L. E. Blumenfeld, Fox auditor, is spending a few weeks in the local Fox office.

Lew Thompson is now associated with P.D.C. as special representative out of the Cleveland office. Thompson was formerly Universal branch manager.

Robert Cotton, P.D.C. division manager, is just back from Detroit, after making several changes in the office there. Jack Stewart, Detroit exchange manager, has resigned to go to France for First National. Mr. Cotton nominated Frank E. Stuart to the job. Stuart was previously special home office representative for P.D.C. The change also affects Henry B. Zapp who has been transferred from the position of home office representative to that of assistant manager in the Detroit exchange.

Joe Krenitz, of the local Universal family, is back in Cleveland after a sojourn of two months in the Universal Salt Lake City office. Krenitz asked for a temporary transfer on account of his health. He came back home as good as new.

Jack Mooney, erstwhile P.D.C. exchange manager here, is in New York, where it's said some attractive offers are being considered.

J. E. Beck, Vitagraph exchange manager, just got back last Friday from a Warner convention on the west coast. In addition to expressing his enjoyment of the trip, Mr. Beck is highly enthusiastic over the coming Warner product.

The Stillman treatre, Cleveland, started its summer policy last Sunday. This policy differs from the regular winter policy in price only. The leading feature productions are shown, and the same high standard of musical accompaniment is maintained. The pictures are changed each week, however. In the winter, the Stillman is the only one of the Loew houses which plays long runs.

Loew's Allen theatre, Cleveland, closes Saturday, May 30, for the summer. It has always been the policy of Loew's Ohio Theatres, of which the Allen is one, to close the Allen in the Summer, keeping the Stillman and the State open.

The Film Bldg. register held the following entries for the week just past: A. Dice, Wallace theatre, Wooster; E. C. Lewis and J. W. Sinkowitz, Weber Theatre, Dover; George Dunlevy, Strand, Akron; N. D. Schwarm, Grand, Massilon; and F. L. Bowers, Union Opera House, New Philadelphia.

Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio Theatres, has sufficiently recovered from his recent gall stone attack to spend a few hours of each day at his desk.

W. La Von Boon, the new owner of the old Huber Opera House at Hicksville, visited the local exchanges last Friday. Boon said he has changed the name of the theatre, and now calls it the Capitol. He's re-decorating it throughout, and when the changes are completed, he will inaugurate a combination picture and vaudeville policy. Boon also owns and operates the Crescent theatre, Hicksville.

Charles Stadler, who recently took over the Standard theatre, Cuyahoga Falls, was around the film exchanges the latter part of the week, looking at and buying pictures for the house.

A prominent local figure is being withdrawn from film circles with the sale of the Parkview Theatre by C. L. Kleinsmith to Joseph A. Fink. Mr. Kleinsmith says he's all through with the picture business. He has been active in the local exhibitor body.

Tim Roberts and Mrs. Roberts and all the little Robertses came up to Cleveland last week from Mansfield, where Roberts owns and operates the White Way, to attend the luncheon given in honor of Tom Mix. Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Cheuvront of the Gem theatre, Barberton, motored up for the luncheon. Other out-of-town guests included J. H. Solomon, Temple theatre, Lorain; C. N. Belden, Thornton theatre, Akron; Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Morris, Olympic, Bellaire; Joe Schagrin, Park, Youngstown; V. Alexander, Strand, Ravenna; Max Federhar, Regent and Rialto, Akron; Clint, Kline, Arcade, Akron; A. J. Paul, Royal, Galion, and J. H. Ruben and son, of Newron Falls.

Seattle

JOSEPH BRANDT, president of the Columbia Pictures Corporation and vice president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, was a recent visitor in this city. During his stay here Mr. Brandt spent most of his time in association with Messrs. Jack Lannon and J. L. Sheffield, of the Greater Features exchanges, the latter organization distributing Columbia pictures throughout several of the Pacific Northwest states. Mr. Brandt came here from the East, and planned to return by way of California, after a number of weeks more to be spent on the Coast.

Jack Sullivan, manager of the Fox Film exchange and president of the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle returned recently from the Fox national convention in New York City, after an absence of a number of weeks. Immediately upon his return he began making plans for the distribution in this territory of his new product, as announced recently in the advertising sections of the trade journals.

Announcement was received here last week to the effect that F. J. Talaber, owner and manager of the Legion theatre in Walla Walla has contracted for the appearance at his house during the next few months of the Baker Stock Company of Portland, Oregon. This company, direct from the Baker theatre in the Oregon city, will appear in addition to motion picture programs, it is reported. Additional information reaching here was to the effect that Mr. Talaber is investigating the possibilities of building and operating a new motion picture theatre in Lewiston, Idaho, although definite confirmation of this report has not yet been received here.

Herman Wobber, Western division manager of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, was a recent visitor at the local Paramount exchange, where he spent a number of days in conference with George P. Endert, manager. Mr. Wobber is just completing a trip up the Coast, following the recent international convention in Los Angeles, and plans to return to California within the next few weeks.

Wallace Rucker, salesman for J. A. Gage's local Educational exchange, has just returned from a trip into Eastern Washington, and brings with him a tale, told in his inimitable manner, that sets at rest all rumors relative to L. A. Doudlah and his new dog, of the Liberty theatre, Wenatchee. According to reports, Mr. Doudlah returned recently from a trip to Hollywood bringing with him a German police dog said to be a descendant of the finest police dog in America, and able to do any trick known to canines. Film men who have seen the dog have been unanimous in their disappointment over the fact that he will not do a thing other than eat. Now Mr. Rucker returns and sets Film Row at rest with the report that the reason for the dog's unwillingness to perform lies in his inability to understand English—being a German police dog.

Cigars and candy were in order at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre last week upon the occasion of the birth of a young daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kaluske. Paul's proudness was seemingly visible through the glass windows of the projection booth, where he has held sway with his brother and teammate, George, since the opening of the house four years ago.

Felix Feist, general sales manager of the Metro-Goldwyn company, spent a few days here the middle of May with Seth D. Perkins, manager of the local exchange. This is Mr. Feist's first trip to the Northwest in a number of seasons, and he was quite enthusiastic in his praise of the growth of this region.

A new "wrinkle" in motion picture policies was instituted at the Heilig theatre here last week by Manager Charles W. McKee when he announced that hereafter during the summer months every Tuesday night would be "Family Night" at that show house. The policy that evening will be to admit every family for a total admission charge of fifty cents, irrespective of the number of persons included. Individual admission prices will remain at twenty-five cents, as usual.

Reports received on Film Row during the last week indicated that the Liberty theatre at Esticada, Oregon, was to close for the summer months, beginning the latter part of May. The house was built by E. J. Potter, owner and manager of the Clinton theatre in Portland, and was sold to A. Teyerabend, who is at present acting as manager.

In order to prevent conflicts with the regular Sunday noon concerts by Sam K. Wineland and his Concert Orchestra at Frank Steffy's Coliseum theatre, Manager Albert Finkelstein of the Strand has changed the time of his Sunday concerts by Salvatore Santaella to 1:30 p. m. each week. This early Sunday afternoon program allows augmentation of the Strand's musical ensemble, and provides a larger audience during the summer months than the 12:30 concerts would.

Retaliating for their defeat at the hands of the Portland film and theatre men during their visit to the Oregon city, the golf team of the local region last week defeated Portland's picked squad in the second half of the Portland-Seattle match played here at the Rainier Golf Club. Captain Charles Harden's squad of would-be Sarazens displayed a splendid brand of golf, and more than made up for their loss in Portland earlier in the season, before they had had practice enough to be on to their game!

The St. Johns theatre, the Rex, was scheduled to reopen after a closed winter and spring season, according to information received by several of the film exchanges from Manager Nichols.

A complete reseating of the Columbia theatre was completed last week by Manager Robert W. Bender without interrupting performances to the most minute degree. All work was finished in two nights, working from midnight until 10 o'clock the following morning. The latest type wicker loge chairs were among the new style seats installed. The former seats were in the house since its construction more than ten years ago by James Q. Clemmer.

Jane and Katherine Lee, diminutive film stars, were the headliners on the closing program of the Orpheum vaudeville at the Orpheum theatre last week. The house will reopen the middle of August, it was announced.

Denver

VICTOR BACCHECI of the Pastime Theatre, Albuquerque, New Mexico, was a visitor in the city during the past week. While visiting Exchanges he produced complete plans for the building of a new theatre in Albuquerque. The structure will be a four-story building, seventy-five feet by one hundred forty feet, will contain all the conveniences found in most modern up-to-date theatres. The seating capacity of the theatre will be one thousand two hundred and fifty seats. The greater portion of the building will be occupied by the theatre and the fourth floor will be made into a large dance hall. The estimated cost is $200,000.00.

Les Weir, division manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, stopped over in Denver for a two days' visit with the local Producers Exchange enroute to Los Angeles from the Milwaukee convention.

B. P. McCormick, operating the Liberty Theatre, Florence, Colorado, and the Jones Opera House at Canon City, is in Denver visiting all exchanges and arranging for new product for the season.

Fred Jackman, accompanied by his wife, is surveying the Black Hills, South Dakota, territory in search of a suitable location for another special production for Pathe. Mr. Jackman is the director of the famous horse, Rex.

Mr. C. H. Van Horn, local manager of the Pathe Exchange, has just returned from Salt Lake City where he spent several days in conference with Lou Marcus, the division manager of Pathe.

The Fire Committee of the Denver Film Board of Trade and the Denver Fire Department conducted a very interesting experiment this week. Several hundred reels of junk film were taken from the Shocker Film Exchange to one of the city dumps and burned. Experiments were conducted in igniting the film and observing the burning of the film. Denver has never experienced a film exchange fire, and the Fire Department and the Fire Committee of the Denver Film Board of Trade are doing everything in their power to reduce the fire hazard of each exchange so that they will not have to experience such a fire. The Fire Committee announces that every shipper and film inspector will be present the next time there is occasion to conduct an experiment of this kind.

Charles R. Gilmour, manager of Vitagraph and president of the Denver Film Board of Trade, has returned to Denver after attending the sales convention of Warner Brothers and Vitagraph in Los Angeles.

H. E. Morehouse, owner and manager of the Black Hills Theatre, Hot Springs, South Dakota, was a visitor in film row this week contracting for new service.

Another popular and well known exhibitor, C. E. Pace of the Pace Theatre, Chadron, Nebraska, was also visiting all exchanges.

George P. Wierick, owner of the Orpheum Theatre, Glenwood Springs, Colorado, was also among the exhibitors who were in the city visiting the exchanges during the past few days. Mr. Wierick expects a very good season.

Miss Marie Goodhand, manager of the American theatre, Kimball, Nebraska, has arrived in Denver for the purpose of arranging new bookings.

O. J. Thomas, Rialto Theatre, Raton, New Mexico, and Earl Nye, manager of the Carl Ray Amusement Company Theatres of Cheyenne, Wyoming, were also among the exhibitors represented in film row.

T. Y. Henry, division manager of United Artists, has arrived in Denver for a visit with the local United Artists Exchange. Mr. Henry motored to Denver from Omaha.

J. J. Goodstein of the Colorado Realty Company announces that his company has taken over the Isis Theatre, Longmont, Colorado, formerly operated by Ed Marquand. Mr. Marquand will be connected with the Colorado Theatre Company as theatre manager. This company is progressing very rapidly in the motion picture business, having just announced definite plans for a new $300,000.00 amusement house in Pueblo, besides owning and operating the Palm Theatre, Pueblo, and the Longmont Theatre, Longmont.

Milwaukee

F. F. NINE, formerly Branch Manager for Vitagraph in Kansas City and more recently salesman of Block D out of the Chicago Vitagraph office is now manager of the Sub Branch for Vitagraph in Milwaukee.

F. R. Martin, formerly manager Vitagraph Milwaukee Sub Branch is now connected with Celebrated Players Film Corp., of Wisconsin.

Edgar Wiesner, manager of the Milwaukee Film Co., announces that he is ready with many new independent products which will be distributed through the Milwaukee Educational Film Exchange.

Max Stahl, manager of Educational Film Exchange, Milwaukee will attend the National Educational Convention in New York City on June 11th. Mr. Stahl will leave Milwaukee on the night of June 9th. He also reports that the annual Educational May Drive finished very successfully.

Jack Margolis salesman out of Paramount's local office is critically ill in St. Joseph's hospital, Milwaukee. He was operated on last Saturday and is getting along fairly well. It is expected that it will be at least four or five months before he will be able to travel again.

Mrs. Henrietta Eckhardt, New Palace Theatre, Wisconsin Rapids Wis., has bought out lease on J. P. Gruwells, Ideal Theatre, Wis., Rapids which still has two years to run and she will continue to operate this theatre after that time.

Frank Starkey, owner of the Opera House in Berlin, Wisconsin is understood to be negotiating for the sale of his theatre. It is expected that Mr. Starkey will run the Ideal Theatre in Wis. Rapids, associating himself with Mrs. Eckhardt.

Al Picker of Iron Wood, Michigan is arranging for the erection of a new theatre in that town.

Martin Thomas of Iron Mountain recently opened the Braumart theatre. Its cost was one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and said to be one of the finest theatres in any town of its size in the territory.

"Rush" Gregory, formerly Majestic theatre at Stevens Point, Wisconsin, has sold out his interests to J. P. Adler. This now leaves Adler in control of Stevens Point as well as Marschfield, Wisconsin. It is understood that Adler is negotiating for other theatres. Mr. Gregory has taken over Joe Winninger's, Davison theatre in Waupun, Wisconsin.

Harry Hart formerly manager of the Milwaukee F. B. O. office and who was taken seriously ill and confined to a hospital some time ago has very much improved and it is expected that he will leave the hospital in June.

Fred Good and Dick Steinbaum have started out in their respective territories with the 1925-1926 F. B. O. product.

A one story building has been constructed for the new F. B. O. office at 145-7th Street which they claim will be the finest Exchange building in the city. This building will also be occupied by the Ray Smith Co. (theatre supplies) and Mid-West Distributing company. F. B. O. will occupy most of the building however. With the moving of these firms, leaves the old Toy building without an exchange and it was not so long ago when practically every exchange in the city of Milwaukee was housed under this roof.

S. H. Abrams manager of the F. B. O. office in Milwaukee who recently came from Indianapolis to take charge of the Milwaukee office during Mr. Harts' illness has his family with him now and they have located in one of the city's finest apartments, known as the Ardmore.

According to reports Saxes Ri- Milwaukee will be torn down alto theatre, 3rd and Grand Ave., June first and in its place will be a large drug store.

The Storey Victory Campaign contest being conducted by Pathe in honor of J. E. Storey general sales manager of Pathe Exchange shows that the Milwaukee office whose manager is Oscar Kuschner has held first place in this national contest and has held this position each week since the beginning of the campaign on April 19th to August 8th.

Sid Lawrence, Manager of Saxes' million dollar Modjeska theatre has been arranging very exceptional prologues with the pictures playing at his theatre.

Gypping the Exhibitor

with Inferior Prints is not necessary with Exchanges who faithfully use

Liquefied Film Waxing Process

Corrects Brittle and Foul Film Stock

Exhibitors should not be held responsible for Film Damages, if new prints are just merely waxed at the sprocket holes. Emulsion Deposits will scratch any print and Lack of Moisture, caused by High Amperage, Hot Operating Booths, Hot Climates, will rob a print of the strength necessary to withstand the strain of the Projector. The results are Ripped and Torn Sprocket Holes.

Put the blame upon unprotected prints for Film Damages and not upon the Operator, the Projector, or Poor Film Stock.
Exhibitors—Insist upon your film being processed with Liquefied Film Wax.

CAPTAIN NUNGESSER, French ace and Glenn Hunter, stage and screen star, were the guests at the annual ball given under the auspices of the Rochester Motion Picture Exhibitors' League in the Kodak Town convention hall the other night. Novelty dances, one of which realistically represented a severe electric storm were interpolated throughout the evening's dancing program. During the late hours of the night several members of the Lyceum stock company appeared and were the recipients of much attention.

Motion pictures of the Round the World Flight made by Uncle Sam's aviators, were shown Friday evening, May 29 in Elmwood Music hall, to a large audience. "Smiling Jack" Harding, one of the flyers and Lowell Thomas official historian of the flight, spoke.

Press dispatches from Athens announce the engagement of Miss Thalia Diplarakou to General George Kondyles, secretary of the interior of the Greek administration. Miss Thalia is a niece of Nikitas D. Dipson, head of Affiliated Theatres, Inc., of Batavia and Olean. About two years ago Thalia visited her uncle in Batavia.

E. J. Hayes has resigned from the sales staff of the Buffalo office of the Producers Distributing corporation and expects soon to announce a new connection in this neck of the woods.

Wendell Shields of Mr. Eschman's office is in Buffalo for a few weeks at the local First National exchange. Byron Interbitzen has been appointed to succeed Harold L. Beecroft as F. N. representative in Syracuse.

The new Shea Buffalo theatre is coming along in fine shape. The steel work is almost complete. Hundreds gather daily to watch the workers place the massive beams of steel.

Business must be good at Universal's Buffalo exchange. Art Young, booker, is driving a new Studebaker sedan.

Tom Mix sure did get one wonderful welcome in Buffalo. The largest crowds that ever gathered in the downtown districts were on hand to take a peek at Tom and Tony in the flesh. Much of the credit for the turnout should go to G. K. Rudolph who planted a million dollars worth of publicity in advance of Tom's descent on the Queen City of the Lakes. Incidentally it developed that in the old days Tom used to be a moulder in the Gould Coupler Works in east Buffalo. Such is fame!

J. B. Strayline has taken over the old Strand in Geneseo, N. Y., which he re-opened May 27. The Becker Theatre Supply company of Buffalo installed two new projection machines.

A Wurlitzer Unit Organ is now furnishing the musical settings at the Rialto Theatre owned by A. J. Hoch, at Buffalo, N. Y.

Vincent R. McFaul, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, is sporting a new Willys-Knight Six sedan. No wonder it's hard trying to find him these fine daylight saving evenings.

J. B. Whitney, former Buffalo Metro salesman, has been appointed district manager for the Schine Theatrical corporation in western New York.

Frank J. A. McCarthy, president of the Film Board of Trade of Buffalo has appointed the following committees for the ensuing year: Transportation, Henry W. Kahn, chairman; Marvin Kempner and Joe Miller; Film Theft, Earl Kramer, chairman; Henry W. Kahn and Bill Rowell; Gratis Film, William L. Sherry, chairman; Marvin Kempner and Jimmy Speer; Film Condition, Basil Brady, chairman; Earl Kramer and Colonel Howard F. Brink; Housing, C. W. Anthony, chairman; Sydney Samson and Basil Brady; Executive, Sydney Samson, Frank McCarthy and Henry W. Kahn. Messrs. Brady, Brink, Samson and Kahn have been appointed members of a special committee to attend the Syracuse meeting of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y. in Syracuse, Tuesday, June 2.

Harry Dixon, F. B. O. manager in Buffalo, accompanied by E. J. Smith, district manager, journeyed to Syracuse last week end to show exhibitors in the Salt City, some of the company's new product for the coming season.

Maurice A. Chase has organized Chase Pictures corporation with offices in Buffalo and Albany and is now signing up houses in the key cities for fall product. Mr. Chase is well known in western New York, where formerly he managed the Universal exchange in Buffalo. He has received a warm welcome from exhibitors everywhere he says and hopes to announce his permanent office address soon.

The Olympic theatre, Buffalo, recently added to the Schine chain of houses in New York state, has changed its policy to two double feature programs each week, changing the bill Sundays and Thursdays. Manager Ray S. Averill is also attracting much attention with his "Screen Tests," and through which the management announces he hopes to find new material for screen stars. Tests are made of all applicants and the following week these films are shown on the shadow stage in the Olympic.

John Lutz, owner of the Sherman Opera block in Newark, N. Y., which was destroyed by fire, will rebuild. The Crescent theatre occupied the ground floor of the building. The loss is reported to be $300,000.

Kansas City

JUST by way of opening up the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri membership drive in truly auspicious style, C. E. "Doc" Cook, business manager, hopped in the "hoppie" last week and tore down the road for Independence, Kas., where he made short work of convincing exhibitors of that town of the value of organization. Cook will leave next week on an extended tour of the territory in conjunction with the drive.

If there ever had been any ill feelings on the part of churches towards the Lewis theatre, Indepedence, Mo., they were done away with Sunday. The First Methodist Episcopal Church South, located directly across the street from the theatre, was undergoing repairs and it was impossible for Sunday school classes to be held in the church. The congregation was "up against it." Then came the management of the Lewis theatre with the liberal offer that Sunday school classes be held in the theatre and the ever-lasting gratitude of the church members was won.

Robbing theatres in Kansas City is getting to be a highly unprofitable business. Last week an Orpheum theatre bandit was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary, while this week a youth was arrested and identified as one of the bandits who held up the Garden on April 13—which, in all reality, was an unlucky day.

It is not "What d'y' know," but "Got a job yet?" that is the ethical greeting when friends along movie row meet Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas City, and ex-owner of the Broadmour theatre, suburban house. It is a well established fact that when Mr. Eisner assumes ownership or management of a theatre that success is not long in coming. He never has been known to take a "bad bet" or a "flop." Recently he sold the Broadmour theatre and for two months he has been looking over the situation in effort to obtain a suitable theatre. He has not found it yet and his idleness is causing him extreme worry, not financially, but morally, which accounts for the humor displayed by his friends.

"Business was busy" along among Kansas City exchanges last week. Harry Ginsberg, independent distributor of Banner Productions, was visiting state right exchanges, while Al Kahn, formerly a member of the Film Classics staff, and a veteran film man, was a visitor.

Harry Taylor has been named as branch manager of the Universal exchange, succeeding L. B. Metzger, who has been promoted to a special position out of the home office.

Miss Nettis Davis succeeded L. B. Coleman as Pathe cashier, Mr. Coleman having accepted a similar position with Paramount.

All First National salesmen were in for a "peppy" sales meeting, while R. E. Churchill, F.B.O. branch manager, no sooner returned from a convention of his organization in Chicago than he departed for the territory, as did Bob Withers of Enterprise, Tom Byerle of First National and Louis Reichert of P. D. C.

C. F. Senning of Educational and E. C. Rhoden of Midwest were two other exchange managers who also were "beating the brush" in the territory.

C. A. Schultz, Vitagraph branch manager, returned home from the Los Angeles convention of his company in exceptional high spirit and was greeted by C. W. Allen, assistant manager, who showed him the results of some hard work in the territory during his absence.

C. E. Gregory, Metro-Goldwyn branch manager, asserts that he is not merely "talking" when he says that business is getting better daily and W. E. Truog, Universal district manager, verifies the statement.

The Lincoln Theatre Corp., Lincoln, Neb., has purchased a Wurlitzer Unit Organ.

Sam Harding of Kansas City, president of the Capitol Enterprises of Kansas City, returned home Tuesday more than pleased with the opening of the corporation's new $500,000 Lincoln theatre in Lincoln, Neb., Monday. The house, which seats 2,000 people, is the pride of the city, Mr. Harding said. The theatre, which is the latest link in the Capitol Enterprise chain, embodies all the luxury possible to give a theatre of its size.

The Isis theatre at Brunswick, Mo., has been closed temporarily for repairs and will be re-opened soon.

Exhibitors may have their troubles, but E. C. Rhoden, manager of Midwest Film Distributors, Kansas City, is of the firm opinion that exchange managers also have cause for furrowed brows occasionally. The other day Mr. Rhoden had four prints out. A date had to be filled the next day in Joplin, Mo., and no print. Driving quickly to Lawrence, Kas., Mr. Rhoden obtained a print after the last night's show. The train for Joplin left Kansas City at 11:59 o'clock. Mr. Rhoden returned home at 12:01. Then followed a "nightmare" to obtain an airplane, but along came a youthful "Barney Oldfield," who, for $50, promised to have the print in Joplin, a distance of 200 miles over the worst imaginable roads, in eight hours. At noon the next day the mud-bespattered driver pulled up in front of the Joplin theatre on time.

Installation work has been finished on the new Wurlitzer Unit Organ purchased by the Gabel Amusement Company for their Grand Theatre, at Beloit Kansas.

New York and New Jersey

LOEW'S Coney Island Theatre, now in the course of construction at Surf and Stillwell avenues, will be formerly opened the evening of June 17th with Marcus Loew and a large party of stage, screen and radio stars in attendance. Michael Maloney, owner of the Temple at Camden, N. J., has just equipped his house with a new Wurlitzer Organ.

Chicago

FINAL plans are being completed for the Midwest Film Golf Tournament which will be held at Olympia Fields Country Club on June 16th. Even a larger attendance than last year is expected as entries are beginning to come in rapidly. A prize for every foursome will be an innovation at this tournament. These will be in addition to the usual tournament and class prizes, so that every one is assured of a chance of taking home something handsome. In the last few weeks the Olympia Fields Country clubhouse has been completed, so that film golfers will be able to enjoy the evening dinner following the play, in what is known as the world's handsomest country club. Many of the boys are practicing hard for the annual film event, especially the members of the Friday Afternoon Golf Club, which includes about twenty-five motion picture men.

When Manager A. L. Gonsior of the Virginia Theatre, Champaign, arrived at his theatre Friday morning, he found that during the night robbers had broken open his theatre safe and escaped with considerable money and valuables.

Universal's Chicago exchange won two hundred and fifty dollar prize last week in the International News contest. Business has been active around this exchange recently.

Atlanta

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last week by the Atlanta Film Board of Trade of the appointment of the Exhibitor members of the Arbitration Board. These include Matt H. Whitham, Alamo No. 2; R. R. Miller, Paramount theatre; W. E. Finch, Alamo No. 1; with Alpha Fowler, Palace theatre and Sol Samuels, Alpha theatre, or any available out of town exhibitor as alternates. The Exchange members of the Board, appointed at the May 7th meeting of the Atlanta Flm Board of Trade and already announced, are J. W. Hanlon, chairman, H. D. Hearn, Mrs. A. H. Sessions, with Dave Prince and Ira P. Stone as alternates.

Dave Prince, branch manager of the Famous Players-Lasky office in Atlanta, returned from West Point, Ga., early this week, with the news that Miss Lila Allen, who at present operates a theatre in West Point, is to open the Airdome theatre in Lannex, Alabama.

F. A. Leatherman is apparently having no cause for complaint in the general business slump that is depressing many industries. This week he has installed a pipe organ in Garrett's and Baker's Ahoskie theatre, Ahoskie, North Carolina. In addition to that, similar instruments have been purchased this week from Leatherman by the Martin theatre and the American theatre in Columbus, Ga.

M. A. Lightman opened the Hillsboro theatre in Nashville, Tennessee, last week after several months of work was completed. It is a very pretty house, completely equipped with the most modern furnishings and conveniences, and having a seating capacity of 1,250. A Kimball pipe-organ, purchased from F. A. Leatherman, is one of the features of the equipment.

Adolph Samuels, who has been in Europe for the past several months, will sail for America May 28th, and expects to land in New York June 6th. He is at present with relatives in Breslau, Germany. Mrs. Samuels will not return with her husband, but will remain in Germany visiting relatives and friends, and regaining her health, which has not been very robust of late.

Henry Hury, well known exhibitor and theatre owner, is now sole owner of the Champion and Frolic theatres, colored houses in Birmingham, Alabama, and the Frolic, a colored house in Bessemer, Alabama, having dissolved the corporation with which he was connected by buying out U. T. Koch and Will Hury. Mr. Koch, better known as "Doc" in local film circles, held an interest in the Bessemer house, and Will Hury was part owner of the Birmingham theatres.

Mr. Henry Hury has sold his beautiful Birmingham home in the mountains which has long been a pleasant "open house" to film men. He entertained at a farewell dinner last week, on Thursday evening. W. G. Minder, salesman for F.B.O., was the only Atlanta man present.

George P. Montgomery, for many years established in theatrical circles of Anniston, Ala., but more recently of Hot Springs, Arkansas, is returning to Anniston on May 25th, to manage the Wells theatre for J. G. Wells, owner of that house. Mr. Montgomery is well known throughout this section, not only as a manager, but as a musician and leader of no little ability. He was for years conductor-manager in Anniston, and left comparatively recently when the theatre with which he was connected changed hands.

J. H. Hicks, formerly manager of the Dallas branch of Enterprise Distributing corporation, has been transferred to Atlanta for the present. He will be given another office in the near future, but during the interim is working the Florida territory for Enterprise, with Atlanta as his headquarters. Truly Wildman has succeeded Mr. Hicks as branch manager of the Dallas exchange.

Thomas A. Killfoil, purchasing agent for the distribution department of Paramount in this territory, came into Atlanta early this week for a stay of about a month. Mr. Killfoil is the hero of the recent fire in the Charlotte Paramount exchange, when, it will be remembered, he took charge of the situation and managed everything so capably that the exchange never lost out on a single booking. Mr. Killfoil has further claim to fame being responsible for standardizing the equipment used in the Paramount exchanges in this territory.

Hank Hearne, of the newly formed Liberty Theatre Film Distributing corporation, and formerly of Southern States, is to be married some time in the near future to Miss Elizabeth O'Brien, popular Atlanta girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Central Penn

ONE hundred and ten mothers, over sixty years old, accepted the invitation of C. Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg manager of the Wilmer and Vincent theatres, to attend the third annual Mothers' Day entertainment in the Majestic Theatre.

Instead of closing for the summer months, as has been its custom heretofore, the York Opera House, of York, a motion picture and vaudeville house has adopted a new policy of continuing open through the hot weather and introducing musical comedies in addition to pictures, with a change of program twice weekly. The new plan became effective in the week of May 4. The house is operated by Nathan and Louis Appel, who control a chain of York theatres, and the house manager is Edward R. Moore. The management had as its guests one night during the opening week under the new policy, the members of the York baseball team of New York-Pennsylvania League, who occupied several boxes.

Extensive improvements are being made to the Jackson Theatre, in York, which is operated by F. E. Barry. The walls and ceilings are being redecorated by Charles A. Hottinger, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who recently redecorated the interior of George Kruppa's theatre in Lancaster, which was badly damaged by fire. The work in the Jackson theatre is being done so as not to interfere with the regular performances.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the Wilmer & Vincent theatrical interests in Harrisburg, was toastmaster at a banquet given on the night of May 18, as a farewell to Roy Davenport, a prominent restaurant man, who was leaving to go into business in Baltimore. The dinner was held at Folger's Inn, several miles north of Harrisburg. In behalf of the club members Mr. Hopkins presented Mr. Davenport with a handsome Oriental rug.

A new theatre is being erected in the town of Nicholson, by George Q. Pratt, who formerly operated the Strand Theatre there. It will probably be ready for formal opening in August. The Strand has been taken over by J. V. Eckert, who is renovating the theatre and will reopen it as the Palace.

Announcement has been made by the Marcus Loew interests, which recently purchased the Regent picture theatre, Harrisburg, that there will be no increase in the prices of admittance. The prices are thirty cents for adults at matinees and fifty cents for the orchestra and thirty cents for the balcony at nights. Children are admitted at any time for 10 cents.

The management of the Realty Motion picture theatre, Middletown, leased the house on the night of May 7, to a company of home talent players who produced "Better Times," under the auspices of the Middletown Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Paul Herman, owner of the Strand Theatre, Hamburg, has resumed the management of the house, having taken it over from Dr. Lichtenwaller, who had recently been operating it. Dr. Lichtenwaller will devote his entire time to the management of the Palace, in Emaus.

To undergo extensive remodeling, the Family Theatre, Shamokin, has been closed for a period of three months from May 1.

Des Moines

HARRY KELLAR, representative of First National, was in the hospital for a week at Fort Dodge, a victim of typhoid fever. He left the hospital on Sunday.

Art Zeigel has sold his interest in the Lyric Theatre at Jewell. He bought the house just two months ago from George Geifer.

Helen Ditzler, sales control clerk for the Des Moines Pathe office, is leaving to take a stenographic position in Chicago. No one has been secured as yet to take her place.

A new theatre is being opened up at Leon, Iowa. This will give John Waller, owner of the Strand theatre there, a little competition. The new theatre is just in process of construction, a new building being erected to house the new enterprise.

E. C. Clay, salesman for F. B. O., who got badly knocked out when his car bumped him into the garage wall when he was giving her a cranking, is as good as new again. And Les Phillips, salesman for the Exhibitors Supply Company, who was badly cut with glass when the car in which he was driving took several somersaults, has been out on the road again this week. He has been able to drive his car with the exception of a few days in spite of the fact that one piece of glass went clear through his hand.

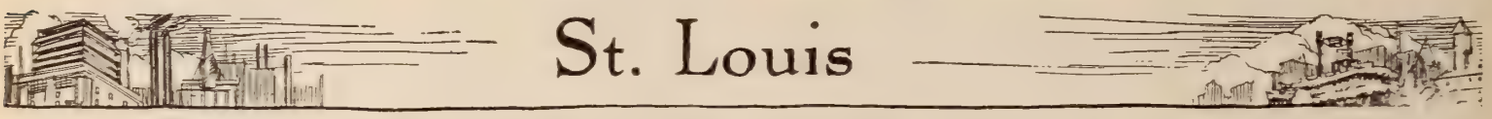
Phil Ryan of the Capital Enterprises of Kansas City, which is represented in Iowa by theatres at Muscatine and Fort Madison, was in Des Moines on business last week.

W. O. Galloway, booker for Educational, is now the ruler supreme of his own private office. The transfer was just accomplished.

Park Agnew, booker of Metro-Goldwyn, accompanied W. F. Banford, manager, on a trip to Waterloo, Oelwein and Cedar Falls. Their mission was of a secret nature. After this trip, Mr. Banford left for a trip to Dubuque, Davenport, and other key towns.

Riverview Park, Des Moines has just been equipped with a Powers motion picture machine.

Harry Gottleib, salesman for Metro-Goldwyn, is really trying to diet. He's trying to get down to 250. He weighs 300 and his Ford has a permanent limp from the load. He lost a few pounds the other day, and then bought a sack of candy. As a result he gained ten pounds. For a fact.



M. R. Blair of Iowa Theatre Company of Cedar Falls, owners of the Regent and Empress theatres, was in Des Moines on film business.

H. H. Prine of the Lyric at Boone was also in. And Thomas A. Brown of the Strand at Iowa City spent the day at the film exchanges lining up pictures.

W. G. Bishop, who has been at the Metro-Goldwyn office on special exploitation made the jump to Memphis, Tenn. from the Des Moines headquarters.

The much discussed ball game between the different staffs of the film exchanges is scheduled for a date within two weeks. The two teams are made up from the three film exchanges outside the Film Exchange Building, Famous Players, Metro-Goldwyn and F. B. O., and the other exchanges all of whom have their offices in the Film Exchange Building.

The hot weather hit Des Moines just as the Capitol Theatre put into operation its new cooling system. One lady complained that she was too cool in the theatre. The thermometer outside is registering 98 degrees.

St. Louis

MRS. S. B. FOLLIS has sold her Scout Theatre, Alamo, Tenn., to O. E. Howell. The new owner will retain Mrs. Follis as manager.

The Palace Theatre at Flat Rock, Ill., is installing a new lighting system and has closed temporarily.

Houses closing for the Summer months in this territory include: Midway, Fornfelt, Mo.; Opera House, Irving, Ill.; Opera House, Makanda, Ill.; Pastime Theatre, Mendon, Mo.; Odd Fellows Temple, Mount Olive, Ill.; Princess, Percy, Ill.; and Pastime, Tamaroa, Ill.

The Hunter Consolidated School District has disposed of their motion picture machine and as a result Hunter, Mo., will be without school pictures for some time to come.

J. Singer formerly organist of the Orpheum Theatre, Quincy, Ill., has been named district manager for the theatre organ department of the Wurlitzer company. He will make his headquarters in St. Louis.

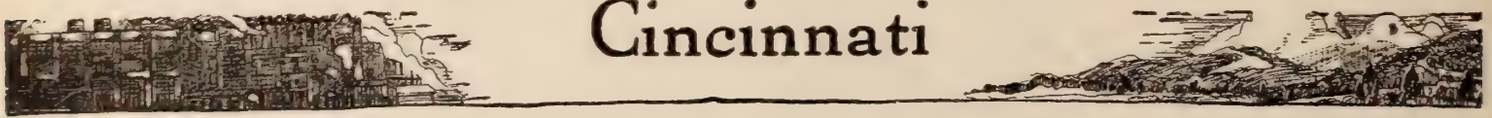
G. E. McKean, Fox manager, visited Springfield and vicinity during the week.

Oscar Wesley of Gillespie and H. Roman of Benld, Ill., were visitors of the week. Joe Hewitt of Robinson, Ill., and V. Krause of Mowequa, Ill., were also seen along Picture Row.

The Missouri Theatre will be used for the annual commencement exercises of St. Louis University on June 4. The program opens at 10 a. m. Approximately 300 graduates from the various departments of the university will receive their degrees.

Lloyd Boyle Howard, 19-year old adopted son of Miss Sidney Emeline Boyle and legal heir to her estate of about $600,000, has accepted the position of usher at the Missouri Theatre, Grand and Lucas avenue.

Tom Reed of Duquoin and Harry Thornton of the Gayety Theatre, Springfield, Ill., plan to attend the big Shrine convention on the Pacific Coast and leave this week for California. While in the West they will give the girls at Hollywood a treat by dropping down for a visit.



Charley Goodman, owner-manager of the Rainbow and New Astor Theatres, St. Louis, fell into the clutches of a speed cop at Williamson, Ill., and was fined $16.50 for letting his gasoline buggy out. He was enroute to Chicago and trying to better Cannon Ball Baker's mark so the cop contended.

McInery of Dallas, Woods of Houston, Moran of Oklahoma City and Sam Henley of Salt Lake City, Utah, were a few of the Universal managers who passed through St. Louis on their way home from the big powwow held in Chicago. Jack Meredith exploiteer in the Southwestern territory accompanied them. Henley formerly sold First National pictures in St. Louis.

Joe Greene, manager of the Lafayette Theatre, owned by the St. Louis Amusement Company, put out an eight-page program in honor of the reopening of the Russell Airdome. Merchants advertising in the program not only defrayed the cost but put something on the right hand side of the ledger.

Chet Gruber manager of the Miners Theatre, Collinsville, Ill., has opened a Summer garden in conjunction with his delicatessen and sandwich shop on West Florissant avenue, St. Louis.

The New Grand Theatre, Hope, Ark., is to be remodeled according to F. S. Horton, manager. The improvements will include a new lobby, tile floor, marble base, stucco columns, etc.

Cincinnati

THE Standard picture exchange is moving from the fifth floor of the Broadway film building to the third floor. The new quarters will be much larger than the old ones and better furnished, and will have all the appearances of doing a tremendous business.

George Burns, office manager for Standard has left the hospital and is at home again where he is rapidly recovering from a severe illness.

John Eifert, recently appointed to a special post on the Standard force, spent four days in Cleveland conferring on the product with the officers at the home office.

The Film Exchange Managers association will give a picnic to their employees at the Cincinnati Gym Grounds on Saturday June 13. Roy Haines, manager for First National, Stanley Jacques, manager for Pathe and Maurice Strauss, manager for Progress, have the affair in charge and a good time is promised to all attending, which will be by invitation only.

Elmer W. McKinley and James E. Finch, formerly with Standard, have joined the forces of their old friend Maurice Strauss and are now with Progress serving as booker and salesman respectively.

The Progress exchange is to move to the offices formerly occupied by Associated Producers.

Max Margolis, the energetic salesman for Universal, is making many a week end trip home these days. In the past he stayed in the territory, but the rumor is that a certain young lady has won his heart, consequently the many miles of weary travel each Friday.

J. S. Davis has sold the New and Popular Theatres of New Boston, O. to Simon Leobold of Portsmouth, O. Davis will devote his entire time to the management of the Westland Theatre, Portsmouth.

Al. Kinzler, Chas. Thompson and Pete Zander, associates in the exhibition game in Dayton, O. controlling several suburban houses, drove up to film row last week in their new Cadillac car.

Gus Phillips of the Strand Theater, Newport, Ky., tried to climb a telephone pole in that city last Friday night with the result that his car is now laid up for repairs.

Theo. Hahn Jr., leader of the Capitol Theater orchestra and also in charge of all the orchestras at the local Libson houses is being complimented daily on the beautiful musical programs that he arranges for each theatre.

A. L. Potts, of the Eastland Theater, Maysville, Ky., recently opened, reports that business at his house has been very good lately.

Albany

THE film salesmen of Albany, certainly covered themselves with glory on Monday night when they played the part of hosts at the second annual ball given at the Hotel TenEyck. It was a most enjoyable affair and attracted some eighty or ninety couples, including many of the nearby exhibitors. The entertainment committee consisted of Arthur Goldsmith, Ray Smith, Fenton Lawlor, and Edward Hochstim, with all the other film boys lending their hands toward making the affair a success.

Bert Gibbons, former manager for Vitagraph in Albany, and later on a divisional manager, has entered the employ of the local Universal office, as a salesman, and is now covering northern New York.

Among the visitors along Film Row during the past week was L. C. Adams, with houses in Dover Plains and Copake. It appears that there are three houses in Dover Plains, although it is only a small village, but none of the exhibitors wants to pull up stakes and get out so they are all sticking and waiting for the other fellow to make the first move.

All Watertown smoked cigars on Sol Manheimer last week. Mr. Manheimer is the manager of the Robbins theatres in that city, but what is more important, he is now the father of a bouncing baby girl.

H. C. Bissell, recently promoted to the position of manager of the Universal exchange in Albany, is back from the Chicago and Milwaukee Conventions. It was his first trip west and while he liked it he expressed himself as being rather glad to be back once more in the Capital City.

The Rex, in Middleburg, has been acquired by N. S. Fleck, a newcomer in the business, who has reopened the house, and who was making his first flying trip along Film Row during the past week.

Herman Stearn, local manager for F. B. O., made a flying trip to New York last week, and then doubled back by sleeper to Plattsburg, in order to meet Jack Mathews, a well known exhibitor of that city.

Robert Mochrie, E. E. Lowe, and Arthur Goldsmith of the local P. D. C. exchange, are in New York this week, attending a divisional convention at the Hotel Commodore.

Peter Gordon has taken over the Photo Play theatre at Keeseville, which has been run by H. E. Nichols.

The Palace, in Waddington, has closed for the summer, during which time certain repairs will be made by L. LaPointe, the owner.

S. Stein, who has been running the Lyric, in Hunter, announces that he will erect a new theatre in the near future.

"Pop" Linton, of Utica, whose house was burned to the ground several weeks ago, is quietly at work these days financing the erection of a new house that will be ready for opening the fore part of September.

Alfred J. Marchetti, booker for First National, Albany, has been confined to his home on account of illness. Alec Herman, manager for First National here, joined forces with Harry Buxbaum, and F. J. A. McCarthy, the latter of Buffalo, and swooped down on the Schine brothers the other day.

An old timer in the person of Jimmy Sper, who used to make Albany his hang out but who is now in Buffalo, was in town last Wednesday and spent most of the day in shaking hands with his friends. The same day also brought to town Charlie Moyer, who runs the Liberty, in Herkimer, and Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, with a half dozen houses to his string. Charles Sesonske, of the Grand, in Johnstown, was also on hand.

W. W. Farley, of Albany, has acquired the Community theatre in Catskill, the deal having gone through last week. Just exactly when Mr. Farley will take over the house is not yet known. It is further understood that negotiations undertaken by Mr. Farley for the Gateway in Little Falls, and the Liberty in Herkimer, have not made any perceptible progress.

Last Wednesday marked the second year for Herman Vineberg, as manager of the Mark Strand theatre in Albany. Mr. Vineberg has made a remarkable success as manager of the house, and is an indefatigable worker. Slip covers go on next week, at which time ushers and other house employees will appear in their summer uniforms.

Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, head of the Albany Zone Committee, was in Buffalo during the past week.

W. W. Mase, of Prattsville, in town during the past week, became a member of the Zone Commitee.

Jake Tremper, of the Airdome in Rhinebeck, was also along Film Row.

L. L. Connors has decided not to renew his lease of the Pember, in Granville, following its expiration on May 30. He has theatres also in Salem and Cambridge.

A. L. Burks, who is connected with the local Universal exchange, had the time of his life in Milwaukee when he impersonated "Hoot" Gibson in a parade staged by Universal during the Convention. Mr. Burks rode a horse and did nearly all the other stunts generally attributed to the well known star.

Otto Eigen has been forced out of his theatre which he has long run in Sharon Springs, on account of the block housing the theatre being sold. Mr. Eigen will get out on June 1, but will probably be heard from later on, with some other house.

To Charlie Hepp, of the Lincoln in Troy, it never rains but it pours. Mr. Hepp has the distinction of being the father of eleven children and about half the number were sick during the past winter. His mother-in-law died last week, and the last straw that broke the camel's back came a few nights later when his son was so badly injured in an automobile accident, that he may lose his eye.

Proctor's new house in Schenectady is progressing to the extent that concrete was being poured during the past week, but it will be several months before the structure has been completed.

The Strand theatre, in Schenectady, has taken on a summerlike appearance through palms and other flowers that adorn the lobby together with a fountain and a trellis-like overhead. The appearance has caused manager William Shirley to receive many words of praise.

Miss Betty Feuer is a decidedly busy young lady these days for in addition to handling the Crescent theatre in Schenectady, she is being called upon for many social obligations. Miss Feuer attended a ball at Union College the other night, and last week the Elks ball, and now she is talking of spending a week or so in New York city.

If prizes were offered to persons wearing the loudest shirts, Walter Roberts, of the Troy theatre would unquestionably carry off the blue ribbon. He had on one last week that could be heard a block away, but he said nothing by reason of the fact that the garment had been presented to him by his better half.

Mr. and Mrs. Colby Shaw, former well known residents of Albany and vicinity, are back from more than a year that has been spent on the West Coast, during which time Mr. Shaw was connected with an orchestra at Santa Monica. The couple became a bit homesick and intend to spend this summer in the East. Mr. Shaw formerly conducted the orchestra at the Mark Strand in Albany.

The Troy Local No. 285 Motion Picture Operators Union, announces that it will hold no meetings during July and August. The Local has twenty-seven members and is decidedly active.

The American theatre in Troy, acquired several months ago by the Strand interests, and which has remained closed since that time, is to be redecorated, and according to reports, will be reopened this fall as a second run house, and a direct competitor with the Griswold, a block away.

The high school students in Warrensburg, to the number of 100, each contributed a dollar bill last week toward the purchase of a motion picture machine for the school. The board of education will bear the expense of securing the necessary films that will be shown each Friday night from now on.

Dave Seymour, a well known exhibitor in Saranac Lake, is connected with the Saranac Lake Finance Corporation, a new concern that incorporated last week.

Henry Corr, operator at the Palace in Troy, is a bit chesty these days but he has a good reason, for he is enjoying himself astride one of the finest looking horses that is seen along the bridle paths leading out of the Collar City. The horse was presented Mr. Corr by his many friends in New York city. Mr. Corr served with the army during the World War, having been connected with the Signal Service.

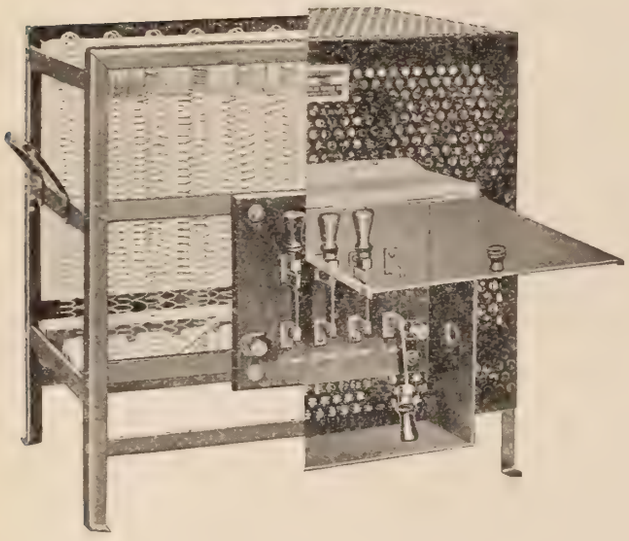
Texas

OTTO BRAUER, south Texas representative for Universal, is in town for a few days. Mr. Brauer has just returned from a trip through the Valley and reports business good due to the good crop prospects.

Harry Van Demark city manager for Southern Enterprises of Texas has returned from Dallas where he attended a district meet called by Earl Crabb, district manager.

Ed Collins, city manager for Southern Enterprises, Inc., of Texas at Galveston stopped off for a short visit early this week. Mr. Collins was returning from a district meeting held at Dallas.

Will Horwitz, owner and manager of the New Texan and the Iris theatre is in New York on business. Mr. Horwitz will be out of the city for about ten days.



Ed Breamer manager of the local Majestic theatre is in Chicago for four weeks. Mr. Breamer was sent to Chicago by his company to study the conditions of the Chicago theatres and to get new data regarding the management of combination theatres.

Jack Petit Dallas film salesman is in town with his new fall releases. Mr. Petit represents Specialty Film Service in south Texas.

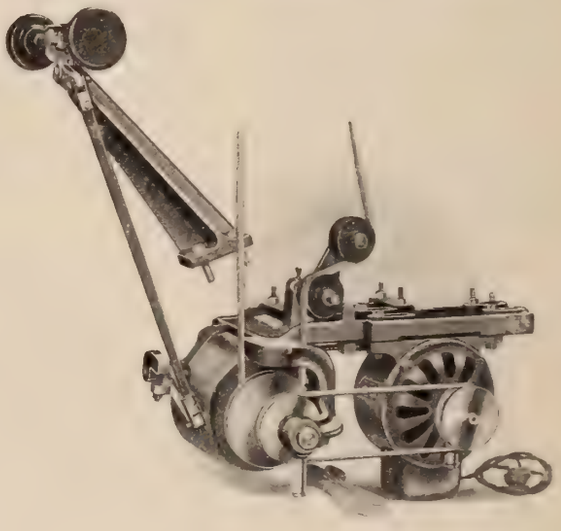
Eugene Dennis Kansas City wonder girl is making a personal appearance at the Queen theatre this week. Miss Dennis is one of the most unusual mind-readers ever appearing in Houston.

IMPORTANT FACTORS IN GOOD PROJECTION POWER'S

MULTIPLE COIL RHEOSTAT

Weighs less than one-third of grid type rheostat. Easily moved by one man.

Multiple Coil Units—One coil carrying five amps.—balance ten amps. each.



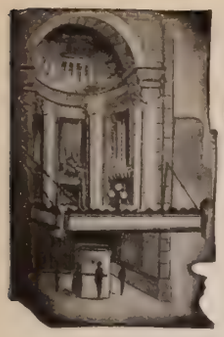
Small amperage carried by each coil allows use of small wires which permit perfect connections.

Loss of one coil does not affect others. If entire capacity of rheostat is not being used a new coil may be immediately switched in.

Coils can be replaced in a few minutes without difficulty and adjustments are easily made by means of knife switches.

Coils are special non-corrosive wire, strong and operate at very low temperature.

GOVERNOR TYPE MECHANICAL SPEED CONTROL



An assurance of absolute accuracy and dependability. Thousands in use without a complaint.

By setting lever and then simply throwing in the motor switch the projector will at once reach the exact speed for which the control is adjusted.

The speed of the mechanism will not be affected even though a change in line voltage should cause the motor speed to vary considerably.

If Power's Speed Indicator is used in connection with Power's Governor Type Mechanical Speed Control all difficulty regarding the proper timing of the picture is eliminated.

S.M.P.E. Holds Successful Meeting

Many Interesting Papers; Description of Movies by Wireless; Mobile Colored Lighting for Theatres

THE Spring convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers which was held in Schenectady, N. Y., May 18th to 21st inclusive, proved to be one of the most successful meetings that the Society has ever held, both from a standpoint of interesting papers presented and the large number of members and guests in attendance. The meetings were held in the new Van Curler hotel.

The papers given were of technical and semitechnical nature and of diversified subjects. As a result, the material and data presented proved exceptionally valuable from a strictly engineering view and also for practical showmanship and theatre operation.

The Arrangements Committee functioned to a degree of perfection in as much as the entertainment program for members and guests as well as the attending ladies provided diversified amusement that was greatly enjoyed by every one.

The convention opened Monday morning with an address by the president of the Society, L. A. Jones of the Eastman Kodak Co., who was followed by the Mayor of Schenectady with a speech of welcome. Francis C. Pratt, Vice-President of the General Electric Co. also added a few remarks at this opening session.

A paper that should prove very interesting and helpful to exhibitors was read at the second session by F. R. Still, Vice-Pres. of the American Blower Co., entitled "How Theatres Should Be Ventilated." This paper contained data and practical recommendations pretaining to the proper atmospheric conditioning of motion picture theatres. As cooling and ventilating is one of the most important problems that now confront the exhibitor in his efforts to increase patronage, particularly during the summer season, this paper, when it appears in the printed transactions of the S.M.P.E. should find wide distribution among theatre owners.

Another paper that caused unusual comment when it was presented by its authors, L. A. Jones and Lewis Townsend, was entitled "Colored Lighting Effects in Connection with the Exhibition of Motion Pictures." This paper was supplemented by slides and a most interesting demonstration that gave indications of the developments that can be looked forward to in the field of mobile colored lighting effects in motion picture theatres. The authors remarked on the favorable reaction by audiences to the mobile modified lighting effects that have been tried out in the Eastman theatre. The unusual feature in the method of securing these remarkable color effects is that they are projected in an identical manner to motion pictures.

C. Francis Jenkins, founder of the Society and an inventor of international fame, startled the gathering with his announcement of actually accomplishing the the sending of motion pictures by wireless. He predicted that motion pictures in the home is not far distant and that furthermore music would be broadcasted simultaneously. This double broadcasting has already been successfully carried on between stations separated by several miles. These developments claimed by Mr. Jenkins will cause considerable contemplation in the motion picture field in forecasting their effects on the standing of picture theatres with the public.

Many other papers were presented before the convention that were the cause of lengthy discussions. The complete list of papers and their authors is as follows:

An Improved Sensitometer Sector Wheel —M. Briefer

How Theatres Should Be Ventilated—F. R. Still

Infra-Red Photography in Motion Picture Work—J. A. Ball.

Control of Series Arc Generator Sets—J. R. Hertner

The Machine Development of Negative and Positive Motion Picture Films—Dr. A. B. Hitchins

What Happened in the Beginning—F. H. Richardson

Colored Lighting Effects for Use in Connection with the Exhibition of Motion Pictures—L. A. Jones and Lewis Townsend

Student Psychology and Educational Motion Pictures—M. Briefer

Standardization of Screen Illumination —R. M. Hill

Static Markings on Motion Picture Film —J. I. Crabtree

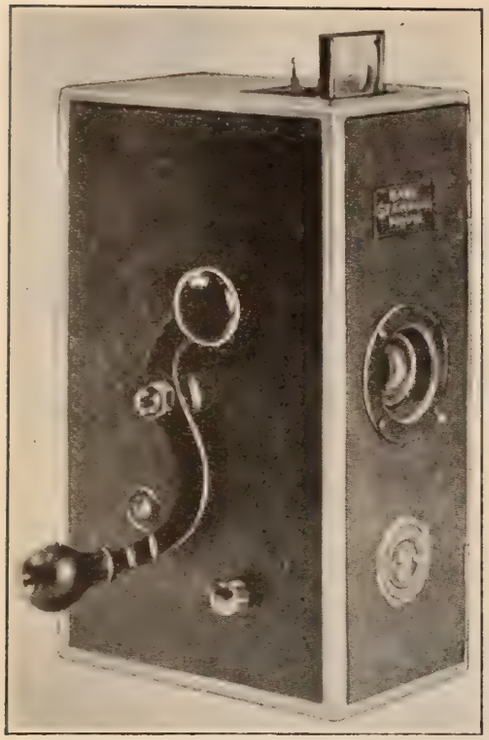
Paper Describing Installation of Tungsten Lamps for Color Motion Picture Work —L. A. Jones

A New Reflectometer—Mr. Frank Benford

Color Photography Patents—W. V. D. Kelley

An Account of Recent Developments in Radio Vision—C. F. Jenkins

A Museum of Motion Picture History—T. K. Peters



Artistic Utilization of Light in the Photography of Motion Pictures—D. W. Atwater and W. B. Ihnen

Manufacture of Incandescent Motion Picture Lamps—R. S. Burnap

The attendance at this convention was one of the largest that has ever been had. Many members that have failed to attend some of the more recent conventions of the Society were present giving the first day of the convention the appearance, as one member expressed it, of old home week. The members and guests in attendance are listed below:

Members present—P. M. Abbott, Motion Picture News; D. M. Alexander, Alexander Film Co.; Frank Benford, General Electric Co.; D. F. Braun; M. Briefer, Atlantic Gelatine Co.; G. L. Chanier, Pathe Exchange; J. I. Crabtree, Eastman Kodak Co.; L. E. Davidson, Spencer Lens Co.; R. D. Earl, Bay State Film Co.; E. C. Fritts, Eastman Kodak Co.; H. P. Gage, Corning Glass Works; W. B. Cook; J. H. Theiss, Dupont Pathe; A. G. Senner, Herbert Huesgen Co.; A. Gray, Chief Projectionist Lancaster Theatre; H. R. Glover, Gundlach-Manhattan Co.; C. L. Gregory; John Hertner, Hertner Elec. The Baby Standard Movie Camera which sells at a price that makes it worth investigating for use by exhibitors for filming local events. The camera and a special printer is made by the Vicam Photo Alliance Corp.

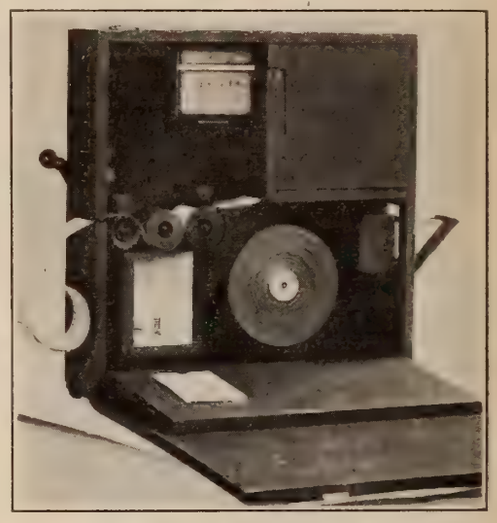
New Inexpensive Camera and Printer for Filming Local Events

A new motion picture outfit which consists of a camera, developer and printer has been placed on the market, that should prove a material aid to exhibitors in increasing patronage, according to the claims made for this apparatus.



The Vicam Movie Camera and Printer is a very inexpensive apparatus, and convenient to handle, lending itself particularly, it is claimed, for amateur photography.

This apparatus suggests itself for use by exhibitors for photographing interesting local events, printing and developing the film on the premises which would provide the film ready for showing in a very short time. For instance—a local theatre could make two hundred foot of film at the schools, or of local celebrities, etc., each week, which would provide a very attractive added feature to the show. The cost of making this film would probably not exceed nine cents a running foot and where the work is done by the management itself, the cost would be considerably less.

It is claimed that this equipment has been used by exhibitors for photographing wrecks, accidents, fires, police drills, baby shows, boy scout activities, etc., which events were of particular local interest. In general a motion picture camera ready for use at all times gives an exhibitor an excellent opportunity to use his own initiative in playing up to his patrons, and popularizing his theatre.

The Vicam Camera includes two metal magazines of twenty-five feet capacity and a corrugated celluloid ribbon for use in developing the film. This equipment saves tanks and other expensive apparatus. The printer has a two hundred foot capacity, and can be attached to either alternating or direct current of 110 voltage. It is claimed that an amateur can operate this equipment and secure good results.

M. P. Equipment Dealers Elect New Officers at Milwaukee

THE Motion Picture Dealers' of America annual convention, held at the Milwaukee Auditorium from May 14th to 16th, was a success both in point of attendance and amount of business transacted. Two hundred and eleven delegates, representing fifty-nine recognized U. S. distributors, out of a possible sixty-five, registered, and eighty associate members representing that number of manufacturers of motion picture theatre equipment and furnishings.

The officers elected for the ensuing year, who will assume their new duties at a directors meeting to be held in Chicago July 15th, include: President, C. D. Struble; Vice-President, Tex Coombs, and Treasurer, Carl Fulton. B. A. Benson, retiring Secretary and Treasurer, was prevailed upon to keep the office of Secretary until such time as a suitable successor could be found. High tribute was paid to Mr. Benson's ability and hard work for the association since its inception.

The new Board of Directors include C. D. Struble, Kansas City; H. R. Dutton, Chicago; Max Rubin, Detroit; Abe Dresner, Washington; D. C. Hollis, Pittsburgh; Tex Coombs, San Francisco; G. A. Doering, Dallas; Carl Fulton, Chicago, and W. S. Rebell of New York city.

The new officers of the manufacturing division are: Sam Lears, re-elected President; Joe Breckert, First Vice-President; J. H. Hertner, Second Vice-President; L. M. Fulton, Third Vice-President, and Mrs. A. De Berrie, Secretary.

Secretary-Treasurer Benson reported the finances of the Association in fine condition and turned over a substantial balance to his successor as treasurer.

The constitution was revised to strengthen the organization, one clause in particular arousing much interest was a fine of five dollars for any member failing to attend a convention session and one dollar for each time tardy.

One of the pleasant features of the convention was a banquet at Gimbel's Grill on Friday night, which was attended by one hundred and fifty-eight persons.

As the members left Milwaukee they were as of a unit in declaring that the exposition which was held during the convention was the most successful ever promoted by the Equipment Dealers' Association and that every member who had a booth was greatly benefited, reports of orders and prospects for future business being heard on all sides.

The next convention will be held in Detroit during July, 1926.

The special printer made for developing the film used in the Baby Standard Camera described on this page.

Work Started on 2,200 Seat Hackensack, N. J., House

Ground was broken on May 11th for one of the finest and most complete theatres in New Jersey at the corner of Main and Camden streets, in Hackensack, N. J. The ground was formerly owned by the Orintani Field Club and was sought after by many interests, including the city itself who planned using it for a city hall. The efforts of Haines-Reinlieb Co. landed it for Bratter & Pollak.

This building will be constructed of limestone with a polished granite base, concrete and steel. It will contain an auditorium that will seat 2,200 people, 17 stores and 60 offices arranged in suites of three each. The building was designed by William E. Lehman of Newark and will be under his supervision.

Two Modern Theatres to Be Built in North Carolina

The Piedmont Amusement Company of Winston-Salem, N. C., will build a beautiful theatre to replace the old Broadway which was destroyed by fire some time ago.

The Ohio theatre, Lorain, Ohio which was recently constructed by August Ilg on the site of the former theatre wrecked by last summer's tornado. This house is thoroughly modern in every respect.

New Theatre Opens in Tornado Swept Town in Ohio

LORAIN, Ohio, suffered serious damage last summer from a tornado that wrecked the business section of the town. But out of that wreckage there has arisen the Ohio theatre, one of the most complete and most artistic of the small town theatres. August Ilg, who built it, has always been prominent in picture exhibition. He operated the Wonderland in Lorain before the tornado struck the town. But after the storm, the Wonderland was condemned by the building commission as being unable to withstand another shock. So Ilg prepared to build a house that would meet the special conditions and that would gain the confidence of former picture fans who had a fear of gathering in large crowds, due to the utter collapse of one theatre during the progress of the storm.

Beginning right at the beginning, Ilg built his house as nearly wind proof as possible. He instructed his architect to use extra heavy girders in the construction of the house. Extra heavy steel was employed all through the structure and the concrete is a much better and stronger mixture than what is generally used. Metal doors are also installed.

The Ohio theatre is on Broadway, Lorain's main downtown thoroughfare. It has a unpretentious but tasty brick exterior. The lobby, 15 ft. x 50 ft. is tiled in bright colors. This together with attractive lobby frames, makes a gay entrance to the auditorium. This is well proportioned, being 42 ft. wide by 114 ft. deep. The 700 seats are all on one floor, and arranged so as to give practically perfect vision from all angles. There is a stage, but it is small. Just enough for a specialty number. Ilg does not plan to introduce vaudeville into his policy. He's sticking to pictures and nothing but pictures. The interior decorations, done by Italian Fresco and Decorating Company of Cleveland, are soft and pleasing. Tan, rose and old gold are tastefully combined. The side walls are panelled, with a delicate hand painted design in each panel. A small electric light fixture, with silk shade also adorns each panel. The ceiling has simulated beams. They are concrete beams, and are frescoed. The draperies are rose velour, lined in gold, and edged with gold fringe. Throughout the entire house, the decorations are the kind that one would use in a home. This gives the theatre a comfortable atmosphere. There is nothing garish, nothing offensive. Everything is restful. The heavy carpet which covers the 12 ft. x 30 ft. foyer, and the aisles, is also restful. It has a dark background with a dull gold conventional design that harmonizes with the design on the wall panels.

The Ohio has all the latest equipment to guarantee comfort to its patrons. A large fan is installed on the roof which throws the fresh air into the house, while two 24-inch fans constantly suck out the foul air. Steam heat is used, and the temperature is kept even by a Johnson thermostat. Lighting fixtures are all equipped with rose bulbs, emitting a soft glow. The wood finish in the theatre is mahogany. The wood seats are also finished in mahogany.

The projection room has been given special attention by both owner and architect. This room is 30 ft. x 12 ft., and has its own special ventilating system. Adjoining the projection room is a rest room for the projectionists, with complete toilet facilities. Two Simplex projection machines are used.

The theatre is estimated to have cost $125,000.

International Congress of Photography for Paris

AFTER a lapse of fifteen years an International Congress of Photography is to be held this year, June 29 to July 4, in Paris. The last congress was held in Brussels in 1910, where a very successful meeting was held attended largely by representatives from all nations.

The Congress will be divided into four sections: (1) Scientific; (2) Technical and artistic; (3) Historical and documentary; (4) Technique of cinematography (in connection with the Congress of Cinematography). An historical exhibition of photography and a centenary celebration of the beginning of photography will be held during the Congress.

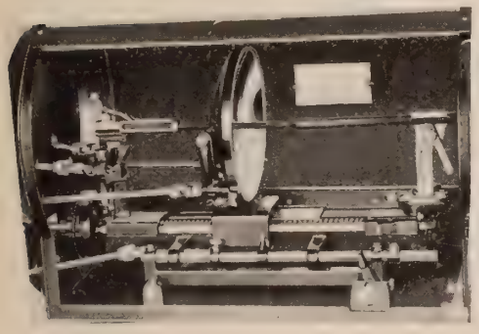
At the request of the International Committee of the Congress, an Organizing Committee in the United States has been formed, the members being: F. F. Renwick, Dr. W. D. Bancroft, W. H. Manahan, E. J. Wall, Dr. H. E. Ives, Prof. R. W. Wood, and Dr. C. E. K. Mees, chairman. A list of American patrons has also been drawn up; their names are given on the attached list.

The Congress is especially anxious to obtain papers relating to the branches of photography with which it deals from workers in the United States. Offers of such papers can be communicated to Dr. C. E. K. Mees, Eastman Kodak Co.

Million Dollar House for Port Chester, N. Y.

A million-dollar theatre for the Rhebem Theatres Corporation at Port Chester, N. Y., will be undertaken by the Longacre Engineering and Construction Company as general contractors. The theatre will accommodate 2,000 persons. The site on which the property is to be erected is on Westchester avenue near the New Haven railroad station.

Besides the theatre the building will include offices on the upper floors and stores on the street frontage. The architect is Thomas W. Lamb.



The Ohio theatre, erected on the site of the former that was wrecked by the tornado that swept the town of Lorain, Ohio last summer.

You pay for current—what you get is light on the screen!

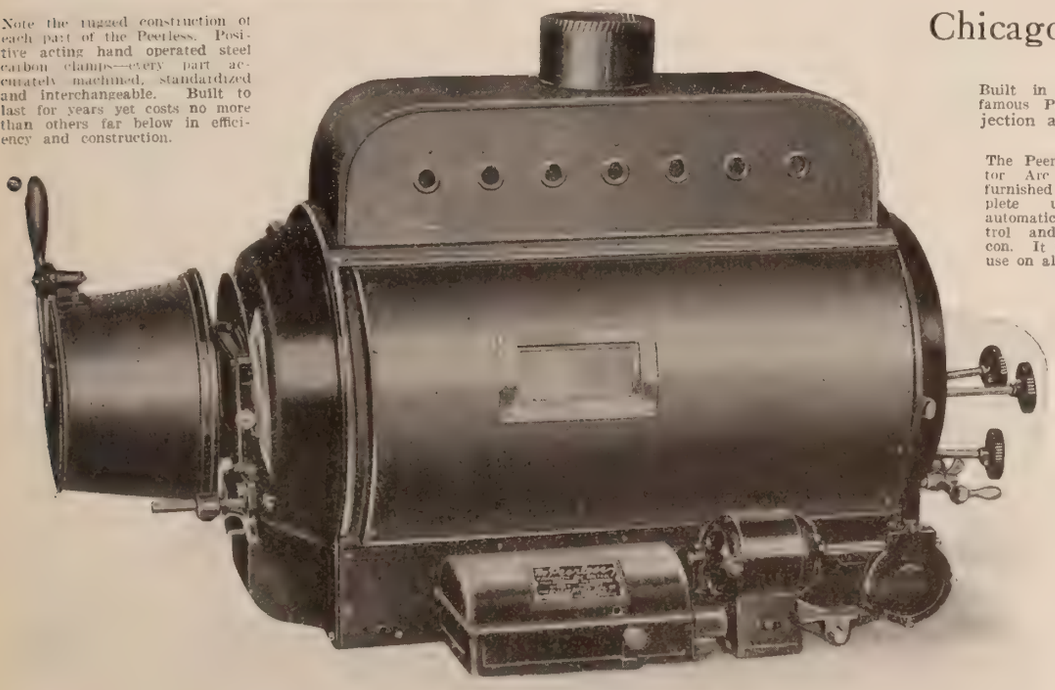
How much light do you get? What does it cost you?



The Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp makes more profit for you by giving you twice your present light on the screen at one-fourth the cost of current and less than half the cost of carbons. This remarkable efficiency is the direct result of the practical application of scientific optical principles, the use of a condenser in addition to a reflector and the most advanced design and construction of the lamp itself.

Look at your screen, imagine having twice the brilliant a picture at one-fourth of your present light bill and decide whether this is not worth your immediate investigation. Your dealer will give you a demonstration without obligation or you can mail the coupon attached for full details.

Note the rugged construction of each part of the Peerless. Positive acting hand operated steel carbon clamps—every part accurately machined, standardized and interchangeable. Built to last for years yet costs no more than others far below in efficiency and construction.

Built in the same factory manufacturing the world famous Peerless Arc Control and other precision projection apparatus.

The Peerless Reflector Arc Lamp is furnished as a complete unit with automatic arc control and stereopticon. It is made for use on all projectors.

Analysis of Flicker

Use of Crater as Source

IN analyzing the resultant screen flicker when using an A. C. for projection purposes, careful distinction must be made between the use of the flame or the crater as a light source, since the flicker characteristics of these two sources differ widely.

The frequency of the flame, which acts as a carrier of the current flowing between the electrodes, is necessarily twice that of the current frequency, so that, if the current frequency is 60 cycles per second, the flame frequency is 120.

In the case of the electrodes (carbons), however, each is alternatively light and dark, relatively speaking, since each is alternately positive and negative. The light frequency of both the craters is, therefore, the same as that of the current, i. e., 60 cycles per second for 60 cycle current.

This difference in frequency between the flame and craters of an A. C. arc gives rise to marked differences in the resultant screen flicker when either of these sources is used for projection.

Crater in Focus

The flicker conditions when the arc flame was in focus were described in the preceding article where it was shown that the highest frequency of flicker wave which it was possible to obtain was 40 cycles per second. This, it will be recalled, was not high enough to become invisible when high screen intensities were used, but ordinarily, would be invisible with the intensities commonly obtained with A. C. arcs.

Few projectionists, however, make a practice of using the arc flame as a source since, in the first place, it does not possess anything like the brightness of the crater and in addition, fluctuates so badly that it becomes a problem to obtain a reasonable even and steady screen illumination.

For best screen illumination, therefore, the use of the flame should be strictly avoided, and one of the craters (top) should be used instead.

It is quite true, that even when one of the craters is selected for focusing, the flame will also provide some light to the screen. Under the best of conditions therefore, there will be two distinct screen flickers, one from the flame and one from the crater.

Since the crater has the lowest frequency, however, anything which tends to eliminate this low frequency flicker will also automatically render the other invisible. It is only necessary, therefore, to remove if possible, the lowest frequency flicker.

Flicker Curve for Crater Focus

The variation of resultant screen flicker, with shutter frequency is shown in Fig. 5. Suppose we analyze this curve from the start to finish.

When the shutter is stationary (shutter frequency equals zero), the only flicker present will be that from the arc crater which is 60 cycles per second. This flicker wave would be invisible on the screen and so is marked zero on the curve.

As the shutter starts up and increases in speed the resultant flicker will be equal to the crater flicker (60 cycles) minus the shutter frequency, so that if the latter were 12 cycles (4 R. P. S. for a 3 blade and 6 R. P. S. for a 2 blade shutter) the resultant flicker would be 60—12=48 cycles. This would not be the resultant screen flicker however.

The resultant screen flicker would be either the difference between the two frequencies (48 cycles as above) or it would be the difference between the figure just arrived at (48 cycles) and the shutter frequency whichever is smallest. In this case it would be the difference between 60 cycles and 48 (12 cycles as shown on the curve).

Maximum Flicker Frequency

When a shutter frequency of 20 cycles per second is reached the difference between the arc flicker and shutter flicker is such that the difference between this figure is a maximum, thus,

60—20=40 (resultant flicker)

40—20=20 (resultant screen flicker)

As the shutter rotates faster, the screen flicker decreases rapidly so that at a shutter frequency of 25 cycles per second it is

60—25=35 (resultant flicker)

35—25=10 (resultant screen flicker)

As the shutter further increases in speed the flicker on the screen will vary as shown by the curve. It will be noted that the maximum flicker frequency obtainable is 20 cycles per second and this brings out the interesting fact that when the crater of an A. C. arc is focused it is practically impossible to strictly avoid flicker.

This seems to depict a rather distressing condition since from the curve in Fig. 5 there would be only a small range of shutter frequencies (35 to 50 cycles) where screen flicker is not likely to prove particularly bad.

In practice, however, the condition is not as bad as an inspection of the curve would indicate, since during the time that either of the carbons, or electrodes were negative, they would tend to form a luminous tip. This tip, while not as bright as the crater itself, would still help considerably in reducing the flicker range, hence, lowering the vanishing-flicker frequency on the screen. The flame too would assist in keeping the brightness of the focused crater up to normal since it is partly focused along with the crater. The net result of all this is to tend to give the focused crater a constant flicker frequency of 120 cycles per second instead of the 60 cycles it would appear to possess from a casual examination of the conditions.

It is doubtful as to just how closely the frequency of the focused crater will approach 120 cycles a second. Whether or not it does will not matter since one thing is certain, the luminous tip and arc flame will considerably reduce the flicker range, so much so in fact, that at low frequencies (15-30 cycles per second) the flicker will not be particularly noticeable.

MODERN THEATRE SEATING

Box-Office Returns Are the Proof

Like other modern business men, the progressive theatre manager well understands the value of "good will" to the success of his enterprise.

He knows that a great part of his audience consists of people who drop into his theatre regularly because they find there not only a high average of entertainment, but also the refinements of equipment and decoration that make it a genuinely pleasant place to visit.

The theatre-going public has come to expect and demand beautiful, comfortable seating as one of the essentials of the modern playhouse. Theatres throughout the country are daily demonstrating that good seating has a definite box-office value.

Managers who wish to provide the utmost in comfort and beauty at prices which make their purchase a true investment are finding the Steel Furniture Company line exactly to their liking. The catalog is ready for you; our planning department is at your command.

BREEZES
that really cool.

What if you do have a dozen or two wall fans buzzing around. They can't get rid of the heat and humidity your audience gives off—particularly in hot weather. They merely churn up the stale, overheated air.

What you need is AIR CHANGE—tremendous volumes of fresh, outdoor air sweeping through to give you a complete change at least once every minute. That's the one SURE way of keeping down the heat and humidity. And at the same time you get refreshing breezes that really cool.

You can bet it works—2,000 other theatres prove it.

Wilmer & Vincent Rebuilding Old Orpheum, Harrisburg

UNDER a revised plan announced on April 28th, by the Wilmer & Vincent Company, work of rebuilding the Orpheum theatre, Harrisburg, at an expenditure of $750,000—exclusive of the value of the plot—was started on May 11th, with the intention of having the new theatre ready for opening on November 1st.

The Orpheum, which until now has been devoted to "legitimate" attractions, is to be transformed into a vaudeville and motion picture theatre, of more than 2,300 seating capacity, and the Majestic theatre, now a vaudeville and picture house, will become the seat of the "legitimate."

The entire theatre will be reconstructed, with the exception of two walls, one of which is on Locust street and the other on a private alley, west of the theatre.

The auditorium will be 103 by 105 feet, with a waiting room directly inside the lobby, 80 by 40 feet, from which broad stairways will lead to the balcony, the front of which will contain four rows of loge seats.

The interior ornamentation and lighting effects as planned by E. C. Horn Sons, architects, will place the theatre among the most beautiful in the State, according to C. Floyd Hopkins, local representative of the Wilmer & Vincent interests.

Fire protection will be provided by the erection of two fire-proof towers in the inside of the theatre, with winding stairways leading directly to the outside pavement.

The front of the theatre will be built in imitation stone, and in addition to the frontage as now constituted, will also include the adjoining Franklin Building, which frontage will be given over entirely for office purposes. There will be fifty-four offices in the new structure, in addition to the offices in the Franklin Building.

Newark Theatre Now in Last Stages of Construction

The Hawthorne Theatre, located at Hawthorne Ave., and Walcott Terrace, Newark, N. J. has reached the finishing stages. This theatre was designed by Frank Grad and will contain an auditorium with 1400 seats, five stores and six offices. Construction is of pressed brick, concrete and steel and is being built by the Walcott Holding Co., for Bratter & Pollak.

Pierce Takes Over Stewart Process for Protecting Films

CHARLES I. PIERCE is to commercialize the Victor A. Stewart process for protecting motion picture films, and has acquired the entire Republic Laboratory plant for that purpose, has been announced by J. Harrison Edwards, General Sales Manager of the Victor A. Stewart Process, Inc.

V. A. Stewart, Consulting Motion Picture Engineer, is the inventor of the Victor Stewart Process, for which many important claims are made. It is said that this process makes the emulsion exceedingly durable, causing the life of the emulsion to be extended to equal that of the base of the film itself. Other features are, that this process eliminates film scratching, and also makes the film oil and water proof.

It is said that no waxing is necessary for the first run prints.

At a demonstration of this process, a piece of processed film was placed in a retainer of hot water, and allowed to remain there for some time. Upon removal, it was thoroughly dried and showed no deterioration in any way of the emulsion.

It is claimed that this new process will effect a tremendous saving through the prolongation of the life of film.

Large Open Air Theatre is Being Built in Tampa, Fla.

D. A. Stewart is building a large open air theatre in Tampa, Florida, at the corner of Grand Central avenue and Edison street. This location is in the residential section known as Hyde Park, and the name "Hyde Park Theatre" has been selected for the house.

The theatre will occupy two lots which will give them a ground space of about 120 by 120 feet. All around this space a side wall is being erected in sections of about 10 feet square. The sections are made up of wood and fastened in the ground with cement to a depth of three feet, then the front is covered with cement plaster and relief work added. On the back of each section is a covering of galvanized iron, pressed to represent brick. Between each of these sections is a gate, the outside portion being usd as a three-sheet poster board.

To start with, no cover will be provided, but to take care of this feature, in case they wish to add it, they have poles extending upward from the corner of each of the sections. Benches will be used for the seating of the main portion, and seats will be provided for 1,800 people. Around the sides and back umbrella tables and chairs will be placed.

The policy of the house will be pictures exclusively with a standard price of 10c for children and 25c for adults. Two Simplex machines will be used in the booth, which is being equipped on the same scale as an all enclosed theatre. Mr. Stewart says that he expects to have everything completed for the opening show within ten days.

H. S. Koppin Leases Detroit House From Cutler

The Henry S. Koppin theaters are rapidly growing in number. The latest addition to the group is the Lakewood theater, one of the largest East Side houses, located on East Jefferson avenue. Koppin plans to make several improvements to the house, which he leased from John Cutler.

Easton, Pa., Business Men to Erect $300,000 Theatre

The purchase by a group of Easton, Pa., business men of a large plot of ground opposite the new hotel in that city, for $155,000, is the forerunner of the erection of a new theatre there which, it is said, will be built at an additional expenditure of $250,000 to $300,000. The syndicate consists of W. R. Bricker, Samuel Novik, Walter Williams, I. B. Hockman and Frank Kurlansik. The property fronts 50 feet on Northampton street and is 100 feet deep. Negotiations are on with several theatre organizations to operate the house when built.

Contracts Will Be Awarded for Two Comerford Houses

Contracts are soon to be awarded for two new picture houses to be added to the Comerford Amusement Company circuit in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania. One of them will be erected in Hazleton, to seat 2,700, and the other will be built in Old Forge and will have a seating capacity of 1,200. Leon Lempert, of Rochester, N. Y., has prepared the plans for both houses.

Capitol Installs New Electric Sign on Broadway

A new electric sign took its place on the "Gay White Way" last night in the sky above the Capitol theatre, New York. The installation for this illuminated moving letter sign was arranged by Major Edward Bowes, Managing Director. Expert electricians and mechanics worked on the plant for several weeks, and according to the engineers supervising the work, this is the most elaborate installation of its kind ever made. The Capitol, a pioneer in the various phases of motion picture entertainment, is the first theatre on Broadway to lead the way in this novel type of advertisement. The Motograph, as it is called, is visible as far south as 37th street, so that theatregoers have only to face north to be informed of the current entertainment at the Capitol.

Plans Prepared for New Arkansas Theatre

The Jonesboro, Ark., Amusement Co., of which E. W. Collins is manager, has had plans prepared by D. F. Wolpert, architect, for a re-inforced concrete, brick and terra cotta, two-story 70x120 foot theatre building to cost upwards of $100,000. The structure will be of the Spanish type of architecture with tile floors and corridors and composition roof. It will contain ten dressing rooms, two rest rooms, two offices, stage, mezzanine floor and balcony and gallery. It is hoped to have it ready for the new fall season.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"My Wife And I"—Warners', Piccadilly, New York

Sun: "A finely-directed, well-acted film. The continuity is perfect. Irene Rich gives her usual notable performance."

Evening World: "Miss Rich is very appealing in this picture. 'My Wife and I' has merit and will do well."

American: "Millard Webb has achieved, directorially, a picture to be proud of. It has merit. Warner Bros., in producing it, have realized the pictorial value of gorgeous surroundings. Constance Bennett is beautiful and graceful. Irene Rich is to the manner born."

Morning Telegraph: "It is well directed, has a brilliant cast and is lavishly mounted. It is a consistently diverting picture. Irene Rich plays the deserted wife with all the pathos at her command, and she commands a lot of it. Huntly Gordon is appropriately cast. Constance Bennett makes any picture she appears in worth watching and Johnny Harron is good. The picture is expertly handled and played by a cast worth seeing."

News: "Irene Rich is always such a real, sympathetic person. Huntly Gordon scores wonderfully as the husband. Johnny Harron is capable as the son and Constance Bennett is nice in any picture.

Evening Journal: "Irene Rich is always appealing."

Times: "Miss Rich looks very attractive in the alluring frocks that suit her dainty, slender figure.

"Baree, Son of Kazan"—Vitagraph, Rialto, New York

Herald-Tribune: "Many of the scenes are distinctly thrilling. Wolf, the canine hero, is a real star."

Morning Telegraph: "Mr. Curwood's tale offers opportunities for picturesque backgrounds of which David Smith, director, took full advantage. Anita Stewart is prettier than ever, works hard and conveys a charming impression. She makes us wish she made more pictures."

American: "Anita Stewart, as Nepeese, is fair to look upon, vivacious and natural. Joe Rickson plays Pierre ingratiatingly. Donald Keith as Jim Carvel is true blue and handsome."

Evening Post: "Miss Stewart is very attractive as the half-breed girl and quite fits into the picture. Jack Curtis is all that could be demanded of a villain and Donald Keith makes a handsome young adventurer. Lovers of dogs and of Curwood stories will find much to entertain them. The scenes in the Northwest are beautiful and well photographed."

Daily News: "The scenery is glorious, the direction fine and Wolf, who plays Baree, is one of the best animal actors you've ever seen. Anita Stewart decorates the tale with her loveliness."

Evening Graphic: "The picture is uniformly good, being well directed, splendidly photographed and consistently cast. Miss Stewart's surprising versatility is again proved."

Times: "There are some splendid winter scenes in the production."

Evening Journal: "Anita is very lovely in her Indian costume and does good work. Joe Rickson and Jack Curtis are well cast and the scenery is excellent."

"Black Cyclone"—Pathe, Capitol, New York

Times: "The wild horses in 'Black Cyclone' will not have to drag people to the Capitol this week, as the presence of these animals on the screen will undoubtedly make the journey to this theatre a willing and pleasant one. 'Black Cyclone' is an admirable picture which has been directed with studious ingenuity, and although horses are seen in the principal roles there is never a dull instant in the narrative, which possesses its full quota of suspense and some delightful incidental comedy."

Morning Telegraph: "If there were such a thing as a National Film Library wherein pictures of lasting worth could be placed, one shelf would surely be kept for Hal Roach's production for Pathe release of 'Black Cyclone,' which opened yesterday at the Capitol. 'Black Cyclone' is the second starring vehicle of Rex, the King of Wild Horses, and again he proves that he not only has a fine screen personality, but is an actor of no mean power."

Morning World: "The maintenance of this semblance of vicious freedom in all three horses trained so remarkably to their tasks seems no small achievement. Few more exciting films have recently appeared. For any with even the vaguest kind of friendly feeling for horses the picture can be generously recommended."

Evening Journal: "You'll like this picture. The hero is Rex, a horse described as a flying flash in the sunlight; his leading woman is Lady, a gorgeous grey in the twilight; and the titles, by H. M. Walker, that tell the life of the two, are unusually well written. The picture is well directed and told with a swing and charm to it all that is delightful."

Daily News: "'Black Cyclone' beats them all, and right now I can't think of an animal picture that has ever been better presented. It is a clean, vivid picture of the life of a horse—and if you think it lacks in drama you must see Black Cyclone (Rex) making love to The Lady, a coy thoroughbred."

American: "A horse, superb in beauty and human in his interpretations of emotions that guide the human race, dignifies the screen at the Capitol this week. Man has given him the name of Rex. Pathe has put him in a fine picture called 'Black Cyclone,' and to see his performance as a movie actor is to really see something in the motion picture line. 'Black Cyclone' gets across to man, woman and child."

Mirror: "This is the most notable production we have seen in many a day. It's intriguingly different. Lovers of horses will revel in this production. Even gasoline lovers should enjoy it."

Sun: "As refreshing and invigorating as the wind which swept the plains where it was photographed is 'Black Cyclone,' now being unwound at the Capitol with Rex, the William S. Hart of the equine kingdom, as its four-footed star. Rex is the flashing ebony horse that raced through the reels of 'The King of Wild Horses' last season."

Evening World: "The marvel of this picture is in its direction, for, as the picture unfolds, the horses enact its story with rare ability. They always appear to do the right thing, and they do it extremely well, too."

Evening Post: "The cast is made up, for the most part, of animal actors, and how they can act! The picture is a remarkable piece of work. Altogether 'Black Cyclone' is one of the most entertaining pictures we have seen in some time. It is not only a photographic feat, but also a moving drama of life in the wilds."

Evening Telegram: "Rex is the sleeky sable, spirited stallion who ran away with 'The King of Wild Horses'—literally ran away with it. In his newest picture he once more lands on all four feet."

Evening Graphic: "'Black Cyclone,' featuring Rex, 'the wild horse,' is the Capitol offering this week, and affords something new and novel in the way of a film production. The picture is a very interesting one whether you happen to be one of those who understand horses or not."

"Kiss Me Again"—Warners, Metropolitan, Baltimore

Evening Sun: "'Ernst Lubitsch pictures have become events in the work-a-day screen world. One expects something subtle, sophisticated and snappy to emerge from his megaphone. Anyone carrying these expectations to the Metropolitan this week will find them richly realized. 'Kiss Me Again,' the picture, is almost as good as 'Kiss Me Again,' the tune, and that is saying a great deal to our way of thinking. The ending, if nothing else, will bring you to the edge of your chairs."

"Kiss Me Again'"—Warners, Circle, Cleveland

Plain Dealer: "'Kiss Me Again.' That's a pip of a title, because every one knows Fritzi Scheff's famous song from 'Mlle. Modiste,' and you will miss one of the greatest movies ever made if you let this one get by you. Ernst Lubitsch, who, incidentally is becoming an American as fast as the law will permit, has delivered one of the best constructed comedies ever screened. You'll surely love it."

"Kiss Me Again"—Warners, Fenway, Boston

Transcript: "Once more Mr. Lubitsch has turned a trick. 'Kiss Me Again' is high card, and the trick falls gracefully beside 'The Marriage Circle' and 'Three Women.' Mr. Lubitsch leaves one with the impression that he holds a deck of aces. Nor is he likely to relinquish his lead in a fascinating game—the manufacture for the screen of delicate high comedy."

Traveler: "'Kiss Me Again' will inevitably be compared to 'The Marriage Circle,' for it is the same type of picture—a type which apparently only Lubitsch can do, for although his imitators occasionally catch the dazzle and urbane finish of his work, they cannot keep up the pace without going lame. It is as adroit and delightful a bit of entertainment as you could hope to come across every six months or so in the movies."

"The Lost World"—First National, Roosevelt, Chicago

Tribune: "Looking for something different? Step right over to the Roosevelt Theatre. One O' Boy of a film! The picture moves imaginatively, romantically, dramatically on its way to the thundering finish. A fanciful, original and most thrilling photoplay."

Herald and Examiner: "Even those patrician playgoers who 'hate the movies' will find something to like in 'The Lost World.' And the fans, I take it, will curl up for joy over a picture that is like no other on the face of the planet. Of course there are sorcery and black science in the making of such a picture, but if thrilling is believing, only the nerveless would call 'The Lost World' a liar. I think it is everybody's show."

Journal: "The novelty film of the ages. An extraordinary film. The adjective is carefully applied; 'extraordinary' covers the ground completely. There has been nothing like 'The Lost World.' In its exceptional mechanism the picture touches the skies. 'Effect' is the watchword of the piece, and it represents the greatest mechanical achievement of pictures."

Evening American: "It is time to gape in amazement. It is an astonishing film, made thoroughly interesting by its attention to the before-man reptiles whose bones are treasured in museums. The greatest collection of circus freaks imaginable in prehistoric monsters who roam, fight and strike terror into the hearts of the principals of a love drama, to the heart's content."

Evening Post: "If you'd like to go adventuring, you may take part in a fantastic enterprise, via the screen, if you drop in at the Roosevelt Theatre. You may have to stand in line, for a while, but what is a little difficulty like that when you are setting out to find a 'lost world'? It has captured the imagination of the public, judging by the crowds. 'The Lost World' is indeed a novelty. Very weird and wonderful indeed do the strange animals appear. A film both novel and entertaining."

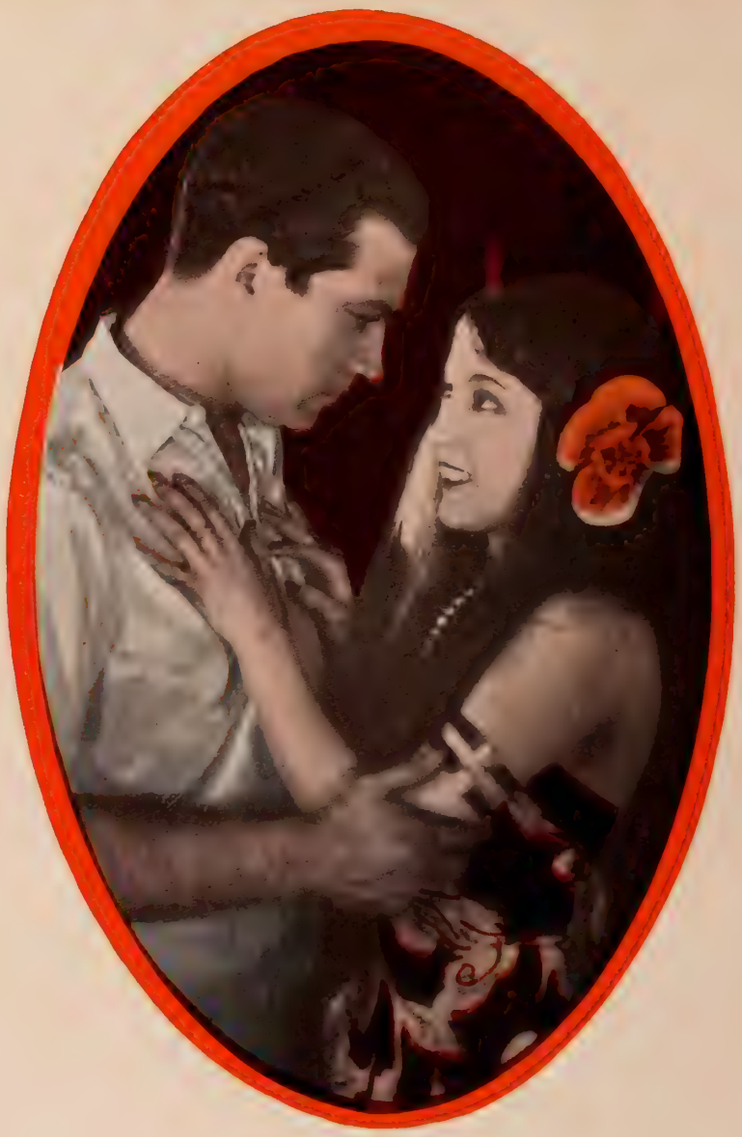
It Pays to Have the Best

FAULTY projection, due to poor design or worn out condition of Projectors is responsible for the failure of many Motion Picture Theatres.

The time has passed when patronage could be won on the merits of pictures alone. Patrons know that some "movies" afford them more enjoyment than others regardless of what pictures are shown. Tests prove that the important factor in theatre popularity now is how well pictures are presented. Or, as the owner of a large chain of theatres remarked recently, "The secret of success in motion picture theatre business today is good projection."

It is not surprising, therefore, that more and more theatre owners are installing new Simplex Projectors. For Simplex has always represented the most advanced engineering practice in projection machine design. And not only in design, but in construction—in the quality of material used; in the precision of working parts; in the improved oiling system that keeps each part functioning smoothly—and in its perfect performance, is shown the superiority of the Simplex.



There is a Simplex distributor serving your territory who will gladly demonstrate features of the Simplex which have won for it first place in its field. Or, write for full information to the Precision Machine Company, Inc., 317 East 34th St., New York.

TOMMY MEIGHAN in a perfect picture—what a combination for the box office! And the New York World says: "Nothing so aptly drawn and amusing has been set forth in the films for months. We offer 'Old Home Week' as an example of honest entertainment."

HELD over for a second week on Broadway "Old Home Week" is still playing to capacity every performance despite a record heat wave in New York. Book it and get behind it. It's the best Meighan production since "Back Home and Broke" —and made by the same crew.

Free Lighting Service for Theatres

Save 15% on Your Lamp Costs

A new $75 contract has been prepared that meets the needs of motion picture houses. It makes available a larger discount on Edison MAZDA lamps than would be otherwise obtainable.

Buying lamps on this contract not only saves you 15% but it also insures a constant supply of reliable lamps.

This contract can be made through any motion picture supply dealer selling Edison MAZDA lamps.

Light skillfully used adds to the attractiveness of any theatre. Experts can make light as flexible as music. They know how to fit light to a theatre as music is fitted to a play. They know the possibilities of light for beauty, for comfort and for effective display.

Many of the finest theatres in the country owe the effectiveness of their lighting to the skill of our lighting engineers. Now you can ask the advice of these same engineers without cost. Your theatre may be large or small, it makes no difference. Our staff of experts is at the service of everyone.

Put these men to work for you at once. They know all types of fixtures, and all kinds of lighting methods. They will plan your lighting to meet the special requirements of your theatre. They will advise you as to what sizes and types of lamps to use to get maximum lighting efficiency, and their advice will entail no obligation. Send for our booklets on theatre lighting. They are full of new ideas and suggestions, then at your request we will have a representative look over your present lighting and make recommendations for improving it.

MARE NOSTRUM

A Rex Ingram Production

By Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen." With Alice Terry, Antonio Moreno. Ingram's successor to "The Four Horsemen."

THE MERRY WIDOW

Director, Erich von Stroheim. John Gilbert and Mae Murray as added attractions. The magnificent picturization of one of the stage's greatest properties. A great clean-up!

BARDELYS THE MAGNIFICENT

Starring John Gilbert. With Claire Windsor. King Vidor, Director. By Sabatini, author of "The Sea Hawk," "Scaramouche," etc. The great lover, John Gilbert, in a dashing, love-making role. A glamorous production entirely in Technicolor.

THE BARRIER

Rex Beach, author. With a big All Star Cast. The most thrilling of this famous writer's works. Public demand brings it to the screen in a magnificent production, made into a great, new box-office sensation. Klondike days. Men of iron. Gold! Gold! And beauties caught in the gilded web of the Yukon!

R O -

THE TOWER OF LIES

Victor Seastrom, Director. Norma Shearer and Lon Chaney as added attractions. These three personalities went into the making of "He Who Gets Slapped." Again in Selma Lagerlof's prize novel they offer a box-office attraction of heroic proportions.

THE UNHOLY THREE

Tod Browning, Director. Starring Lon Chaney. With Mae Busch, Matt Moore. The story by C. A. Robbins is one of the most amazing romances of the underworld ever unfolded to public gaze. Those who have seen it declare it far greater than "The Miracle Man."

THE AUCTION BLOCK

Rex Beach's powerful novel. Norma Shearer as an added attraction. A great actress in a story of towering strength, dealing with the sale of human lives on Society's Auction Block. Man-to-man struggle for possession of silk-robed beauty! A great Special Attraction!

LILLIAN GISH

Two Big Productions

This greatest star has just signed a long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Gish will appear in two great pictures, which in story and production will do justice to her position as one of Today's Biggest Stars.

GO

THE BIG PARADE

King Vidor, Director. Starring John Gilbert. With Renee Adoree. By Lawrence Stallings, author of "What Price Glory?" Broadway's greatest current success. A vivid panorama of Doughboy adventures, loves, thrills—with powerful heart appeal.

ROMOLA

Lillian Gish, the star. With Dorothy Gish. Also Ronald Colman, William H. Powell. Henry King, Director. The successor to "The White Sister." Direct from its legitimate showing at $2 top. (Geo. M. Cohan Theatre, N. Y.) Twelve weeks Grauman's Egyptian at $2 top. A clean-up at popular prices.

PARIS

Robert Z. Leonard, Director. By Carey Wilson. With Pauline Starke, Lew Cody. Erté, the world's foremost creator of feminine fashions, gives your audiences the first Erté-gowned Fashion Special. What a showman marvel it's going to be!

NORMA SHEARER

Three Important Productions

The Great Star, Norma Shearer, in three marvel-productions that mean a fortune to exhibitors in 1925-26. One is already completed, final title to be announced. It's by Samuel Shipman, wise Broadway playwright, and has Lew Cody, too. And Technicolor sequences. Miss Shearer's other two starring vehicles are equally Big!

LD

SALLY, IRENE AND MARY

With Eleanor Boardman, Sally O'Neill, Renee Adoree, William Haines. Hobart Henley, Director. Edward Dowling's famous Broadway stage success at last in pictures. Action, fun, beauties, thrills, comedies—a big box-office entertainment!

LON CHANEY

As an exclusive Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, Lon Chaney will appear in another smashing vehicle, promised to be the most exciting of his successful career as a leading box-office draw. Title and details announced soon.

MONTE CARLO

Another Erté-Fashion-Triumph! Against a background of the notorious Gambling Paradise, amidst thrilling action, beauties appear, gowned in the striking fashions designed by Erté. Audiences are awaiting Erté-designed pictures with keenest interest!

LIGHTS OF OLD NEW YORK

THE TEMPTRESS

A Cosmopolitan P. oduct on. By Blasco Ibanez, and like his other great works, "The Four Horsemen," "Blood and Sand," "Enemies of Women," "Maré Nostrum," will be a gigantic, stirring drama. A story of Beauty's mad flirtation with wealth in South America and the continent. Nationally serialized and advertised.

THE TORRENT

A Cosmopolitan Production. By Blasco Ibanez, whose name is connected with the outstanding box-office hits of film history. This novel is hailed as his greatest picture story and it will be made into a powerful colossal epic of screen entertainment, featuring Aileen Pringle in a cast of big names. Nationally serialized and advertised.

BUDDIES

A Cosmopolitan Production starring MARION DAVIES. From George Hobart's successful play, two years on Broadway and then toured the country. Pathos, drama, humor in a marvelous audience story. A big supporting cast. Nationally serialized and advertised.

FRED NIBLO

One Big Production

The director of "The Mark of Zorro," "Blood and Sand," "Ben Hur" and other outstanding triumphs will make one gigantic production this year that will be worthy of his name and fame. Watch for the announcement.

THE CIRCLE

Frank Borzage, Director. With Eleanor Boardman, Malcolm McGregor. From the two-year stage success by Somerset Maugham, author of "Rain." A frank presentation of tangled romances in Society's innermost places.

THE FLESH AND THE DEVIL

Victor Seastrom, Director. Starring John Gilbert. With Carmel Myers. From the classic novel of Herman Sudermann. It is the successor to "He Who Gets Slapped."

THE MYSTIC

Tod Browning, Director. With Aileen Pringle, Conway Tearle, Mitchell Lewis. A sensational exposure of fake spirit mediums, beauties who bleed the rich; the first great showman production to dramatize one of the big newspaper topics of Today!

PRETTY LADIES

Monta Bell, Director. With Zasu Pitts, Tom Moore, Lilyan Tashman, Ann Pennington. By Adela Rogers St. Johns. The story of a husband reclaimed from a life of wine, women and song. Ann Pennington as added attraction. Scenes in Technicolor.

SUN-UP

Edmund Goulding, Director. With Pauline Starke, Conrad Nagel, Lucille La Verne. The stirring Broadway stage success of two years. By Lula Vollmer. Great dramatic conflict. A passionate love. Mountain feuds. A battle to death. A masterful play made into a virile screen romance!

NEVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET

A Cosmopolitan Production. Directed by Maurice Tourneur. With Anita Stewart, Bert Lytell, Huntly Gordon. Peter B. Kyne's million-copy best-seller of California and the South Seas now a vivid romance of the screen. Nationally serialized and advertised.

THE SPAN OF LIFE

Starring Lon Chaney. With Pauline Starke, William Haines. Director, Jack Conway. The famous Sutton Vane stage play of America, London, Africa. Thrills, throbs, love. One scene shows a human bridge spanning a gaping chasm, body clutching body!

THE EXQUISITE SINNER

With Conrad Nagel, Renee Adoree. From Alden Brooks' sensational novel "Escape." Josef von Sternberg, Director. A son of wealth takes the gypsy road to romance and finds beautiful adventures of love. Directed by the new screen genius, it is the surprise picture of the new year.

RAMON NOVARRO

Three Great Attractions

The handsome star of "Ben Hur" will be seen in three big, sure-fire hits. Thrilling love-making stories that the public wants. His first is a romance of the Annapolis Naval Academy. Taken with cooperation of the government. A star with a profit-following in three big hits!

TIME, THE COMEDIAN

Robert Z. Leonard, Director. With Mae Busch, Lew Cody, Gertrude Olmsted. Kate Jordan's story of a home-breaker, revealing the love thief who preys on Youth and Beauty. A great dramatic production.

MONEY TALKS!

Rupert Hughes' greatest story. Alf Goulding, Director. With Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel. Successor to "Excuse Me!" with the same author, director, stars. The theme is the Almighty Dollar. And it's a masterpiece!

AN EXCHANGE OF WIVES

With Eleanor Boardman, Lew Cody, William Haines, Renee Adoree. Hobert Henley, Director. Cosmo Hamilton's smashing Broadway comedy-drama. The story of a husband with young ideas. A delight for all audiences.

THE MYSTERIOUS ISLAND

Jules Verne's companion story to "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." It will be one of the most ambitious pictures ever filmed; undersea scenes done by J. E. Williamson; many sequences in Technicolor. A big, thrilling entertainment!

MAE MURRAY

Two Big Productions

Mae Murray will appear in two big Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions in 1925-1926, in vehicles such as she has never before been seen. Coming after her great triumph in "The Merry Widow," the public will want to see this gorgeous star in her newest and greatest successes.

LOVEY MARY

King Vidor, Director. With Sally O'Neill, the Wonder Find. By Alice Hegan Rice and a continuation of her famous "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." The sunshine kid of an orphanage in delightfully human adventures.

WOMEN AND WIVES

The best-seller novel of Harvey Fergusson. With Eleanor Boardman, Conrad Nagel. A money-maker at book-stores because it's built of human stuff, the joys, the tears, the drama that go to make an audience success.

A LITTLE BIT OF BROADWAY

From Richard Connell's novel of a beauty among the white lights, her folks back home, a reputation at stake, the boy who waited and another who wanted. It's got the audience wallop. Director and important cast to be announced.

JACKIE COOGAN

Two Great Hits

Two winning Jackie Coogan productions. By Willard Mack, who wrote "The Rag Man." They will give Jackie even greater opportunities for the heart appeal and human touch. Again the lovable waif in tattered clothes. Watch for "Dirty Face," and "Old Clothes," sure-fire hits!

BROWN OF HARVARD

America's most famous college classic, by Rida Johnson Young. With Conrad Nagel, Eleanor Boardman. A surprise sensation, pep, youth, heart-interest in the story of Harvard's famous racing crew!

THE REASON WHY

Elinor Glyn's world-famous romantic novel, her successor to "Three Weeks" and "His Hour." Jack Conway director. With the wonderful lovers Aileen Pringle, Conway Tearle. And a great cast in a sumptuous Glyn gold-getter.

DANCE MADNESS

With Aileen Pringle, Lew Cody. By S. J. Kaufman, the famous nationally syndicated author. A romantic love drama between a man of wealth and an obscure beauty. Aileen Pringle, as the siren, more ravishing than in "Three Weeks."

Fear

IT WAS fear that drove exhibitors into the ranks of the General Film Company; and it was fear that drove others to the Universal and Mutual Companies.

Fear of the future; fear that product would not be available.

Later, when theatre investments got up to the million mark, and their affairs began to be managed by Boards of Directors, it was fear that made First National spring up almost over night.

Fear of the future; fear that product would not always be available.

"Yes," said the Board of Directors at each monthly meeting, "everything is fine. The balance sheet is highly satisfactory. But what of the future? Are we going to continue to get pictures, satisfactory pictures, pictures the public will pay to see? How do we know we will get them? What assurance have we? Here's a million dollars in brick and mortar, built only to sell pictures. Without pictures to sell, it's worth no more as real estate than an idle church. What of the future?"

And today the very same fear prevails. All over the country, in small towns and big cities, men are standing in front of their brick and mortar edifices and saying: how about the future? How about pictures? I've got fifty thousand invested in theatre property—or a hundred thousand, or a million. What am I going to do without pictures?

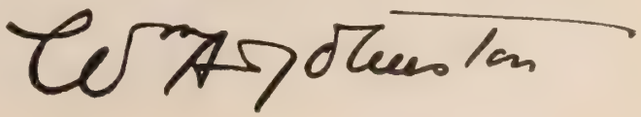
This fear exists right and left. No doubt about that. We would hesitate greatly to give the idea where it didn't exist. But it already exists too much. And it's not a healthy situation in an industry. We'd thrive better on a feeling of confidence.

What is to be done?

The Milwaukee Convention offers its Play Date Bureau, the important basis of which is a keen and exact investigation of available product. Then there's the Burkan plan of arbitration boards to hear and give fair play to the exhibitor who says he's being crowded out of a supply of pictures. These are important.

Then there are franchise propositions to be offered to exhibitors, whereby they may be assured of a definite supply of product. In this connection we do believe this, and the history of the business proves it: that an exhibitor organization only endures and is solid when the members put money in it—and considerable money. And it also strikes us that with so much real estate at risk and with such fear about goods to sell it is only logical for the exhibitor to put up money in order to be assured of product. Consider the fact that the exhibitor owners of First National have put many millions of dollars into that concern.



With all the product available this year—lots of it and, as always, more than needed, it does seem absurd to find exhibitors scared out of their wits about its scarcity.

The cry of oppression is raised. With all the spectres that have arisen in this business, year after year, since our connection with it, we're sceptical about their reality. We'd like to have some solid facts and less yelling about the Spirit of '76. The yelling, in our candid opinion, isn't very fair to our country's forefathers.

For one thing, it's about time for the exhibitor to study his market and buy coolly and sanely. Just how many exhibitors do buy with a complete knowledge of available product? Comparatively few. And those who do are not scared about the woodpile. They're sawing wood.

Secondly, the theatre situation changes so fast in this movie business—which, by the way, you can't compare to vaudeville and its settled combines—the desire of the public for better theatres is so pronounced, that you certainly can't figure by this year's situation what will prevail next year. You can't bet a lot of money that theatres will stand still and wait for schemes to mature.

AN EDITOR

The Week in Review

WELL, WELL, ROXY—we've almost forgotten him as S. L. Rothapfel—is to have his own theatre and a big one. It's a fine idea. Two R's will fill it—Roxy and Radio. A great showman, and the world's greatest announcer. You cannot beat that combination. Roxy didn't fight radio; he joined it. That's one thought. But a still greater one is this: that all the time we are talking about movie theatres and discussing them in bulk, jut as though they had matured like the vaudeville and legitimate situation, they break precedents and go up and up. Last year we wouldn't have thought of radio as a theatre influence. Two years ago we wouldn't have considered parking space as a determining factor; now we know that it is breeding a crop of great neighborhood palaces, which may put the dowtown first runs in the shade. So there's the influence of the automobile—another great modern invention. And the wizards are constantly at work.

What great invention will stir the world next year, and what will its influence be—and the next year? A producer to-day hesitates—or may well hesitate—to buy a strategic theatre. It may not be stragetic next year. And so the game goes on. It's a big one. A large and uncanny vision indeed can lay its future. Motion pictures are not only a vital force—the world's greatest—but they align themselves with other vital forces. It will take a giant to regulate such a factor in world progress; and the only giant we know of is the public itself.

THE film criticisms in some of the New York newspapers are getting pretty close to the absurd. We'll have to be more specific and say the morning papers; and to be still more definite, we'll eliminate The New York Times, whose reviews are uniformly painstaking and intelligent.

We have an idea that some women reviewers are in a break-neck race to see who can say the smartest things. Perhaps the object is no more serious than to attract attention to themselves among themselves; or to feed self-conceit; or to attract the eye of the film producer. In any event, the competitive coining of cute sentences may be a sport; but what about the readers of the paper? Who really want to know what kind of a picture the film in question is—and that's all. We won't speak of the hapless producer—often an experienced one—who at heavy expense has gotten together a piece of entertainment, and would be quite happy to get his money back plus, if possible, a fair wage for himself.

It looks like a little schooling in journalism would not be amiss in this matter of newspaper reviews. The late Joseph Pulitzer insisted that accuracy was the basis of newspaper work—and details. Well, why not be accurate with film reviews?

We are not, as a paper of the trade, defending the films. We're defending the readers of the newspapers.

We do reviewing, too. And it's a tough job. It is mostly difficult because we review pictures for all classes and kinds of theatres, from the little one-show-a-week house of the mountains or prairies all the way to the downtown theatre of a metropolis—let alone a small army of foreign buyers. And so it is hard to prescribe pictures for all kinds of theatres and buyers, but at least we can try to give an accurate, thoughtful, impersonal appraisal and then let the buyer choose for himself.

The very same idea applies to people as well as to theatres. Theatres vary because audiences vary. The people who go to pictures are not of one mind, training and taste—even those in one city who read the same newspaper. They are not of the same mind as the reviewer—that's certian. They take pictures pretty seriously for one thing;they pay to see them. They are considerably interested in the pictures and not at all in the reviewer. The fair thing to do, the intelligent thing from the standpoint of journalism, is to tell them simply and thoroughly all about the picture—its theme, characters, appeal, etc., and let them shop for themselves. They're probably quite able to make up their own minds once they get a fair statement about the picture.

SYDNEY GARRETT—fresh from Europe and already returned—gives us some observations of the market over there. The larger companies will have their own selling offices in Europe—all of them; some have had them for several years. But that doesn't disturb the market for the other companies and for those concerns and producers who sell over here via the state rights market. The market for them was never better. As for the future, well, that will depend upon the merchandise they offer. If it is up to the mark they need not worry. There's a goodly number of British renters, soundly organized at home and on the Continent and demanding American products.

In general, the European market has greatly improved. In revenue it is at least a third greater. And it will increase. It behooves American producers to weigh carefully the European taste for pictures.

He sees no immediate prospect of a theatre building boom. Great Britain, Germany and Scandinavia have theatre-going populations. France and the rest of the continent are not keen about the movies. France has but 1800 theatres for its forty-three millions; a town of ten thousand may boast but one five-hundred-seat house. American management and exploitation are needed to attract larger audiences. Paris needs American-run theatres; they would thrive in other large centers. The market for short subjects abroad is improving by leaps.

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

K. W. LINN, Universal's export manager, ratifies Sydney Garrett's statement—that the direct selling abroad of the large American companies will not crowd the other American pictures—provided only the other pictures can compete on a basis of entertainment value.

JIMMY BRYSON, who came over from London to get a print of "The Phantom of the Opera" and won't go back till his trunk carries it, says that Lord Newton is all wrong when he intimates that the British public's film taste seems to veer to "expensive and attractive females." Consider, says he, the success in Great Britain of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," yes, and "The Signal Tower;" and now there's a clamor for "The Phantom." Not that Universal made them. The same is true of the product of other American companies. The British people are fully capable of doing their own thinking—have been, in fact, for a good many hundred years and with a good deal of success. They know what they want in pictures, and the British exhibitor will continue to book the pictures that bring in the shillings, naturally; and orators will not change the situation. The picture taste of the two nations is quite similar. "So," he concludes, "if we make good films for our people and do not offend Great Britain, why I can't for the life of me see any worry. Not a single worry."

J. G. WAINWRIGHT of London is here, determined to effect a regular outlet to this market for European pictures. He has some good sound ideas in that connection, and we hope he succeeds. His trunk is well packed with offerings, and among them he cites what he considers to be the three outstanding productions today of the foreign studios—"The Blackguard," a British picture; "Children's Faces," from France; and "Warning Shadows," made in Germay. "The Rat," from the London play, now on Broadway and featuring Mae Marsh and Ivor Novello, will be brought over from the studios of Graham-Cutts in September.

THE very cordial reception given by the Milwaukee Convention to the British Delegation of exhibitors and to Monsieur de Vilmorin, producer of "The Miracle of the Wolves," would indicate a most friendly feeling toward the foreign film trade. Here in New York we go along on the theory that the American exhibitor is prejudiced against the foreign picture for various reasons—principal among which is poor product in the somewhat distant past. We have always suspected that this was largely patter, but we were not prepared for the report brought back from Milwaukee by Mr. and Mrs. Rene Batigne, who went there with M. de Vilmorin. They interviewed many exhibitors on their attitude toward foreign pictures and found that the exhibitor catalogued under this head all pictures of pronounced foreign locale and atmosphere—such as, for instance, "Woman of Paris," "Scaramouche," the Pola Negri pictures, etc. This is somewhat of an eye opener. It may be profitably considered from various angles. It sets one thinking. As a matter of fact, what is there American about "Madame Sans Gene" except Gloria Swanson? And continuing in this trend of thought, what difference need there be between a picture of foreign setting produced in Hollywood or in a well-equipped European studio—provided there is American supervision of the story, cast, etc. That's the point, it seems to us—American supervision. There's the answer, maybe, to the problem of the foreign-made picture and the American market.

IN emphasizing American supervision we cast no reflection upon the foreign producer. But when you make goods for an important market it is wisdom itself to consult—and very thoroughly—with that market. The American producer is governed a great deal—or should be—by the expressed wishes of the theatre as conveyed to him direct or through the distributor and the sales staff. This same essential advice should be conveyed to the foreign studio.

* * *

OUR own pet idea of the supervision of pictures is that gained from a small board of the best business showmen. By business showmen I mean showmen who know how to buy for the box-office of representative theatres—not close buyers, but buyers of the right pictures. Some exhibitors come into our office who can go over a season's announcement of product and with a keen knowledge of show values—stars, cast, directors, stories—separate the pictures into Classes A, B and C, or more groups, and be surprisingly right, as results afterward show.

WHICH reminds us of a recent caller, Frank Newman, soon to leave Kansas City for the management of the big Famous houses in Los Angeles—a real type of the business showman, keen and always interesting. A great believer in popular priced movies—says circulation is what counts, and you can't get circulation except at low prices, as witness the magazines and newspapers. Referring to some recent pictures on Broadway, he says he can't understand why good directors, directors an exhibitor would bet on, take such terrible flops. A good race horse always gives an account of himself even when left at the post; and the best of men can't hit on all sixes all the time. But why flounder so badly? Well, that opens a large subject—the subject of a picture-making corporation, and how many pictures it can afford to make and how fast, and who else was at fault as well as the director——a lot of angles as well as the question: can a good man afford to let such a bad picture go out under his name?

The British Film Situation

THE British Government, through its spokesman in the House of Lords, Viscount Peel, has refused Lord Newton's request for an inquiry into the cause of the collapse of the British producing industry and the formulation of suggestions for remedying the situation.

The English trade papers give pages to the discussion of this decision and its effect on their industry. All agree that the overwhelming popularity of American pictures brought about the "British film collapse."

A summary of the Government attitude is made by The Film Renter and Moving Picture News as follows: "When it is remembered that if the Government had granted an inquiry it would necessarily have meant that they would have practically had to come to the financial assistance of our producers, it is not altogether surprising that Lord Peel hedged and said that the Government feeling was that the state of public opinion relative to American and British films was not so strongly developed that the public would support or welcome strong action against American or foreign competition.

"Incidentally, it is gratifying to hear from his Lordship that a prohibition of imports would not receive the support of the public. He is very right in this respect—it would not."

The Film Renter believes the solution must come from the trade itself, and urges that the answer is exhibitor co-operation in the production of British pictures.

The Bioscope agrees that a ban on American pictures would not do, neither does it believe that higher tariffs will solve the problem. On the other hand, it suggests that the quota system has much to recommend it, "seeing that legislative insistence that every cinema programme must be composed of at least one-fourth of British-made pictures would ensure a regular output for the British producer, which to some extent would make it worth-while for him to continue in business."

Lord Peel presented some interesting statistics on the state of the British industry. According to him, in 1914 of the films exhibited in Britain about 25 per cent were British, but in 1923 only 10 per cent were of British origin. In 1925 only a negligible quantity of British pictures were being shown. The same conditions obtained in the Dominions, where the proportion of British pictures was only two or three per cent.

In 1923, he stated, there were twenty British producing firms; now, only four or five. The cause, he declared, was the tremendous competition which British producers had to meet, chiefly from America.

Lord Peel went on to say that there were from 17,000 to 20,000 picture theatres in America compared to only 3,000 in Great Britain. Another difficulty was that as soon as British producers trained actors and actresses the latter were attracted to the United States by big salaries, a form of competition which the British could not meet. The American producers made immense profits in their own country; therefore, their revenue in Britain was "velvet."

"At any rate," says The Film Renter, "the British film industry knows where it stands to-day, and one thing clearly brought out is that there is small likelihood of any assistance coming from the Government. With that important fact in mind, it is of little use wasting time in idle recrimination, but it does behoove the industry, if anything is to be done to make more British pictures, to find ways and means of their own, and in that connection there is little doubt that any scheme for salvation must come from within the industry itself."

Which would seem to be a very good summary of the whole matter.

German Annual Reaches America

COPIES of the annual publication covering the German industry, which is published by the "Film Kurier" of Berlin, have reached New York. The volume contains 400 pages, containing about 100 full-page photographs of stars, directors and producers of different countries. The volume contains a survey of production.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Lamar Trotti, Atlanta newspaper man who will be in charge of the press division of the Department of Public Relations of the Hays organization.

PASSING OUT THRILLS

SOMETHING new in thrills was given New Yorkers the other day and Wanda Wiley, the Century comedienne, was responsible for the stunt. It was her first trip to the metropolis, but instead of being thrilled by the sights she contributed enough excitement in one afternoon to last for many moons.

It was a perfectly good publicity stunt—a stunt never worked before—and Henry Clay Bate of Tennessee and Universal inspired it. He tied it up with the Free Milk Benefit Bouts, New York's big charity fights of the year—which International filmed for special distribution in New York State. These bouts were held Decoration Day evening at the Yankee Stadium and registered the passing of the world's light heavyweight championship from Mike McTigue to Paul Berlenbach.

But to get back to Henry and Wanda. The star's breath-taking stunts for the Milk Fund came about as a result of a dare. On her first day in town she recklessly darted through the heavy traffic of Broadway—and was as immune from injury as Washington during the Revolutionary War. So Henry dared her to stage a traffic dodging demonstration. Permission was obtained from the police who were only too willing to co-operate in subduing the jaywalkers. It was Wanda's job to show how surely a person courts death or accident by dodging through traffic when the signals are set against him. A traffic policeman was assigned to the task of saving Miss Wiley when she became trapped among the autos.

The demonstration was staged three times in the Times Square sector, and twice on that extremely busy corner, Fifth avenue and 42nd street. The stunt lasted twenty minutes in each place and drew enormous crowds. The star did her stuff O. K. and caused considerable excitement as she darted in the path of speeding autos —only to dodge back in the nick of time or be rescued by the traffic officer.

Esther Ralston, who has returned to the coast after appearing with Richard Dix in his latest vehicle, "The Lucky Devil" (Paramount).

Pat O'Malley and Jean Hersholt as they will appear in the new version of "My Old Dutch" being filmed at Universal City.

Jackie Coogan signs his new Metro-Goldwyn contract with Nicholas M. Schenck, vice-president, and has his baby brother, Robert Anthony, on hand to see just how it is done.

Milton Sills was greeted by His Worship, John P. Balharrie, mayor of Ottawa, when he stopped in that city to film scenes for "The Knockout" (First National).

Kathleen Key is a fascinating figure as Tirzah, the role for which she is cast in "Ben Hur" (Metro-Goldwyn), the most publicized picture ever made.

Snookey, the "gentleman monk" of Hollywood, is pictured by International Newsreel as he looks Fifth avenue over from the top of a bus with Mrs. Wilson, his mistress.

She was as heavily trapped as a green on a sporty golf course. Several times she found herself in extra-tricky traffic pockets, but her quick wit and nimble feet—and the courage of the bluecoat carried her out of danger. A bus came near running her down, but luck was with her—and so was the cop. And to make it look real he gave her a strong reprimand for not obeying the signals.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

ACCORDING to several rumblings along Broadway the question that is agitating Jackie Coogan the most is whether he wants to be or not to be—Hamlet. A copyrighted article in the Morning Telegraph recently has it that David Belasco will give Jackie three years of dramatic training—at the end of which the young star will essay the role of the melancholy Dane. The article says that the next three years, all the child's time, outside his hours at the motion picture studio and at study and play, "shall be at Mr. Belasco's disposal for the coaching of the boy in Shakespeare's great role."

Lloyd Hamilton, star in Educational-Hamilton comedies, goes in for big game hunting, with a reckless disregard for life, limb, safety and the like. He is just making a difficult shot.

A JOLLY GOOD TRIBUTE

ANOTHER American screen star has conquered London with her personality. This time it is Colleen Moore whose brief stay of four days (stolen from a belated honeymoon) was crowded with tribute from press and public. Horace Judge, the First National chief of publicity, staged a fine reception for her when the boat docked at Southampton—and upon the arrival of the boat train in London, Colleen and her husband, John McCormick, were given a jolly old time.

The Tivoli played "So Big" in honor of the American visitor—who attended the showing. She was enthusiastically received by the huge audience. A few nights later a banquet was held in honor of the honeymooners—and the star made a deep impression on the large gathering of exhibitors, authors, M. Ps. and press representatives. Ralph J. Pugh, managing director of British First National, sustained his reputation as an eloquent chairman. In responding to the toast given him he commented upon the attitude entertained in certain sections of the British press toward American pictures, and ably sought to dispel the mistaken idea of "American propaganda."

The star was loath to leave London, but the honeymoon called for stop-overs in Paris, Switzerland, Monte Carlo, Italy and Berlin.

A DOG BITE IS NEWS

THE old slogan known in every newspaper office that if a dog bites a person it isn't news, but if a person bites a dog it is news will have to stand a little revision. It is news if the dog in biting a person causes the owner to be hailed to court and ordered to settle a big sum for damages suffered by the victim.

Under a sealed verdict handed by a jury to Justice Morschauser in the Supreme Court in White Plains a week ago, Conway Tearle, the movie star, and his wife, Adele Rowland Tearle, must pay $20,000 damages to Jacques Weinberg, a seven-year-old boy, and his father, Max Weinberg, the boy's guardian, for two severe bites the boy received more than three years ago. The jury awarded $15,000 damages to the boy and $5,000 to the father for medical services and loss of his son's services.

According to the testimony of a witness for the plaintiffs, the attack of "Happy," a white bull terrior owned by Mrs. Tearle, occurred on a roadway of the Tearle estate at Chappaqua on December 10, 1921. Mrs. Tearle was sued as the owner of the dog and her husband was made a defendant because he owned the estate where the boy was bitten.

The Tearles through their attorney moved to set aside the verdict—and when it was refused they filed notice of appeal.

LAEMMLE ENTERTAINS

CARL LAEMMLE, the Universal chief, did some entertaining last week. He gave a luncheon at the Madison Hotel in honor of Herc McIntyre, general manager of Universal's branch offices in Australia and New Zealand—who is in New York on his first trip to America, and James V. Bryson, general manager of the European Motion Picture Company of England, Universal distributor in the British Isles.

The luncheon was McIntyre's introduction to the home office personnel. He has been the Australian manager for several years and has done much to put Universal in an enviable position in that quarter of the globe. Both McIntyre and Bryson made impressive talks to the guests who included Mrs. McIntyre, Wanda Wiley, the Century comedy star, now in New York; Mr. Laemmle, E. H. Goldstein, P. D. Cochrane, Paul Gulick, Joe Weil, Meyer Schine, Julius and Abe Stern, Ned Marin, Fred McConnell, Julius Singer, Sydney Singerman, Maurice Pivar, Charles Paine, Oscar Binder, Dave Bader and Henry Clay Bate.

PRINCETON'S FAVORITE

THE Princeton Seniors like the Yale Seniors can spot beauty and talent when they see it. When the graduating class of Princeton passed on their annual statistics, a compilation of favorite choices determined by vote each year at Commencement time, Norma Shearer was achieved the honor of being voted "the most popular motion picture actress."

This actress' rise to the heights is one of the outstanding events of the past season. It was just a few months ago that she was doing "extra" work, then Metro-Goldwyn executives, appreciating her personality and emotional capabilities, assigned to her leading roles. She was destined for stardom from the moment that she appeared in "The Snob" and "He Who Gets Slapped."

As Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Dartmouth—and the western universities haven't been heard from—their favorite film choice is causing us considerable suspense. But it would be no surprise to us if she sweeps all the collective campuses of the United States.

ANOTHER HAPPY ENDING

NORMAN TAUROG, director of Mermaid comedies, donated his megaphone to Judge James Trout of San Francisco the other day in order that the jurist might shout the wedding ceremony to him and Julie Leonard. The bride is well known in Hollywood film circles. Those who stood up with them and doubled as witnesses were E. H. Allen, general manager of several units producing comedies for Educational, and his wife.

Jay Hunt, who plays the title character in "Lightnin'" (Fox), who is an inveterate yarn spinner (meaning Lightnin' Bill Jones and not Hunt) and has just been directed to put his hand on this "lie detector" and repeat the story of how he drove the swarm of bees across the prairie.

PRESENTING THE COLORS

LAST Friday night found Holbrook Blinn washing off his Mexican make-up and discarding his flamboyant clothes and the two-pint hat—which he wears in "The Dove," in order to bedeck himself in the regulation "soup and fish" so that he might represent Marion Davies at the Hotel Plaza.

The occasion called for the presentation of a complete set of colors to the United States World War Amps, an organization composed of badly disabled veterans of the Argonne and Chateau-Thierry. Miss Davies had arranged to present the colors in person, but she had a picture engagement to fulfil on the Coast. So Mr. Blinn doubled for her.

GLORIFYING GLORIA

GLORIA SWANSON is going to have a reproduction of herself in oils. A study of her will be executed by Charles G. Sheldon, internationally known portrait painter, who has just arrived in Los Angeles. Having painted Lady Diana Manners, Baroness de Granicourt, Mary Pickford, Fritz Kreisler and several miscellaneous princesses and dukes, what is more natural than Mr. Sheldon's turning his attention to the Marquise de la Falaise de la Coudraye?

Banquet of Warner Bros. officials, stars, players, directors, executives and exchange managers at the Ambassador, Los Angeles, while the recent Warner Bros. convention was in session on the West Coast. Many familiar faces will be recognized.

It looks as though Greta Nissen would put vampires of the past to shame in her first important role in "The Wanderer" (Paramount), now being filmed.

Paul Specter, who has just returned from six years abroad, where he was most recently the Brussels exchange manager for Universal.

Norma Talmadge stops for a conference with Eugene O'Brien and Director Dimitri Buchowetzki during the production of "Graustark" (First National).

NO SLEEPER JUMPS

IT doesn't seem possible that a picture actor could be found who has never been to California. Neil Hamilton, a discovery of D. W. Griffith's is willing to stand up and tell the world that he has never parked himself under a Hollywood sunshine. So he registered gladness when Famous took over the Griffith contract and assigned him to the role opposite Betty Bronson in her newest picture.

Which means a Coast trip. The actor will not make any sleeper jumps via the rattlers. He intends drinking in the great open acres by means of his automobile. The itinerary calls for stops in Philadelphia, Gettysburg, Washington, Wheeling, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Topeka, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Trinidad, Las Vegas, Santa Fe, Alberquerque, Gallup, Flagstaff, Grand Canyon (a two days' rest here—to enjoy the scenic wonders) Needles, Mojave, San Bernardino, Passadena and Los Angeles.

L. CASE RUSSELL IMPROVING

THE host of friends and acquaintances in the industry of Mrs. L. Case Russell will be happy to hear that she has so far recovered from a recent serious operation that she will probably have left the hospital by the time this appears. Her husband, John Lowell Russell, known on the screen as John Lowell, gave a quart and a pint of blood in a transfusion, which undoubtedly saved her life in her weakened condition following the operation. Mrs. Russell is one of the veteran scenarists of the industry, her Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew stories and Petrova vehicles being still remembered. In recent years she has written and scenarized her husband's productions, in addition to acting in an advisory capacity. Wishes are extended for a complete and speedy convalescence.

EXIT GALLEYS, ENTER GREASE-PAINT

THE St. Regis unit producing "Headlines" for Associated Exhibitors release threw a little party last Friday for the photoplay writers, during the filming of scenes at the Rue de la Paix, one of New York's new night clubs. The scribes from the trade, fan and newspapers found themselves installed at a table as "atmosphere" in the cabaret sequences, and from their ringside seats they were privileged to watch all the 'doins". Whether or no Director E. H. Griffith discovered among the typewriter ticklers any future Mary Pickfords or Rudolph Valentinos has not been announced. Alice Joyce, Malcolm McGregor, Virginia Lee Corbin and Harry Morey were among the more professional acting talent present.

HAL ON A BEAUTY HUNT

HAL ROACH, the professor of pulchritude, is in New York scanning the faces of the girls as he passes them on the Avenue. He is not missing any of the "hoof and mouth" displays, such as the Follies. He is hunting for beauty and talent, both if possible, in the same person, for his Culver City studios. That Mack Sennett does not have a monopoly on pretty girls is proved by the galaxy which is now carrying the Roach banner.

It's easy to see that Buck Jones, the Fox star, is mighty proud of the way Mrs. Jones and little Maxine handle the pinto ponies, and we don't blame him Buck could stage a rodeo right in the family.

Lillian Gish departs for the coast to begin work under her contract with Metro-Goldwyn, and is seen off by her mother and sister Dorothy.

Willard Louis blossoms out as a likeable (and unshaven) hobo in his latest appearance, in "The Limited Mail" (Warner Bros.), now in production.

Al Christie takes a hand in fitting out Julian Eltinge for his role in the forthcoming production of "Madame Lucy" (Producers Dist. Corp).

World's Biggest House Planned for Roxy in New York

$6,000,000 House Will Seat Audience of 6,000

ROXY is to realize his ambition to have his own theatre in New York. It will seat 6,000, will cost about $6,000,000 and will be known as " The Roxy."

Following months of negotiations, Herbert Lubin of Sawyer & Lubin, has consummated a deal whereby Associated Pictures Corporation, of which Mr. Lubin is President, will build the theatre for Roxy.

The house will be located on part of the carbarn site at Seventh avenue and Fiftieth street, containing approximately 50,000 square feet. There will be an entrance of 40 x 100 at the southeast corner of Seventh avenue and Fiftieth.

The theatre will be the largest photoplay house in the world. First announcement of the project was made by Roxy himself at a dinner of the New York Rotary Club on June 2. He stated that a syndicate of private investors was backing him and that the enterprise was absolutely independent.

" The transaction opens the way for the realization of my ambition to have a motion picture theatre of my own with entertainment features and broadcasting,' he declared.

The site on which the Roxy Theatre will be built is 200 x 200 feet, located between Sixth and Seventh avenues and running through from Fiftieth to Fifty-first streets. There is an agreement with Manger Brothers, who are starting the construction of a big hotel fronting on Seventh avenue, by which entrance to the theatre will be afforded.

A long time contract has been signed with Roxy to supervise and manage the new theatre. His present contract as director of presentations at the Capitol still has a year to run, and for that reason no decision has yet been made as to his successor there. The new house will be completed in 12 to 14 months.

The architects will be Thomas W. Lamb in association with Walter W. Ahlschlager, of Chicago, and it is said the Longacre Construction company, which has built a number of big projects of which the Chicagoan was the architect, will have the construction contract.

Roxy has been at the Capitol Theatre for five years, during which time it is universally acknowledged that he has made it a great financial success through his methods of organization and presentation. Within recent months, he has gained an international reputation through radio work and "Roxy and His Gang" are known everywhere in the world of radio. It goes without saying that radio will play an important part in the new theatre.

In connection with Roxy's eventual retirement from the Capitol, Major Edward J. Bowes, managing director of the theatre and vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn, declared that his associations with the former had always been most pleasant and that he wished him all success in his new undertaking.

The pioneer in the deluxe presentation of pictures, Samuel L. Rothafel, began as a small exhibitor in a town in Western Pennsylvania. The next step in his progress was to the Alhambra in Milwaukee, where his ideas began to attract notice. He "broke into" New York at the Regent Theatre, Seventh avenue and 116th street, and his work soon won still greater attention.

The result was that he was placed in charge of the Strand when it opened eleven years ago as the initial big-time picture house of the film world. So successful was he there, that he was selected to manage the Knickerbocker when it was the home of Triangle pictures. His presentation methods showed continual advancement, so he was chosen to manage the Rialto, when that house was opened, and later the Rivoli.

After the Capitol had been running for about a year, Roxy was put in charge of presentations with the result that the big theatre has become one of the best money-makers in the amusement world.

In this connection, it is said the average weekly business last year was nearly $46,000, and the net profit for the fiscal year ending May 31 is placed at better than $500,000.

With the new Roxy Theatre announced as an independent proejct, unaffiliated with any of the big distributors, the New York first run situation will be radically changed. His great reputation as a showman will, it is expected, guarantee a big patronage for the house right from the start. It also considered a foregone conclusion that as far as product is concerned, the size of the theatre and the prestige of its director will take care of that.

One of the shrewd observers of developments in the industry pointed out that the announcement of the Roxy enterprise marked a new era in this respect: given an exhibitor of commanding reputation and drawing power with the public, the usual situation of getting a line-up of product before embarking on a big theatre enterprise was reversed. In Roxy's case, the product would have to come to the house—and first-class product, too—as a matter of good business for the distributors, it was pointed out.

Jensen-Von Herberg to Build Seattle House

John G. Von Herberg, general manager of the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit of theatres in Washington, Oregon and Montana, announces that his company will begin construction within the next few weeks of a $500,000 residential district theatre in Seattle, which, when completed, will be the finest house of its type in the entire Pacific Northwest.

The house will have a seating capacity of 1,800 persons, will cover a block of ground, 343 by 100 feet in size, and will be built on North Broadway, covering the entire half block from Harrison to Republican Streets.

Preliminary plans indicate that the new house will be operated as a strictly first run theatre, on a plan similar to Grauman's Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood.

The theatre will be entirely Spanish in design, both the exterior and interior being finished in this style. Many unusual features, such as garden spots, courts and rare shrubbery, will grace the outer entrance, adjacent to a number of arcade shops and a covered automobile park.

A full stage, capable of handling any type of act or prologue, will be completely fitted out and a large orchestral organ on a rising platform will be installed in the orchestra pit.

Fitzpatrick and McElroy Build New Houses

Fitzpatrick and McElroy Company of Chicago have decided to replace houses in three towns of their circuit with new picture theatres. All three will be ready in the Fall.

At Alpena, Michigan, a 1,300 seat house is being erected on the site of the Maltz Theatre which was destroyed by fire this Spring. It will open on Labor Day. A new theatre is being built at Three Rivers, Michigan, to take the place of the Rex, which is now in operation. The new site is directly opposite the Rex.

At Ludington, Michigan, a 1,000 seat modern theatre will supplant the old Lyric. It is scheduled to be completed in August.

M. P. T. O. A. Board Holds Important Meeting in New York

THE new Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, elected at the recent convention, met in New York this week to put into effect the program adopted at Milwaukee. Important developments were expected as a result of the sessions, which began at the Roosevelt Hotel on Wednesday, June 3 and were still in progress when this issue went to press.

Among the matters to be taken up was the selection of a manager for the Playdate Bureau. Despite published reports to the contrary, it appeared that the position would probably be given to a man in the ranks of the industry, rather than a personage from outside.

Selection of a newspaperman as an important factor in the operation of the Bureau was being discussed in some quarters this week. It was said he might be drafted from the trade paper ranks, although there was no indication that a choice had been made. The matter would, of course, have to be discussed and approved at the meeting of the Board.

The meeting of the governing body of the M. P. T. O. A. was fully attended and was the most significant held in many years, because of the presence of the Allied members, and the important problems up for consideration, including further mobilization of playdates, negotiation of a new standard contract, and extension of arbitration.

Besides R. F. Woodhull, President of the organization, and Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman the personnel of the Board follows: R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Kans.; A. Julian Brylawski, Washington, D. C.; H. A. Cole, Dallas, Texas; E. W. Collins, Jonesboro, Ark.; M. E. Comerford, Scranton, Pa.; Glenn Cross, Battle Creek, Mich.; Harry Davis, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Fred Dolle, Louisville, Ky.; A. A. Elliott, Hudson, N. Y.; E. M. Fay, Providence, R. I.; Glenn Harper, Los Angeles, Calif.; J. J. Harwood, Cleveland; A. A. Kaplan, Minneapolis; Frank A. Keeney, Brooklyn; Jack Miller, Chicago; Charles Nathan, Peoria, Ill.; N. C. Rice, Algona, Iowa; J. C. Ritter, Detroit; L. M. Sagal, New Haven, Conn.; J. A. Schwalm, Hamilton, O.; Fred C. Seegert, Milwaukee; Joseph M. Seider, Newark, N. J.; W. A. Steffes, Minneapolis; W. W. Watts, Springfield, Ill.; Jake Wells, Richmond, Va.; J. H. Whitehurst, Baltimore; L. B. Wilson, Covington, Ky.; Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass., and A. C. Zaring, Indianapolis.

Arranging Convention Program

"Showmanship Exhibit" to Be Feature of Jersey M. P. T. O. Asbury Park Meeting

THE program of events for the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey, to be held at the New Monterey Hotel, Asbury Park, New Jersey, June 29, 30 and July 1, will be of great interest to the theatre owners of this territory because they are being planned to assist every manager and owner of a motion picture house in the running of his theatre and putting on a "Broadway" show even if the house is located in a small town. The plan is being called, by the New Jersey theatre members who are actively engaged on the various committees, "Bringing Broadway to Main Street."

Besides the official business activities that go with every convention, plans are being formulated for the display part of the program which will be of help to every theatre owner from a box-office angle. Expert showmen have been employed to stage novel lighting effects and prologue presentations that can be made applicable to any house, no matter what the size, and at a very reasonable cost.

The small town theatre owner has been hampered because of his inability to give his audiences a show with a Broadway presentation. They will be shown how at the State Convention of the New Jersey theatre owners.

Some of the few amusements that will be included in the large program of events at the convention will be fireworks, water sports carnival, a midnight review, dance, banquet, after dinner novelties and stunts.

The Entertainment Committee, consisting of Henry P. Nelson, Morris Kitinsky and Leon Rosenblatt, are busily engaged mapping out a complete program of events to cover the three days' convention and everything looks to a good time for all. The Registration Committee already reports numerous requests for reservations at the New Monterey Hotel.

Milwaukee Organizing for Greater Movie Season

Eddie Volandorf of First National, Geo. L. Levine of Universal, and J. G. Frackman of Progress Pictures, representing a committee chosen by the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade, and Geo. Bauch, Steve Bauer, F. C. Seegert and M. Krofta, the committee representing the Wisconsin Exhibitors' Association, have organized and plan weekly meetings to develop and cooperate with the Hays plan of Greater Movie Season.

Cleveland Houses to Run on Full Schedule This Summer

Motion picture theatres in and around Cleveland are maintaining their full time winter policies throughout the summer. There is no indication that the picture houses will either offer a part time policy or that they will close for the warm months. The reason for this is that most of the houses are owned and operated by circuits. The circuits find it best to keep to a set schedule. The independently owned houses then fall in line, and also keep open. Other summers, it was quite the rule for the houses to shut down and run only a few days a week.

Kansas Exhibitors Wait Verdict on Tax

Kansas City exhibitors will know in a few days whether or not they are to receive relief from an almost unbearable county tax burdened upon theatres of Jackson County. A committee from the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri will appear before the county court soon at a special hearing on the matter.

The tax, which is considered by exhibitors as "prohibitive," is $50 a year on all houses containing less than 600 seats and $100 for larger theatres—this in addition to regular occupation license, city, county and state taxes.

Rowland And Clark Take Over Four More Houses

Under a deal recently concluded with McCartney, Johnson and Kurtz, the Rowland and Clark circuit has acquired four more houses in Pennsylvania. The theatres are the Ritz, Indiana, Pa.; the Jefferson and Majestic, Punxsutawney, and the Strand, Ridgway. The Ritz has a seating capacity of about 600 and the Strand and Jefferson about 1,300 each.

It is understood that W. P. McCartney will become the district manager for Rowland and Clark.

Merged Southern Companies Take New Title

The recently merged Southern States Film Company and Creole Enterprises at Atlanta will be known in the future as the Liberty Theatre Film Distributing Corporation. A complete reorganization is now under way. Oscar Oldknow, formerly head of Southern States, will hold the position of vice-president and general manager, while E. V. Richards is the president of the newly formed corporation.

Legal Headquarters is Established for Famous in Paris

Elek John Ludvigh, head of the legal department of Famous Players-Lasky, will go to Paris this Summer to establish a legal department through which he will coordinate the various legal activities of the company on the Continent.

Kansas-Missouri Plan Big Field Campaign

A NEW plan for strengthening the M. P. T. O. Kansas and Missouri is under consideration by C. E. Cook, business manager, which, if adopted, may result in tripling the membership of the organization.

During the hot summer months—the "slump" months—it is planned to obtain eight or ten exhibitors from Kansas and the same number from Missouri. These exhibitors, with Mr. Cook, will tour the entire Western Missouri and Kansas territory, making their headquarters in various key centers. From each key center each day they will divide the surrounding territory and work all towns in the district. The expenses of the exhibitors would be paid, they giving only their time to the organization.

Unfair Review of Photoplay in N. Y. Daily Condemned

"News" Staff Member Answers "Sun" Critic

CERTAIN reviewers on the New York dailies—and this by no means includes them all—have within recent months condemned several pictures as being "inartistic" which later proved to be box-office successes. One of the most flagrant examples of picture condemnation from the mere viewpoint of the critic, without any attempt at finding out whether the public would like the film in question, occurred the other day in The New York Sun in connection with the showing of "Drusilla With a Million" at the Capitol Theatre.

"The Moviegoer" in The Sun wrote a review which apparently pivoted on the statement that "it didn't entertain me" and branded "Drusilla" as a bid for box-office popularity, as if that were a crime of some sort. His remarks were so unfair to the picture, which almost all the other New York newspaper reviewers recognized as possessing real appeal to the public, that J. S. Dickerson, Associate Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, wrote a letter to the critic in question.

This letter and "The Moviegoer's" reply were printed in full by The Sun in its issue of May 29, and given prominent display.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS prints the correspondence in full below, because this publication believes it is time the attention of the trade is called to the ideas of that school of newspaper critics who condemn pictures merely because they do not measure up to their standards of "art."

The matter assumes real importance when it is remembered that reviews in the New York dailies influence the booking of pictures. Mr. Dickerson's letter to the Sun critic follows:

"I once heard an exasperated lawyer tell a very new and arrogant judge that a Supreme Court Justice was supposed to know some law. It suggests itself to me that I might say that a motion picture critic is supposed to know something about pictures, not only from his own personal likes and dislikes, but from the angle of the public.

"This letter is inspired by your review of 'Drusilla With a Million.' I have no interest in this picture, either financial or otherwise, and it does not make any difference to me what you or other reviewers say about it, but I want to make the prediction that this picture will please more people, perhaps of a certain sort, than anything of its kind released since 'Over the Hill.'

"If my prediction is true then you have done a great injustice to the firm producing this picture and to the director who made it. Unfortunately for the trade, sales of pictures in New York territory are largely influenced by the New York dailies' reviews.

"You must remember that pictures are not an art, in spite of the fact that press agents and some critics try to make them so, but are merely entertainment designed to suit the average persons as they are scattered over the United States. So my advice to any reviewer, and that includes those on our own publication is to go into the theatre and view productions from the angle of the person who pays admission. It seems to be the fact that all the biggest box office flops of the last few seasons have been praised almost unanimously by you fellows who are reviewing for the New York papers, and the real bets have been passed up with the kind of a review you have given Drusilla. For instance, some very unkind things were said about 'The Talker,' playing recently at the Strand. In a measure these were justified, but, on the other hand, while old fashioned and orthodox, it will gross more money over the country than all the Peter Pans that ever have been made.

"Referring again to 'Drusilla,' I am going to try to remember to send you the record of box office reports on this picture some three of four months from now, just to convince you that from the angle of the public you are about as far wrong as you can possibly be, and if I do this I hope you will keep in mind that pictures are presented not for the benefit of critics and reviewers, but for the public, who pay their money and are satisfied on an average with what they get.

"We who make our living in the motion picture business know that better and more artistic pictures could be made, according to the highbrow viewpoint, but we also know that the business is a financial one, and that in order to make pictures we must make those which prove financial successes."

The reply of "The Moviegoer" shows, better than any comment by us could, the workings of the mind of a critic who is not interested in giving the readers of his paper information about pictures from their own viewpoint, but from his own ideas of "art." "The Moviegoer" answered thus:

"To J. S. Dickerson, MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Sir: I am very glad to hear from you on the subject of 'Drusilla With a Million' and the review of it which appeared in these columns. Quite frankly, I consider 'Drusilla' the cheapest, most obvious bid for box office popularity that has been seen on the screens of Broadway this season. I strongly object to the film on the grounds that it is (1) illogical, (2) badly acted with the possible exception of Mary Carr, (3) filled with the stalest hokum, (4) and mawkish.

"Indeed, Mr. Dickerson, I left the theatre in the middle of it for a breath of fresh air. I returned immediately, however, my irritation having cooled by the drizzly rain. Contrary to what you think, I know a great deal about motion pictures. Any one would, after acting as a motion picture critic in New York for over six months. I concede that 'Drusilla' may have a box office appeal in certain communities. It did not entertain me, however, and I don't think that persons who have or even pretend to have any cultivation of mind will like it.

"I write what I think and my writings are only my opinions. Nothing more. I rarely, if ever, attempt to predict whether a photoplay has potency at the box office. That is what trade journals are for. Motion picture critics, if they are worth anything as critics, are concerned principally with the artistic merits of a film. If, however, a film which they recognize as miles below art entertains them, they should so state. To me 'Drusilla' offered nothing.

"You are trying to tell me that motion pictures are not an art. I choose to consider them so. At any rate, I seem to think more of the movies than you do. The 'Last Laugh' and 'Greed' proved to me that the motion picture can be as ennobling in its own way as literature and drama. 'Drusilla' seemed to me to be bogus and false to life, as it is lived in almost every particular. Throughout I sensed the author and director standing by, deliberately shoving the characters into certain situations—situations in which they would never have been found as a result of their characteristics. That, of course, is all opinion on my part. Other critics have found 'Drusilla' good.

"When you say that the critics have unanimously praised all the biggest box office flops of the last season you are wrong. The only photoplay of the past year which they have praised unanimously was 'Peter Pan.' And that was not a box office failure at either the Rivoli or the Rialto. If 'The Talker,' as you predict, grosses more money than all the 'Peter Pans' ever made (a prediction that seems to me preposterous), well—what of it? Things like 'The Talker' have always grossed more money than the Peter Pans.

But—the producers of the Peter Pans may be allowed to enter heaven. Have you thought of that?

Please send me the record of the box office reports on 'Drusilla' during the next three

Fox Declares 235 Per Cent Dividend

Application Made for Listing on New York Stock Exchange—Company's Assets $18,000,000

A stock dividend of 235 per cent has been declared by the board of directors of the Fox Film Corporation. Of this, 200 per cent will go to the stockholders and the balance to employees of the company who are considered to have contributed to the success of the concern.

Application has been made to list 165,000 shares on the New York Stock Exchange, with the initial offering at $46 or $47 a share.

The company is being completely recapitalized and is now in the strongest financial position in its history. Total assets are approximately $18,000,000 and these have accrued entirely from earnings.

There will be a new stock issue of 1,000,000 shares. The new Class B common, to the amount of 100,000 shares, will replace the old common stock. In addition, the stockholders have authorized the issuance of 900,000 shares of Class A common without voting privileges.

Holders of the present common stock will be given the right to subscribe for 165,000 shares of additional Class A common at $43, or for each share now held the stockholder may subscribe for 1.65 additional shares. These subscriptions will be handled through the Bankers Trust Company.

The excellent financial condition of the Fox corporation is further shown by history over a period of years. The original investment of $500,000 in preferred, made in 1915, was retired in 1919. Cash dividends equivalent to the original investment were made in 1922, 1923 and 1924.

It is understood that the company hitherto has been owned exclusively by William Fox and a small group of friends, whose holdings were 84 per cent of the stock.

In the present recapitalization, as stated above, 1,000,000 shares are to be authorized. Of these, it is understood 400,000 will be issued and 600,000 placed in reserve. Of the 400,000, there will be 235,000 issued to present stockholders and certain employees as a dividend, and the remaining will be listed on the Stock Exchange. This amounts to a dividend of 235 per cent and is a huge "melon." The dividend is payable in Class A common without par value.

With the announcement of the stock dividend, and the other financial developments in the Fox organization, the company's remarkable growth is disclosed. While it was generally known in the industry that Fox was a big money-maker, definite announcement of these developments brings the facts into greater prominence, and will serve to trade-mark the company as one of the financial solid rocks of the industry.

Denies Report of West Coast Deal

Rumors Famous Would Buy Chain Flatly Denied by Sol Lesser Statement—Theatres Earned $9,569,055.40 in 1924

RUMORS, recently circulated, to the effect that Famous Players were to buy out the West Coast Theatres chain of houses on the Pacific coast have been categorically denied as false and unfounded by Sol Lesser, vice-president of the West Coast organization.

Mr. Lesser's statement, issued in Los Angeles, brands as "groundless and untrue, all such talk, including reports published by a Hollywood trade weekly."

"We have had many offers from film producing organizationos for the purchase of our circuit," said Mr. Lesser, "but it is not for sale. Ninety-five per cent of the West Coast Theatres stock is held by Messrs. M. and A. L. Gore, Adolph Ramish, and myself," he continued.

"The chain of theatres is independent of all producers and none of its stock is for sale. Our screens are open to any producer of good product irrespective, if he represents First National, Famous Players, or Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. We require over 300 big features each year for our screens. We are open to all pictures irrespective of their owners or producers or distributors.

"Recently a selling campaign whereby over $1,500,000 in West Coast bonds will be disposed of, was started in Los Angeles and opened to the public. Every dollar has been subscribed and the West Coast organization is fully financed from every angle for each and every future need.

"There are practically 125 large theatres on the circuit today. New houses are being built in all portions of the Pacific Coast and our building program is not completed.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., with affiliated companies, has total assets of $12,742,926.96 and a total funded debt including purchase money obligations and this issue, of $4,368,985.53. The gross revenue for 1924 was $9,569,055.40, and current earnings are at the rate of seven times the total interest charges on the entire funded debt, including this issue.

The bond issue is secured by direct obligation of the company and a general mortgage on all of its properties, including land, buildings, leaseholds and licenses. The company's stock in affiliated companies and interest in theatre-operating contracts, valued at $3,098,726.03, will be pledged with the trustee for the protection of the bondholders. There will also be assigned to the trustee, the company's contract for the purchase of approximately 99 per cent of the capital stock of West Coast Theatres, Inc., of Northern California, upon which there has been paid in cash $1,000,000.96.

Three N. Y. Zones Hold Meeting

Daylight Saving, Independence, Among Topics Discussed; Good Financial Condition is Shown

AT a largely attended meeting of prominent exhibitors from both the Albany and the Buffalo Zones, held at the Hotel Onondaga in Syracuse, on Tuesday, June 2, William Dillon, of Ithaca, was elected president of the New York State M.P.T.O., and Uly S. Hill, of Albany, was chosen as secretary. It was decided to abolish the office of treasurer and to let each Zone meet its own running expenses. Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, was named by President Dillon as chairman of the Albany Zone, and Jules Michaels, of Buffalo, was appointed to a like position in the Buffalo Zone.

One of the features of the gathering was the first move taken by the exhibitors in New York State, as a body, upon the question of daylight saving.

A resolution was also adopted in favor of more independence on the part of producers as well as exhibitors. This resolution brought forth a great deal of discussion, the majority of which was favorable.

In connection with the meeting on Tuesday it developed that both the Albany and Buffalo Zones are in good financial condition, the Buffalo Zone having a bank balance of about $2,500 while Albany has a balance in its treasury of about $1,500, an exceptionally good showing in view of the fact that the Albany Zone was started only a few months ago.

Walter Hays, of Buffalo, the retiring president, presented an excellent report.

No by-laws to govern the two Zones were adopted at the meeting.

Previous to the close of the meeting, Mr. Buettner announced that his working committee in the Albany Zone would consist of Uly S. Hill, of Albany; Meyer Schine, of Gloversville; Robert Wagner, Little Falls; Lewis Fischer, of Fort Edward; W. W. Farley, of Albany, and L. L. Connors, of Cambridge. Mr. Michaels has named his working force in the Buffalo Zone as Morris Slotkin, of Buffalo; Charles Hayman, of Niagara Falls; Walter Hays, of Buffalo; Sidney Allen, of Medina; William Callahan, Rochester; Michael Wood, Jamestown.

Among those present at the Syracuse meeting were: Walter Hays, Jules Michaels, Morris Slotkin, M. Fitzer, N. Vassileades, John Vollely, of Buffalo; Charles Hayman, Niagara Falls; Sidney Allen, of Medina;

Gleichman - Famous Suit Dismissed

Judge Holds Contract Could Not Be Interpreted as a Joint Adventure as Contended

JUDGE Fred S. Lamb of Cadillac, Michigan, sitting in the Wayne county circuit court, ruled during the past week, that the case brought by Phil Gleichman against the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., be dismissed. Judge Lamb held that the five-year franchise contract could not be interpreted as a joint adventure as was contended by Gleichman, former proprietor of the Broadway-Strand theater. It was stated that at the end of the third year the breach was due to obstinacy and failure by both parties to reach an agreement. He ruled that the case be dismissed without cost to either side.

Trial of the Gleichman suit and its outcome had been watched by the film world, both from the angle of the producer and consumer. The mere fact that S. R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players, was in constant attendance, together with other high officials of the company, attested to the importance attached to the case by the producer.

It is expected that the case will be appealed by Gleichman. Testimony during the trial, showed that Famous Players have from 10,000 to 12,000 contracts built on a similar basis. The present suit was the first of its kind, according to testimony. A precedent is expected to be established by the interpretation placed by the court on the meaning of the contract and the respective duties of both parties.

Among the important points in the decision handed down by Judge Lamb is his statement that Gleichman did breach his contract by failing to live up to its terms and that he was in no position to complain of his treatment by Famous Players.

Complete Decision

Following is the complete decision rendered by Judge Lamb on May 27th.

"Now, gentlemen, I will say that practically all of the time we have been in the trial of this case I have spent my outside time in following the record and looking up the law, and trying to keep in touch with the situation from time to time, so that when we came to this point I would have practically arrived at my conclusion as to what the rights of the parties were.

"What I have to say may not agree with the contentions of either party entirely, but that does not necessarily mean that either party is wrong, or that I am absolutely right, but I am going to tell you how it strikes me. I made a few notes of what I want to say in order that you may have what you are entitled to, and have some reason for the conclusion that I reach.

"In the first place, viewing the record from a cool and dispassionate point of view, I shall undoubtedly differ somewhat from the contentions of either party in my analysis of the controlling questions presented.

"I shall take the franchise contract, so-called, as made, and interpret it in the light of what the parties have seen fit to do under it in seeking to determine the rights of the parties.

"The primary question is, what relation was established between the parties when they entered into the franchise agreement in September, 1919. It is not a question of what they called the result of their efforts, but what did they contract for? Did they intend to contract for those things which the law regards as constituting the relation of joint adventure, or that of licensor and licensee? That is the primary question in this case, as I view it, and I think you have admitted in your arguments that it is the controlling question.

"Looking at it from a practical standpoint, then, we have:

"First. The plaintiff with a theatre in which to exhibit pictures.

"Second. The defendant. Famous Players-Lasky Corporaton, with pictures for exhibition for a consideration.

"Now, that was the situation when this contract was made in September, 1919. One desired to purchase service and the other desired to sell its service. The result was Exhibit 1, as supplemented by Exhibit 2 and the second year by Exhibit 3, and the third year by Exhibit 4.

"The $12,500 was a loan and but a minor incident in and to the franchise agreement and should have no force or effect in determining what relations the parties intended to establish, except as to its bearing on the question of whether or not plaintiff had violated the terms of the agreement entered into in September, 1919.

"Except as fixed and determined by the contract itself neither party had or was to exercise any proprietary interest or control over that which the other had and exclusively controlled. There was no common property interest in what either party contributed to the business. There was no fixed scale providing for the ups and downs of the business to be applied alike to both parties at all times. One party took all the risk and shouldered all the loss all the time.

"Now, these elements, in the judgment of the court, are all foreign to any real conception of a partnership or a joint adventure under the laws of this state.

"Under the contracts as made was the plaintiff to have the first choice of all pictures released?

"Under the first contract the distributor made whatever selection there was to be made.

"Under the second contract the distributor has the right to designate proper productions for exhibition in plaintiff's theatre, and, then, the exhibitor and distributor shall mutually agree as to what pictures shall be shown.

"Under the third contract 'Feature productions,' mutually chosen by the parties were to be shown.

"The expression 'mutually chosen' is plain, common, every-day language, and can have but one meaning. A picture is mutually chosen when the minds of the two parties concur in that choice. It matters little what machinery is brought into play to effectuate that choice. What was done under the contracts falls far short of establishing any right to the first choice of productions released, and the oral testimony brought in to establish the contentions is not only inadmissible, but unconvincing, as well, if allowed to be used.

"Did the plaintiff breach his contract? There is but one answer to this question. He did breach it when he failed and neglected to live up to its terms.

"Was that breach waived on the part of the defendant? I think it was conditionally waived. There was an extension by sufferance from time to time only, that, without consideration was subject to recall at any time.

"This brings us to the time of the break in the early summer of 1922. These parties approached the making of the booking contract for 1922-1923 under circumstances and conditions that heretofore had been unforeseen, and the effect of which could not have been provided against.

Refers to Local Condition

"Now, I have reference to the conditions that existed right on Broadway, in the city of Detroit,—the completion of the new Capitol Theatre. The results during the latter part of the booking year of 1921-1922, show for themselves that there was a condition that neither party could or did foresee, and when these parties got together in 1922 to see if they could arrange upon a booking contract for the next year, this condition confronted both. It was apparent to the plaintiff that he could not continue for another year under the terms of the 1921-1922 contract. He must have pictures of greater drawing power at no increase in price. He wanted a split of the larger pictures on the same basis as he had had feature production the preceding year.

"The defendant company sensed the necessity for a change in the productions to be exhibited in the Broadway Strand Theatre, if it was to be made a profit, but the defendant was unwilling and refused to give the plaintiff the larger pictures for the price he was willing to pay. Neither side would give in to the other, and as a result, there was a break in their relations. This break, in the judgment of the court, was a natural and logical sequence of the condition which the parties found themselves confronted with. Each was looking after his own; both were at fault. In my judgment both should be held responsible for the breach which resulted in the closing of this five-year contract.

"Now, looking at it as I do—and I have given pretty fair attention to the proceedings here—looking at it as I do, having in mind the testimony that has been presented, and the law as it has been presented here, I am under the impression, and I find that under the proofs the plaintiff is in no position to complain of his treatment by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

"As to this break of their relations in the spring or summer of 1922, wherein they could not get together on their booking contract for 1922 and 1923, I believe that that break was due to the failure on the part of either side to be willing to compromise and that both were to blame.

"So that looking at it as I do, I am going to say that the bill should be dismissed, but without costs to either party."

LILLIAN GISH
In Ufa's "Faust"; Film To Be Made Abroad

LILLIAN GISH will be loaned to the Ufa company to play Marguerite in a film production of "Faust" which is to be made in Germany, according to an interview given out by Louis B. Mayer, production manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with whom Miss Gish has a long term contract.

According to the announcement the star will make "La Boheme" and one other feature for Metro-Goldwyn before going abroad to appear in "Faust."

It is understood that Emil Jannings will play the role of Mephisto and probably Ramon Novarro will appear as Valentin in the Ufa production. F. W. Murnau is to direct the film.

If the arrangements are carried out it is likely that Metro-Goldwyn will distribute the picture in this country.

Schiller to Sail for Europe

Will Complete Affiliation Among Loew, Metro-Goldwyn and Gaumont Chain

THE announcement in last week's issue of Motion Picture News that E. A. Schiller, general representative of Loew's, Inc., would sail for Europe on legal matters is confirmed in a statement from the Loew offices this week. Schiller and J. Robert Rubin of Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation will sail on the Aquitania June 9th for France to complete the recent affiliations between Marcus Loew, Metro-Goldwyn and the Gaumont Theatre chain, and to set in motion the actual working plan.

Through the affiliation, the Loew circuit will operate the theatres, which include the 4,000 seat Gaumont Palace in Paris, together with three others, and theatres in Bordeaux, Lyons, Marseilles, Tolouse, Toulon, Strassbourg, St. Etein and Cairo and Alexandria in Egypt.

In addition to completing all details in the deal, Schiller will visit England, Germany, Holland and Sweden to study the theatre and film distribution situation in those countries.

The affiliation with the Gaumont chain will give Metro-Goldwyn picture products a wider distribution in foreign lands and the theatre chain a direct release closely following the completion of a production. Undoubtedly American methods will creep into the foreign field of theatre operation with Loew undertaking that end.

The deal brings into closer relationship Loew and Gaumont, two of the biggest figures in the foreign theatre field.

Canada Act Exempts Theatres

Proposed Amendments Would Not Affect Music in Motion Picture Houses

"THE Copyright Act and the amendments now proposed do not in any way change the state of the law with reference to the playing of music in moving picture theatres," declared E. R. E. Chevrier, Member of Parliament for Ottawa East, before the Copyright Committee of the House of Commons at Ottawa, the Canadian Capital on May 28.

This was the official pronouncement by the proposer of the amendments to the Canadian Copyright Act which had been intended to cover all presentations of copyrighted music, theatrical, radio and otherwise, in the Dominion. This statement by Mr. Chevrier, however, establishes the precedent that the act amendments now before the Canadian Parliament will not affect the playing of music in theatres any more than in the past.

To make the matter binding, the Copyright Committee agreed to the suggestion of Mr. Chevrier, relieving exhibitors of the possibility of paying a tax on music, and the bill with new amendment, was reported favorably. Radio performances are to be taxed, however, except in the case of amateur stations not operated for gain or advertising purposes.

This development in the Copyright music situation in Canada is considered a real gain by the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, the Canadian association for all departments of the business, which is operated in affiliation with the Hays body in New York. Col. John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, Toronto, himself attended meetings of the Copyright Committee at Ottawa and entered a strong protest against the proposed royalties on music played in theatres.

Legal representatives were also engaged by the Canadian association and every possible angle of the situation was studied. The result of this fight is found in the formal announcement by the sponsor of the bill that the amendments would not include music in the theatres.

Three N.Y. Zones Hold a Combined Meeting

Uly S. Hill, of Albany; Louis Buettner, of Cohoes; J. Meyer Schine and Ben Davis, of Gloversville; Lewis Fischer, of Fort Edward; Charles McCarthy, Hoosick Falls; Robert Wagner, Little Falls; James Roe, Leo Bladen, Frank Becker, Jack Griswold, George Phillips, Leo Dowling, R. H. MacIntyre, A. J. Herman, H. C. Bissell and Leo Medem, all of Albany; Frank McCarthy, C. A. Anthony, Joe Miller, Howard Brink, Myron Kempner and Basil Brady, all of Buffalo.

Canada Famous Director Sails for England

N. L. Nathanson, Toronto, Managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Limited, Toronto, controlling 90 Theatres in Canada, and representing Pantages and other interests, sailed for England on May 27 from New York. It has been intimated that Mr. Nathanson will confer with Lord Beaverbrook, prominent English publisher and theatrical financier.

Texas Valley Exhibitors Launch Organization

The Valley Exhibitors, from the lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas, was organized last week for the purpose of getting together once a month to discuss pictures, exploitation and other matters of interest. There was no talk of a booking combine.

Fourteen exhibitors were present and they selected Dave J. Young of Brownsville, president, and Roy E. Kintz of McAllen, secretary and treasurer.

Schulberg Productions in New Quarters

Because of the increased production schedule B. P. Schulberg Productions has moved its eastern headquarters to the recently completed building at 117 West Forty-Fifth street, New York City. The organization is occupying the entire ninth floor in the new building.

Allied Circuit to Start Operating This Week

WITH 125 theatres said to be enrolled as members of the organization, the Allied Theatres Circuit, the Northwest booking combination headed by W. A. Steffes, began active operations this week.

Steffes announced that negotiations for product are under way with every distributing organization, and that the Allied is meeting with no obstacles from any source.

According to Steffes the membership of the Allied has been increasing at the rate of 15 members each week and the exhibitors continue to join at that rate. He declared that nearly every key city in the Northwest territory was represented in the organization's membership.

"Greater Movie" Campaign Starts

Field Men Sent Out—Motion Picture News to Print Section in Next Week's Issue

THE Greater Movie Season campaign, sponsored by the Hays organization, is in full swing. This week the field organization working from the Hays office in co-operation with exhibitors was completed by the dispatch of exploitation men into territories where Greater Movie Season celebrations will be linked to form a demonstration from Coast to Coast.

In next week's issue MOTION PICTURE NEWS will print a section covering every phase of the campaign and containing material that will be of aid to exhibitors who join in the movement.

The divisions and men who will carry out the preliminary arrangements are as follows: New York and Brooklyn: Wayland Taylor. Boston, New Haven, Portland, Me., and Albany: E. J. Farrell. Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington: Jack Pegler. Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta and Memphis: M. C. Coyne. Chicago and Milwaukee: Louis R. Brager. Buffalo, Detroit and Cleveland: Harry L. Royster. Columbus, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Louisville: Lee Riley. Kansas City, St. Louis and Oklahoma City: Esther E. Rosecan. Minneapolis, St. Paul, Omaha and Des Moines: Robert Irwin. Denver, Salt Lake and Butte: Lloyd Willis. Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle: Ray Leek.

According to the central idea, meetings of theatre managers, exchange managers, publicity men and other executives will be called in each city for a thorough discussion of the scheme and to elect a committee of three to report upon ways and means. At a second meeting the committee will recommend a local plan of procedure, also naming a general manager who will be directly responsible for the success of the campaign. A leader, a man of ideas, a man popular locally and above all a worker, is naturally best-suited to the post. Committees that are suggested include: Finance, to collect and disperse funds and arrange the budget; Publicity and Advertising, covering newspaper and co operative work and window displays; an Outdoor Committee, which will attend to posting and distribution of window cards; a Decorations Committee, whose work will embrace lobby displays, distribution of novelties and securing street banners and stencils. A General Committee, headed by the General Manager, will take charge of street parades, get Governors' and Mayors' endorsements and appoint four-minute speakers to address commercial and social clubs.

Greater Movie Season exploitation men carry complete details of this organization work, which is considered absolutely necessary to the campaign's success. Modeled on plans put into effect by various states where concerted drives of this nature have proved their value, the system is calculated to bring about a smooth-running machine which does the work "behind the screen" and reaps the benefits in front of it.

Atlantan to Head Hays Press Division

LAMAR TROTTI, city editor of the Atlanta Georgian and Hearst's Sunday Atlanta American has been named by Will H. Hays to head the press division of the newly organized Public Relations division of which Jason S. Joy is director. Trotti will start his new work June 8th under the supervision of Colonel Joy.

The task of the new head of the press division will be to provide the newspapers of America with items concerning the functioning of the "open door" policy recently inaugurated by Will Hays as part of his public relations program.

Trotti is a graduate of the University of Georgia and has been in the newspaper field since 1921. Two months ago he was promoted to the post of city editor of the Georgian.

Independent Sales Show Live Market

Important Territorial Deals for Domestic and Foreign Fields Indicate General Optimism for Next Season's Business

INDEPENDENT distributors are continuing their sales of territories for next season's product at a rate which indicates a generally optimistic view of the business prospects for the coming year.

J. G. Bachmann, general manager of distribution for B. P. Schulberg Productions, announced that Sam Zierler, president of Commonwealth Film Service, has contracted for the schedule of 18 Schulberg pictures for next season. The deal gives the local rights on this company's pictures to Commonwealth for the fourth consecutive year, and ranks as one of the most important transactions recently concluded in the independent field.

Standard Film Service Co., Inc., of Cleveland, which distributed in the Ohio, Kentucky, Michigan, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania, the Chadwick Nine issued by Chadwick Pictures Corporation last season, has again signed with that company for thirteen of the features which Chadwick will produce next season.

Davis Distributing Division is another organization which this week announced important territorial deals. Davis has concluded a contract with Si Greiver of Greiver Productions, Inc., Chicago, for 101 pictures to be released next season. These include "Red Love," starring John Lowell and Evangeline Russel; "Tales of a Thousand and One Nights"; 8 F. Schumann-Heink features; 8 Al Ferguson features; 6 James Oliver Curwood features; 8 with Peggy O'Day; 8 with Forrest Taylor; 6 with Marilyn Mills; 6 "Fragments of Life" series; 2 Ben Wilson serials; and 24 comedies.

Davis also announced the sale to Walter A. Baier Film Company, Milwaukee, of 95 productions for Wisconsin and Upper Michigan territories; and to Libert Film Corporation, Philadelphia, 32 productions for Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware; and to the Standard Film Exchange, Inc., Pittsburgh, ten pictures for the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia zones.

Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation closed a deal with Bobby North of the Apollo Film Corporation, New York, covering the six Banner and six Royal features which Ginsberg has announced for next season. Apollo will distribute these pictures in Greater New York and Northern New Jersey.

A number of deals, covering both foreign and domestic territorial sales, have been announced by Rayart Pictures Corp. The foreign contracts were announced following the return of D. J. Mountain, president of Richmont Pictures, Inc., distributors of the foreign rights to Rayart pictures, from a tour of Europe.

For England the sales were made to J. G. & J. B. Wainwright, Western Import Company; Argosy Film Company, Butchers Film Service, The American Company, Stoll Film Company, Ltd., Phillips Film Company, Ltd., Gaumont Company, Ltd.

For Belgium, Pascal Serafin. For Continental Europe, to Frank Bates. For Spain and Portugal, to J. Gurt and Frank Bates. For Havana, Cuba, to Liberty Film Company. For Argentine and Chile, to General Cinematografica and to New York Film Exchange of Buenos Aires, Argentine.

Progress Pictures Company of St. Louis this week secured the Ravart serials, "Secret Service Sanders" and "Battling Brewster," for the St. Louis territory, while Security Pictures Company of Chicago secured the same pictures for Northern Illinois and Indiana. First Graphic Exchanges of Buffalo secured the six Ravart Superior Melodramas for the Upper New York territory, while Liberty Film Corporation of Philadelphia purchased the Kenneth Harlan release "For Another Woman" for Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware.

Jack Kuhn Dies Suddenly in Cleveland

JACK KUHN, for the past eight years associated with Loew's Ohio Theatres and manager of the Stillman theatre, died suddenly in Cleveland Sunday evening May 31st. Kuhn was entering the Stillman theatre when, stricken by apoplexy, he fell dead.

Kuhn was one of the most popular figures in Cleveland theatrical circles and during his long association with the Stillman became known to thousands of people in all walks of life in that city.

Kuhn is survived by his widow.

Kansas-Missouri M. P. T. O. Affiliates With M. P. T. O. A.

THROUGH approval of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas-Missouri that organization this week became affiliated with the M. P. T. O. A. The affiliation of Allied, which the M. P. T. O. K-M joined at the organization of that body, and the M. P. T. O. A. at the national convention at Milwaukee did not necessarily mean that the Kansas-Missouri association automatically became affiliated with the national body, President R. R. Biechele explained. Kansas-Missouri was the first organization to decide to send a representative to the national convention.

"I went to the national convention merely as an onlooker," Mr. Biechele, who was elected to the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. A., said, "and had no thought of allowing my name to come up for office of any kind. My organization appointed me as an official observer at the convention—nothing else. However, when it became apparent at the convention that Allied would affiliate with the M. P. T. O. A. for the good of the industry, I could not help but remember that at the M. P. T. O. K-M convention a few days before there was a strong predominating sentiment to affiliate with the national body even before the national convention. Therefore, when I was urged to accept an office as national director, I did so only subject to the subsequent approval of the M. P. T. O. K-M directors. They have made that approval. They have approved affiliation with the national body. So that is settled."

Franchise Plan in N. Y. Zone?

Nathan Burkan Reported Working on Proposal for Division of Product

SOLUTION of booking problems in the New York City zone is being sought by a proposed franchise plan which would divide the product of important distributors between the big circuits and the independent theatres.

In connection with the franchise proposition, the Burkan arbitration plan would also be used.

It is understood that Nathan Burkan, who is a prominent New York lawyer and counsel for the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, is figuring prominently in the discussion of the franchise plan with several of the big distributors, who are said to be favorably inclined to the proposal.

The franchises would run for a number of years and would thus assure product to the exhibitor and protection for his investment. As is well-known, New York City exhibitors have for some time been working to secure allocation of product as between themselves and the circuits, and the question has given rise to heated controversies.

If the franchise plan were put into effect independent theatres would be assured a steady flow of product.

The Burkan arbitration plan, which attracted considerable attention before and during the Milwaukee convention, has to do with encroachments by producer-distributors, circuits or others in territories already occupied by independent houses. Also, complaints by distributors against exhibitors would be handled by arbitration.

This would amount to extension of arbitration as it now exists in the industry. The Burkan arbitration plan was endorsed at the Milwaukee Convention, and, it is expected, will be taken up officially for negotiation with the distributors by the Board of Directors of the M.P.T.O.A.

States Ideals of I. M.P.P. D. A.

Chadwick Declares That Organization is for Improving Films, Not to War on Hays or Others

DECLARING that the Independent forces in the industry have been united for the purpose of promoting a constructive program of better pictures and not with any thought of waging war on the Will Hays organization or any other personality or institution, I. E. Chadwick, president of the I.M.P.P.D.A. issued a statement reiterating the ideals and aims of that body upon his return to Los Angeles last week from the convention in Milwaukee.

"I want to emphasize the fact," said Mr. Chadwick, "that the purpose of uniting the independent forces is for constructive rather than destructive purposes. The impression that we are seeking to attack Mr. Hays or any other personality or institution is totally erroneous. We are not making war on anyone. If, in the course of our endeavors to improve conditions in behalf of the public and the forward-looking members of the screen industry, we are forced to step on the toes of opposing forces, that is not our responsibility and is merely incidental to the objective of the movement "Aggressive centralization of motion picture-making means machine made pictures. Practically all of the outstanding productions of the screen—those which have marked a forward step in the filming of pictures—have been initiated by the venturesome mind—by a mind unshackled by the consideration of profits alone.

"Already the same concentration of interests that is being sought in America has extended its activities to the theatres of foreign lands, and unless prompt measures are taken these interests will soon have their grip on the European market in a manner that will deal a body blow to the independent movement in this country.

or four months. I shall scan them with the greatest interest. Those reports will constitute one of the greatest commentaries on the films (and on the progress of civilization) that could be made. 'Abie's Irish Rose' has made millions. Therefore I suppose it has done more good in the world than all of Ibsen's plays. People have never been wild about Ibsen's works. Everywhere they have been wild over 'Abie.' Well and good. I can't help it, and neither can you.

"Great works of art, so runs the platitude, show us ourselves and thereby criticize us. And we should be better people after sitting before them. I think Caesar and Cleopatra and Candida make the world a better place. Rosmersholm (provided it is performed well) does the same thing. Don't you agree with me? And don't you think (honestly now) that motion picture critics should encourage those who try to make masterpieces, rather than those who gaze longingly at the box office? And don't you think that motion picture critics who commend things like 'Drusilla' retard the progress of the art of the motion picture? Thank you for your letter.

Very sincerely,
THE MOVIEGOER.

$2,125,000 is Price of San Francisco Strand

Announcement has just been made by the H. L. Rothchild Entertainment Corporation, San Francisco, that the amount paid for the Strand Theatre, which is to be remodeled and officially taken over on June 30, was $2,125,000. Announcement was also made by this corporation that a new theatre seating 1400 persons would be erected by them at once at 8th and Irving streets and that it would be completed in approximately six months.

Montreal Organizes Trade Board

A STRONG Film Board of Trade has been established at Montreal, Quebec, this being the second of such institutions in the Dominion, the first having been organized at Toronto recently. Assisting in the formation of the Montreal Board was C. C. Pettijohn, secretary of the film Boards of Trade for the United States, another officer present being Col. John A. Cooper, Toronto, president of the Motion picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada.

W. C. Gehring of the Fox Film Corporation, Montreal, was elected president of the Montreal board, with A. Gorman of First National as vice-president. C. R. Osborn, representing Vitagraph, Inc., was elected secretary-treasurer.

The members of the Montreal Film Board include the following: D. Leduc, Canadian Universal; Morris Davis, Regal Films, Limited; Ed. English, Famous Lasky Film Service; W. C. Gehring, Fox Film Corporation; I. Sourkes, United Artists, Corp.; M. West, Burpec and West; H. Feldtein, Independent Film Company; A. Gorman, First National Productions; Phil Hazza, Educational Films; B. Allan, Film Booking offices; Charles Lalumiere, Film de Luxe, and C. R. Osborn, Vitagraph, Inc.

Warners To Build Hollywood House

3,000 Seat Theatre, to Cost $1,500,000, Will Have Radio Station, Ball Room, Ice Palace and Parking Cellar

WARNER BROTHERS announced this week that they would shortly start building a 3,000-seat first run theatre in Hollywood at a cost of $1,500,000, which will be one of the show places of the West Coast and incorporate many novel features.

The house will be known as Warners' Hollywood Theatre and will be located at Hollywood Boulevard and Wilcox Street. Title to the property was taken last week and plans are being completed by Architect Landsburg, of Los Angeles.

In announcing the project, Harry M. Warner stated that the Hollywood house is only the first of the company's theatres planned in big cities where they have been unable to obtain representation for product. Before they are through, he said, they intend to lease or build theatres in all big cities where first runs are now denied them.

The Hollywood theatre has been contemplated for some time, but Warner Bros. would not confirm the report before, as title to the site had not been taken and plans were not completed. Various reports emanating from points over the country, Mr. Warner said, should not be credited, as it was the company's intention to build only where they found it necessary, and when they were ready to build elsewhere, they would see that their plans were made public.

The Warner in Hollywood will be 120 by 300 feet on a lot 196 by 300 in the heart of Hollywood and only a stone's throw from Grauman's Egyptian Theatre. It will contain many features new in theatre construction.

The plans call for a structure built much in the shape of the New York Woolworth Building with a 150-foot steel tower rising from the roof. This tower will have at the top a revolving beacon light with a radius of seven miles and also contain the largest chimes in the west, to be operated from the organ pit.

The theatre will contain a balcony and seat all told about 3,000 persons. The architecture will be Gothic. The stage will contain a concealed tank on the order of the New York Hippodrome which will be used for presentations. The entire theatre will be so built that it can be dressed anew whenever desired by a simple changing of lighting effects.

From the interior there will be a winding stairway to the roof and tower which will be open to the public and give a fine panorama view of the surrounding country from the Pacific ocean to the Sierras. The stairway will have three landings and on each landing will be a motion picture museum containing many of the first cameras and other paraphernalia, first used when motion pictures were a new amusement.

The second floor will consist of the largest ball room in the west and plans call for a mammoth ice skating palace in the basement. There will be a sub-cellar which will be used for free parking, space being provided for 400 cars which will be taken charge of by attendants and delivered to the owners after the performance, at the door.

The Warners' broadcasting station, KFWB, now located at the studio, is to be moved to the new theatre, and two 200-foot illuminated towers will be constructed on the space not occupied by the theatre. The broadcasting room is to be placed behind glass and the public, while waiting for the show to start or after it is over, will be able to stand outside and watch the artists before the microphone.

It is planned to have the theatre completed by January 1. H. M. Warner stated that in addition to their own product, they would play the pictures of other companies.

Berlin Welcomes U. S. Picture Stars

Pola Negri, Tom Mix and Mae Murray Are Tendered Receptions at German Capital

By Heinrich Fraenkel

QUITE a number of American film notabilities have ventured into Berlin lately for a short stay. Pola Negri has of course had the finest reception, her many friends and acquaintances "from old times" having been exceedingly pleased to see her again. Paul Davidson, her (and Lubitsch's) "discoverer" tendered her a dinner at his house where she met "the whole set."

The same pleasant function was repeated during her second equally short stay (on the way back from Poland) at the house of Joe May, the famous German producer who, by the way, is expected to go to the U. S. A. before long,—Tom Mix had an equally fine reception in the German capital. Mr. Aussenberg, European representative of Fox' had done an enormous amount of work on behalf of this occasion, and he can certainly be proud of the fact that the star's popularity in this country has gone up considerably, thanks to the personal visit so cleverly arranged.

Mae Murray is the latest of American stars visiting Berlin; she too has had a fine reception, and it has generally been noted as a special compliment that she didn't even spare the pains of studying the intricacies of our language, before she came here. As regards American business men who have been here lately, Joe Schenck and Samuel Goldwyn should be specially mentioned.

The trouble connected with the rights of "Waltz Dream" should specially interest American readers. It is a well known fact that Lubitsch was to do this famous story for Warners. It is, however, very unlikely that he will be able to do so, for evidently Ufa is in a position to claim older rights. Ufa acquired, years ago, the rights of the novel "Nux the Prince Consort" which was published in 1907 and upon which the libretto of Oscar (not Richard, as has been mentioned in several American papers) Strauss' famous comic opera "Waltz Dream" was based. The provisions of the German copyright laws as well as those of the agreement of Berne make it quite clear, however, that the opera's libretto offers no basis for claiming film rights, unless some entirely new ideas would have been included in the opera, which is not the case. Thus the screen rights of "Waltz Dream" belong to the party which has acquired the world's film rights of the underlying novel, and this is Ufa.

The latest official figures covering the first three months of this year are just to hand. According to these, German imports of unexposed as well as exposed film have shown a remarkable increase comparing with the same period of last year; imports of unexposed film have gone up by 1,918,065 feet, which means 75%. Exports of exposed film have also shown an upward trend by 8,659,011 feet, which amounts to as much as 120%; on the other hand exports of unexposed film have gone back by 322,857 feet, amounting to more than 35%.

The exact figures are the following: During the first three months of this year imports of unexposed film amounted to 279,000 feet (172,800 feet came from the U. S. A.); imports of exposed film amounted to altogether 4,533,000 feet (1,273,800 feet of which originated from the U. S. A.). As, on the other hand, quite a number of American films must have been imported via Great Britain (which, in spite of the significance of its home production, figured in these lines with as much as 895,500 feet.), it can clearly be seen that the overwhelming majority of American film imports into this country is even bigger than it would seem to be at first sight, according to those official statistics.

As to exports, 38,460,300 feet of unexposed film have left the country during the first three months of this year. Of these 22,159,800 feet have gone to the U. S. A. as against 29,223,318 feet within the same period of the preceding year. As to the exports of exposed film, the figure amounts to 15,713,700 feet; here Austria having taken as much as 4,169,400 feet, has been by far the best customer.

German production is showing a strong upward trend comparing with last year. Ufa alone is preparing 33 films this summer. Some of them on a rather big scale.

Canada Offers Cooperation

Head of Canadian Picture Bureau Says Government Would Welcome Producers

LEGITIMATE American motion producers will be offered the fullest cooperation of the Canadian Government in the production of pictures in Canada, according to Raymond S. Peck, director of the Motion Picture Bureau of the Government, who was the honor guest and chief speaker at the weekly meeting of the A. M. P. A. in New York last week.

In discussing his bureau and the cooperation offered by Canada, Peck said:

"The government came to the conclusion that no medium for the dissemination of valuable information, was greater or more effective than the screen. As a result the motion picture bureau was organized. The men then in charge of the work were not film men. Their pictures met with small success. But the bureau has since greatly improved and has turned out some tremendously interesting film. The 'Seeing Canada' series just completed by the government is as fine a piece of work of its kind as has ever been turned out—a credit to any theatre—and we have arranged for its world wide distribution. When it is realized that the fourth industry of Canada is the tourist industry the value of motion pictures to the Dominion can readily be appreciated.

"But don't misunderstand me, we don't aspire to compete with the United States in film production, though we do believe we have a lot to offer the American producer who will cross the line. The Canadian government will be delighted to help in every tangible way the legitimate American producer, who will find a very cordial welcome in our country.

"Today the First National company has the Milton Sills company making 'The Knockout' in the big timber country 150 miles north of Ottawa, with the support of the government and the active cooperation of the lumber men and railroad companies behind it. The lumber men had been deeply stung by certain fly-by-night film promoters in the past, and that is the reason why Mr. Stanley's reception was at first unsatisfactory, until they learned that the Canadian government would back him up.

"If we can do this sort of thing for one company, we can do it for others. And I feel, as a government official, that the film industry should be recognized."

Peck pointed to the wonderful advantages offered by Canada as a field for motion picture production. "It is only an over night's ride from New York to Ottawa," he said, "and from there it is but a short jump into the primitive wilderness. Then, too, for mountain scenery the Canadian Rockies are unsurpassed, and for producers who seek the atmosphere of the plains, there are the great provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba who will be only to glad to receive them."

Reorganize and Enlarge Fox Publicity Staff

THE publicity, advertising and exploitation departments of Fox Film Corporation have been enlarged and reorganized. Heads of departments have been appointed to work under the direction and supervision of Vivian Moses.

G. K. Rudulph has been made Publicity Manager and will have charge of all publicity, including newspapers, fan magazine and trade papers. Rudulph is a former newspaper man and has been associated with the Fox company for the past three years.

Donn McElwaine, formerly assisttant to Mr. Moses, has been appointed Manager of Accessory Division, in which pressbooks, explotation aids, lithographs, lobby displays, etc., will be prepared.

An Explotation Manager, who will have charge of the home and field force of explotation men, will be appointed.

Skouras St. Louis House Plans Completed

Plans for financing Skouras Brothers 17-story office building and Ambassador Theatre at Seventh and Locust Streets, St. Louis, were completed the past week. The structure, with equipment, ground, etc., will represent an investment of $5,500,000.

S. W. Straus & Company have underwritten the bond issue of $4,500,000 on the project. The bonds will mature in three to sixteen and one-half years. The borrowing corporation is the Central Properties Corporation, the stock of which is held by Skouras Brothers Enterprises.

The plans for the new building have been altered to eliminate the tower and its eight additional stories. The entire building will be 17 stories. The theatre section will occupy eight full stories, leaving nine stories for offices. There will be several stores on the ground floor.

Ballance Granted Transfer to Southern District

Harry G. Ballance, for five years one of the division managers in the home office of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been transferred, at his own request, to the Southern district. Ballance has desired for some time past to get into the field work again and accepted the position of District Manager in the South with headquarters at Atlanta.

Ballance has been eight years with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, holding successively positions of salesman, Branch manager and Division manager.

Schine May Join With Linton in Utica

There was a report along Film Row last week that the Schine interests may become associated with W. H. Linton, in the erection of a theatre in Utica that will replace the one owned and opened by Mr. Linton a few weeks ago, and which burned to the ground a few days later. The Schines are still broadening out and are said to be negotiating for theatres in some of the towns along the St. Lawrence river.

In and Out of Town

J. G. BACHMAN returned this week from a fortnight's trip to the Schulberg Exchanges in the middle west, in the interest of distribution.

FRED KENNEDY MYTON, West Coast scenario chief at the F. B. O. Studios, is on the way East to confer with John Brownell on the selection of stories for next year's program.

BURTON GEORGE, well known director from England, arrived in New York last week on a flying visit in the interest of production.

W. RAY JOHNSTON, of Rayart, has returned to New York from a trip out through the Middle West in the interest of distribution.

HAROLD PONTEFRACT, director of publicity for Fox in London, sailed recently for Europe.

CARL LAEMMLE will sail on June 20th on the White Star liner Olympic for his annual trip abroad. He will be accompanied by Tom Reed of the Coast publicity department.

LEWIS H. MOOMAW, who is producing a series of pictures for Associated Exhibitors is in town and stopping at the 44th Street Hotel.

JOE BRANDT left this week for Kansas City and Chicago and from these poinst will go on to the Coast.

JACK STEWART who has been with First National in Cleveland, is expected in New York next week. He will then go to Brussels, Belgium, where he will take charge of the First National Exchange.

Deaf Man and Girl Exploit "Seven Chances" in Akron

C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, recently attracted a good deal of attention to the showing of "Seven Chances" at the Allen theatre in Akron, O., by staging the following stunt: A man carrying an ear trumpet entered a street car with a young girl who kept asking him loudly through the ear trumpet if they were on the right car to go to see "Seven Chances?" As this couple took care to board the wrong car every time, and to create considerable commotion in every car before understanding from solicitous passengers which car they really should take, widespread interest in the picture was aroused.

The man doing the deaf part in this stunt had posed for the heavy part in photographs illustrating a serial newspaper story running in the Akron Times-Press, and extra space was achieved in the Times-Press on the strength of this tie-up. The showing was announced over the radio from station WADC in advance of the premiere.

De Mille Signs Magazine Cover Girl

Cecil B. De Mille has signed Josephine Norman, "the girl on the magazine cover," as a member of his stock company and she is now in California to play a part in "Hell's Highroad," which stars Leatrice Joy.

Miss Norman's likeness has graced the cover of many magazines. She has served as a model for Howard Chandler Christy, Ivan Olinsky, Ben Ali Haggin, Howard Renwick and Neysa McMein. She has played bits in several pictures.

Four Associated Units Are Working in East

Two Associated Exhibitors releases are nearing completion and two others have just gone into production in eastern studios. Hugh Dierker has made his last scenes on the Mae Busch and Owen Moore vehicle, "Camille of the Barbary Coast," and the picture is now in the cutting room.

Henri Diamant Berger's unit, with Hope Hampton, James Kirkwood and Louis Wolheim in the leading roles, are completing "Lovers' Island," a Smart Set Magazine story by T. Howard Kelly.

S. E. V. Taylor is directing Mae Busch, Percy Marmont and Nita Naldi in "The Miracle of Life" for Associated Exhibitors, and E. H. Griffith has started the direction of "Headlines" for St. Regis Pictures. Alice Joyce has the star role and her support includes Virginia Lee Corbin.

Bert Lytell Narrowly Escapes Death in Rapids

Bert Lytell had a narrow escape from death while shooting the rapids in one of the North country scenes of James Oliver Curwood's "Steele of the Royal Mounted."

First National to Release Carroll Feature in July

FIRST NATIONAL has announced July 26th as the release date for "The Scarlet West," the production sponsored by Frank J. Carroll which First National recently contracted to distribute.

"The Scarlet West," which was originally announced as "The Birth of the West," will be handled under the supervision of A. W. Smith, Jr., assistant to E. A. Eschmann, who has had charge of First National specials during the past two years. The world premiere of the film will take place at the Colorado theatre in Denver on July 26th.

Morgan and Skirboll Leave First National

TWO members of the First National sales organization headed by E. A. Eschmann are leaving that company. William J. Morgan, who has been with First National for eight years, has resigned to become sales manager for Producers Distributing Corporation. Joseph F. Skirboll, manager of First National's Western District for the past two years, has resigned to become general manager of Frank Lloyd Productions, Inc.

"It is with regret that I part company with Mr. Morgan and Mr. Skirboll," said Mr. Eschman, "as I have found them capable and zealous in discharging the duties of their offices."

Eschmann has temporarily placed A. W. Smith Jr., his assistant who has supervision over the sales staff on First Nationals specials, in charge of open market sales, pending the selection of a permanent successor to Mr. Morgan.

Evangaline Russell Has Narrow Escape

Evangaline Russell narrowly escaped death last week while playing one of the leading roles in the Herman F. Jans production, "Married," in support of Owen Moore and Constance Bennett.

After a leap from a high point on the rim of the chasm into the Ausable River, Miss Russell was carried down stream by the swift current, but was dragged to shore by Ben Silvey, production manager for the Jans company. She was rushed to the hospital at Plattsburg suffering from severe bruises, shock and immersion. Antrim Short and Nick Thompson, two other players in the company were injured in attempting a rescue.

Despite these mishaps Director George Terwilliger expects to complete all of the exteriors of the picture this week.

D. W. Griffith is Editing "Sally of the Sawdust"

D. W. Griffith has completed camera work on "Sally of the Sawdust," his last picture for United Artists and is now cutting the film. The picture will feature Carol Dempster, W. C. Fields and Alfred Lunt. The interiors for the production were filmed at the Paramount Long Island studio.

The story was adapted to the screen by Forrest Halsey from the munical comedy "Poppy" in which Madge Kennedy and W. C. Fields starred on Broadway.

Will Dramatize "Florrie Meets a Gentleman"

Elsie Jean Jerard, who wrote the original screen story, "Florrie Meets a Gentleman," for Sawyer-Lubin production, is now dramatizing the story in collaboration with a writer of stage success, and it will be produced on Broadway in the Fall at the same time as the release of the picture.

Associated Pictures will start casting "Florrie Meets a Gentleman" within the next two weeks. Barbara La Marr will be the featured player. The picture will be released by First National.

Warners Make Additions to Many Casts

Warner Brothers have made a number of additions to casts of pictures about to go into production or already in work for the 1925-26 season. Monte Blue has been selected to head the cast for the Gregory Rogers story, "Red Hot Tires," with Patsy Ruth Miller in the leading feminine role.

David Butler has been added to the cast of "The Man on the Box," in which Syd Chaplin is starred.

Kate Toncray has been added to the "Bobbed Hair" cast, which is headed by Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan.

De Mille Starts Filming "Coming of Amos"

After elaborate plans and the careful selection of a cast, Cecil B. DeMille started work this week on "The Coming of Amos," Rod La Rocque's first starring vehicle which is being directed by Paul Sloane.

Richard Carle, famous stage star is a late addition to the cast and he will be seen in one of the featured roles, as will Ruby Lafayette, "the grand old lady of the screen," who is cast as the nurse

Buy Rights to Play and Novel for Hines

SCREEN rights to "The Game of Light," a story by Richard Washburn Child, and "The Cub," Thompson Buchanan's play in which Douglas Fairbanks starred on the speaking stage, have been purchased by B. & H. Enterprises, Inc., as vehicles for Johnny Hines on the First National program, it was announced this week.

"The Game of Light" will be filmed under the title of "The Live Wire," and the Buchanan play is to be released as "Rainbow Riley."

"California Straight Ahead" is among the new Universal pictures. These scenes are from the production.

"The Texas Bearcat" is the title of a new F. B. O. western drama starring Bob Custer. These scenes are taken from the picture.

First National Producers Busy

Eight Units Scheduled to Start on New Features During Present Month

FIRST NATIONAL announces that eight production units are scheduled to start camera work on new features during the present month and that it is probable three or four more will be added to the list before the end of June.

"The Viennese Medley," from Edith O'Shaugnessy's novel, went into production on June 1st, with Kurt Rehfeld directing. Anna Q. Nilsson and May Allison have leading roles.

Edwin Carewe will start work on "The Sea Woman," from Willard Robinson's play, on June 8th. Blanche Sweet and Victor McLaglen play the leads. Henry Kitchell Webster's new novel, "Joseph Greer and His Daughter," will go into production under the direction of George Archainbaud on June 5th.

"The Dark Angel," the new Samuel Goldwyn-George Fitzmaurice production, will get under way on June 10th, with Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in the leads.

Frank Lloyd is expected to start photography on Vingie E. Roe's "The Splendid Road," the latter part of June.

Inspiration Pictures has set June 8th as the date for beginning work on Richard Barthelmess' new picture "The Beautiful City," which will be directed by Elmer Clifton. Dorothy Gish and William H. Powell will be seen in the support of the star. While no date has been announced for starting on Byron Morgan's story for Ben Lyon, "The Pace That Thrills," this also will go into production during June.

Sawyer-Lubin are preparing to begin work within a short time on the new Barbara La Marr production from Elsie Jean Jerard's story, "Florrie Finds a Gentleman." Jack Lait is preparing the continuity.

"Beggar on Horseback" Opens

James Cruze Production for Paramount Follows "Grass" Into the Criterion

JAMES CRUZE'S latest production for Paramount, "Beggar on Horseback," is scheduled to open at the New York Criterion on Broadway June 5th, following the successful run of ten weeks of "Grass." An elaborate electric display at the Broadway house is among the exploitation features provided by Harry Reichenbach.

An unique feature of the "Beggar on Horseback" presentation will be the staging of a one-act playlet to precede it. This was written by George S. Kaufman in collaboration with Dorothy Parker. Kaufman was co-author with Marc Connelly of the stage play, "Beggar on Horseback."

In the cast of the playlet will be such well known favorites as Wilton Lackaye, Catherine Hays, Orlando Daly, Hugo Chilveis, Mary Walsh, Austin Coghlan, Mart Fuller Golden and Worthington Romaine. The musical units of both the play and the feature film are being directed by Hugo Reisenfeld, while actual staging is under the direction of Frederick Stanhope.

Three Warner Pictures to Have N. Y. Premieres

Three Broadway premieres at three different houses are scheduled for Warner Brothers' pictures during the month of June. The first of these, "Wildfire," starring Aileen Pringle will go into the Capitol June 7th. It is an adaption of the stage play in which Lillian Russell scored a triumph.

On June 14th "Steele of the Royal Mounted" will go into the Rialto. It is a James Oliver Curwood story in which Bert Lytell, Charlotte Merriam and Stuart Holmes have the important roles.

The week of June 20th will see "How Baxter Butted In" at the Piccadilly. Dorothy Devore and Matt Moore are featured in this comedy.

Clarence Burton Signed by De Mille

The latest player to be signed as a member of the Cecil B. De Mille forces is Clarence Burton, screen villain, who has affixed his signature to a long term contract. His first role will be an important one in the Rod La Rocque starring vehicle, "The Coming of Amos." Burton has played in practically every picture De Mille has made.

Hawn Publicity Director for True Story Films

Gavin Campbell Hawn, former publicity director for Mae Murray and the Murray-Leonard productions, and more recently Paramount exploiteer, has joined the staff of the Macfadden Publications as director of publicity and advertising for True Story Films, Inc., a new Macfadden enterprise.

Leon Errol is Signed by First National

LEON ERROL has signed a long term contract with First National, under which he will be featured in a series of eight comedy pictures, the first one to be started late in August.

The signing of Errol, one of the foremost of stage comedians, was due largely to his unusually successful performance as the Duke of Checkergovinia in the screen version of "Sally," the same role as he played in the legitimate production. Just now Errol is adding to his laurels in the title role of the Florenz Ziegfeld production of "Louis the Fourteenth" in New York.

First National Directors, in the signing of Errol, believe they have acquired a comedian second to none on the screen. He is an Australian and attended the Sydney School of Medicine and Surgery. A quarrel with a professor turned his atention to the stage. His first appearance in America was in the Music Halls of San Francisco where he sang Coster songs. Later he played stock in Salt Lake City and then drifted on to New York in burlesque, where Florenz Ziegfeld discovered him and has kept him busy ever since. The First National announcement of the signing of Errol does not divulge the titles of the pictures in which he will appear.

Errol will appear in one picture for Sam Rork before starting work for First National.

Erdmann Gets New Post at Cleveland

George W. Erdmann has been appointed by Producers Distributing Corporation as branch manager at Cleveland, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. J. Mooney. Erdmann has had fourteen years experience in all branches of the film industry.

Archainbaud to Direct New First National Feature

George Archainbaud has been engaged by First National to direct the production of "Joseph Greer and His Daughter," adapted by June Mathis from the novel of that title by Henry Kitchell Webster. Archainbaud recently completed "The Necessary Evil" for First National in New York.

Theda Bara Starts Work in Chadwick Feature

Theda Bara has started work at the Robertson, Cole studios in the Chadwick picture, "The Unchastened Woman," from the successful stage play by Louis K. Anspacher. George Walsh was displaced in the cast by John Miljan, as Walsh was unable to finish "Blue Blood," his second Chadwick picture, in time to start work on this production.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in "Stella Dallas" Cast

Samuel Goldwyn has engaged Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., for the juvenile lead in "Stella Dallas," which will be produced by Henry King from the novel by Mrs. Olive Higgins Prouty.

Three Universal Jewels for Broadway

A UNIVERSAL record will be established on Broadway when three Jewel productions of that company will be on display during the month of June. Two will be shown at the Strand and one at the Capitol.

"I'll Show You the Town" a new Reginald Denny-Harry Pollard production is scheduled for the Strand June 7th. "Siege," Virginia Valli's latest for Universal opens at the Capitol June 14th, and "The Teaser," Laura La Plante's new Jewel is scheduled to go into the Strand later in the month.

Paramount School Tests Down to Twenty

OUT of a total of 1,500 applicants twenty have been chosen as prospective members of the screen acting class which Paramount will inaugurate at the Long Island studio. Of the 1,500 players who applied for admission in the New York district, 61 were originally considered potential screen players.

The twenty named will be given personal interviews and from these five will be selected for entrance to the class. That is the quota for the New York division. Among the applicants were artists models, Follies girls, members of school and college theatrical clubs and others who have appeared in pictures as atmosphere in the past.

Registration of Italians and Scandinavians was heavier than of any other nationality represented in the Cosmopolitan population of New York City and its environs.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Sign Dorothy Farnum

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Dorothy Farnum, well known scenarist, to a long term contract. Her first story has not yet been announced. She has already done work for this company, having adapted Marshall Neilan's production of Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" for the screen.

Among other successful pictures for which Miss Farnum wrote the script are: "Babbitt," "Beau Brummel," "Daring Youth," "The Lover of Camille" and "Being Respectable."

Sax Signs Musical Comedy Star to Film Contract

Sam Sax this week announced that he had signed under a long-term contract to appear in Gotham Productions, Helen Shipman, musical comedy star who won prominence in Broadway theatrical circles by her rapid progress up from the ranks of the chorus.

Miss Shipman is to have a leading part in "Kosher Kitty Kelly," scheduled to open at the Fulton theatre, New York, on June 15th. She will have leading roles in forthcoming Gotham films, her selection to be a featured player by this company following the highly satisfactory work she did in "A Little Girl in a Big City," recently produced by Gotham.

Earl Williams Joins Cast of "The Sky Rocket"

Earle Williams has been added to the cast which will be seen in "The Sky Rocket," which Marshall Neilan is producing with Peggy Hopkins Joyce and Owen Moore in the featured roles.

Frank Lloyd Denies Report About Change of Release

At a meeting attended by Samuel Spring, secretary-treasurer of First National Pictures, Bruce Johnson, foreign sales manager, and other First National distribution representatives held this week in Los Angeles Frank Lloyd denied rumors printed in a current issue of Film Mercury to the effect that he contemplated withdrawing his future productions from First National's releasing schedule.

"Plastic Age" Director and Lead Named

B. P. Schulberg has selected the director and leading player for his production of "The Plastic Age," which he plans starting early in the summer months.

"Lying Wives" Booked for Piccadilly Theatre

"Lying Wives," the Ivan Players production in which Clara Kimball Young, Madge Kennedy, Richard Bennett, Niles Welch, Edna Murphy and J. Barney Sherry are featured, has been booked for a week's engagement at the Piccadilly Theatre, New York, during the present month, it was announced by the Apollo Exchange, New York distributors of the film.

Rork Signs Spence to Adapt Feature

THAT Sam Rork intends to score another ten-strike in his coming production for Producers Distributing Corporation release is evidenced by the fact that he has engaged Ralph Spence to adapt "Clothes Make the Pirate" for the screen. Spence is author of the current New York stage success "The Gorilla," and has distinguished himself as a scenarist and title writer.

This humorous story is by Holman Day and will have that extremely popular comedian, Leon Errol in the title role.

Robert T. Kane Announces Staff

Completes Organization to Produce Pictures for First National Release

ROBERT T. KANE, former general manager of production for Famous Players-Lasky, this week announced the formation of Robert T. Kane Productions to make four feature pictures for release by First National this coming season.

Those who will be associated with Mr. Kane in his organization are well known in the film industry.

Colonel Douglas Young has been appointed business manager of the Kane organization. Born in Canada and schooled —in film production—in California, Col. Young is an ex-British army officer. He has been a student of the theatre for twenty years and interested in photoplay production for at least ten. His actual "break in" was under Henry King last year in Hollywood.

Robert M. Haas is art director of the new organization. "Bob" had the art direction of many Famous Players successes during his five years with that company. He then joined Lillian Gish as art director of "The White Sister" and "Romola."

Julie Herne will act as story advisor to Mr. Kane. She was official story reader to Jesse L. Lasky and later was given charge of the work of securing vehicles for Tom Meighan, Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels and Betty Compson.

Publicity and exploitation of the Kane Productions will be in the hands of Bert Adler, long associated with the film industry as a publicity and advertising manager.

Short Subject Contest Set

Reisenfeld Medal for Best of the Season Will Be Awarded in August

THE first annual short subject competition for the Reisenfeld medal will end August 31st, according to the conditions laid down by the donor. The medal will be awarded for the best short subject, exclusive of comedies and cartoons shown during the 1924-25 season.

The award will be made by a committee composed of Joe Plunkett of the Strand, New York; J. A. Partington of the Rothchild theatres, San Francisco; Fred Meyer of the Palace, Hamilton, Ohio; Frank L. Newman of Kansas City, Harold B. Franklin of Famous Players, and Harry C. Arthur, former general manager of West Coast Theatres, Inc., and now associated with M. P. Capital Corporation.

The decision will be made by the committee no the following types of pictures:

Scenics with the desired novel twist that lifts them out of the ordinary.

Short dramas.

Pictures with a definite news or historical interest. This does not mean the news weeklies, but it may include material compiled from them.

Scientific films of all sorts, provided that their technical nature does not interfere with their entertainment value.

Films which are hard to put in any particular category, but which combine some of the features of 3 and 4.

Novelties of any kind, though it is deemed advisable to eliminate any combination of sound with film.

Jean Hersholt Chosen for "Stella Dallas" Cast

Jean Hersholt is the fourth member of the cast to be selected by Samuel Goldwyn and Henry King for "Stella Dallas." He will play the part of Ed Munn, riding master. Belle Bennett will have the title role, Ronald Colman will play Stephen Dallas, and Lois Moran will play Laurel Dallas. Two more important roles have yet to be cast.

"Stella Dallas" is scheduled for release in the early Fall, but Goldwyn has not yet announced through what company it will be distributed.

J. Charles Davis Opens West Coast Office

J. Charles Davis 2nd, President of Davis Distributing Division has opened a western office for that organization in the Lane Mortgage Building, Eighth and Spring streets in Los Angeles.

Davis intends remaining on the coast the greater part of the year and personally supervising production of pictures made for his organization. The eastern headquarters of the company will be under the supervison of J. K. Adams, vice-president.

"After Business Hours" to Open on Broadway

"After Business Hours," latest Columbia picture, featuring Elaine Hammerstein and Lou Tellegen, will open a week's engagement at the B. S. Moss Colony Theatre on Broadway, New York, June 7th. It was adapted from a Hearst International Magazine story by Ethel Watts Mumford titled "Everything Money Can Buy." In the supporting cast are Phyllis Haver, John Patrick, Lillian Langdon, William Scott and Lee Moran.

Warners Take Over More of Their Product

Vitagraph exchanges received the Warner Brothers product held by franchise holders in four more territories last week. Up to a few days ago the Warner product in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit and Pittsburgh was handled by the Film Classics Company. This product is now in the hands of Vitagraph exchanges.

The Warners had previously acquired their product in Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Three Universal Pictures Get New Titles

Universal announces three changes in titles of coming productions. Norman Kerry's latest starring vehicle, "Lorraine of the Lions," an Edward Sedwick production, is to be known as "Beauty and the Brute."

"Titans," with House Peters as the star will be called "The Storm Breakers," and the chapter film, "Perils of the Primitive," starring Joe Bonomo, will be released as "Perils of the Wild."

Paramount Opens Its South America Offices

E. E. Shauer, general manager of the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announces the formal opening of Paramount exchanges in Buenos Aires, Argentina and Santiago, Chile.

The first releases of Paramount pictures through this new organization, which will be known as Paramount Films, S. A., was scheduled for June 1st in Argentina, Paraguay, Chile, Peru and Bolivia, the territory under the jurisdiction of the Buenos Aires office.

Ten Fox Specials Completed

Rapid Progress is Being Made on Lengthy Program for Coming Season

TEN special attractions have been completed by the Fox organization and five more are in work out of a total of forty-nine scheduled for the 1925-26 season. In addition, five Imperial comedies are completed and three in production.

The Fox forces have been working overtime on their production schedule and their progress has been remarkable. Victor Schertzinger has completed "The Wheel" and the picture is now on its way east. "East Lynne" is already in the cutting room. It has a cast which includes Alma Rubens, Edmund Lowe, Lou Tellegen, Frank Keenan, Marjorie Daw, Leslie Fenton, Belle Bennett, Paul Panzer, Lydia Knott, Harry Seymour, Martha Mattox, Virginia Marshall, Richard Hendrick and Eric Mayne.

"Havoc" is another of the features that has reached the cutting room. It was directed by Rowland V. Lee. "Lightnin'," the latest John Ford production, has been received in New York, with Jay Hunt in the role made famous on the speaking stage by the late Frank Bacon. In the supporting cast are Madge Bellamy, J. Farrell MacDonald, Ethel Clayton, Wallace MacDonald, Richard Travers, Otis Haran, Edythe Chapman, Brandon Hurst, James Marcus and Peter Mazutis.

Two more John Ford productions, "Kentucky Pride" and "The Fighting Heart," have been received by the laboratories in New York. The former, a racetrack picture, has already been previewed. "The Fighting Heart" is a Larry Evans story, "Once to Every Man." In the cast are George O'Brien, J. Farrell MacDonald, Billie Dove, Victor MacLaglen and Diana Miller.

The first Tom Mix attraction, "The Everlasting Whisper," has been finished and is ready for preview. The picture is based on the story by Jackson Gregory.

The first two Buck Jones pictures, "The Timber Wolf" and "Durand of the Bad Lands," have been completed. "The Timber Wolf" was directed by W. S. Van Dyke and in it Jones is supported by Elinor Fair, Dave Dyas, Sam Allen and William Walling. This is another of Jackson Gregory's successful stories.

In "Durand of the Bad Lands," which was directed by Lynn Reynolds, there is a cast including Marion Nixon, Fred De Silva, Carol Lombard, Malcolm Waite and Luke Cosgrove.

"Thank You," another John Golden play, in which George O'Brien, Jacqueline Logan, Alec Francis, J. Farrell MacDonald and Cyril Chadwick are the featured players, is now in work under the direction of John Ford.

The Fox comedy unit has also surpassed itself in production. Five Imperial Comedies have been finished and three more are in work. Two Van Bibber, temporarily titled "The Apache" and "The Ski Jumper," are complete and a third, "The Big Game Hunter," is well under way. Work on the O. Henry and Mable Herbert Urner series will start shortly.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Marilyn Mills is Signed by Davis

J. Charles Davis, 2nd, president of Davis Distributing Division, has signed Marilyn Mills, noted equestrienne to make a series of features for distribution through his organization.

Miss Mills is a daring horsewoman who has already won renown on the screen. With her bay horse Star, and her snow white Beverly she was seen in a number of Ben Wilson productions last year.

Kraly Signs to Write Plays for Talmadge Sisters

Hans Kraly, author of several screen stories, has been signed by Joseph M. Schenck to write eight original motion picture plays for Norma and Constance Talmadge. He is the author of "Her Night of Romance," a recent Constance Talmadge feature, and "Her Sister From Paris," this star's forthcoming production. Kraly first came into prominence in America as co-author with Lubitsch of "Passion," "Carmen," "Deception," "The Loves of Pharoah."

Dolores Costello Given Lead in Fox Feature

Dolores Costello will appear in the feminine lead opposite Edmund Lowe in "Greater Than a Crown," the star's last release on the current program of Fox Film Corporation. The cast includes Margaret Livingston, Paul Panzer, Sidney Bracey and Bob Klein.

Releasing Film of Milk Fund Bouts in New York

UNIVERSAL is releasing the International News Reel pictures of the Milk Fund bouts held in New York Decoration Day, throughout New York State. The pictures had their premiere at the Piccadilly Theatre on Broadway last Sunday afternoon, where they were featured as a special attraction.

The first showing of the films in Buffalo took place at the Olympic Theatre on Sunday night, and in Albany at the Majestic at the first Sunday afternoon show.

The film is in three reels and covers all of the events which took place at the boxing carnival at which Mike McTigue lost his title of light-heavyweight champion to Paul Berlenbach. The picture is being distributed by Universal as Carl Laemmle's contribution to the Free Milk Fund.

Wellman to Direct "I'll Tell the World"

The first story that William A. Wellman will direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under his new contract will be the forthcoming production, "I'll Tell the World," with George K. Arthur the featured player. Wellman is one of the youngest directors.

"I'll Tell the World" is a whimsical story of youth taken from "Don Quixote, Jr.," by George Scarborough and Annette Westbay.

Selecting Cast for Screen Version of Phillips Novel

The cast for "Souls For Sables," the first of the Tiffany Big Twelve to be released for 1925-1926 season, is now being selected. Prominent screen players will depict the principal characters of the screen story based on the original novel, "Garland & Co.," by David Graham Phillips.

Writes Song for Gotham's "His Master's Voice"

Gus Edwards, famous song writer and author of "School Days" and other hits, is writing a song which will be exploited in conjunction with "His Master's Voice," the Gotham production which Lumas will offer with Thunder, the dog star.

Carewe Starts Production of "The Sea Woman"

Edwin Carewe expects to start camera work on "The Sea Woman," an adaptation of the play of the same title by Willard Robinson, on June 8th.

Noah Beery Signs Long Term Contract

Noah Beery and Famous Players have issued a new contract, under the terms of which Beery will appear exclusively in Paramount pictures for a number of years. He is at present playing in "Wild Horse Mesa," Zane Grey's newest story.

Independents Prepared to Meet Demand for Quality Films

Exhibitors Support Is Their Only Concern

By Thomas C. Kennedy

THE effect on independent producers and exchangemen of recent trade developments, developments culminating at the Milwaukee convention, is order, optimism, courage and confidence in what the future holds for the independently produced and distributed motion picture.

An observer seeking to test the temper and pulse of the independent producers and distributors cannot venture far without sensing the presence of an entirely new and very desirable attitude on the part of the men who make up the backbone of this vital organ of the motion picture industry. Discontent, distrust, skepticism, having given way to courage, determination and orderliness. Most striking of the impressions of any observer who goes forth to see what he can see and hear what is told him is the unanimity of thought that the independents have or will have their opportunity next season, if the promises, in which we may add they seem to place the greatest confidence, are fulfilled.

Indeed, there is a spirit and an unanimity of thought such perhaps as has never before so thoroughly blanketed the ranks of the independents, for organization and the spirit of organization is abroad in their land.

Any report which would convey the impression that the independent producers are riding along on the crest of a wave of flushed enthusiasm would be inaccurate and misleading. The feeling existing among the executives of the most prominent of these producing organizations rests on a much more solid foundation than that of mere enthusiasm growing out of wishes and hopes.

The crux of the situation as gleaned from conversations with many representative independent producers and distributors is this: Firstly, the independents during the past year demonstrated to financiers that they can make profitable pictures and as a result money at equitable rates of interest will be available for their operations; secondly, their producing organizations have been whipped into shape and are ready to turn out high quality pictures if the theatres want them; thirdly, they are organized and in a position therefore to assume and maintain a position compatible with their importance; fourthly, they are ready and able to make first-run, quality pictures capable of competing with the attractions offered by the biggest concerns if the exhibitors will support such a program of operation.

It is generally agreed among independent producers, distributors and exchange men that the exhibitors will set the standard of production which will be made by independents. The point, they say, is simply this: If the exhibitors will encourage the independently-produced picture by according it play dates the independent producers can go ahead with plans already formulated to make quality pictures. They argue that if the exhibitor will show the producer that he can get play dates for his high quality pictures the producers will put money, and money which is available to them at fair interest charges, into the productions which are now planned and turn out pictures which will compete successfully at the box office with the class "A" offerings from the biggest companies.

In the issue dated May 16, MOTION PICTURE NEWS published a list of the productions which all companies have announced for next year, including both nationally and independently distributed product.

Taking that list as a basis of consideration, a representative of this publication asked various independent producers, distributors and exchange men if the independent productions planned could be made to supply a sufficient number of high class attractions to fill the demands of theatres which would increase their independent playing time. The answer was always the same, "Yes, without a doubt, provided the play dates are forthcoming in such a manner as to make it worth the independent's while to invest greater amounts in the making of the pictures." The answer was "yes," whether a producer or a distributor or an exchange man was queried.

Analyzing the list as published and in accordance with the views of several independents, the expectancy as to classification of the pictures which will be developed, should all of these producers make all of the pictures they have announced in conformity with their present plans, the state rights exchanges next season will provide the following number of pictures of each of the three classes, "A," "B" and program pictures:

A	B	C

The qualities which determine the classification are those used in the questionnaire sent out by Sydney Cohen previous to the convention and are as follows: (A) Of course, referring to the type of picture worthy of a full weeks run in cities or zones where such is the policy; or for the longest possible run given a picture in the larger neighborhood theatres or first-class houses in smaller cities and towns. (B) To refer to all other features worthy of a split-week run in houses dedicated to that policy or to the three, four or five-day run which the first-class houses in smaller cities and towns and the large neighborhood houses give to features which merit such showings. (C) These, of course, are pictures worthy of a two-day play, to be played either singly or as a double feature, according to the policy of the theatre—or to be played singly in the smaller, daily change houses.

The above analysis is based on "paper announcements" and with consideration to the condition of affairs as they confront the independent producer at the present. It must be remembered that if substantially increased playing time is given to independent pictures, the quality of the product will advance with that increase, so that the number of Class "A" and "B" pictures will increase over the number set down in the table above, while the Class "C" films will proportionately diminish. It is very much questioned if there will be such a large total number of pictures as is indicated by the list used in these considerations, but the diminution, which it is expected will greatly decrease the total, will be noted in the Class "C" column. The estimate of 30 Class "A" and 140 Class "B" pictures which we make is purposely conservative, the point being that that number of "A" and "B" pictures are sure to be available to theatres from independent sources during the coming year, regardless of what the future may develop.

The number of feature pictures announced by independents for distribution through state rights exchanges during the season of 1925-26 are contained in the following tabulation, which is based on authorized statements from these companies:

Columbia Among Independent Leaders

Joe Brandt, president of Columbia Pictures (C. B. C.).

THE growth of Columbia Pictures Corporation during the past five years has been consistent and steady and today the enterprising executives behind the Columbia banner, Joe Brandt and Jack and Harry Kohn, are in the foreranks of the independent producers.

For the season of 1925-26 they have a series of 18 pictures, six to be known as Columbias, six as Waldorfs, and an equal number as Perfections. Last year they released 16.

The company announces that the program for next year has been sold 100 per cent, all territories in this country and in the foreign markets being closed even before the season opened. This situation, the statement declares, is the direct result of the success which was made from the box office standpoint with the films offered by Columbia last season.

Production manager Harry Cohn's latest report is to the effect that the first Columbia release, "The Danger Signal," featuring Jane Novak with Dorothy Revier, Robert Gordon, Gaston Glass, Pat Harmon, Lincoln Stedman and Gertrude Short has been given the biggest production in the history of Columbia Pictures, under Erle C. Kenton's direction.

Elaine Hammerstein who starred in "The Midnight Express," and many Columbias of the past season, has been signed to play in a number of the 1925-26 productions.

Pauline Garon, William Fairbanks, the dashing hero of the Perfection series and Edith Roberts are featured in attractions: "Fighting Youth," "The Speed Demon," "A Fight To a Finish," "The Great Sensation," "The New Champion," and "The Handsome Brute."

After "The Danger Signal," the five other Columbia releases in order of their release are: "SOS Perils of the Sea," "Ladies of Leisure," "The Unwritten Law," "The Lure of Broadway," and "Midnight Flames."

The six Waldorf releases, the first of which "The Thrill Hunter" features Dorothy Revier with Cullen Landis, Barbara Lutty, Charles Clary, Cesare Oramore and Virginia Marshall, will be followed by "Sealed Lips," "The Fate of a Flirt," "The Price of Success," "The Penalty of Jazz," and "An Enemy of Men."

Besides Erle C. Kenton, Reeves Easton, Edward J. LeSaint and Jay Marchant are the directors under contract. Such well known screen favorites as Robert Edeson, Pat Harmon, Frank Hagney, William Norton Bailey, Tom Carr, George Periolat and Jack Britton are already under contract and this group support Pauline Garon and William Fairbanks in the first Perfection, "Fighting Youth."

Lotus Thompson, considered to be one of the most beautiful girls in pictures, Marion Court, Al Kaufman, Lloyd Whitlock and many more players of note are also under contract.

"Altogether," president Joe Brandt stated, "it looks like the biggest year in the history of independent picture producing, and the biggest year in the independent history of Columbia Pictures."

Macfadden to Produce Eight Features

PRODUCTION began this week at the former Pathe studio in the Bronx of the first of the eight pictures which True Story Film Company, Inc., will distribute through the Astor Distributing Corporation, of which Harry Rathner is president.

Lionel Barrymore will be starred in the initial production, "The Wrongdoers." He will be cast in the dramatic and sympathetic role of a socialistic but misguided philanthropist.

There is a strong element of romance in "The Wrongdoers" and the juvenile role will be taken by Charles Mack, whose brilliant performances in D. W. Griffith's "Dream Street," "America," and recent productions have elevated him to a foremost position on the screen. Ann Cornwall, whose work with Fox and other companies has kept her prominent on the screen the last few years will play opposite Mack. Hugh Dierker, who has just completed "Camille of the Barbary Coast," will direct "The Wrongdoers."

Announcement was made this week also, by Nat G. Pendleton, general manager of True Story films that all of the stories for the forthcoming eight productions are well under way. They will be:

"The Wrongdoers," "Bad Habits," "The Harem Girl," "False Pride," "The Danger Line," "Wives at Auction," and "Broken Homes."

All of these pictures will be known as "Gold Medal Productions" and will be offered to independent exchanges by Astor Distributing Corporation.

In order to make clear the field of the True Story Film Company, Inc., Mr. Rathner made the following statement:

"Astor Distributing Corporation has entered into an advertising and publicity tie-up with the Macfadden Publications which aggregates $480,000 for the season of 1925-26. True Story films is a new Macfadden enterprise, and Bernarr Macfadden, head of the publishing house bearing the name of Macfadden will supervise each production.

"A distinct feature of these stories will be that they are the 'true-life' dramas of the type which has made the Macfadden Publications the most important group of magazines of their kind in the world. The Macfadden Publications have a monthly reading public of 16,400,000 persons. What this means to the independent exhibitor is made clear when we point out that the average motion picture theatre-going public is approximately 10,000,000 persons daily; and we feel that through the Macfadden Publications we are going direct to the people who are film fans.

"The Macfadden Publications are:

"'Movie Weekly,' 'Radio Stories Romances,' 'True Story,' 'True Detective Mysteries,' 'Dream World,' 'Dance Lovers,' 'Modern Marriage,' 'Muscle Builder,' 'Physical Culture,' 'Fiction Lovers,' 'Your Car,' and the New York tabloid newspaper, 'The Graphic.'

"Commencing with this month's issue, the Macfadden Publications will carry pages advertising the True Story films and, as soon as the director begins 'shooting' scenes there will be stories and photographs of the stars, plays and scenes from the productions.

Harry Rathner, president Astor Distributing Corp.

"Nat G. Pendleton, general manager of True Story Film Company, Inc., is a practical film man as well as a man of broad experience in the business world, and we feel that this affiliation between the Macfadden Publications and Astor Distributing Corporation will be of great value to the independent exhibitors."

TO THE INDEPENDENT EXHIBITOR:

Don't Be Stampeded!

As soon as coalition became an established fact between the M. P. T. O. A. and the I. M. P. P. D. A., a SUBTLE, INSIDIOUS, UNDERMINING campaign to sow the seeds of uncertainty in the ranks of the exhibitor began.

Exhibitors from various parts of the New York territory were in some mysterious manner informed that the proceedings at Milwaukee would come to naught—that it was foolhardy on the part of the exhibitor to lay too much stress on the various resolutions passed—that if the exhibitor were wise, he would book for his theatre such pictures as were nationally advertised and on which he could depend to make money.

With subtle insinuations and craftiness, spreading the poisonous gas of doubt, these invisible forces are trying to breach the solid ranks of the independent exhibitor.

Discard Rumors, Whisperings, Gossips!

We are more determined than ever to proclaim our whole-hearted and free independence—to book for your theatres such quality pictures that the public demands.

It is only the weak-kneed man who is afraid to fight for his rights. The independence of the exhibitor is more than assured. There is no turning backward! There will be no let-up in the steps that have been taken and are to be taken to bring to a successful conclusion this battle of right against might!

The Play Date Bureau Will Function!

The plans as outlined in Milwaukee are rapidly being consummated and even by the time you read this, a force of high-powered men will be in the field, covering every part of the United States, visiting every exhibitor with a list of independent productions that will in every way be of the highest quality and with a message of assurance to stand firm and invincible in their determination to keep the screen free and independent.

AND ONE MORE FACT—THE PROFITS DERIVED THROUGH THE COOPERATION OF THE INDEPENDENT PRODUCER DISTRIBUTOR AND EXCHANGEMAN WILL NOT BE USED TO ERECT OR BUY THEATRES IN DIRECT COMPETITION WITH THE EXHIBITOR.

Davis Distributing Offers Complete Program

By J. K. Adams

Vice-President Davis Distributing Division

"WHEN Mr. Davis and I decided to organize the Davis Distributing Division, we had very clear and well-defined views as to the fundamental essentials for the proper functioning of such a concern.

"In the past, the independent exchange has had to spend a lot of time buying its product from a number of different distributors. In this business, as well as in any other, time is money, and the head of each exchange is usually the one to do the buying, which, boiled down, means that the most important member of each exchange must spend valuable time in shopping for product. We therefore decided to secure enough productions of all types so that we could furnish any exchangeman with practically a whole program from super-features, down through the list to one-reel novelties.

"In addition to this point, the exchangeman has never before been able to line up his entire independent program far enough in advance to compete successfully with the big organizations which announce their program months before their pictures are ready.

"Another point in which the state right distributors have not been as foresighted as they might be is that when a production was sold to the exchangeman it was up to him to promote the picture in his territory to the best of his ability, without much help from the advertising department of the distributor.

J. Charles Davis, 2nd, Pres. Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

"We have therefore mapped out a very clear plan for co-operative advertising and exploitation with our exchangeman to as far as possible overcome this condition.

"It is our aim, if possible, to make connections with one live, progressive exchange in each territory, that is in a position to handle our entire line of product, and to co-operate with it to the fullest extent. We have thus far been successful in doing this in Greater New York territory with Kerman Films, Inc. In New England, we have closed with Henry G. Segal of 49 Church Street, Boston, than whom there is no more popular or better-liked exchangeman in the New England territory.

"Summing up the matter, we feel we are in a position to offer the real, live exchangeman a complete program selected with the utmost care with three points in view; namely, the best possible attractions obtainable at a price the exchange can afford to pay; productions every one of which we know and can guarantee will be delivered, and third and absolutely essential, attractions which will please theatre audiences from the point of entertainment value.

"Every production on our list of over one hundred, has been selected with these three points in view and we are satisfied to abide by the verdict of the exchange and the public as to the results of our judgment of exhibition values."

Goldburg Says Independents' Future Is Secure

INDEPENDENT productions will always command a forward position in the industry, because of the public demand for variety in its entertainment, Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent Pictures Corporations, declared in an interview given out prior to his departure for the coast, where he will supervise the production of the schedule which Independent will offer next year.

In his statement Mr. Goldburg said:

"To my mind, the demand on the part of the public for Independent made productions will a'ways at least maintain its present position. The answer is self-evident. There can never be a monopoly of brains or talent in motion picture productions and try as much as they may, a producer can never avoid his own hall mark or trade mark.

"The reason for this is that certain brains supervising or managing the productions from the time the continuity is written until the editing and titling, operate, and there are not enough divergent minds nor could there be attaching themselves to the individual organization.

"Therefore, there must be a variety of productions emanating from a variety of minds.

"The public demand variation. They don't want to see the same suit of clothes made from the same model too often.

"It is safe to say that public demand based merely on the psychology of the human mind, will always call for variation of motion picture product only as it emanates from varied institutions.

"Now, to take advantage of this psychological showmanship, as it were, is the duty of Independent producers and distributors as well as exhibitors, and that advantage may be enhanced by a proper form of propaganda to drive home to the public that in varied product there is variety and greater entertainment and the Independent producer is in a position to supply the demand.

"Too little stress or even thought has been given to the demands of the public as based upon well ordained principles of choice, of drama and the psychology of demand.

"No fear need be entertained that the public will not support Independent product. No fear need be apprehended that any one producer or combination of producers can so produce motion picture entertainment as to supply every want of moving picture patrons.

"It behooves the Independent producer to make the right kind of product; it behooves him to exercise thought, caution, foresight and forethought necessary in any business to turn out a product worthy of public exhibition, but we can rest content in the knowledge of the fact that the public will always patronize and even demand worth-while Independent and varied motion pictures."

Just prior to his departure Goldburg announced a new series of eight Big Timber stories starring Linghtnin', the dog. The titles of these productions are as follows: "Lightnin' Strikes," by Ralph Baum; "The Forrest King," by Selwyn; "His Master's Voice," by Adele Buffington; "Flaming Timber," by Adele Buffington; "The Danger Call," by Charles Pinkerton; "Pal O' the Redwood," by George Wise; "Silent Hero," by Edith and Thomas Long, and "Crimson Fangs," by George Hayward.

The Big Timber series together with the Bill Cody westerns and the Texas Ranger series, starring Bob Custer, will constitute the twenty-four feature releases produced by Independent. In addition there will be twenty-six single reel productions.

Territorial Deals Pending on New Terry Novelty

JOHN C. Terry, originator and producer of the "Nifty Ifty" cartoon novelties, is negotiating with several leading stage right exchanges regarding the territorial rights to the films which he recently brought out on the independent market.

Cartoonist Terry, whose screen work is well known through his association with International Newsreel, Pathe and other companies, has formed a company, known as John C. Terry, Inc., to handle the pictures.

This novelty reel, which is 450 feet in length and will be offered in a series under the brand name of "Famous Sayings in Modern Slang," has been presented at several theatres throughout the country in try-out performances.

Each reel is composed of a group of famous quotations and proverbs, each immediately followed by the slang interpretation giving the classic though in the "Americanisims" of the day. The reels have as concluding episodes a hand drawn cartoon illustrating a "why worry" sermon of the type so popular in newspaper comic cartoon strips.

In

"A MAN OF IRON"

AN ADAPTATION

By Lawrence Marsten

In "A Man of Iron" Lionel Barrymore has found one of the finest vehicles of his distinguished screen career.

In the stern, forbidding background of a great steel mill is laid the drama of the tremendous struggle of a strong man to conquer a weak woman.

It is a battle against great odds,—a battle, the winning of which solves a problem whose very presence is a menace to the age-old institution of marriage.

"A Man of Iron" is a production that is universal in its appeal.

I. M. P. P. D. A. Influence Grows Steadily

John Lowell, who was pro-tem president of the I. M. P. P. D. A. during the convention at Milwaukee.

THE impetus which the Independent Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association gained under the able direction of its leaders at the recent convention at Milwaukee, continues to carry this organization forward to a position of power and influence.

The direct reflection of the tonic effect which the growing strength of the I. M. P. P. D. A. is having upon the men who have joined its ranks is a greater confidence concerning the future, a sense of security that the way has been opened for them to develop according to their individual abilities, and as parts of a well organized body their companies will be unhampered by restrictions which formerly they were unable to combat and which impeded their natural growth as legitimate business enterprises.

The membership of the I. M. P. P. D. A. has grown steadily since the convention where the move to bring in state right exchanges was initiated and carried through. This move, perhaps, was the most important phase in the development of the organization. It has established a spirit of cooperation on a wider and more imposing scale among the independent factions of the industry.

Perhaps the greatest single accomplishment of the I. M. P. P. D. A. since it came into being some time ago was the support it was able to give to the movement to create a Bureau of Trade and Comerce in accordance with the plan of Sydney S. Cohen. For it is this latter organization which will bring into being the Play Date Bureau, and upon that the independent producers, distributors and exchange men are banking to get them the representation they have so long needed and so long lacked.

The membership of the I. M. P. P. D. A. up to the time of this week's meeting, at which the applications of many prospective members were to be acted upon includes the following:

Gotham's New Schedule Nears Completion

WITH the final camera work on "The Police Patrol" completed last Saturday, Sam Sax announces that one third of his season's schedule of twelve productions is now ready and the balance of the pictures well under way with final delivery for the entire dozen set for early Summer.

With the season's production schedule all cleaned up early before the Fall season starts ample time will be had to give each picture adequate exploitation and all delays of every nature will be avoided.

Already delivered and ready for release is the first of the list. This is a railroad thriller entitled "The Overland Limited" and has a climax depicting "The Overland Limited" running away with a maniac at the throttle. The cast of principals in this picture is headed by Alice Lake, Malcolm McGregor, Ethel Wales, Chas. "Buddy" Post and many others of equal fame. The story being by James J. Tynan, noted scenarist and author of "The Great Divide."

Second on the list and with the negative already cut and titled is the screen version of James Kyrle McCurdy's play "A Little Girl in a Big City." Gladys Walton, Niles Welch, Mary Thurman, Barney Sherry, Helen Shipman, Sally Crute and Coit Albertson have the leading roles in this drama of what becomes of young girls who are drawn to New York by the lure of a career. Burton King directed this picture and has included some unusual shots on real New York locations.

The second production delivered from the West Coast studios and scheduled as the third release is a drama featuring the famous canine star, "Thunder, The Marvel Dog" and entitled "His Master's Voice." In this production "Thunder" is said to achieve new honors and to display further proof of his remarkable intelligence. In the cast are noted, Marjorie Daw, George Hackathorne, and Mary Carr. The story is by Frank Foster Davis and the direction by Henry McCarty.

James Kirkwood is the star of the fourth Gotham Production and in "The Police Patrol" this popular stage and screen luminary is seen as a New York patrolman. The story is based on an actual incident in the life of a policeman and is from the play by A. Y. Pearson. Active cooperation of the New York Police Department was had for this picture and the result is absolute technical accuracy in every detail of police methods and procedure. Edna Murphy heads the supporting cast which includes, Edmund Breese, Bradley Barker, Monya Andree, Frankie Evans and Tammany Young. Burton King directed "The Police Patrol."

Scheduled to follow and now in course of production are: "The Shadow on the Wall" a strong mystery play from the book by J. Breckenridge Ellis; Thunder, the Marvel Dog in "The Sign of the Claw" a distinct novelty in dog stories by L. A. Young, "The Part Time Wife," a story of behind the scenes of a motion picture studio from the magazine story by Peggy Gaddis; "One of the Bravest," a fire department melodrama by Jas. J. Tynan; "Hearts and Spangles" by Norman Houston, a circus story; "Racing Blood" by Harry Chanlee and Wm. Laub and as the title indicates, a racing story; "The Forest of Destiny," a society drama by Edith Sessions Tupper and "The Speed Limit" a rip-roaring auto racing comedy drama by Henry McCarty.

Mr. Sax is also preparing for production a super screen version comedy of "McFadden's Row of Flats" to be produced in seven reels with a cast composed entirely of well known screen comedy players.

Chadwick Completes Four of Next Season's Films

WITH four of seventeen productions for next season's program completed, Chadwick Pictures Corporation is well ahead of schedule with its 1925-26 product. George Walsh has completed "American Pluck" and "Blue Blood," the first two of the six modern action romances that he will make for this company this year.

Larry Semon has completed "The Wizard of Oz," his first comedy special for Chadwick next season's program, and will start work shortly on a screen version of Franz Lehar's international musical comedy success, "The Count of Luxembourg." Arthur Gregor, one of the best known directors of Europe, will produce this latter picture.

Charles Ray, who will make four rural comedies for Chadwick this year, has recently completed "Some Pun'kins," the first of these. It is the intention of Chadwick Pictures Corporation to have these Ray pictures follow closely the trend of the rural comedies in which this star attained his greatest success. With this idea in view, it has been arranged for Jerome Storm, who has been responsible for most of Ray's past successes, to direct. Joseph De Grass, another of Ray's former associates, will supervise the productions.

I. E. Chadwick, Pres. Chadwick Pictures Corp.

Theda Bara has recently started production on "The Unchastened Woman," a film version of Louis K. Anspacher's great American drama, which won marked success a few years ago on the New York stage. James Young is directing with a cast of several prominent favorites, including Wyndham Standing, Eileen Percy, Dale Fuller, John Miljan, Mayme Kelso, Eric Mayne and Frederic Kovert.

Lionel Barrymore will continue with Chadwick for another year, making two special dramatic productions during that period. The first of these will be "The Bells," made famous the world over by Sir Henry Irving. The second Barrymore vehicle will be selected from a group of distinguished Broadway successes which are now under consideration. Both pictures will be made in the East.

Two special melodramatic productions are also included on the program. Both are based on well known plays that have been most successful on Broadway and have been big money makers with stock companies for years. The first of these, "Winning the Futurity," is, as its name implies, a race-track story that will lend itself particularly to the type of spectacular production that is planned for it. Another special is a railroad story, "The Transcontinental Limited," which is expected to be one of the outstanding productions of the last half of the Chadwick program.

Tiffany & Truart Ready for Biggest Year

By M. H. Hoffman
Vice-President, Tiffany Productions and Truart Film Corp.

THE forthcoming year looms up much brighter for the independent producer than ever before in the industry of motion pictures.

At the Milwaukee convention the Exhibitor body pledged itself to the maintenance of an open market and the independent producers and distributors pledged themselves to supply the kind of product that will compete with the best pictures.

The immediate effect of the determination to keep the market open was seen in the revival of competition for franchises. The independent producer realizing that he will have an open door for his meritorious product has prepared a schedule of pictures that will in every way compare with those of the larger distributing and producing organizations.

Under the Tiffany schedule we are offering to the exhibitor for 1925-1926 the Big Twelve productions based on the books and stories of famous authors

The schedule as announced for the Truart productions embraces the Blue Ribbon series, the Novelty series and the Cinemelodrama series.

The Blue Ribbon series of six productions, production of which are now under way, are "Marrying Money," "The Age of Indiscretion," "Dollar Down," "Where the Worst Begins," "The Hurricane" and "Salvage."

Lee-Bradford Offers "Passionate Adventure"

ARTHUR A. LEE, president of Lee-Bradford Corporation, is meeting the Exhibitors' offer of play dates by offering "The Passionate Adventure" to the Independents. The following cast is an indication of the bigness of this production: Alice Joyce, Marjorie Daw, Clive Brook, Victor McLaglen. It is directed by Graham Cutts, who is also the producer of "Woman to Woman," which will be remembered as an outstanding success. No exhibitor needs reminding that Mr. Graham Cutts possesses ability for producing pictures in which "popular" entertainment is the object aimed at and achieved. "The Passionate Adventure" is no exception to this rule. Dramatic, scenic and technical values have been blended together to make an absorbingly entertaining ensemble introduced by a title and a cast of players that are positive guarantees for big business.

The story is adapted from a particularly interesting and recently published novel by Frank Stayton based on the theme that there are two natures in every man—an objective nature which is normal and a subjective nature which is abnormal—and that human nature works in waves, action and reaction and that is how life functions.

"The Passionate Adventure" is a story dealing with a social problem of the day—the marriage from which the primary instincts of mating are excluded. In this story, it is a girl of the slums who, by her willingness to sacrifice herself, teaches a society wife the glory of giving. To develop this theme, the author instances the case of Adrian and Drusilla St. Clain, wealthy, immaculate in manners and dress, finished products of society, married, passionless, peaceful, childless, partners in a union of detached harmony subsequently disturbed by the War and the arousing of the elemental side of the man's nature. Inevitably another woman proves the determining influence.

In addition to "The Passionate Adventure" this concern will release eleven other features during 1925-26.

Of the other productions the titles of two have been announced and others are now being prepared. It is probable that the company will release certain foreign-made features, though announcement concerning these is being withheld pending the completion of the final plans.

Arthur Lee, Pres. Lee-Bradford.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

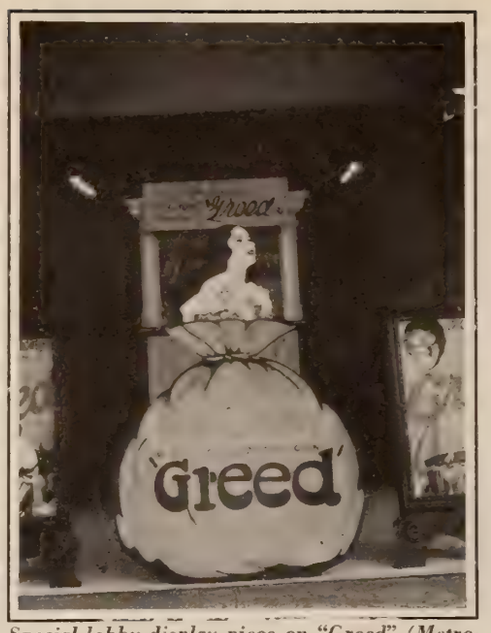
Pay Envelope Tie-up Given American, Evansville

Charles Glickauf, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, has completed a series of tie-ups with the leading factories of Evansville, Ind., whereby he is to supply them with pay envelopes on which are printed announcements, with cuts, of the picture playing at the American theatre. These envelopes are used to pay off the employees on Friday afternoons, two days before the picture announced on the envelope opens at the American.

The first picture so exploited is "Lady of the Night."

One thousand heralds were distributed and three slides and a trailer were also used. A vigorous newspaper campaign was resorted to and the town was lavishly posted. A number of window displays and a special lobby display also helped exploit the showing.

Radio Set on Truck Gives "Mad Whirl" Reviews



A large radio receiving set, rolling along the streets of St. Louis broadcasting newspaper reviews on "The Mad Whirl" was used to ballyhoo that picture when it played William Goldman's Kings and the Rivoli theatres.

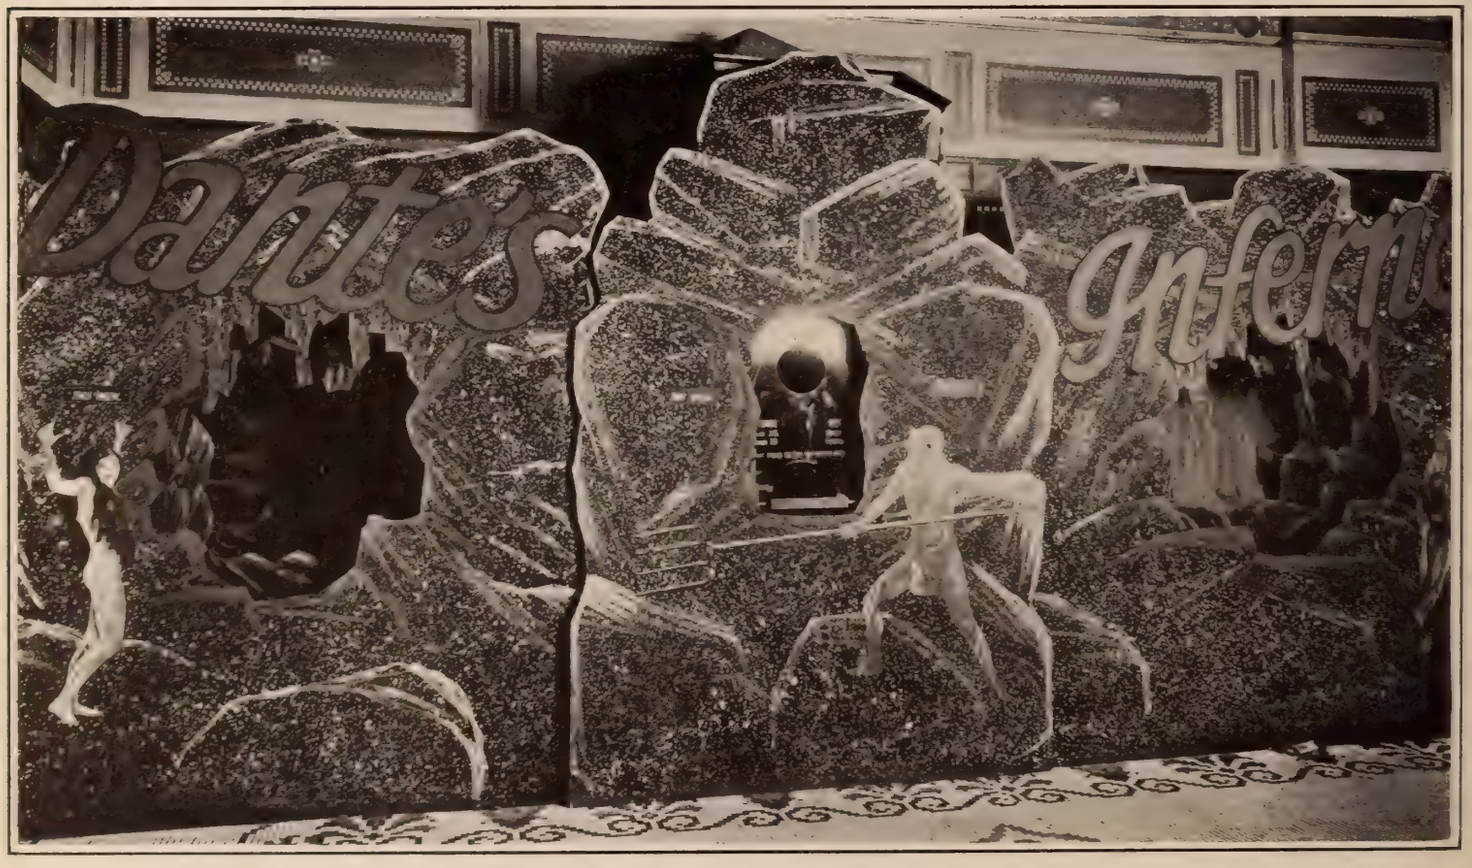
With Maurice Davis, St. Louis exploiteer for Universal, Al McGinness, Goldman's publicity man, tied up The St. Louis Star's broadcasting station WIL, to sponsor the stunt. Over a truck a simulation of a giant receiving set was built, with antennae strung on poles on top of truck.

The truck carried a sign "Station WIL— The St. Louis Star Broadcasting." In the truck, an announcer at a microphone would announce "This is Station WIL, the St. Louis Star, broadcasting from College Inn, Chicago. The Star presents Isham Jones' Orchestra playing 'All Alone'." Then a phonograph in the truck would do its stuff.

Between musical presentations, the announcer would proclaim: "This is Station WIL, The St. Louis Star, broadcasting. Reviewing 'The Mad Whirl,' now at the Kings and Rivoli, The Washington (D. C.) Post declared: 'Of all the pictures, etc.'"

When the truck wasn't rambling around, it would obtain a good parking space in the business district of St. Louis and there "tell the world." In addition to the truck, Goldman used throwaways, lobby-displays and newspaper advertising.

Special lobby display piece on "Greed" (Metro-Goldwyn at the Palace theatre, McAlester, Okla., of which Ralph Noble is manager.



Thorough Campaign Boosts "Great Circus Mystery"

Allen T. Simmons did not overlook many bets when "The Great Circus Mystery" started at his Dome theatre in Akron, Ohio. First he purchased 2000 heralds, and then he hired a man to distribute them dressed in a clown suit. The clown, who was out four days, carried a round piece of beaverboard resembling a circus hoop on which was painted "See me at the Dome in 'The Great Circus Mystery' Sun.—Mon."

One thousand tickets were printed with this copy, "See 'The Great Circus Mystery' at the Dome, Sun.—Mon. Take this ticket to the Dome box office and get absolutely free one Genuine South African Goober." When the tickets were turned in, the cashier gave the boys a large peanut in a sack.

His lobby was particularly effective. A nearby taxidermist loaned him some stuffed animals which were attached to the arch. From a 6-sheet, a cut-out of Bonomo pulling on a rope was made and placed on the right hand side. On the left was another cut-out of a circus wagon falling over a cliff. A large rope was stretched between the two making it appear that the Strong Man was actually holding the wagon from plunging over the precipice. Several animals cut from the "Hunting Wild Game" paper were mounted on mosquito netting and this swung on a frame at the top of the lobby.

Through a tie-up with the Main Cycle company, a window of animals and clowns was obtained with one clown, four feet high, carrying a hoop on which had been painted: "See me in 'The Great Circus Mystery' Dome Sun.-Mon." There were six stills in the window and a card reading: "Free tickets to see 'The Great Circus Mystery' to every boy purchasing one of the toys in this window."

Attractive shadow-boxes used by Manager W. T. Murray in the lobby of the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, during the recent engagement of "Dante's Inferno" (Fox). All the lobby lights were red, giving a startling effect.

Strong Circus Campaign on "Great Circus Mystery"

Coming upon the Bijou theatre, Trenton, N. J., unprepared on the day "The Great Circus Mystery" opened there, anyone would have thought that Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey had set up their tent at the Bijou's stand. R. H. Whitby, manager of the theatre and Russell Lamont, in charge of the Hildinger theatres to which group the house belongs, started out to make history and they succeeded.

From a local armory they borrowed large pieces of canvas with which to build their front. Then from a summer park which was not yet open, they secured hundreds of flags—representing all nations—and draped them on the side of the theatre and hung them along the "big top."

Both gentlemen being adept with the paint brush, they skillfully employed a dollar's worth of paint creating animal cages where empty 3- and 6-sheet stands had been before. They painted four cages, two of which were placed on either side of the tent entrance and two others on the theatre's outside wall. Cut-outs of roaring lions and pawing tigers mounted on beaverboard were put in these cages.

One hundred toy balloons were suspended from strings across the canopy, adding to the carnival effect.

On the day of the opening four youngsters of the neighborhood were drafted into service by Manager Whitby in return for a weekly pass to the Bijou. These boys were given clown costumes and had their faces painted in true circus fashion. They acted as ushers and at regular intervals, paraded the sidewalks in the neighborhood of the theatre carrying a banner for the picture. One of the boys pounded a big bass drum constantly in front of the theatre.

Tickets were sold from a regular circus, or side-show, ticket-box which had been made from old timber. The regulation coat of gold and blue paint gave the correct circusy effect. A rotund barker of genial spirits presided in the box.

The Regent theatre in Scranton, Pa., used this stagecoach to ballyhoo "The Deadwood Coach" (Fox) recently.

Milwaukee Well Covered in "Excuse Me" Campaign

Five window displays, a special lobby display, extra advertising space in the press and a trailor de luxe brought attention to the Alhambra theatre in Milwaukee recently when "Excuse Me" played there.

These tie-ups were achieved by Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, and were with the Smith Toggery Shop, the Hurley-Riley Toggery Shop, the Owl Drug Company and with two luggage shops. All of these tie-ups resulted in window displays featuring various articles with stills from the picture and appropriate announcements.

St. Paul Dealers Exploit "Excuse Me" Showing

Pictures of Conrad Nagel were exhibited in windows featuring Arrow collars and Stetson hats when "Excuse Me" played at the Tower theatre in St. Paul recently. Extra space was taken in all the papers, and, in addition, Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, made arrangements with the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad for the loan of a special miniature train which was shown in the window of the Cable Piano company. This train was exploited as the "Excuse Me" special.

A teaser campaign was carried on in the local press for ten days in advance of the opening, and twenty-five 24-sheets were posted. W. E. Mick, manager of the Tower theatre, collaborated actively with Abrams throughout the campaign, posting two thousand 1-sheets made up in four different ways. Two thousand tack cards were also printed and used to good effect. Special cut-outs decorated the lobby.

Resemblance Contest Given "Seven Chances" in L. A.

Widespread exploitation was recently achieved for the showing of "Seven Chances" at Loew's State theatre in Los Angeles by H. W. Lawrance, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, who effected a tie-up with the Puritas Water company. This organization placed large posters on the tail-boards of its fifty delivery trucks, which cover every part of Los Angeles and most of the outlying towns. These posters read "Buster Keaton is Taking 'Seven Chances' at Loew's State—Take No Chances—Use Puritas Water."

A resemblance contest was run in the Los Angeles Evening Express and this daily carried special stories and cuts for a week preceding the opening. A number of window displays were also secured.

Chinese effects predominated in the lobby built by John Fenny, manager of the Cozy theatre, Okmulgee, Okla., for "East of Suez" (Paramount). Fenny had several Chinese style easel backings built on which to display the three-sheets; framed in the box-office with red painted compo board, lettered in gold; and used a cut-out head of the star over the box-office window.

YOUR IDEA

IN THE MAIL

THE exploitation editor had a real thrill this week — and the event was of such a nature that it deserves to be perpetuated in type. An exploitation story came to light that admitted — yes, actually admitted — that the showing of the picture had not been a success, despite the brilliant campaign. It never happened before, and is most unlikely to happen again. And the story didn't come from an exhibitor, at that, but from the distributing company, which makes it little short of miraculous. The story opened as usual, described the various features of the campaign, and then came the dynamite—a paragraph which stated that despite this excellent showmanship, the picture failed to draw and the critics panned it and the engagement was a failure. What's this business coming to, anyway? The editor's blue pencil is worn thin from crossing out the line, "Business was materially increased during the engagement," or "Record receipts resulted from this campaign," or "Capacity business was recorded all week." We still think there was a joker in it somewhere, but the editor is now willing to subscribe to a belief in Santa Claus or the fairies. But it won't happen again!

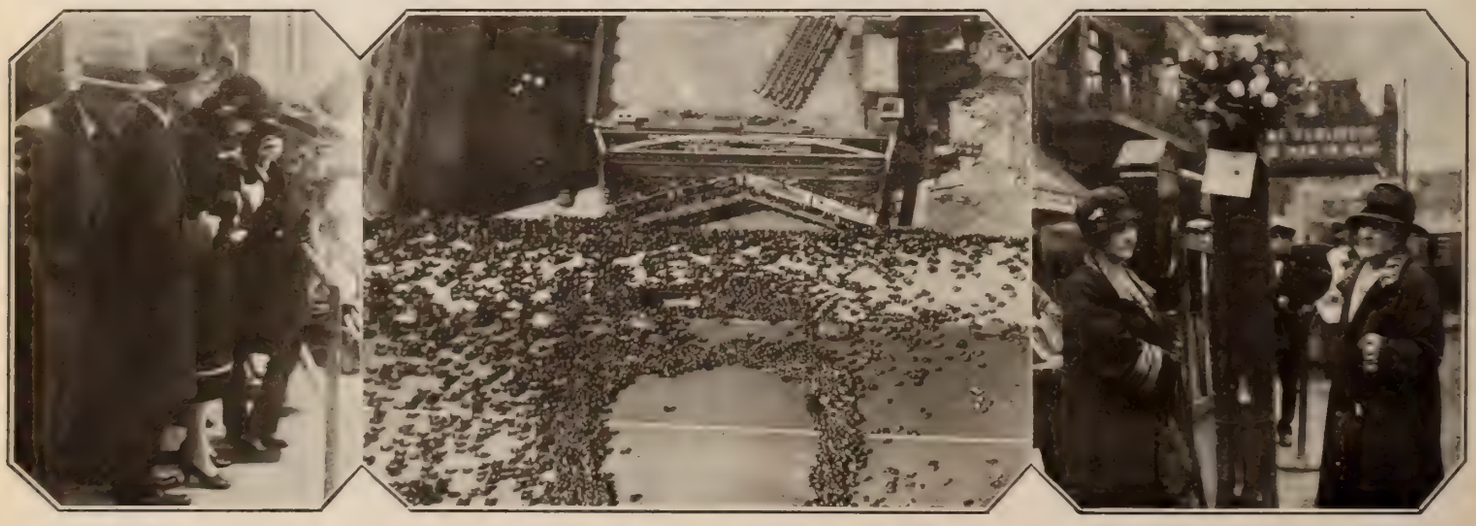
DON NICHOLS sends us in some more good stuff from the Paris theatre, Durham, N. C., where he is also resident manager of the Savoy and Orpheum. Nichols got behind "Charley's Aunt" in fine shape, and did everything from posting a 24-sheet upside down, never done before in Durham, to distributing nuts in little envelopes. Judging from the newspaper clippings, all Durham was talking about the picture, and Nichols didn't spend a fortune, either.

LOUIS C. SHIMON submits some constructive program copy used at the Milwaukee theatre, Milwaukee, which we will reproduce elsewhere. He also sends photos of some crackerjack posters done by SHIRBY YOUNGBECK in the art department.

SAMUEL FRIEDMAN, managing director of the Strand theatre at Scranton, Pa., which is under the direction of the Comerford Amusement company, speaks up as champion of the hand-drawn art ad, and submits several samples which back up his claim in good shape. Friedman uses the drawing over three columns on Sunday and reduces it to two columns for the daily papers. In this way, he says, he gets better value from the display than if he had used straight stock material. His drawings are made by JOE FADDEN, a young disabled "vet" from whom Friedman expects much—a belief well justified, judging from the samples. We shall look for more of them.

WILLIAM LA PORTES, managing director of the Main Line Amusement company, operating the beautiful Ardmore theatre at Ardmore, Pa., sends us a copy of the remarkable anniversary booklet gotten out on the recent third birthday of the house. Bearing on its cover a colored picture of the theatre, the booklet is unusually attractive throughout. There are photos of the various members of the house staff and of the stars appearing in photoplays at the Ardmore, together with copy well calculated to stir up community pride, appreciation and good will. A unique fact is the statement that in three years the personnel of the staff remains entirely unchanged.

S. A. GROSS, manager of Silliman's Downer theatre, Milwaukee, sends us the material on a first-class radio tie-up which he put across on "The Story Without a Name." The postal laws covering contests won't permit of our describing it in detail, though it was perfectly legitimate and legal from the theatre's angle. It was well executed and no doubt brought home the bacon.



From L. W. RICHMOND, manager of the Jefferson theatre, Springfield, Mass., comes a whale of an idea for co-operation with the local street car company, which will be described in detail elsewhere, as it deserves.

The latest issue of THE THEATRE NEWS is at hand. This organ, published in the interest of the Army theatres, is a great piece of work. If the cheery and stimulating contents don't stir up real activity among the Army theatre managers, then we don't know what would. The paper fairly radiates energy and enthusiasm. The cover is multigraphed attractively in two colors, with 18 pages of inside text, also multigraphed, bearing an editorial, news from the various branches, items on players and pictures, a projection department and the inevitable jokes.

N. C. RICE at the Opera House, Algona, Iowa, is making good use of the monthly calendar to advertise his programs, which is especially good where one and two-day runs are the rule. The calendar, a neat card about the size of a letterhead, is printed in two colors, red and blue, with the calendar in red and the attractions imprinted right over the figures, in blue.

An interesting little throwaway is at hand from the REGUN theatre, in New York City, used to exploit "Wings of Youth." The heading reads: Is your husband or lover faithful? This innocent piece of specially treated paper will tell you. Directions then follow. "Paste this paper securely on your mirror in room with temperature 68 degrees. After five days if the paper curls your husband or lover is unfaithful. If it remains flat you have only to worry about getting a seat in the Regun theatre, 116th street at Lenox avenue to see "Wings of Youth." This is printed on special check paper, to make it appear more unusual. Since no one is likely to take its magic properties too seriously, to the detriment of their domestic tranquillity, the throwaway no doubt caused a lot of talk in the vicinity of the Regun.

From the Alamo Amusement company, San Antonio, operating the Palace and Rialto, JACK JACKSON, publicity director, sends photos and clippings covering an excellent—and inexpensive—prologue stunt on "My Son," in the form of a juvenile playlet by 21 youngsters recruited from a local kindergarten. The performers in "Cinderella" were elaborately costumed by their fond parents, the local interest aroused being tremendous. Here's an idea worth thinking over, if you have even the semblance of a stage.

"MANICURE?"

OF unusual comprehensiveness and practical value, a splendid national tie-up has been arranged by Leon J. Bamberger, with the assistance of Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiteer, on "The Manicure Girl." He has made his hook-up with the Glazo company of Cincinnati, manufacturers and national distributors of Glazo Liquid Nail Polish, and Glazo Cuticle Massage. Samples of their product have been sent to each of Paramount's twenty nine exploiteers. The program arranged between Bamberger, and F. L. Allen, general manager of the manufacturing company, calls for a Glazo ad in the Motion Picture News, adjoining the Paramount advertisement for the picture; this idea was used originally for "Peter Pan;" appropriate window cards made-up by the manufacturer for display in the windows of all its dealers; a one column newspaper advertisement mat for the use of the Glazo dealers; letter and herald suggesting tie-up copy going to every dealer as bookings are received, also a list of exploitation suggestions; letters and samples to 4500 exhibitors from the Glazo company; announcement of the contest and full particulars to be published in the press-sheet.

Window card in four colors which the Glazo company will send to 30,000 dealers as notices of booking are received on "The Manicure Girl" (Paramount).

Glazo company has 30,000 dealers all over the United States and each will be asked to display a small slogan banner in the window, "There's a Manicure Girl in every home where there's Glazo."

Bamberger feels that there are innumerable opportunities for exploitation along the lines of free manicures in the lobbies of theatres, or in department stores with the theatres co-operating in the exploitation of the stunt.

KEEP THEM INTERESTED

ANY device or stunt which will make your patrons feel that they have an interest in the running of the house, and that it is maintained for their benefit, is bound to benefit. A stunt of this sort, well worth a try, is being used by the Grand theatre, Lincoln, Ill. So far, we haven't heard how it has worked out, but the idea is interesting. Here it is, as presented in the theatre's house organ, issued by George W. Patterson. The cost is nothing but a few passes. The plan reads:

"The management of the Grand wishes it known that they intend to show only the pictures of the type that please their patrons and in order to know just what type of pictures are best liked they will give until further notice a free ticket to every person that mails in their opinion of the picture they see at the Grand. The opinions must not be more than fifty words in length and must be mailed to the Grand, an opinion of three pictures at a time.

"We know every one will not like every picture that we play and we therefore ask that you please tell just what you think of the pictures whether it be good or otherwise. We want to play only pictures that our patrons like and we cannot do so unless we know what they like.

"There are no strings on this offer. Just tell us what you think of our pictures and we will send you a ticket for each three pictures you report on. Your name and address must be in each report so we will know where to mail the ticket."

NOW BOOST YOUR MUSIC!

NOW that Music Week has come and gone, don't stop reminding your patrons of your music, if you make any special effort along musical lines. It doesn't hurt to remind them now and then that part of their enjoyment of your programs comes from the musical accompaniment and special features. One way of doing this is through your house program, as shown by a recent issue of the Fayette County Movie Fan, published at Uniontown, Pa. In its editorial column this paper says, under the heading "State Orchestra Winning Praise:"

Every once in a while we cannot help drifting back to the subject of music at the State theatre. Somehow or other, it is a strange delight to us to watch the ease and at the same time force with which Ernest Fiorito conducts the band through its staffs and chords to the accompaniment of some screen scene. We have even found ourselves forgetting the picture as we became wrapped around the score being played. Certain it is, Mr. Fiorito is accomplishing wonders with the orchestra. He has raised Fayette County's foremost musical organization to a plane even higher than it previously held and has caused it to be the subject of favorable comment by numerous theatre-men and film manufacturing representatives who happen to visit the city.

A word too, should be said of the musicianship displayed in the screen scorings used by organist H. V. Gerwig. In one outstanding way an organist has even a better opportunity to better "cue" a picture than an orchestra. If he be talented and happens to possess a wealth of tunes stored in his memory he can immediately go into any number he may think of that would be suitable for the screen without taking the time and trouble of hunting out the music. In an orchestra, however, it is usually necessary to have music for each member. Imagine the searching director Frank Bower must do when some one comes along with a picture requiring "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet," "He'd Have to Get Under," or some other tune of long ago. But director Bower has every number for the past fifteen or twenty years; he is usually able to dig up nearly any number required. By the way, Mr. Bower also arranges all musical scores used at the Strand, the new Penn-State theatre in Morgantown.

Scene from the children's playlet, "Cinderella," presented by the Alamo Amusement company in San Antonio in Connection with "My Son" (First National).

PERSONALITIES

IF the managing editor of your local paper, or one of them, is a live wire on the lookout for interesting features, you may be able to sell him the idea which Walter Finney, manager of Pantages theatre, Kansas City, put over with the Journal-Post for a three-column spread.

Finney sold the editor the idea that a character sketch, showing all the duties of the various employes of the theatre, a first run and vaudeville house, along with a feature story, would make a good Sunday "splash." It did.

Fox Announces Short Subjects

Program of 174 Pictures is Arranged for Release During 1925-26 Season

A PROGRAM of 174 short subjects has been provided for in the Fox program for the 1925-26 season. These are divided into six groups, the Van Bibber comedies, the O. Henry series, the Married Life of Helen and Warren series, Fox Varieties, Imperial Comedies and Fox News.

The Van Bibber series are comedies from the stories by Richard Harding Davis and are already established in their field. There will be eight of these two reelers released during the coming season, beginning August 9th and continuing every sixth Sunday thereafter, September 20th, November 1st, December 13th, January 24th, March 7th, April 18th and May 20th.

Robert Kerr will direct the new Van Bibber series, two of which have already been completed. They are titled "The Apache" and "The Ski Jumper." The third, "The Big Game Hunter," is now under way.

The first of the O. Henry series, directed by George Marshall, will be released August 16th, with the others each sixth Sunday thereafter, September 27th, November 8th, December 27th, January 31st, March 14th, April 25th and June 6th.

"The Married Life of Helen and Warren" series are from Mable Herbert Urner's short tales of domestic life running in a large number of newspapers. J. G. Blystone will direct this series which will also be released every sixth Sunday starting August 23rd and continuing October 4th, November 15th, December 27th, February 7th, March 21st, May 2nd and June 13th.

August 23 is the date set for the release of the first Fox Varieties, with the others to follow on every second Sunday thereafter. These one-reelers will reflect "The world we live in" on the screen. Ray L. Hall, pioneer in the short subject field, has been secured as the directing head of this unit of Fox production.

The Fox Imperial Comedies will be released starting August 20. An Imperial will be released every other Sunday after the date set for the first.

Fox News, is making every preparation to surpass its own great record during the coming season. In line with this policy, Truman Talley, director-in-chief of the reel, is strengthening both his editorial and camera staffs. As in the past Fox News will be released every Wednesday and Saturday, with special editions on all important events.

Mack Sennett Beauties Are Keeping Busy

Mack Sennett's super-six beauties are working side by side at the studio this week. Alice Day is being featured in a pastry shop story being directed by Art Rosson. Ruth Taylor is playing a flapper in the same picture.

Madeline Hurlock on the next set is a mannequin in a fashion show burlesque being directed by Del Lord. Natalie Kingston not far away is playing a Spanish amazon opposite Harry Langdon.

On another set Thelma Parr is playing with Raymond McKee under the direction of Eddie Cline, and Eugenia Gilbert is vamping her way through the same picture.

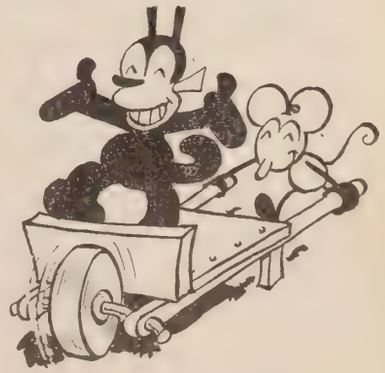
Del Lord Back at Studio Following Illness

Del Lord is not only back at the Mack Sennett studios following his recent illness but he has made up for lost time by completing the comedy on which he was working, and also started another one for Pathe release.

In the comedy just completed Billy Bevan, Madeline Hurlock, Andy Clyde, Sunshine Hart and Kewpie Morgan play the principal roles with the bathing girls appearing as manequins.

Jefferson Moffitt, for the past year a member of the Sennett scenario staff, has been assigned to the Del Lord unit as gag man and assistant to the director.

Last of "Pacemakers" in Production



The twelfth and final episode of F. B. O.'s "The Pacemakers" is being completed under the direction of Wesley Ruggles from the story by H. C. Witwer. Following this picture George O'Hara and Alberta Vaughn, who are co-starred, will get a short respite before starting a new series of Witwer stories within the next two weeks.

The coming Witwer series will be followed by a series from the pen of Sam Hellman. Continuities are being prepared on the former and casting will commence in the immediate future.

Complete Cast for New "Van Bibber" Comedy

The cast which will be seen in support of Earle Foxe in "The Wrestler," his newest "Van Bibber" comedy to go into production at the Fox studios in Los Angeles, has been completed with the selection of Lionel Braham for the role of the Russian wrestler.

New Pathe Serial to Be Released July 19th

Pathe has announced that the new serial "Play Ball," produced from a story by John J. McGraw, with Allene Ray as the star, will be released July 19th. The story was adapted by Frank Leon Smith and Spencer Bennet directed the production.

Walter Miller, who distinguished himself as leading man with Allene Ray in "Sunken Silver," is also associated with the star in "Play Ball." Other popular players in the cast are Harry Semels, who was in "Into the Net"; J. Barney Sherry, veteran character actor; Wally Oetel, comedian, and Mary Milnor.

A trio of scenes from "Super Hooper-Dyne-Lizzies," Pathe's two-reel Mack Sennett comedy featuring an all star cast.

Educational Comedy Units Complete Work

The Hamilton, Mermaid, Juvenile and Cameo comedy units producing for Educational have completed their production activities for the 1924-25 program.

Mermaid Comedies has completed a series of eighteen, with such stars as Lige Conley, Lee Moran, Ned Sparks and Eddie Nelson. The last of these comedies will be released during July and the early part of August.

Lloyd Hamilton still has one comedy to be released, "Waiting." The Juvenile series was completed with the release of "Baby Blues," with Mickey Bennett in the leading role. Cameo Comedies still have about six single-reel subjects still to be released to complete the present series of twenty-four.

"Count of Luxembourg" is Next for Semon

Larry Semon will start work shortly for Chadwick Pictures Corporation in "The Count of Luxembourg," the well-known musical comedy by Franz Lehar recently purchased by this company.

I. E. Chadwick, president of the company bearing his name, Semon and Director Arthur Gregory are now selecting the cast for the picture, which will probably go into poduction within the next two weeks in Los Angeles. Semon's last picture for Chadwick was "The Wizard of Oz."

Hoerl to Write First of Gerson Series

B. Berger, general manager of Gerson Pictures Corporation, has engaged Arthur Hoerl to write the first of a series of six melodramas to be produced by Gerson for release through Rayart. The story is titled "The Pride of the Force" and will deal with the activities of the Metropolitan police.

Hoerl's latest work for the screen was the adaptation of the John Galsworthy novel, "The White Monkey," starring Barbara La Marr.

Principal Studios is Named Educational

Educational Studios is the new name for the Principal Pictures Corporation studios recently acquired by the units producing Mermaid, Hamilton, Cameo and Juvenile comedies for distribution through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

An outlay of $100,000 is contemplated for improvements at the studio. These will include new stages, wardrobe and dressing rooms, projection and cutting rooms, blacksmith and carpenter shops.

"Fighting Fate" Third for Billy Sullivan

Rayart Pictures Corporation has decided upon "Fighting Fate" as the title for the third of the Billy Sullivan starring series to be released in the Fall. The first two of the series are titled, "The Fear Fighter" and "The Goat Getter."

"The Royal Four-Flush" is the title of the latest "Spat Family" comedy produced for Pathe by Hal Roach.

"Horace Greely, Jr.," is the title of Harry Langdon's latest comedy on the Pathe program. The scenes above are taken from the film, which was produced by Principal Pictures Corporation.

Pathe Program for June 14th

Hal Roach and Mack Sennett Comedies Provide Two Reel Features for Week

HAL ROACH and Mack Sennett comedies provide the two-reel features of the Pathe program of releases for the week of June 14th. These, with the "Sportlight," showing Gilda Gray, Jack Dempsey and other stars of stage and screen, and the usual other short subjects make a diversified list of pictures.

The Mack Sennett two-reeler is titled "Super-Hooper-Dyne Lizzies." It was directed by Del Lord from a story by Jefferson Moffitt and Frank Copra, and has in the leading roles Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Lillian Knight and J. J. Richardson.

"The Royal Four-Flush" is the Roach contribution, with the "Spat Family,"

The sixth chapter of "Sunken Silver," the current Pathe serial, is titled "In Double Peril."

"Twinkle-Twinkle," the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" release, shows how the stars of the stage and screen keep physically fit for their own strenuous roles.

Pathe Review No. 24 brings the noted Albertina Rasch dancers to the screen in a series of scenes of fancy footwork. The Pathecolor section shows "The City of Legends"—the old fortress town of Fourgeres, France; while "The Secrets of Nature" series brings "Beaks and Bills," an interesting collection of pelicans, flamingoes and cormorants.

"The End of the World" arrives in the latest Paul Terry creation of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. Other releases on the June 14th program distributed by Pathe are "Topics of the Day" No. 24, and Pathe News Nos. 50 and 51 with the last-minute views of world happenings.

Educational Chiefs to Meet

Exchange Managers and Executives Will Convene in New York Next Week

THE Fourth annual National convention of exchange managers and executives of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., will be held this year in New York on June 10, 11 and 12, at the Pennsylvania Hotel, where the entire body of visiting managers and salesmen will be quartered.

The 1925 convention comes at the termination of the most successful year in the entire history of the Educational as a national organization and comes as a reward to the managers for the wonderful showing made by each of them during the past twelve months.

Up to this year the convention has been confined to exchange managers and executives but this year the three salesmen who have made the best showing during the past year will be guests of the home office during the three days of the meeting. The three salesmen who were adjudgd the best are Jack Nelson of the Los Angeles, Cal., office, E. R. Skirboll of the Cleveland exchange and Sol Title of the New York City office.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Quicker 'n Lightnin'

(Weiss Bros.-Artclass—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE first of the Buffalo Bill, Jr., series for 1925, shapes up as an average western which exploits one of the oldest plots in existence. Insofar as the idea is concerned it goes back to nickelodion days—what with the kidnaping of the heroine by a bad Indian—a half-breed, and her ultimate rescue by the cowpuncher. But there the comparison ends. The action is shot with enough incident—if not very much suspense—to keep the interest alert, and the backgrounds—truly something new in exteriors—are not only picturesque, but they also suggest a very fine atmosphere.

The plot is extremely simple, there being no involved situations in it. The hero rides into the scene and pays a call on his sweetheart, the daughter of a wealthy ranchman. When he is struck unconscious the villain kidnaps the girl. What follows shows the hero coming out of his coma and starting in pursuit—accompanied by his pal and the girl's father. To make the plot plausible it is planted that the half-breed had once saved the father's life. So to remind him of his indebtedness he demands the girl's hand in marriage. When it is refused the villain kidnaps her.

The succeeding action presents some first rate horsemanship by Buffalo Bill, Jr., also some acrobatic agility in escaping from the villain's gang. They had carried the white people to their cliff dwellings and the construction of these "apartments" calls for some agile footwork by the hero in jumping from one roof to another. There aren't many thrills. In fact the only one which registers as real, features the hero sliding down a cable and timing the moment when the bad man is approaching on horseback. He knocks him off the horse and captures him. With the villain out of the way he rescues the girl from being burned alive as a sacrifice to the sun god.

It is all very obvious, but since no pretentions are made here, it should satisfy audiences in the average houses—those catering to westerns.

THEME. Western melodrama revolving around half-breed Indian who, in having saved the life of a white man is determined to marry the latter's daughter. She is kidnapped, but is eventually rescued by her cowboy lover.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The horsemanship of Buffalo Bill, Jr. The exteriors showing the cliff dwellings of the Indians. The rescue of the heroine. The manner in which hero outwits the Indians.

DIRECTION. Averages up as satisfactory for this type of story. Is typical plot but has injected plenty of action into it. Stages it against some picturesque backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. This title affords plenty of teaser possibilities. Also play up the star if he is popular in your community. Bill it as a western that carries a punch. Play up the exteriors.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw in average houses. Good for houses catering to westerns.

SUMMARY. While there is nothing new served up here, it provides a satisfactory hour for those who like the average westerns. The patrons must not expect too much. It affords plenty of horsemanship, gun-play, etc. The exteriors are really different.

THE CAST

Quicker 'N Lightnin'"	Buffalo Bill, Jr.
John Harlow	B. F. Blinn
Helen Harlow, his daughter	Dorothy Dorr
Al McNutt, Bill's man Friday	Harry Todd
Mowii, Chief of the Renegades	J. Gordon Russell
The Squaw, Mowii's mother	Raye Hampton
Morella, an Indian girl	Lucille Young
Truxillo, Morello's lover	Charles Roberts
The Law	Gus Anderson

By Reginald C. Barker. Directed by Richard Thorpe.

SYNOPSIS. Cowpuncher in visiting home of sweetheart is attacked by half-breed Indian who kidnaps the girl when the youth becomes unconscions. When the latter recovers he starts in pursuit. But he and the girl's father are captured by the half-breed's gang. He makes his escape and effects the rescue of the girl.

The Desert Flower

(First National—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANOTHER occasion has been made to take advantage of satire and humor in coloring an ordinary story—one which has been used repeatedly as the theme of western melodramas. Had this picture been treated according to the stage version it would have followed the same old rut. In that case we would have had an ordinary villain never giving up until he is frustrated in the last scene, while the heroine would have wept copious tears throughout instead of finding time to smile. Again the dance-hall episode would have registered as motheaten stuff. The director and adaptor, however, have hurdled the barriers of convention and obviousness in shaping it to release humor. Thus they have saved it. Colleen Moore in the title role attends to the rest.

In place of high-pressure western melodrama we have a frolicsome adventure in the fields of comedy. Oh, yes it has its serious moments—when the girl with brimming eyes accuses her beloved of being a coward. She would make him over into a man.

It's a slight little piece and there are moments when it tends to crackle and display its frailness. But the director skates over the thin places and patches it up with some smart hokum. The dance-hall habitues don't use trigger-fingers, but listen to the radio—and they sing "Rockabye Baby" in helping the heroine—the runaway daughter of a brutal step-father who had confined her in a box-car—put the baby to sleep. Of such stuff is this picture made—and it looms up as a delightful departure from the regulation story.

It might be called a sort of satire on the mining camp yarn. While there is nothing new in its general outline it does succeed in getting away from the orthodox incident. There is a cinderella flavor about it that helps materially in giving it tone and quality. There is hokum—plenty of it—but not the usual kind which is thrust at you with a sort of command—"Take that and like it."

THEME. Romantic melodrama of girl brought up in desert who makes over young ne'er-do-well into a youth of courage and backbone.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The comedy flourishes—the old-time plot never being taken seriously. The dance-hall scenes. The moment when girl and youth try to defend each other in the revolver episode. The first rate hokum. The humorous sketching of title role by Colleen.

DIRECTION. Refuses to follow the old track and give us another timeworn melodrama of the open spaces. Satirizes the dance-hall and a half-dozen other favorite devices.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a departure for Colleen Moore, though she has opportunity to put over some more comedy. Might emphasize that it is a western "different" from the usual type.

DRAWING POWER. Should please patrons in all types of houses. The comedy and breezy hokum should keep them in good humor.

SUMMARY. Had this been treated according to the stage version it would have been just another western. Instead those in charge have satirized some of the old familiar tricks. It is a hokum picture, but it is interesting.

THE CAST

Margaret (Maggie) Fortune	Colleen Moore
Randolph (Rance) Conway	Lloyd Hughes
Mrs. McQuade	Kate Price
Jose Lee	Gene Corrado
Dizzy	Fred Warren
Mike Dyer	Frank Brownlee
Inga Hulverson	Isabelle Keith
Flozella	Anna May Walthal
Jack Royal	William Norton Bailey
Mr. McQuade	Monte Collins
Fay (Bebe) Knight	Edna Gregory

From stage play by Don Mullally. Scenario by June Mathis. Directed by Irving Cummings.

SYNOPSIS. Girl brought up in box-car by brutal step-father, leaves him to make her way as dance-hall girl in mining town. She has won love of young wastrel and almost despairs of making him over into a man. But she goads him into winning back his self-respect—and love conquers all.

Tearin' Loose

(Weiss Bros.-4900 Feet)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

DEEP, drab melodrama is served in healthy portions and not unappetizing ones in this Artclass picture which stars Wally Wales in the first of a series for this company. Wales is a good type for a Western, and an athletic one. In fact, he appears to go out of his way at times to display his athletic prowess. Otherwise the picture is thoroughly logical in plot and situations. In fact, the story is well above the average for features of this type. It is told smoothly, the climaxes are well worked up and are not of the impossible order which characterizes most of these pictures.

There are any number of hair raising situations. From start to finish there is an abundance of action in every reel and it is of the kind that should arouse an audience to a high pitch because the situations are all very possible.

This Wally Wales is a left-handed battler and not too clever with his dukes. As a matter of fact, fist-fighting is the worst thing he does, but he must have a punch because he is compelled during the action to mix it frequently with the villain and the story ends with Wally in triumph.

The hero has an intensely exciting battle with the villain on the brink of a great chasm. He doesn't exactly win, but his athletic prowess again saves him. Hurled over the cliff he saves himself by grabbing a tree stump, and the villain, entangled in a rope to which both are attached, goes hurtling to the bottom.

Charles Whitaker has the role of Matt Harris, the villain, and he plays it to perfection. He is not of the leering, sneering type, but rather hard-hearted and crafty. His is a performance not often seen in a Western.

Jean Arthur plays the somewhat difficult role of Sally Harris, sister of the villain who is made to suffer by his misdeeds, but at the same time is the heroine of the story. She plays the role in a capable manner, which only accentuates the good work of Whitaker. All in all it is a very well acted picture and one that should appeal to the lover of the Western drama.

THEME. Western melodrama in which the villain impersonates the hero and gains the confidence of the wealthy uncle, thereby threatening to gain possession of the valuable cattle ranch. He forces his sister to be his accomplice, but his plans are thwarted with the later arrival of the hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fierce fight on the cliff between the hero and villain. The burning of the cabin in which the wealthy ranch owner is threatened with death. The athletic stunts of Wales. The clever and wild riding of the different members of the cast.

DIRECTION. Richard Thorpe did a splendid piece of work. The story is smooth running, the climaxes nicely worked up, the action is almost continuous and the characters play their roles in a most realistic manner.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The best bet in the exploitation of the picture is the large number of hazardous stunts. The numerous battles between hero and villain, the fight at the brink of the chasm, and the fight in the burning cabin.

DRAWING POWER. This should be a safe bet for the average house and a knockout where the audience is particularly partial to Westerns.

SUMMARY. An entertaining and well acted picture with thrills aplenty, a capable story and a cast that does its work exceptionally well.

THE CAST

Wally Blake	Wally Wales
Sally Harris	Jean Arthur
Matt Harris, Sally's brother	Chas. Whitaker
Dad Burns, the uncle	H. Alfred Hewston
Stubb Green, a cowboy romeo	Harry Belmour
Nora, the cook	Polly Van
The Philosopher	Bill Ryno
Jim, a tramp	Vester Pegg
The Law	Frank Ellis

By Sergey Sergeyeff, directed by Richard Thorpe, scenario by Frank L. Inghram, presented by Lester F. Scott, Jr.

SYNOPSIS. Dad Burns, successful ranchman, growing old, sends for his nephew to take over the management of the ranch. Wally Blake, broke, is jained on the way and his place is taken by Matt Harris, who induces his sister to accompany him. His plans in the end are thwarted with the arrival of Wally, who comes into rightful possession of the management of the ranch and wins the love of the girl.

The Little French Girl

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANNE DOUGLAS SEDGWICK'S best seller in being transferred to the silversheet does not retain the charm and the sly humor of the book. This is not strange inasmuch as it is a story that does not lend itself well to adaptation. However, it is a faithful transcription since the author's ideas and all the detail are in place. Where it falters is in the vague characterization. Mrs. Sedgewick's novel carries its appeal in the contrast of the French and English natures.

But it is an interesting production just the same. There are some potent scenes and the director has created his atmosphere in perfect taste. Moreover he skates over censorable ground with neatness and despatch. He could very easily slip in his failure to point it with sufficient contrasts. The picture does follow the story in all its essential details—there being painstaking accuracy in building us its plot.

The director has treated it in a sympathetic manner and readers of the book need not feel disappointed over it except in the failure of the sponsors to capture its elusive charm—and the failure of Mary Brian to carry out the requirements of the role. She is not the capricious, wistful little personality of the printed page. She does well enough, but the character is something more than a sweet, pleasant little girl. In the picture the figure of her mother is quite as important—and Alice Joyce plays the role with good understanding—and considerable poise.

The story revolves around the girl being shunted off to England in order that her mother may carry on her romantic indulgences without the daughter losing her respect for her. Here is where the contrasts should have figured strongly. Instead we see a group of haughty English people refusing to entertain the child of such a mother. So the girl goes back to France—and the English youth, becoming tolerant, follows her and takes her in his arms. Neil Hamilton is good as this youth.

THEME. Romantic drama of French girl who finds it difficult to evade the indiscretions of her mother. In the end an English admirer condones the mother's sins and takes the girl in his arms.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine settings. The scene when English fiancee takes the veil. The moment when English lover dies in the trenches. Scene when French girl defends her mother's honor. The acting by Alice Joyce and Neil Hamilton.

DIRECTION. Is first rate with romantic sequences and in the scene of the armistice, but story is involved and action doesn't clear it up very well. Doesn't get best results from cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You have the novel—one of the best sellers of the day. Tie up with book-dealers. Play up cast and use catch lines such as "Should a daughter suffer for the indiscretions of her mother?"

DRAWING POWER. For better class houses. Readers of novel will want to see picture. Good exploitation should draw patrons.

SUMMARY. Carrying involved romantic relationships makes this picture rather indefinite of plot. It never suggests the pathos and humor which such plot and characterization indicate. And it isn't acted with much emotional fervor. It is a satisfactory picture finely mounted.

THE CAST

Madame Vervier	Alice Joyce
Alix Vervier	Mary Brian
Giles Bradley	Neil Hamilton
Toppie Westmacott	Esther Ralston

By Anne Douglas Sedgwick. Scenario by John Russell. Directed by Herbert Brenon.

SYNOPSIS. Tells of a young French girl whose mother was guilty of romantic indiscretions. Is taken to England by brother of youth who neglected his sweetheart in worshipping the girl's mother. But she encounters prejudices and returns to France. The brother realizes his intolerance and squares himself by asking her to marry him. The girl finds happiness.

Any Woman

(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

AN original by Arthur Somers Roche serves as Henry King's latest production. While it offers nothing out of the ordinary in plot and characters it does seem as if the director could have brought out more entertainment values. It may be that he has produced so many spectacular films of late that it has become a task to put over one so simple and unpretentious. He has made it just moderately amusing when he could have spiced it with real inventive humor. In other words he has apparently been guided toward making it unduly natural—with the result that it is slow and often dull.

The characters move about in languorous manner even when a moving situation confronts them, while the plot unwinds in a painfully laborious style. Such a simple little story certainly needed speed to cover up its thin outline. But the brakes are used throughout. There are several occasions when the scenes bid for generous laughs, but Mr. King has not brought them out with the proper emphasis. It isn't until the finish that it quickens up its action—and then the end comes too abruptly.

The plot tells of the pitfalls awaiting a modern young woman if she doesn't mind her step in following a business career. She has come from aristocratic circles but through her father's financial troubles she is compelled to go to work. So in taking employment in a brokerage office a net of scandal is woven around her because of the attention paid her by one of the married brokers. The situation is never developed. It is an exceedingly mild little affair which is finally adjusted when her fiance forgets his peevishness.

To get down to the few highlights. There is an interesting frolic when the guests of a house-party indulge in a race—using scooters, old-fashioned bicycles, old-fashioned autos and modern flivvers—and what not. But more could have been made in a comedy way from the episode. There are too many close-ups and not enough long shots here to show the runaway flivver, coasting down the hill. The players walk through their scenes and lack animation. It is as if they appreciated the low pace of the action. The subtitles, however, are well written. "Any Woman" is just fair entertainment, which could have been real enjoyable had it been speeded up and more comedy injected into it.

THEME. Romantic drama revolving around pitfalls encountered by aristocratic girl compelled to go to work. She becomes involved in a near-scandal, but extricates herself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The sincere acting by James Neill and Lawson Butt. The race between the guests of the house-party. The moment when leading characters are propelled into the ocean. The subtitles.

DIRECTION. Takes too much time in building his scenes—so much so—that action is retarded. Strives too hard for natural effects. Characterization well drawn.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title lends itself well to a teaser campaign—which can be tied up with any store dealing in feminine apparel, cosmetics, etc. Also play up Henry King, who directed "The White Sister," "Romola."

DRAWING POWER. Should interest feminine patrons. Suitable for better class houses catering to high class clientele. Director and star should draw.

SUMMARY. This is just fair entertainment. It could have been a great deal better had it been produced with more comedy. There is a comedy flavor about the main situations, but the humor is never well emphasized.

THE CAST

Ellen Linden	Alice Terry
Tom Galloway	Ernest Gillen
Mrs. Rand	Margarita Fischer
James Rand	Lawson Butt
Mrs. Galloway	Aggie Herring
William Linden	James Neil
Mrs. Phillips	De Sacia Mooers
Egbert Phillips	Henry Kolker
Alice Cartwright	Thelma Morgan
Robert Cartwright	George Periolat
Agnes Young	Lucille Hutton
Jones	Arthur Hoyt

By Arthur Somers Roche. Scenario by Jules Furthman and Beatrice Van. Directed by Henry King.

SYNOPSIS. Society girl is forced to go to work when her father loses his money. Gets employment in broker's office and her beauty makes him responsive, though he is married. The youth who loves her is unaware that she is trying to aid him launch a new soft drink. She has a mild affair with the broker, but the complications are dissipated when the married people are reconciled.

The Price of Pleasure

(Universal—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHILE this picture cannot be called anything out of the ordinary in plot and characters it does build a pleasant little story, excellently balanced with humor and pathos—a combination of elements that never fails in building up interest in the figures. Since Virginia Valli and Louise Fazenda are in the cast these elements are given excellent expression—Miss Valli taking care of the pathos and Miss Fazenda, the humor. For good measure T. Roy Barnes has his moments in supplying the laughs in his role of a radio bug. The comedy outweighs the pathos in making the picture enjoyable, but taking everything into consideration it is the type of story that has audience appeal.

In the first place it extracts sympathy for the shop-girl who is lifted into society girls by a youth masquerading as a plumber. He has heard that the girl seldom has an enjoyable evening. So he invites her to his home. From this point the picture develops its plot and conflict. You can "spot" the finish from here. The youth's aristocratic relatives snub the girl and she runs away. They scorned by her when discovering her to be the young man's wife. In following her in his machine he knocks her down (the road being slippery and the car skidding) and the complications develop when he believes her dead.

The finish seems rather arbitrary—as if an element of drama was needed to strengthen it. So the young man has brain fever. There is a time lapse of a year—in which the heroine's child comes into the story. A reconciliation is effected when the shop-girl's pal blocks the efforts of the youth's haughty relatives to separate them permanently.

Such a story has been a favorite one—but because of the play of sympathy written into it for the central character, it always tugs at the heart. Any story accomplishing this may be catalogued as possessing audience appeal. There are no technical flaws—aside from a little slowness of action here and there. A little editing wouldn't do it any harm. Norman Kerry plays the youth with first rate naturalness, while the baby, impersonated by Charles Bernard Murphy, Jr., just about steals the picture.

THEME. Romantic drama of shop-girl who wins enmity of husband's aristocratic relatives. She runs away, but there is a reconciliation.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The comedy moments put over by Louise Fazenda and T. Roy Barnes. The appealing scenes in which Miss Valli figures—when invited to the hero's home. The conflict. The auto accident. The pathos. The mounting.

DIRECTION. Balances humor with pathos—and succeeds in humanizing this little story. Overcomes the obvious in majority of scenes—and never overstresses action. Might have placed less emphasis upon dramatic conclusion.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the human angle of this story—featuring the rise of a shop-girl to aristocratic social circles. Play up the sympathetic trend of plot. Exploit the leading players—and teaser the title.

DRAWING POWER. A good audience picture for any type of house. Title has some pulling power—and players are well known. O. K. for neighborhoods and towns.

SUMMARY. The audience need not expect something new here. It is a familiar tale which has been treated with a fine balance of humor and pathos—thus making it enjoyable. It is convincing in the majority of its scenes and is played in capital style by Virginia Valli and Louise Fazenda.

THE CAST

Linnie Randall	Virginia Valli
Garry Schuyler	Norman Kerry
Stella Kelly	Louise Fazenda
John Osborne	George Fawcett
Mrs. Schuyler	Kate Lester
Bill McGuffy	T. Roy Barnes
Grace Schuyler	Marie Astaire
The Baby	Charles Bernard Murphy, Jr.

From story, "Clinging Fingers," by Elizabeth Holding and Marion Orth. Directed by Edward Sloman.

SYNOPSIS. Wealthy, aristocratic youth is attracted to shop-girl and while masquerading as mechanic wins her love. She is shocked upon discovering him to belong to a higher social plane than herself, but she accepts the invitation to his home. He has married her—which makes his relatives scornful of her. After running away and being injured there is a reconciliation. All ends happily.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Super-Hooper-Dyne Lizzies"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THE leading character in this Mack Sennett two-reeler is an inventor who has the novel idea of using "the hot air wasted in radio speeches to run automobiles." The story therefore has to do with the efforts of a villain to put the inventor out of business, for the villain is a gasoline dealer.

Some fairly amusing gags have been developed, two of special effectiveness being those which show all the flivvers automatically starting up when the inventor shoots on the current supplying the power to the cars equipped with his device, and another in which Billy Bevan, pushing a disabled car to the garage, gradually adds to his burden as he travels on near the curb where several are parked, the end showing him behind a veritable parade of driverless automobiles. But it seems as though the idea is worth more and thorough treatment than has been given it here.

Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Lillian Knight, and J. J. Richardson appear in the cast. Jefferson Moffitt and Frank Copra are credited with authorship of the scenario, while Del Lord directed the film.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Queen of the Round-Up"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

THIS is the usual Western story of love and intrigue, with Josie Sedgwick as the heroine. She is the daughter of the owner of the Ellis Horse Ranch, which suffers bad luck and is about to have the mortgage foreclosed when the entire herd of horses is stolen.

As Patricia Ellis, Miss Sedgwick rescues the daughter of the banker in a runaway and gains an extension in time on the mortgage. The rescued girl is her rival for queen of the round-up. They decide to race for the honor, Patricia riding a wild mustang and her rival a thoroughbred. Patricia wins and the rival then hires two ruffians to abduct and secrete her in a cabin. She is rescued by Ned who also captures the ruffians. Patricia returns in time to preside at the Round-Up and Ned succeeds in locating the missing horses in time to make a happy ending.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"The Royal Four-Flush"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

A ROMANTIC background such as George Barr McCutcheon might provide in one of his novels, serves as the local for the action which occupies the two-reels of this "Spat Family" comedy from the Roach Studios. The Spats are seen in a mythical kingdom, where they strive to win the favor of the king by assembling a "Ford" shipped in parts to his majesty, who is curious and somewhat fearful of the "case received from Detroit."

The business of assembling the various parts which go to make up the perfect Ford, features the usual type of "Spat Family" comedy, which consists of several tumbles and tense excitement. When they get the car together Tewksbury attempts to drive it and there is more havoc. It ends by their being driven out to sea, where even the U. S. warship refuses to take them in and the last seen of the "Spats" they are following their anchor to the depths.

The picture is fairly amusing and has the advantage of a fine, somewhat colorful staging. Frank Butler, Laura Roessing and Sydney D'Albrook are in the roles they created, on the screen, Tewksbury, Mrs. Spat, and Ambrose, respectively. Jay A. Howe directed. —T. C. KENNEDY.

"Knocked About"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

THIS Century comedy featuring Eddie Gordon is different than the usual run in that it has a fairly good story, which gives the comedian a chance to work in an abundance of slapstick and hokum, with which it reeks.

Because of his inability to finance himself Eddie is literally tossed from the home of his step father. Mounting the old family horse he gets into all sorts of difficulty when the nag in his hunger wrecks a fruit stand.

Eddie is arrested for the wreck of the stand and is given the alternative of serving thirty days or capturing Dynamite Dave, a doughty and tough customer. He undergoes some pretty rough treatment at the hands of his prey, but by a ruse successfully lands him in jail. It's a pretty fair kind of picture for the type. —CHESTER J. SMITH

"Ice Cold"

(Universal-Bulls Eye—One Reel)

ARTHUR LAKE is a soda jerker in this comedy of the Sweet Sixteen series in which he is featured with Olive Hasbrouck. He has told his gang he was going to Newport, but is discovered at his new vocation by his rival who is out for a stroll with Olive. Rival promptly asks Olive to have a soda and Arthur is discovered.

Not satisfied with his expose the rival would further humiliate Arthur by inviting the whole gang over. Eventually an ice cream battle ensues and as Arthur is working on a commission basis his job yields a healthy return. It's a clever little picture and one that should be appreciated most anywhere.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"Air Tight"

(Educational—Two Reels)

THIS is the newest of the Bobby Vernon comedies and it gives the little comedian a chance to display his full line of wares. The story is one that not much boasting can be done for, but it is full of gag stuff and comedy situations, which as a rule, as in most of these comedies are overdone.

Bobby is a newlywed with Charlotte Stevens as his pretty wife. Her mother decides to accompany them on the honeymoon trip and is compelled to ride on the top of their huge pile of belongings. In the city mother-in-law becomes entangled in the overhead electric wires, while Bobby is having his troubles with the traffic squad.

They decide to go to the wide open spaces and pitch their tent and in doing so become involved with their neighboring tentsman, a giant in stature, who makes things more than interesting for Bobby. Thenceforth it is just a lot of hokum with tents collapsing and being pulled down. It ends with the young married couple making their escape at midnight from mother-in-law and the troublesome neighbor.—CHESTER J. SMITH

"Wake Up"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THIS one is much the same as the others of the Cliff Bowes, Virginia Vance series. They are a vaudeville team who play the tanks and make their jumps in a flivver which very badly misbehaves. Eventually they land in one of those cardboard bungalows in the west and with their neighbors in the adjoining room hammer each other's pictures off the wall and cause general consternation, eventually breaking through the wall. It's rather a poor picture which strives hard for laughs but will probably get few.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Going Great"

(Educational-Mermaid—One Reel)

THIS is the story of a college fraternity initiation with Eddie Nelson as the featured player. They initiate Eddie, the colored janitor, the professors and everyone else in the cast into this fraternity. They are compelled to go down slides and land on a board with upstanding nails, slide into tubs of water, dance on electric plates and do most everything imaginable in an effort for laughs which are rarely forthcoming. It's just a hodge podge of slapstick without the semblance of a story.—CHESTER J. SMITH

In the new lineup of Universal pictures is "The Home Maker," from which these scenes were taken.

Regional News from Correspondents

Indianapolis

H. H. HULL, local exchange manager for F. B. O. and winner of first prize of the National Sales Drive of his company, has announced that plans are under way for a new and thoroughly modern exchange to be located on North Illinois St., Indianapolis.

Sam Abrams who used to be a salesman out of the F. B. O. branch in Indianapolis is making a fine showing as branch manager in Milwaukee.

J. F. McCoy is building a 600 seat theatre at Thirtieth Street and North Western Ave., Indianapolis. He plans to open the new house about Sept. 1st.

North Indiana territory is now being covered for Universal by Chas. B. Tyler and Paul B. Elliot.

Bob Friedman has handed in his resignation to the local Universal exchange and in the future will travel Indiana territory for Fox.

Eldo W. Stewart is re-decorating his "My" theatre and is also installing new seats. When finished the "My" will be up-to-date in every respect as new equipment was installed during the winter.

From all reports, the Tivoli at Mishawaka, Ind., opened recently by O. J. Lambiatt is easily one of the finest theatres in the state of Indiana.

The Miami theatre at Union City, Ind., will have its opening on June 18th.

St. Louis

C. T. THOMPSON, of Texarkana, Ark., has taken over the Dambly Building, Milam street, near Marshall, Shreveport, La., and plans to remodel into a motion picture theatre to be known as the Capitol Theatre. It is estimated the alterations and improvements will cost upwards of $100,000. The building is three stories, 40 by 150 feet.

The floors will be removed to permit a theatre with parquet and balcony. There will be a stage 26 by 40 feet and 30 feet high. The seating capacity will be 600 on the main floor and 400 in the balcony. Dressing rooms will also be provided for actors and actresses. It is anticipated that the desired changes can be made by September 1.

L. E. (Nicky) Goldhammer, star city salesman for Universal Pictures, is bemoaning the wrecking of his beautiful new Greygreen Moon coach by an Olive street car a few days ago. "Nicky" was about to pull away from Picture Row when the rattler knocked him for a goal. The damage, $800, was not covered by insurance.

Universal's All Stars ran their string of victories up another notch when they took the crack Pathe ball tossers into camp score, 39 to 9. Jimmy Shea, assistant branch manager, who pitches for the All Stars, has shown miracle man stuff by holding the opposition to such low scores considering the nature of his support. The previous Saturday the All Stars beat the Paramount team, 46 to 6. That game ended in seven innings because the boys got too tired running the bases.

The Queen theatre at Hope, Arkansas, had its opening recently and is under the management of C. B. Clark. Mr. Clark states that he is highly pleased with the way the public responded to the opening night.

Frank Horton, who manages the Grand at Hope, Ark., is making considerable improvement to his theatre. The lobby will be extended ten feet and provision is also being made for a ladies' rest room.

O. W. McCutcheon of Sikeston, Missouri, has leased the Home theatre at Blytheville, Ark., and accompanied by Mrs. McCutcheon, will make that city their future home.

S. S. Lewis, formerly of Walnut Ridge, Ark., has recently opened his new theatre in Covington, Tenn.

The Majestic theatre at Paragould, Ark., was burglarized recently and robbed of $250 in cash, several checks and valuable papers. The robbery occurred sometime after midnight as attaches of the theatre were there up until the arrival of the Memphis-Missouri train. The theft was discovered the following morning when employees opened the theatre and found the business office littered with papers and pieces of the broken safe. Indications pointed to the use of a sledge hammer and crowbar in tearing open the safe and the opinion is that the work was that of local amateur cracksmen. M. Collins, manager of the Majestic, was not in the city, having left on a visit to Mississippi.

Messrs. McWilliams, McDonald and Clark, who operate houses in Camden, North Little Rock, Little Rock and Nashville, Tenn., have leased the Majestic, at El Dorado, Ark., to A. Lightman. Mr. Lightman was the former manager and in the future will make the Majestic a first-run house.

Jonesboro, Ark., is to have a new $100,000 theatre. It has been announced that work will be started on the new house within the next thirty days and the opening is planned for October 1st. The stage will be equipped for both pictures and road shows and the seating capacity will be 1,500. Outside of the New Sanger at Pine Bluff, the new house will be the largest in the State.

The Main theatre at Morrilton, Ark., has been re-opened under the management of Irwin Worsham of Little Rock.

G. A. Peterson, one of the oldest and most enterprising exhibitors in the State of Oklahoma, has just opened his second theatre in Hollis, Okla. The new house will be known as the Folly, and will seat 400. Mr. Peterson also operates the Cozy, a 500-seat theatre, also in Hollis.

Cincinnati

HARRY WOOLFE, salesman for Universal and better known as the Canadian Northwesterner having at one time been a member of that famous police organization, motored to Montreal last week there to meet Miss Debby Marks, of Calgary, Alberta, Canada and her mother. After leaving Montreal the party motored to New York City where Woolfe and Miss Marks will be united in marriage and after spending their honeymoon in the East, they will return to this city. Harry to continue selling Universal product. The entire local Universal organization wished Harry God speed and luck on his hazardous venture.

Jack Stewart, spent several days in the city prior to his leaving for Paris, where he will represent First National. Jack is well known and liked in local film circles having at one time managed the Goldwyn exchange.

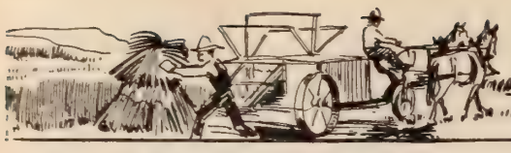
L. B. Wilson, the enterprising and energetic little manager of the Liberty Theatre, Covington, Ky., was elected to the board of directors of the M.P.T.O.A., at the Milwaukee convention. It was the first convention that L. B. attended and he was only there for a few hours but his personality was so felt that he was immediately placed into service. He is the youngest member on the board and there is no doubt but what his ability as an executive will be welcome to the rest of the board members. He left for New York where he will attend the meeting of the directors.

T. Sweeney, formerly with Producers' at Pittsburgh has joined the local sales force of Universal.

Chas. Lowenburg, exploiteer for Universal paid a visit to Charleston, W. Va., last week. Incidentally it might be mentioned that this is the first time Charlie has been to the W. Va., city since he ciceroned Miss Mary Carr several years ago while serving in a similar capacity with Fox.

J. S. Davis of the Westland Theatre, Portsmouth, Ohio, spent several days around film row last week.

The Highsplint Amusement Company of Highsplint, Ky., was represented at film row a few days ago by the owner E. H. Smith. While here Mr. Smith purchased several pictures.



M. K. Murphy of the Murphy Theatre, Tarr, W. Va., visited with the various exchange managers last week.

Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Co., spent several days in the local exchange consulting with Nate Lefkowitz the local manager. The entire Warner product held-up to this time by the local Standard office, is being moved over to the Vitagraph exchange at Seventh and Main Streets.

C. F. Phister, of the Jewell Theatre, Troy, Ohio, made several important bookings while in the city last week.

Harry Kress, former premier exhibitor and showman of Piqua, Ohio, is now semipermanently located in the city, due to the fact that the Baseball team will be at home for some time and Harry is an avowed baseball fan.

Thomas Lindsey of the Paramount office force left for New York by motor last week where he will meet his brother and sister who are returning from a trip abroad. Before coming back to Cincy he will be accompanied by his mother and sister and motor through the East.

Des Moines

HERB GROVES, manager of the Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, reports that this theatre will be closed on July 5 in order to redecorate and remodel, to the tune of $15,000. A. H. Blank of A. H. Blank Enterprises, has authorized this considerable expenditure and the enlarging of the Des Moines theatre stage in order that special prolog numbers of some pretension might be staged at the Des Moines Theatre. The Capital Theatre, next door to the Des Moines, and A. H. Blank's newest theatre in Des Moines, has found the policy of stage numbers with the pictures, a most successful one. The plans for the redecoration of the Des Moines Theatre have been presented by Younker Brothers, Des Moines, who had charge of the decoration of the Capital Theatre. The Des Moines Theatre will be closed for the whole of the month of July, while the redecorating is being done.

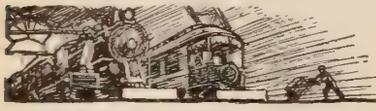
M. A. Smith of Sheraton has apparently abandoned his first idea of carrying to the Supreme Court his Sunday closing fight. There is an ordinance on the books at Sheraton that rules against the showing of pictures on Sunday. Mr. Smith, however, feels that most of the people, if given a chance, would vote against the Blue law. He planned to operate the show on Sunday and in case the mayor used his power to close the show, to carry the matter into court. The mayor did set down his foot on the Sunday show and so far Mr. Smith has made no further fight against the closing. And his house is closed on Sunday.

Hal Kelly, who operates the Opera House at Corning has closed his theatre permanently. Mr. Kelly is in poor health and not able to continue the operation of the theatre there.

E. A. Shipley, assistant manager of the Capital Theatre, isn't going to take the trip to Europe that he had planned for the middle of June. Business is business and his presence is demanded right here in Des Moines. It will be necessary for him to be at the Capital into July and then also it looks as though this hard working young manager is about to be presented with greater managerial duties. So the trip abroad is postponed until next year.

W. E. Banford, manager for Metro-Goldwyn, found conditions favorable in the river tri-cities, Moline, Davenport and Rock Island, on his visit there last week. He was accompanied to Chicago by J. E. Flynn, district manager of Metro-Goldwyn, for over the Memorial Day holiday.

M. B. Nichols, district manager for Famous Players, was at the Des Moines office last week.



Alfred Bernreuter, director of the Capital Theatre orchestra of Des Moines, will be absent for a three-weeks' vacation. During his absence, R. C. Hoag, assistant director, will have charge of the orchestra.

Merrill Anderson, ad sales clerk of the Famous Players office, is a motorcycle enthusiast and will drive to Marion for the races there. There are half a dozen who are motor-cycling over for the event.

Metro-Goldwyn, F. B. O. and Famous Players are planning to clean up on the exchange staff team of the Film Building some fine day. But it seems that contracts are keeping the contestants pretty busy and neither team has lined up much time for practice. However, the talk about the battle is as fierce as ever.

Charles Schwartz, engineer, has been placed in charge of the expensive new cooling plant of the Capitol Theatre, Des Moines. It is estimated that $22,000 was expended for the new cooling system of the Capitol and this does not include the equipment of motors, fans and the washed air system that was already in operation. Early spring hot weather has already demonstrated the effectiveness of the new system.

R. A. Baker, booker of Universal, is a bachelor for three weeks. And, let us tell you, this is one wife that is sorely missed during her absence.

Kansas City

AMONG the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: P. S. Balley, Princess, Stanberry, Mo.; Herb Thatcher, Lyric, Abilene, Kas.; William Gabel, Grand, Beloit, Kas.; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Christian, Beyers, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; H. A. McClure, Strand and Electric, Emporia, Kas.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.

No complaint about business among Kansas City exchanges last week. "Up and at 'em" was the motto. Harvey N. Day, general sales manager for Kinograms, was looking over conditions in Kansas City, while R. S. Valentyne, Pathe branch manager in Des Moines, Iowa, was a Kansas City visitor.

W. E. Truog and Bob Gary, Universal district manager and exploiteer, respectively, returned from the M. P. T. O. A. convention with something to make them feel unusually "pepped up" about.

J. E. Storey and Oscar Morgan, Pathe representatives, spent two busy days in Kansas City.

The Educational and Universal branches joined in the spring "clean up" campaign and had the ol' fronts repainted in bright colors.

Ralph Schetzer, recently with Standard Films, now is assistant manager of the Enterprise Distributing Corp.

Cleve Adams, F. B. O. district manager, was in Kansas City on a Middle Western tour.

Ben Taylor, former Fox salesman, has been succeeded by Frank Cassel, former Pathe salesman.

Universal added three new salesmen to its force last week—Lee Balsley, Irwin Dodson and H. Kidd.

There is a constant increase of vaudeville numbers twice or three times weekly among the smaller town and suburban theatres of the Kansas and Missouri territory, according to C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri. The Kansas City Juvenile Theatrical Association, an organization sponsored by the M. P. T. O. K.-M. for the purpose of providing vaudeville acts at low costs to small houses, soon will be ready to function.

As to ill-fortune, Jack Quinlan, manager of the Main street theatre, Kansas City, has more than his allotment this week. Hardly had Mrs. Quinlan been taken to a hospital to undergo an operation than 10-year-old Jack Quinlan, jr., was taken to the hospital, suffering from appendicitis. Now Jack is wondering what fate will deal him next.

The Globe theatre, Kansas City, has been leased for a term of five years by Richlyn Amusement and Realty Company, effective May 31. William Flynn and N. J. Flynn, brothers, are proprietors of the amusement company, a Kansas City concern. Besides the Globe they control the Wonderland, which is to be torn down July 1, and the Garden theatre. Louis Oppenstein, owner of the Globe, quoted the terms of the lease at $35,000 a year. Thomas Taffe, present manager of the theatre, announces that he will resign to become associated with the Missouri theatre.

The work of tearing down another of Kansas City's movie land marks—the Victory theatre—began this week. The Idle Hour theatre was razed not many months ago and the Wonderland theatre is to be next in the path of larger down town business buildings.

Exhibitors of Kansas City who are members of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri have announced that they will co-operate with the postmaster of Kansas City in exploiting "Better Mailing Week" through free advertising on the screens. Kansas City exhibitors also will aid in exploiting the civic improvement program of Kansas City. In appreciation of the latter co-operation Mayor Beach of Kansas City wrote a letter of gratitude to the exhibitors, commending their public spirited attitude.

San Francisco

C. A. GRISSELL, one of San Francisco's best known motion picture theatre managers, has again had his ability recognized by having been appointed manager of the "Union Square" theatre. Grissell is taking the place of former manager Eugene L. Perry who resigned his position to take charge of the Criterion Theatre at Los Angeles. Before leaving Perry stated to his many friends that he disliked to sever his connections with S. Harris and Irving Ackerman, managers of the corporation that owns the "Union Square", because of their genial manner.

H. C. McIntyre, Universal manager in Australia, accompanied by Mrs. McIntyre were recent visitors in San Francisco and were entertained by members of the local exchange.

A. H. Crooks of the Rialto Theater, Eureka, received a fifty dollar check from Carl Laemmle, because he in the minds of the judges, did the best exploitation work to "put over" "The Great Circus Mystery" which was playing at that theatre that week. President Laemmle of Universal is giving out a total of $5,000 during a period of five months to different exhibitors who show initiative.

Carol Nathan, local manager of Universal, has returned from his trip to Chicago and Eastern cities and was welcomed by his many friends. Some who knew he was coming, went over to the Oakland pier to make the welcome a big success.

Friends of C. L. Theuerkauf, Western District Manager of Universal Theatres, were pleasantly surprised when he appeared on the local exchange and it was learned it was not necessary to operate on him.

Chicago

PRESIDENT CHARLES NATHAN of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, left Monday to attend the directors meeting of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, which is to be held in New York City this week. On the train with Mr. Nathan, were Al Steffes and A. A. Kaplan of Minnesota; Dick Beechly of Kansas City; and J. Smith of Des Moines, all of whom were elected directors of the national association at the recent Milwaukee convention. Jack Miller, business manager of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, left on Tuesday, to represent his organization at the directors meeting.

Dernbach & Dyce opened their handsome new one thousand seat theatre at Wheaton, last week. This progressive Illinois city now has one of the most beautiful, well equipped and up to date houses in the state. With the opening of the new house Messrs. Dernbach & Dyce closed the Grand theatre at Wheaton, which they have operated for some time. They also operate houses at Batavia and Naperville.

General Sales Manager J. R. Grainger of Fox Film Corporation, was due here Friday, on one of his frequent flying trips.

E. S. Harris of the Columbia theatre, Peoria, is remodeling the Princess of this city, putting in a large amount of new equipment, including a battery of Motiographs and a large organ. He expects to have the house ready for the public by July 1st. It is understood that it will operate under a second run policy.

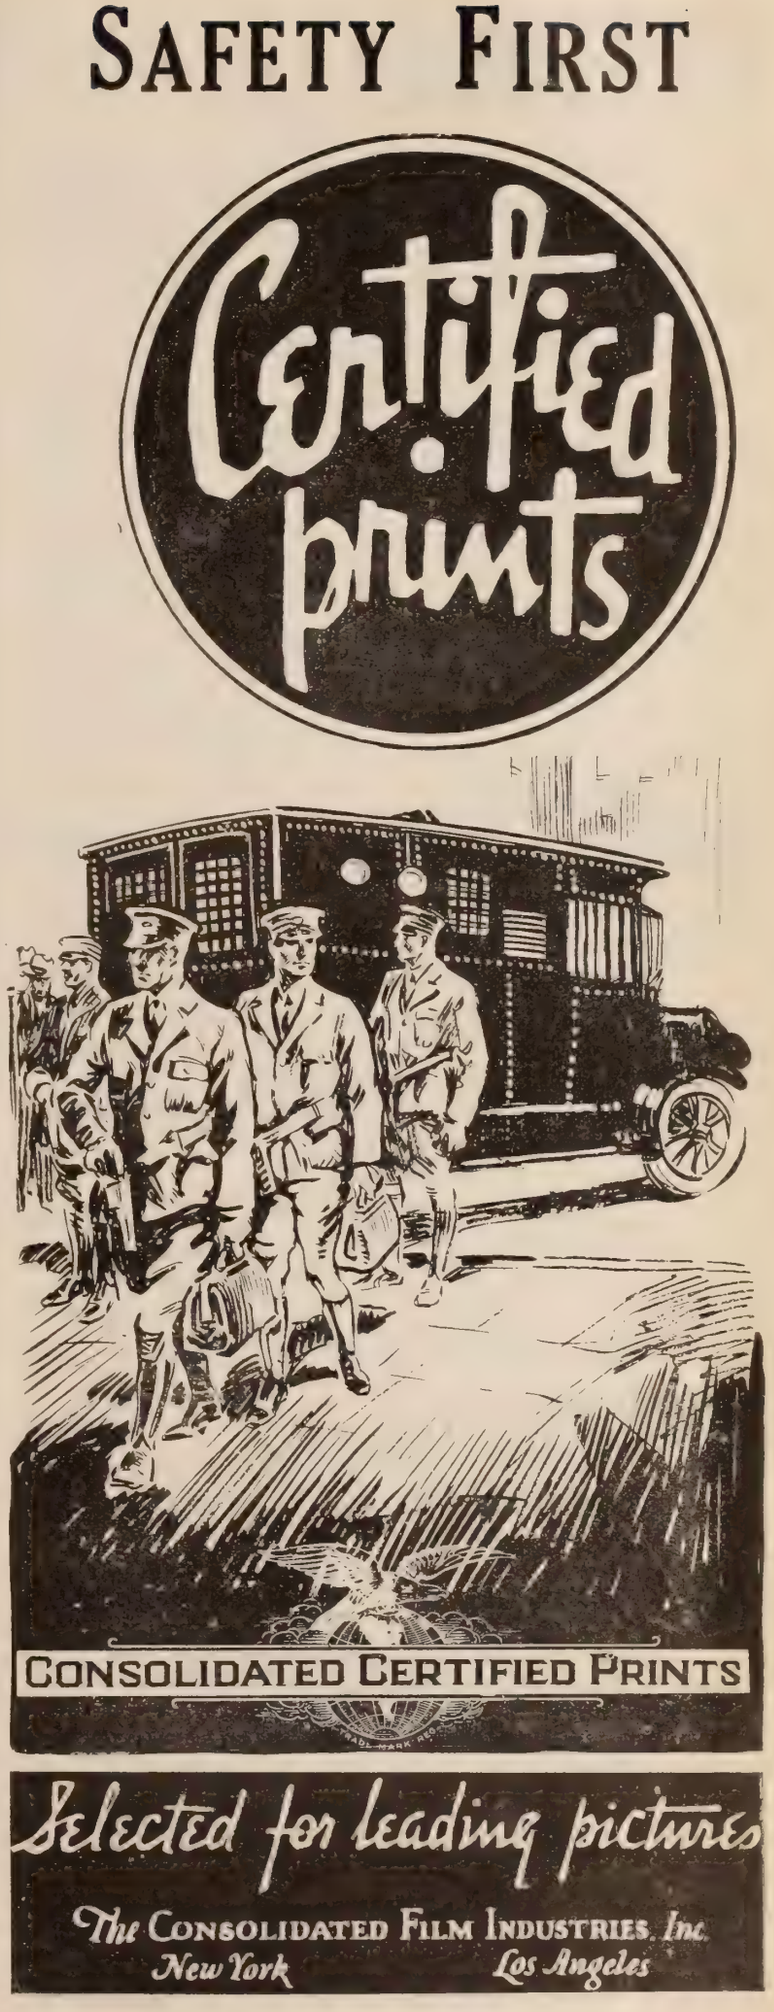
Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Bertha Isaacs and I. Maynard Schwartz on Wednesday evening, June 3rd. The wedding reception will be held at the Covenant Club, 10 N. Dearborn Street. Mr. Schwartz, who has been Chicago manager of Educational Films for some years, has a host of friends and is being kept busy receiving congratulations. The newlyweds expect to make their residence at the Chicago Beach Hotel.

Assistant Manager Leonard Worley of the Palace theatre, Peoria, was the victim of a hold up last week. Mr. Worley, accompanied by a police officer, was on his way to the city hall to place the day's receipts of the Palace and Madison theatres in the city vault, when two armed men got the drop on the theatre man and his escort, took the officer's club and revolver and relieved Mr. Worley of his money. Two other men are said to have acted as lookouts during the robbery. Felix Greenburg of the Theatres Operating Company estimated the amount.



Manager Dembow of Fox's Chicago exchange, announces that his company's new Milwaukee exchange, will be officially opened on July 5th with Jack Lorentz as manager and L. A. Miller, of Fox's Minneapolis exchange, as assistant manager. The Milwaukee branch will be under the supervision of Mr. Dembow and will have commodious quarters at 721-23 Wells Street. Fox is also building up its sales force in the Chicago territory, Steve Montgomery having recently joined the staff to cover city territory; G. O. Godshaw, Indiana territory; Joe Levy, district about Peoria, and D. Arnold Kohn, the suburban area.

The many friends in the motion picture business, of Adolph Linick, secretary treasurer of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, are sympathizing with him in the death of his wife, which occurred last week at the Wesley Memorial Hospital of this city. Mr. Linick retired from active participation in the conduct of the firm with which he is connected, two years ago, and moved to Los Angeles. The operation for which his wife journeyed to Chicago was considered a minor affair, but she failed to rally. Following services held in Chicago, the funeral party left for Los Angeles, where the interment occurred. Besides two children, Mrs. Sidney Weisman and Leroy Linick the deceased is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Henry Kahn and Mrs. Sam Linick and a brother, Sigmund Faller, of this city, who is well known in motion picture circles.

Truman Talley, editor of Fox News, and for many years connected with leading newspapers of the United States, spent Friday to Monday in Chicago, supervising the filming and distribution of the Indianapolis Auto Races. The films were rushed from the track to Chicago by an aeroplane, developed and printed here and distributed throughout the United States, from here, the American Film Company doing the work of developing and printing.

The Lyceum of Peoria, which has been dark for two years, is scheduled to open again. This house is controlled by the Theatres Operating Company.

Sid Meyers, widely known in Chicago as an exchange manager, is now actively engaged in the real estate business in Miami, Florida, but retains his interest in the motion picture business and was in Chicago last week consulting with architects who will make plans for a fifteen hundred seat de luxe house, which he proposes to build in Miami.

Salt Lake City

A. G. Pickett, manager of the local Famous Players-Lasky exchange is spending a few days in the Montana.

A. K. Shepherd, ad sales manager here for Famous Players-Lasky is in the Idaho country stirring up business on advertising matter.

Harry Pickering, who has charge of exploitation in this territory on Paramount pictures, returned this week after a trip to Idaho. Pick sent to New York City photographs of the five successful applicants for screen tests from this territory last week. If the pictures show that the originals are worthy of screen tests a crew will arrive here next week to conduct them. If all of the applicants pass the tests they will be enrolled as students in the school for motion picture acting that has been inaugurated by Famous Players-Lasky. Photographs of four girls and one man were sent in.

George Sheehan, who has charge of the Automobile Gold contests running at the present time at the Paramount Empress and Victory theatres, left yesterday for Los Angeles. He will return again at the conclusion of the contest, to award the prizes to the successful contestants having rolled up the most votes by selling season ticket coupon books to these houses.

The boys in the exchanges and theatres here are all pepped up, over the coming annual golf tournament between representatives of the two different organizations. The first of these sanguinary battles was staged last year with the exchange men the conquerors, thus dining and wining at the expense of the vanquished. This year the theatre men have sworn bitter revenge and it is rumored that George Carpenter and Carl A. Porter have moved the pianos out of their parlors to make way for swinging the mashies. The battle will be staged at Nibley Park links sometime in June. Twenty-four players lined up in foursomes will tee off. Three medics and an ambulance have been ordered to be on hand.

George L. Cloward, manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange says that the outlook for the product scheduled for the 1925-26 season in the field is mighty good insomuch that they will readily prove the reason for the company slogan that they are "The Talk of the Industry." He leaves for his swing over the territory next week. Joseph F. Samuels will work Utah; Ed Lustig will cover Idaho while E. E. Harris will do his stuff in Montana.

Felix Feist, general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn, and Harry Lustig, Western Division manager, are expected to arrive in this city within the next ten days from Los Angeles, according to a wire received at the local branch. While here the salesmen will be called in and Feist will give them all of the dope concerning the distribution and sale of the new season product. He is making a tour of all of the exchange cities of the country on this mission.

George T. Wassell, traveling auditor for Metro-Goldwyn is spending a few weeks at the local office going over the books and records. He is having a mighty pleasant time, seeming to like the place thoroughly.

Ed. C. Mix, Associated Exhibitors manager in this city is making a short jaunt through the southern Utah section.

Salesman Blackstone connected with the Oklahoma City branch of Associated First National, called in at the local exchange of that company today and paid his greetings to W. F. Gordon, local manager. He is a member of the India Temple of the Shriners of that city, who stopped in this city today enroute to the convention at Los Angeles.

Joe Solomon, selling out of the local F. B. O. exchange left for his territory in Idaho today.

W. K. Bloom, Montana salesman for local F. B. O., returned to his territory this week after spending his vacation in Washington visiting his folks.

L. A. Davis, local chief for F. B. O. leaves this week for a trek over the entire state of Montana touching every point from water tank to capitol. He expects to be gone about two weeks.

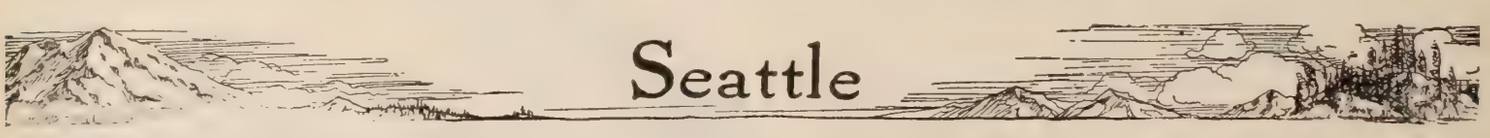
Abe Glassman, operating the Alhambra Theatre, and Lou Perry, of Perry Brothers, owners of the Egyptian Theatre, were the Ogden, Utah, representative exhibitors on the local mart this week. Ed Ryan, Liberty and Alberta theatres, Brigham City, Utah; Steve Deal, Star Theatre, Springville, Utah; Nick Salvuarkis, Lyric Theatre, Price, Utah; J. J. Gillette, Strand Theatre, Tooele, Utah; W. V. Ginn, Auditorium Theatre, Pleasant Grove, Utah; C. A. Orr, Opera House, Grace, Idaho Mike Neilson, Fox Theatre, Buhl, Idaho; Ott Schmidt, Colonial Theatre, Idaho Falls, Idaho; and Joe Koehler, Idaho Theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho, made up the rest of the visitors.

Harding Brewerton, formerly an exhibitor of Canada, has taken over the Latonia and Community theatres at Layton, Utah, from the King interests.

W. G. Seib, Pathe manager, leaves for a jaunt through Idaho next week.

Jack Connors, who sells the United Artists product in Montana is here at the local exchange for a few days. He says the exhibitors in that state feel mighty good over business which is showing greater strength throughout the state than has been experienced for several years.

Samuel Henley, Universal branch manager, and Milt Cohn, salesman, left yesterday for Idaho in the interest of the new product.



Garrett Graham, advance publicity man for the Universal "See America First", is back again arranging final details for the visit of the unit in this city June 6. He will act as one of the judges in the beauty contest whereby one local girl will represent the city in the film taken here and go to Universal City under contract to act in the movies. C. E. "Doc" Holah, in charge of the unit was formerly here as special representative for Fox.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Pictures and Super Feature Independent exchange returned Sunday from his peregrinations which took him over the entire state of Idaho. He will leave on a similar trip through Utah next Monday.

Harry T. Nolan, Mountain Division chief for Associated First National will be here in about two weeks.

Art Barron, veteran salesman in this territory, has joined the local Fox branch staff, covering southern Utah. He succeeds Leonard Tidwell, resigned.

C. F. Parr, branch manager for Producers' Distributing Corporation, is making a short trip to the Pocatello section of Idaho. He and the bunch will leave Saturday morning for San Francisco to attend the convention.

Seattle

THE Cinderella Band, an organization of young Seattle musicians recruited by Manager Charles W. McKee, made their first appearance at the Heilig Theatre here last week, and have taken their place as one of the popular symphonic orchestras of the city. The Band appears in specialty concert numbers four times daily, and in addition renders part of the musical score for the feature picture each week.

Herman Wobber, Western division manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, left the city last week, after having spent more than a week here in conference with George P. Endert, local exchange manager. Mr. Wobber was en route to Portland from here, following which he expected to return to San Francisco and Los Angeles for a few weeks' stay.

Jack Burke, manager of the Burke Theatrical Enterprises, and one of the infrequent visitors on Seattle's Film Row, spent a few days here last week, on a combined business and pleasure trip from his home city, Baker, Oregon. During his stay here Mr. Burke bought and booked a number of features pictures and short subjects for his houses to play this summer.

Announcement was made on Film Row last week to the effect that the irrepressible R. C. "Monty" Montgomery is now associated with Manager Jack Sullivan's local Fox exchange in a sales executive capacity. Mr. Montgomery is known throughout the entire Pacific Northwest as a film man, actor, producer and publicity expert of no mean proportions.

H. A. Black, manager of the Vitagraph exchange, returned last week to his office from Los Angeles, where he attended the convention of Vitagraph - Warner branch managers and executives. The entire Vitagraph product has been sold in this territory, according to Mr. Black's reports, so the local exchange at the present time is awaiting definite news as to the future course to be followed with the new combined product.

Harry Lanstom, well-known film salesman of this territory, last week announced his association with Manager George P. Endert's Famous Players office. He was formerly associated with Al. Rosenberg's De Luxe Feature Film Exchange, covering the Eastern Washington territory.

Felix Feist, associated with the national Metro-Goldwyn offices, left last week for Portland, after having spent a number of days in this city and territory with Seth D. Perkins, manager of the local M-G office.

With the arrival of warmer summer weather during the last few weeks, business among the picture houses of the city dropped off to a slight degree, and downtown houses began making arrangements for the coming season. Among the improvements noted was the painting and redecorating of the lobby and exterior of the Columbia Theatre. Manager Bender is giving the house a light, cool appearance by the use of light colors, artificial flowers and cooling electrical effects.

Denver

AL JOHNSON, assistant manager for Fox, is walking on air these days having just been the recipient of a son and heir. Al don't know just when he will put the boy to work but it should be soon for both his father and mother are old in the film business. Mr. Johnson has been in the film business since the days of the old General Film Co., and Mrs. Johnson was, for many years before her marriage, booker for Vitagraph in Denver. The baby weighs just seven pounds but it is expected that he will soon grow heavy enough to be as good a film worker as his father is and his mother was. We are happy to announce that the mother and child are doing well and Al is doing even better than that.

H. E. Sherman, for many years, managing director of the Barnett Amusement Company operating theatres in Albuquerque, New Mexico, is in Denver arranging bookings for the beautiful new Sunshine Theatre opened some time ago by this company. Mr. Sherman doesn't get to Denver very often but when he does, the boys are all mighty glad to see him.

Max Schubach of the Midwest Theatre Company, has left for a few days visit to the U. S. A. Theatre, Sidney, Nebraska, one of his chain of theatres in the territory. Max has completely recovered from his recent illness, and from his appearance and activities is the same hustling exhibitor of old.

R. J. Garland, manager of Metro-Goldwyn, and Eugene Gerbase, manager of Universal, were both visitors in Cheyenne, Wyoming during the past week.

Irving Ehrensoft, well known among all exhibitors and exchanges in the Western territory having been long associated with the industry of salesman arrived in Denver a few days ago from Phoenix, Arizona. Irving has come back to Denver to recuperate from his last attack of illness which seemed for a time to be very serious. Although tired because of the trip from Phoenix to Denver, Irving feels good and expects to be ready to resume his duties as salesman within a few weeks.

The entire office sales force of Producers' Distributing Corporation, left Saturday for San Francisco via LaJunta, Colorado, and Los Angeles.

Lon T. Fidler, former manager of the Warner Brothers Exchange in Denver, is now associated with United Artists as salesman. The Warner Brothers franchise of Denver was taken back by Warner Brothers and all their product is now being distributed through Vitagraph.

Exhibitors visiting the city looking for the Pathe Exchange will soon have to look twice before they know they are in the right place. Extensive and attractive decorations are now being made throughout the entire Pathe office and C. H. Van Horn, Pathe manager, does not hesitate to assert his office will be the finest looking place of business among the exchanges.

Carl Judge, owner and operator of the Iris Theatre, Wheatland, Wyoming, was a visitor in film row last Thursday. Mr. Judge hasn't been to Denver for two years. He reports excellent prospects for a very successful season this year.

Ed Anderson of the Colonial Theatre, Pueblo, Colorado, was also a caller on his film exchange friends during the past week. Other visitors were A. E. Dean of the Princess Theatre, Buena Vista, Colorado.

Jack Krum, manager of the local United Artists' exchange is up in Wyoming with a line-up that will make them all sit up and take notice. Jack expects to visit Laramie, Rock Springs, and Rawlins among other points in that territory. T. Y. Henry, Division Manager for United Artists is in charge of the local office until Mr. Krum's return.

Detroit

ACCORDING to present plans, all three of the John H. Kunsky theatres will remain open throughout the summer months. Preparations are now being made to install a mammoth pipe organ in the Capitol theatre, costing in the neighborhood of $50,000. While the old organ, considered one of the finest in the country but too small for Capitol purposes, is being dismantled and the new one installed, the theatre will remain open. Several important pictures are under contract for the next several weeks.

Fire, breaking out in the projection room of the Lyric theatre on Michigan avenue, filled the adjacent Lyric hotel with smoke, during the past week, driving out about a score of guests. The blaze was discovered when employees opened the theatre to sweep out preparatory to the day's performance. The inrush of air apparently fanned a smouldering blaze among rags in the projection room, into life. Firemen extinguished the flames without difficulty. The damage, confined entirely to the theatre, was slight.

Jack Stuart, recently resigned from the local offices of the Producers Distributing Corp, to do special work in England for First National, was succeeded during the past week by Frank Stuart, former special representative for William Fox.

Charles J. Richardson, former assistant dramatic critic of the Detroit Times, has been appointed Motion Picture editor of the same publication. He succeeds Lee J. Smits, who will devote his future time to the writing of several novels.

Steel work has been entirely completed on the new John H. Kunsky house, the State theatre, on Elizabeth street and Woodward avenue. Concrete work is now going forward at a rapid pace.

Charles P. Nathanson has severed his connections with the Wolverine theatre, although he has no definite plans for the immediate future.

Ben Cohen, proprietor of the Colonial theatre, is now convalescing from severe lacerations resulting from an accident while cruising in his new speed boat near Algonac. He was seriously lacerated on both hands and has been confined to Grace hospital for more than a week. The sympathy of his many friends is expressed by the flowers that fill his room.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Wadlow of the Virginia theatre in Detroit are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a nine-pound son. They also have a daughter.

Visual education has made enormous strides in Detroit schools in the past few years, according to Walter W. Whitengill, assistant supervisor of visual education in the public schools. A decade ago, he declared, few educators appreciated its value. Today motion pictures are a regular part of auditorium work in the platoon schools of the city. A regular circuit, embracing more than 61 elementary schools which operate on the platoon system, has been established, and selected films are shown regularly at these schools. Each week about 40,000 feet of film are shown to more than 30,000 children. As soon as new platoon schools are properly equipped to show the films, they are added to the circuit. The work of the visual education department also extends into the intermediate and high schools, where pictures of interest are occasionally shown.

Maurice Caplan of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Company, and Charles Carlisle of the Mecca Plaza, in Saginaw, are among the Michigan Shriners who left last week to attend the national convention in Los Angeles.

Albany

PROBABLY the most important event of the past week in local circles, at least in the opinion of Edward Lewin, a well-known film salesman, was the arrival of an eight-pound boy, who will bear the name of Raymond. Naturally Mr. Lewin bought the cigars, and forgot the fact that he was selling pictures, for the time being.

William Smalley of Cooperstown, who has a chain of fifteen theatres or more, is negotiating, according to reports, for houses in Sharon Springs and Delhi. The one in Sharon Springs has been run for several years by Otto Eigen, who has returned to his novelty store and ice cream stand.

Speaking about taking over theatres, Julius Byck, a deaf and dumb exhibitor in Tannersville, has also acquired a theatre and last week found him the owner of a house in Hunter.

Tom Thornton, who runs the Orpheum in Saugerties, is now staging vaudeville each Monday night and appears to be doing extremely well.

At the Liberty in Herkimer, and the Gateway, in Little Falls, vaudeville has been cut out for the summer, but will be resumed in the early fall.

In taking over the Community theatre in Catskill last week, it now appears that W. W. Farley, of Albany, has really acquired two theatres in the mountain town, through the fact that William Smalley, who is running one there, sold out to M. E. Silberstein, of the Community, who in turn disposed of his houses to Mr. Farley.

Father O'Reilly of Rosendale, is running the motion picture theatre these days in New Palts, and according to the boys who sell him film, he is a very shrewd buyer. Roy Cronk, who has been operating a theatre in Roxbury, has decided to quit the business and devote his entire time to Sheffield Farms, with which he has also been connected for some time past.

The local Metro-Goldwyn office announced last week that they were paid a call by Jake Tremper who runs a theatre in Rhinebeck, covering the entire summer, three days a week. When Mr. Tremper is not around his theatre, he can generally be found at his greenhouses where he engages in he raising of violets for the trade.

Walter Seaman, who has a house in Highland, as well as others in Marlboro and Milton, is planning to make an addition to the one in Highland so that he can accommodate about 125 more persons.

James Hardy, who has a theatre as well as a hotel in Clayville, is planing to open the former in the near future.

The many friends of Dave Lake, the popular film salesman in this city, who was with Paramount for several years, and who has been of late with the local Metro-Goldwyn office, will wish him bon voyage when he sails from San Francisco on June 16 for Australia, where he will make his future home. Dave will keep right on, however, in the film business and expects to make his fortune in the far off land.

There was very little business up before last week's arbitration board and perhaps it is just as well for there was a decidedly slim attendance, Sam Freed being the only one on hand to represent the exchanges, and Louis Buettner of Cohoes, the only exhibitor present.

Ben Pierce, of Illion, who is associated with Young and Whitney interests, was in town on Monday, buying film, and upon ascertaining that the film salesmen were to have their ball that night, decided to remain over.

Rae Candee, of Utica, well known to exhibitors throughout the entire state, has recovered from a very painful attack of poison ivy. Mr. Candee spends many of his week ends at his camp in the Adirondacks and in some way grasped some of the poisonous weed. Harry Lux, of the Alhambra in Utica, spent the past week-end on a fishing trip.

Amos Leonard, who handles Pathe products out of Syracuse, was in town during a portion of the week. Mr. Leonard has just bought himself a new home in Syracuse, and his first overnight guest was Leon Medem, local manager for Pathe, who happened to be in town.

The hardest exhibitor to find these days, and likewise the one most sought after, is Meyer Schine, of Gloversville. It's a ten to one bet that any time a branch manager is out of town, he can be located in Gloversville. With something like sixty houses to his credit, Mr. Schine is out over the state a great deal of the time and is a hard man to locate.

L. A. Herman, who handles Universal product, and a brother of Alec, manager of the First National exchange here, has just bought a new sedan. Alec continues to walk. And speaking of Alec, the next time you are in town, drop in and inquire if he has a cigar. His pockets generally bulge, but there is a little catch to his gift, for with every cigar, he expects the signature of the recipient to a contract.

Ben Smith, who was formerly connected with Selznick in this city, has returned to town following a visit to his old home in New Brunswick. Ben showed up at the film ball and was right at his old job, collecting tickets at the door.

It takes Betty Feuer, of the Crescent in Schenectady, to doll up for the occasion. The other night she was present at the film ball in Albany, having been along Film Row earlier in the afternoon but seeing to it that it was carefully concealed by means of a long coat.

Gasper Battaglia, who has the Lansing and Monroe theatres in Troy, is just back from a six weeks' trip through the south. Since the boys have grown up, Mr. Battaglia is permitting them to look after the theatres to a considerable extent, while he interests himself in the wholesale fruit business.

The Papayanakos brothers, who made fortunes in Watertown, when the motion picture business was in its infancy and then retired, are once more leading figures among the exhibitors of northern New York. Alex has a house in Canton, Harry has one in Potsdam, while Jim is running the Graylin in Gouverneur. This brother has just bought himself a new home and it looks as though he intends to make Gouverneur his home for the years to come.

Sangster and Fitzgerald of Alexandria Bay have just taken over the Elite theatre in Theresa, which has been run by William Henry, and will assume possession on July 1.

Although Abe Stone, who runs the Arbor Hill and the Delaware theatres in Albany, was at the film ball the other night, he resisted all suggestions from the fair ones for a dance and contented himself with spending the evening in chatting with the ladies. Quite a number of exhibitors from out of town were on hand for the affair, Mr. and Mrs. Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, being among the number.

There are at least two exhibitors in this section who find their enjoyment on their nights off by attending the boxing matches. Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy, can be found almost any Monday night at the matches in Troy, while C. H. Buckley, who owns the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres in Albany, was on hand this past week at the closing fights of the Knickerbocker Athletic club.

Extensive improvements have just been completed at the Park theatre in Glens Falls. The manager of this house is F. J. Cuneo. The house has been recarpeted and a new ventilating system has been installed while slip covers add to the attractiveness of the general appearance. There is also a new policy in vogue at the house, pictures changing on Sunday, Wednesday and Fridays.

Dave Seymour, who runs the Pontiac in Saranac Lake, which is a place as Dave describes it, "on top of the mountain," played his trump card last week when he booked C. Sharp Minor for the entire week. Saranac Lake was the smallest town the distinguished manipulator of the keyboard has ever played, but with plenty of advertising and with Dave Seymour at the helm, the act which was featured with the pictures, drew capacity houses. As Dave says, he believes in taking a chance, and while he makes a poor bet once in awhile, it's generally a winner nine times out of ten.

Leon Medem motored to New York for over Decoration Day and brought back word to Albany that Charles Stombaugh, whom he succeeded as manager of the local Pathe exchange, is as happy as the proverbial basket of chips now that he is located along the Great White Way and handling the Newark theatre.

Texas

WM. HORWITZ, JR., manager and owner of the New Texas and Iris Theatres, has returned from a two weeks' visit to New York. Mr. Hortwitz reports a profitable and enjoyable visit.

Reports from Harlinger, Texas state that the Queen Theatre is enjoying the most successful season since it was built. It was recently purchased by Jack Pickens, former south Texas representative for Metro-Goldwyn.

P. L. McCulley has returned to Luna Park Amusement Company and will write publicity and advertising for same this season. Mr. McCulley spent the winter in San Antonio where he was writing publicity and advertising for a local amusement company.

E. J. Barnette, Houston Chronicle theatrical representative, spent the weekend in Oklahoma City, Okla., visiting friends.

Aaron Laskin former owner and manager of the Cozy Theatre in this city who has been producing musical tab in Pasadena, California, will go to Memphis, Tenn. next week and produce musical tab in that city for the summer.

The Prince theatre will use the Country Store idea for the summer months in order to keep the attendance up to standard. Over 1000 articles have been gathered together for these nights which will be held Monday and Friday.

A new cooling system, a ton of ice for each show, is being used at the Palace theatre where the Gene Lewis-Olga Worth company are playing a short summer engagement. This is the first time in the history of the theatre that it has played shows in the summer months.

Carl Hoblitzelle owner of the Interstate Amusement company is in town for a few days looking over his business interest. Aside from the Majestic and Palace theatre the Interstate Amusement company control real estate in the downtown district.

Buffalo

MANAGER Ray S. Averill put over the Milk Fund Fight Pictures at the Olympic, Buffalo, in fine shape. He announced in the papers that the films were rushed to Buffalo by a special airplane. A big special screening for the sport departments of the local papers was put on which brought some valuable free publicity. He used some fine ads in the drama columns. He plastered the town with one sheet on the special added feature and arranged with Jimmy Slattery, one of the battlers and a Buffalo boy, to appear in person.

Reports have reached Buffalo's Film Row that William C. Calihan has resigned as general manager of the Regorson corporation of Rochester, so that he will be able to give his entire time to a new motion picture theatre which he is building in Kodak Town on the west side. Mr. Calihan has been with the Regorson corporation for many years and is one of the oldest theatre men in Rochester in point of service. The Regorson corporation controls the Regent, Piccadilly and Strand.

Howard J. Smith, manager of the Palace, Buffalo, has changed the policy of the house for the summer, putting on three shows a week, instead of two as heretofore. Now the programs are changed Sundays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. With this new policy and the new one at the Olympic where two double bills are offered each week Buffalo exchanges ought to be able to place much more film in first runs.

Manager Vincent R. McFaul is sure giving Shea Hippodrome patrons some rare music treats these days. Last week six big grand opera stars appeared in a condensed version of "I Pagliacci," and received an enthusiastic reception. This week he put on Henri Kublick, violinist and Melva Moore, colorature soprano, in a fine program.

Joseph A. Schuchert, Jr., is a popular fellow with the employes of the Colonial and Columbia theatres, which he manages and which are owned by his dad, who, by the way, is now touring the high spots in Europe. Joe put on a big feed the other night for the employes of both houses and the fellahs are talking about it yet. Some of those who attended ate so much they were all set for three days following.

Richard C. Fox, president of Golden Rule Pictures corporation of Buffalo, is sporting a Cadillac coupe. Must expect to clean up with that Beauty tournament at Crystal Beach.

Marvin Kempner, manager of the Buffalo Paramount exchange and Syd Sampson, manager of the Bond Photoplays exchange, were New York visitors last week end. It is reported that Bond may soon announce a new line of product to take the place of the new season Warner Brothers' features which in the future will be handled by Vitagraph.

Jack Woody of Associated Exhibitors was in Buffalo the other day conferring with Harry E. Lotz, local representative, on the new product for the coming season which Harry admits is the best on the market.

Earl Kramer, Universal manager in Buffalo reports much interest among exhibitors over the contract which call for "the works," of his company's product. Says the boys out in the sticks are especially enthusiastic over it.

Jack Coogan, senior, stopped off in Syracuse the other day to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Coogan, 210 Wayne street. Jackie Jr., stayed in New York with his mother. Mr. Coogan arrived in the Salt City at the heighth of the May freeze, bringing his own sunshine with him. He wore a straw hat with a band of pronounced color pattern and a topcoat of check design.

Wesley Barry is to visit Syracuse this summer. "Freckles" plans to make an extended stay with his aunt, Mrs. Nora Hutchins, 330 West Onondaga street. Mrs. Laura Barry, Wesley's grandmother, arrived in Syracuse last Wednesday. "Wesley has been at the Military Acadamy for the past two weeks engaged in a new Metro-Goldwyn production in which Ramon Novarro is playing," said Mrs. Barry. "Following the completion of that picture, he plans to visit in Syracuse before returning to Los Angeles."

Herk Webster, genial booker at the Bond exchange, Buffalo, having reached the weight of some 250 pounds, has decided to go on a diet. So he is cutting out two extra meals a day and just eating breakfast, dinner and supper.

Herman Lorence, manager of the Bellevue, Niagara Falls, visited New York this week to look over some of the new features and the new shows along Broadway.

Dan Buss of the Star theatre, Tonawanda, hasn't bought a new car in two months. Something wrong here. We usually see Dan in a new one every eight weeks or so.

C. W. Anthony has returned from the west coast convention of Warner Brothers all pepped up over the new season product which Vitagraph will distribute in this neck of the woods. C. W. spent most of his spare time out at Long Beach.

Cleveland

S. N. BERGER has been appointed manager of the Cleveland Metro-Goldwyn exchange to succeed Clifford E. Almy, who is now division manager in this territory. Mr. Berger was previously a home office special representative.

All the Warner pictures covering the 1923-4 and 1924-5 series, distributed in this territory through the Standard Film Service Company, has been transferred to the Vitagraph exchange. There are forty-one pictures in the two groups. This announcement clears up a matter that has been widely discussed out here. It was not known whether the Standard Film Service would continue to handle these Warner pictures and leave only the new product for the Vitagraph distribution, or whether some change in distribution would be effected. This effects distribution in Ohio, Michigan, western Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia.

Modern business methods were employed in the rejuvenation of the Empress Theatre, Chillicothe. A new entrance was built, a modern air-cooling system installed, and forty seats added, all without closing the house for a single day.

MOTION picture exhibitors and other business men of Steelton have joined in signing a petition asking the supervisors of Swatara township, immediately adjoining Steelton, to pass an ordinance prohibiting the holding of traveling carnivals, shows or other amusements of a like nature, for engagements of a week or more, within the limits of the township. An ordinance of this character has been in force in Steelton proper, but since the adoption of the borough ordinance carnivals have been showing in the township, just outside the borough limits, and the petition sets forth that the effects of the borough law are thus offset and that the Steelton merchants and theatres suffer a loss of business because of the counter attractions.

Carr & Schad, Inc., operating a big chain of picture houses in Reading and Lebanon, have recently reopened their San Toy theatre in the former city after having elaborately remodeled the interior. It is an attractive neighborhood theatre. In celebration of the reopening there was a special program which included vaudeville acts in addition to the usual picture program.

With formal ceremonies, two new theatres of the Comerford Amusement Company circuit were opened formally in the last week of May. The opening of the Shawnee theatre, Plymouth, was on May 25, and on May 27 the opening of the Kingston, in Kingston, was celebrated. Both theatres are modern and very attractive in appearance.

An interesting bit of history apropos of the demolition of the Orpheum Theatre, Harrisburg, to make way for a new 2,500-seat vaudeville house to be opened in the Fall, is that George Williams, an attache of the Orpheum staff, has made a collection consisting of every program that was ever enacted in the theatre from the time it first opened in 1903, as the Lyceum, which at that time, was a vaudeville house. The Orpheum, however—always a Wilmer & Vincent house,—subsequently became a legitimate theatre, which it continued to be until the wreckers got to work on it early in May. Mr. Williams' collection of programs fills a large trunk.

John McTague's theatre, in Coaldale, under a newly adopted policy, will be operated only three nights a week for the present.

The youngest house manager in any of the 300 theatres of the Marcus Loew circuit is Sydney J. Gates, 24 years old, who has just assumed charge of Loew's Regent motion picture theatre in Harrisburg, Pa.

Mr. Gates began theatrical work six and a half years ago when he was a little more than seventeen years old, starting as an usher in one of the Loew theatres in Cleveland, Ohio. He showed such a knowledge of the business that within eight months he was made assistant manager of Loew's Stillman theatre in Cleveland, and after a year and a half there was sent to fill a similar post in Loew's State theatre in Indianapolis. After that he was assistant manager of Loew's State theatre in New York City, and of Loew's State theatre in Buffalo, N. Y.

Last August when Loew opened his $2,000,000 Loew's State theatre in St. Louis, Mo., Mr. Gates was made full manager of that magnificent house. This position he retained until transferred to Loew's Regent in Harrisburg, about the middle of May to succeed as manager there Jasper Turano, who had resigned the post.

The Harrisburg theatre is considered one of the most important in the entire Loew circuit, representing Mr. Loew's first foothold in the Capital City of Pennsylvania and, in fact, in Central Pennsylvania.

New York and New Jersey

LEW LEFCOURT, who has been driving a delivery truck for the Prudential Film Delivery Company for the past four years, undoubtedly saved the Heights Theatre at 150 Wadsworth Ave., New York City, several thousand dollars. Late Sunday night, Lew was out on his usual run about town, "picking up shows" and reached the Heights around two A. M. Sunday morning. He found the door of the theatre open and also noted that the lights were lit. Just at that point he heard a scuffling noise and two men ran out of the theatre at top speed. Lew then looked about for more of the gang and finding none, reported the matter to the police. As Saturday was a holiday and the banks closed, it is possible that there were at least three days' receipts in the safe, and if this is the case it is reasonable to believe that Lew prevented the burglars from getting away with a rich haul.
